Numerous races call the Underdark and its dungeons home, though many of them are monstrous or hostile. Their distinct ways of life are adapted to the harsh realities of underground existence. Though they are viewed with suspicion or hatred by other races, these dungeon dwellers can be every bit as heroic as their surface-dwelling counterparts.

Goblin: Pint-sized rascals that infest dungeons the world over, goblins are endlessly curious.

Kobold: Small and weak, kobolds depend on their traps and each other to survive in the Underdark.

Svirfneblin: Many believe these mysterious Underdark gnomes to be only a fable.

Goblin

Pint-sized rascals known throughout the world for their spitefulness and thievery

Racial Traits

Average Height: 3´4″-3´8″
Average Weight: 40-55 lb.

Ability Scores: +2 Dexterity; +2 Wisdom or +2 Charisma
Size: Small
Speed: 6 squares
Vision: Low-light vision
Languages: Common, Goblin
Skill Bonuses: +2 Bluff, +2 Stealth

Goblin Reflexes: You gain a +1 racial bonus to Reflex.
Goblin Tactics: You have the goblin tactics power.

Goblin Tactics — Goblin Utility

You avoid your enemy's blow and cleverly dodge away.

At-Will
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: An enemy misses you with a melee attack.
Effect: You shift 1 square.

The image of puny, nose-picking, knife-wielding goblins is common throughout the world. Most adventurers believe in a keen sword and room to swing as the best way to deal with them. Goblins might be the most numerous humanoids in the world, with a reputation for infesting every dank hole and tormenting the countryside with never-ending raids, violence, and maniacal scheming. The majority of them are rapacious and vile, but some have the intellect and attitude to join the ranks of heroes. Though they might face prejudice, goblins can be independent, cunning, and crafty adventurers.

Goblins are highly social creatures, dwelling in tightly packed warrens with hundreds if not thousands of individuals. Individual goblins are weak, but early on, each strives to be king of the hill. Goblins become surprisingly willful by competing with their peers, maturing—for better or for worse—when they can assert themselves. A goblin sees itself as cunning and dangerous, even if it is the wimpiest member of the warren. Such independence borders on arrogance, but it prompts a goblin to attempt daring actions that larger races would think twice about.

A goblin finds a sense of itself from the time it begins life as a crawling, biting infant. Goblin mothers give birth to litters numbering around a dozen, giving the youngsters plenty of siblings to interact and compete with. Juveniles possess an impulsive curiosity that makes them crawl into every cranny of the warren, always craving the new and undiscovered. Most are noisy and selfish, demanding attention by forcing their way into every activity.

Upon adulthood, most goblins find that they are good only at hurting or stealing things. Exceptional individuals develop a knack for leadership, crafting, navigation, problem solving, or other valuable skills—even magic. Goblins take immense pride in their talents, even if it's just a honed ability to knife people in the back. Practicing a skill gives them an identity within the community, which in turn makes them feel important or useful.

Goblins love to brag and get attention; they are instigators who poke and prod at anything to get a reaction. In the warrens, they behave like petulant brats, vandalizing, insulting, hitting, or whining to be noticed. This need for attention might explain their kind's violent attacks on the other races of the world. After all, what better way to get someone's attention than by attacking their homes? Countless raids and wars have been committed by goblins to satisfy this impulse, but the smart ones realize that this sort of behavior won't get them far if they wish to interact with others in any meaningful way.

Independent goblins, especially those who leave their warrens to become adventurers, have learned to tone down their selfishness. Though not nearly so crude or vicious as others of their kind, they are nonetheless rascals at heart. Curious to the point of recklessness, yet cunning enough to escape many dangers, goblin adventurers embody the best of their kind's adaptability. Their companions might have to put up with nonstop chattering or poor hygiene, but they can be trusted friends eager to take in all the danger and excitement the adventuring life has to offer.

CRAIG J SPEARING

Small but endlessly curious, goblins can be stouthearted adventurers

Physical Qualities

Goblins stand just over 3 feet tall, with wiry frames that resemble those of human children. Sometimes humorous, sometimes frightening, each goblin's features are unique and often reflect its personality. Some goblins have long hooked noses and pointy ears, while others have exaggerated fangs or eyes that seem to bug out of their faces.

Most goblins have knobby joints and skinny limbs, though a few are flabby or even roly-poly. Their skin tone ranges from bright greens and oranges to dark, earthy browns. Some are hairless, with oily hides, while others are covered in mangy hair from brow to back. Many goblins ignore hygiene and are accompanied by an ever-present stink. Some even take pride in their disgusting habits.

Goblins wear whatever is available, usually incorporating small trinkets, trophies, or interesting things they've stolen in their travels. These objects usually seem weird or pointless to others, who don't understand the value goblins place in these treasures. A goblin's clothes are a patchwork of different materials stitched together over the course of years. Its equipment is usually rusty or ramshackle but serviceable, thanks to goblin-kind's innate knack for tinkering.

In theory a goblin's life span is equal to that of humans, but most goblins come to an early end because of their unbridled curiosity.

Attitudes and Beliefs

In matters of belief in specific deities, following codes of conduct, or showing loyalty to a leader, goblins quickly get bored and move on. They are motivated by novelties, be they stolen treasures or new sights and sounds, or even bodily sensations unique or bizarre. Goblins live for sensation, going out of their way to explore, open, prod, taste, or rub up against new things—often to the disgust of non-goblin companions.

Goblins' perceptiveness is curiously selective. They might not notice hidden traps or monsters, but they latch onto weird old graffiti, bits of rotten food, scraps of ruined scrolls, and other interesting rubbish. Living in an overpopulated warren teaches goblins that quantity is more important than quality. A goblin would pass over one great treasure to grab a whole bunch of baubles.

Goblin curiosity also drives them to pilfer and plunder. They carry out raids and burglaries so they can acquire new things to take back to the warren. However, goblins don't covet in the conventional sense. Few maintain ownership of an item or value the trinkets they've collected. They simply take what interests them at the moment, then discard it and move on to the next. Their warrens are cluttered messes, overflowing with everything from golden treasure to shiny rocks.

Many goblins are consummate schemers, concocting plans of startling complexity that they hope will generate excitement or riches. Though few goblins are book-smart, their devious minds can outpace those of other folk. Goblins rarely think in ways that are linear or even logical. They love investigating weird possibilities, improbable outcomes, and unlikely courses of action. Such scheming sometimes triggers calamities that cascade like dominos—much to the goblins' delight.

Goblins have few orthodox beliefs, but they love to create myths, rituals, and laws—most of which are arbitrary. They imitate anything they think is neat, such as some newly discovered custom of a nearby culture, although the original intent is usually lost in translation or warped to suit goblin ends. Isolated goblin tribes in the deep wilds might hear the call of the primal spirits, though they might envision those spirits as unpleasant or slimy, such as Ska'nug the Skunk or Blhorgg the Whelk.

Goblin Communities

Goblins are found in any climate, at any altitude, in any environment, and at any distance from the settlements of other races. Their ability to adapt and thrive is second only to that of humans, and goblin wanderlust—combined with their speedy life cycle—encourages rapid expansion into new realms. They are tenacious, finding a way to sneak into any place they can exploit, from dungeon caves to sewers beneath the streets of a human city.

Regardless of where goblins dwell, they prefer cozy underground quarters. Only the smartest are any good at creating new homes, so most goblin tribes are more like squatters, taking advantage of an empty lair or even bullying out an original resident. The goblins quickly turn their usurped warren into a cluttered, stinking, crowded mess, filled to the brim with stolen trinkets from the surrounding countryside. Some rooms might have a single purpose—such as larders, armories, or meeting places—but to an outsider a goblin warren is an undifferentiated mass of junk and chattering, filthy bodies.

Signs that a goblin settlement is nearby are obvious. Trails of litter or graffiti surround the warren, and goblins' typically poor treatment of their environment makes their territory easy to identify. However, finding the entrance to the warren is another matter. Goblins post guards at all times, and they use small entrances that bigger creatures have trouble squeezing through. They are quick to rally when they have a tough leader to bully them into order, but they don't follow blindly. When serious danger arises, goblins prefer to slink away through one of the warren's numerous exits and plan a counterattack.

Goblins are also known for keeping the company of a variety of beasts with which they have a natural affinity. Bigger creatures, such as wolves or carrion crawlers, join goblin raiding parties. Rats, bats, and snakes serve as spies or distractions. Regardless of the beast's use, it's treated like a beloved pet, not just a tool. Goblins bond with their creatures, and if one dies, its master is distraught. A goblin might care more about the well-being of its pet than it does about that of other goblins.

Goblin Adventurers

A goblin's natural curiosity, cunning, and explorative spirit lends itself well to the adventuring life. Many goblins are drawn to the excitement that comes with battling monsters, rescuing grateful victims, and bathing in plundered loot—anything that gets them attention. Of course, interacting with other people demands that a goblin at least partially put aside its natural tendency toward pettiness and violence. With the right guidance, a goblin can be a hero.

Rogue

Goblins are such stereotypical rogues that envisioning them as anything else takes effort. Motivated by thievery, antics, and adventure, goblin rogues use their diverse skills and craftiness to get into secret places. These troublemakers go out of their way to discover dangerous things to overcome, as well to befuddle folk of other races who underestimate their cunning. Goblin rogues might not possess the stature or presence of their companions, but they get their hands on the best loot.

Assassin

For goblin assassins, killing isn't just a means to an end—it's the fun part. They enjoy dispatching targets in novel ways. Playing with different poisons and weapons keeps a goblin assassin from losing interest. As long as it has something new to kill or a new way to do so, it is ruthlessly efficient in its task. A routine murder, though, isn't likely to be worth a goblin assassin's time regardless of the pay.

Wizard

Magic looks really fun to young goblins, and some of them search for ways to learn those neat tricks. No goblin warren has a wizard school, so such arcane aspirants must teach themselves through trial and error. (Not many survive the process.) A goblin wizard usually relies on a couple of standby spells but continually switches up the others when preparing for the day. Big, explosive effects and tricky illusions that fool people or move them around really pique goblins' interest. They also are fascinated by magical creatures. Most goblin wizards have familiars, and they're big fans of the "summon a big monster and run away" school of spellcasting.

For a goblin bard, it's all about audience appeal

Bard Given the goblins' love for ribald antics and revelry, a bardic lifestyle is a natural choice. Being adventurers gives goblin bards the best opportunity to spread their brand of shenanigans to the uptight folk of other races. They are often more buffoon than inspiration, replacing song and poetry with lewd rhymes or slapstick comedy. Such bards should not be underestimated, though: Their cunning, feistiness, and occasional mean streak make them dangerous to cross.

Roleplaying a Goblin

When creating a goblin adventurer, here are a few points to consider.

You're a sociable scoundrel. Though goblins don't exactly look out for each other, they gain a feeling of independence and security when around their peers. Your adventuring companions might fill the social void left since you departed the warren. Their presence gives you the chance to brag and demonstrate your usefulness. You are self-reliant enough to survive the dangers of the world, but showing off when others are around to see is much more fun.

You're tricksy. Goblins are fiendishly sneaky. Few races can prowl or scheme as well as these pint-sized scoundrels, and even fewer can string together bluffs with such casual ease. You might spend most of your time lurking behind the legs of your allies or in the shadows just out of sight. On the other hand, you might also constantly tell outrageous fibs or exaggerated war stories to make yourself and your encounters sound more interesting.

You crave new experiences. Goblins live for the novel. You're at your happiest when reveling in some new treasure, food, or sensation—even unpleasant ones. This desire encourages goblins to go out into the world, exploring and touching anything they can. You might be obsessed with a particular type of object or feeling, or you might have left the tribe out of curiosity over what lies beyond the next horizon. Either way, you are likely the first of your party to handle new items or prod something best left undisturbed.

You have a bad reputation. The rest of the world sees goblins as pests and villains—with good reason. The majority of your kind deserves their bad reputation, and facing discrimination will be a constant challenge. You might be an enlightened goblin doing your best to show that not all of your kind is evil. Perhaps you are as untrustworthy as the majority of your folk, but tempered somewhat by the influence of your adventuring companions.

A FRIENDLY GAME OF CARDS WITH GOBLINS

As told by Seth the Shark

I guess it was about six years back. The goblins wanted to kill us, the kobolds wanted to kill us, the goblins and the kobolds wanted to kill each other, and we'd lost half our supplies in the night because our hireling got careless. I tried a big gamble when I said, "Let's settle this over a game of cards."

So there I am, dealt into a game of Three-Dragon Ante with the goblin chief's brother and a kobold who the big dragon licked once or something. My life is literally on the line, but I'm ahead after a color flight and a timely Bahamut draw.

I can see this goblin getting antsy, and he keeps moving his hand toward his pocket. I'm sure he's got a good card tucked away and is just waiting for the right hand to play it in. As much as I don't want to let him cheat, I'm afraid if I call him out the other goblins will start firing. The kobold doesn't even seem to notice.

Then the goblin gets that hand he's been looking for, and I see his hand slip into his pocket. I hear this snap, and he pulls his hand out again really fast. His fingers are all mangled and bloody, stuck in a tiny little bear-trap-looking thing. The kobold starts tittering to itself.

To my surprise, all the other goblins have a pretty good laugh at their buddy's expense. Then they called off the game and the whole gang had a celebratory feast. I was sick for days after that.

The lessons? Never cheat a kobold, and never eat a goblin's food.

JESPER EJSING

To a goblin, size (or lack of it) doesn't matter

Goblin Characteristics: Adaptable, boastful, curious, crude, humorous, impressionable, instigating, reactionary, sneaky, willful

Goblin Male Names: Floo, Grot, Grub, Itch, Rort, Splik, Snag, Splug, Squintch, Zix

Goblin Female Names: Borb, Fee, Flert, Gretch, Gyik, Nibb, Nyx, Pinch, Pook, Wort

Goblin Tribal Names: Batbiter, Frog-Gagger, Grumblegut, Ratskinner, Stinkdrinker

Goblin Feats

The diminutive goblins don't let their size and low place in the dungeon pecking order get them down. They learn from childhood that they need to be tricky and tenacious to survive.

Ankle Biter

Many things are bigger than goblins—many dangerous things. You learn from infancy how to get in every little attack you can against those big brutes.

Prerequisite: Goblin

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to damage rolls against creatures larger than you. This bonus increases to +2 at 11th level and to +3 at 21st level.

Also, when you score a critical hit against a creature larger than you, the creature takes 1d6 extra damage.

Desperate Goblin Tactics

Panic takes over when you're near death, and you rush away from the fray even faster than usual.

Prerequisite: Goblin, goblin tactics racial power

Benefit: When you use goblin tactics while bloodied, you can shift up to 2 extra squares.

Goblin Feint

The big folk think they can smash a little goblin easily. You know how to use their mistakes against them by sneaking past their guard when they try to attack you.

Prerequisite: Goblin, goblin tactics racial power

Benefit: When you use goblin tactics, you gain combat advantage against the enemy that missed you until the end of your next turn.

Shadowcreeper

When you dash away from an attack, you take to the shadows. A dash through the darkness leaves you protected in shadow and better set up to strike.

Prerequisite: Goblin, assassin, goblin tactics racial power

Benefit: When you use goblin tactics, you can shift 1 extra square, and you gain partial concealment until the end of your next turn.

Sneaky Stabber

You know how to attack from a low angle to do the most damage to a bigger creature. Being below notice makes it easy to get at vulnerable points.

Prerequisite: Goblin, rogue, Sneak Attack feature

Benefit: When you deal Sneak Attack damage to a creature adjacent to you, you can reroll any Sneak Attack damage die that results in a 1 until it no longer results in a 1.

Wrist Biter

When you slip away from an attacker, you can't help but get in one last jab. Your quick retaliation might not hurt much, but as the old goblin saying goes, "Death by a thousand cuts is the best kind of death."

Prerequisite: Goblin, goblin tactics racial power

Benefit: When you use goblin tactics in response to an adjacent enemy's attack, the enemy takes 1d4 damage right before you shift. This damage increases to 2d4 at 11th level and 3d4 at 21st level.

Goblin Utility Powers

Every day is a struggle in the dungeon, especially for goblins. Survival is never guaranteed. Goblins interact with other creatures for a chance to beat the odds. They quickly pick up tricks to get ahead, whether from goblins or other dungeon dwellers.

DAVE ALLSOP

When your goblin character gains a class utility power after 1st level, you can forgo taking a power granted to you by your class. Instead, you can choose a goblin utility power of the same level or lower.

Fast Filch

Goblins are nimble and quick, and their deft little fingers make them excellent pickpockets. A team of goblin thieves usually has one member distract the mark so another can quickly snag some valuables. Of course, you never know when your teammate might run off before giving you your cut.

Fast Filch — Goblin Utility 2

In the blink of an eye, your tiny fingers relieve someone of a few prized possessions.

At-Will
Minor Action — Melee 1
Target: One adjacent creature granting combat advantage to you
Effect: You make a Thievery check against the target to pick its pocket or perform sleight of hand.

Leg Up

Goblin society is like a big game of king of the hill. Life is a scramble to the top, and only the most devious make it. You have to be willing to put others through a little discomfort if you're going to succeed.

Leg Up — Goblin Utility 2

By bouncing off or scrabbling up the body of a nearby creature, you fling yourself through the air.

Encounter
Move Action — Personal
Requirement: You must be adjacent to a creature.
Effect: You jump up to your speed horizontally or up to 10 feet vertically.

Little Green Lie

Goblin mothers everywhere give the same advice to their litters: The only time to lie is when you don't know the answer, or telling the truth will get you hurt, or somebody has something you want, or when you can make up another reason.

Little Green Lie — Goblin Utility 2

At the last moment, you realize the best course of action here is to lie.

Encounter
Free Action — Personal
Trigger: You fail a Bluff, Diplomacy, or Intimidate check.
Effect: You reroll the check. If the triggering check was a Diplomacy or Intimidate check, use your Bluff modifier instead.

Living Shield

Even adventuring goblins prefer not to get hit if they can avoid it, and they master the ability to quickly find cover behind pillars, boulders, or altars. But what if nothing in the environment can provide cover? Other people soak up attacks just as well. The more considerate goblins redirect enemies only against those who are willing.

Living Shield — Goblin Utility 6

You dive behind a companion to avoid an attack.

Encounter
Immediate Interrupt — Personal
Trigger: An enemy hits you with a melee or ranged attack while you are adjacent to your ally.
Effect: You shift 1 square, and the attack hits the ally instead of you.

Unwitting Guardian

It's not hard for a little goblin to find a good hiding place. The best places, though, make your enemies look like fools. Creeping between a roper's loose plates, ducking under a mind flayer's robes, or clinging to the belly of a big spider is way more fun than standing behind a boring pillar or stalagmite.

Unwitting Guardian — Goblin Utility 6

You duck under the bulk of one of the big folk, and it keeps you from being seen by the others while you make mischief.

Encounter
Move Action — Melee 1
Target: One adjacent Medium or larger enemy
Effect: You shift 1 square into the target's space. Until the end of your next turn, you can occupy the same space as the target. Additionally, until the end of your next turn or until you and the target no longer share the same space, you are hidden from all creatures except the target. This effect ends immediately after you attack.

Down and Through

Humans and their sort spend so much effort trying to look tall! The way they hold their chins up high makes slipping past them all the easier.

Down and Through — Goblin Utility 10

All of a sudden, you're beneath your clumsy foe and then out the other side.

Encounter
Move Action — Personal
Effect: Choose a Medium or larger enemy adjacent to you, and shift up to 5 squares to a different square adjacent to that creature. You can move through that creature's space during this shift.

KOBOLD

Reptilian tunnel dwellers who stick together to survive

Racial Traits

Average Height: 3´6˝-4´0˝
Average Weight: 60-75 lb.

Ability Scores: +2 Constitution; +2 Dexterity or +2 Charisma
Size: Small
Speed: 6 squares
Vision: Darkvision
Languages: Common, Draconic
Skill Bonuses: +2 Dungeoneering, +2 Thievery

Reptile: You are considered a reptile for the purpose of effects that relate to the reptile keyword.
Trap Sense: You gain a +2 racial bonus to all defenses against attacks from traps.
Shifty Maneuver: You have the shifty maneuver power.

Shifty Maneuver Kobold Utility

You call on your natural ability to dodge danger, taking your tribemates along for the ride.

Encounter
Move Action Close burst 2
Target: You and each ally in the burst
Effect: Each target can shift 1 square as a free action.

Kobolds overrun dungeons and caverns, relying on vast numbers and wicked traps to make up for their deficiencies in size and strength. Their ability to survive among the bigger and tougher monsters of the world shows just how well their tactics have worked.

Kobolds gather in large tribes, reproducing quickly to replenish their numbers. Group pressure and the dictates of charismatic leaders compel all members in the community to work together toward whatever ends they need to survive. No matter what an individual kobold feels or believes, the community expects obedience, and every kobold in the tribe tries to behave in the expected way. Some kobolds have good hearts, but their chieftains believe only ruthlessness will keep the tribe strong. Thus most kobold tribes commit evil acts, or at least self-serving ones.

Kobolds have few illusions about their place in the world. They are scavengers and thieves. They do not grow their own food and would rather deprive others of their goods than craft anything. They lurk on civilization's fringes, raiding farmsteads and ambushing caravans. They settle in old ruins and dungeons, choosing places they can readily defend and fortify. Even with their great numbers, kobolds know they cannot hope to protect themselves against a determined attacker. For this reason, most tribes raise monstrous allies for added muscle or give in and become servants of dungeon rulers.

Of all the monstrous allies kobolds can make, dragons are best of all. Dragons are everything kobolds are not: enormous, majestic, and powerful. They are gods to the kobolds, their idealized selves, and thus are worthy of worship and service—should any dragon accept the little creatures. Any sign of a dragon sends the tribe into a flurry of activity. The kobolds track it to its lair and present it with sacrifices, pageants, and anything else they think it would like. Of course, a dragon presented with so many willing victims indulges its appetite and gobbles up as many as it can. But death by dragon is no deterrent to the kobolds' efforts. They see being eaten by a god as a great honor, and clamor for their chance to climb into the dragon's maw.

Older dragons see kobolds as nuisances. A quick blast of a breath weapon suffices to eliminate an infestation. The trouble for the dragon is that the kobolds do not give up and might try to serve in secret even if rejected. Younger dragons, however, might see the advantage in a loyal clan of guards and attendants to protect their hoards and warn of adventurers who come calling. Once a kobold tribe installs itself around a dragon, everything they do serves their god.

A kobold's life is unpleasant to say the least. Very few kobolds live to reach old age. Attrition claims most before they get too far into adulthood. Hunger, thirst, and want are constant companions, and even the dimmest kobolds learn to watch their backs. Kobolds are subject to the same greed as dragons, though far less intense. Most of them keep small stashes of coins or other treasure secret from the tribe, even though they know they're duty-bound to pool such resources.

Kobolds understand that they are stronger together than they are apart. All grudges are forgotten when the tribe faces an outside threat. Kobolds demonstrate surprising cunning when dealing with intruders, as evident in the traps they design to level the playing field. Kobolds' skill in trapmaking is amazing. With only minimal supplies—mostly junk—they can fashion crafty snares and clever alarms. Even intrepid explorers know that entering a kobold warren invites disfigurement and death.

The harsh reality of kobold existence demands absolute obedience to the leader's demands. Kobolds who lack the killer's instinct, show any weakness, or disobey orders are shunned and driven to the tribe's periphery. If not devoured by a passing predator or sacrificed to a bloodthirsty god, such exiles might seek their fortunes beyond the tribe. Survival is by no means assured, but such action at least gives them a chance to survive.

This kobold avoids being skewered by a trap of flying needles as it prepares to strike at what lies ahead

Kobolds are survivors first. They are not above prostrating themselves before enemies if it means buying a little time. A lone kobold survivor after a raid, a prisoner, or one otherwise cut off from its fellows must adapt to avoid death. A kobold who was part of an evil tribe might reform its behavior in the presence of others who are willing to guide and support it, and might even find this new "tribe" more comforting than the old one. Such individuals find the adventurer's life suits them—not because they crave danger or excitement, but because their talents make them useful to other adventurers who protect them in return.

Physical Qualities

Their spare frames and stooped postures don't inspire fear in others, which suits kobolds just fine. They would rather look nonthreatening but not quite vulnerable. A few brave kobolds emulate their honored dragons. They put on a little muscle, raise their snouts high, and roar with a ferocity no one would expect such weak-looking creatures to muster.

Kobolds' long muzzles are lined with tiny teeth and lolling tongues similar to those of a dragon or crocodile. Their slitted eyes are usually red, gold, or yellow. Small horns angle backward from a kobold's brow, and bony barbs stud its forearms to its elbows. Its fingers end in stubby talons, as do its long toes. Fine scales cover a kobold's body, usually some shade of green. Brown, red, and orange scales appear among particular tribes, as do mottled hides of several colors.

Their reptilian anatomy hides kobolds' physical expressiveness from other races. Their facial construction lacks the anatomy to display the same range of emotions as other humanoids. Kobolds who need to deal with warmbloods develop broad arm and head gestures to convey how they feel.

Since kobolds have to make do with what they scavenge, clothing is limited and functional. A loincloth serves the least among them, while warriors cobble together armor from scraps they harvest from the dead. Crude weaponry suffices until they can steal something better.

Kobolds grow quickly. They can walk and talk within hours after hatching and reach their full height after about a year. Kobolds can live longer than a century, though very few make it through their first decade.

BEN WOOTTEN

Attitudes and Beliefs

Kobolds look after the tribe foremost, and they take whatever steps they deem necessary to ensure the community's survival. The more populous the tribe, the lower the chance any individual will come to harm—even though such large numbers invariably attract attention. Thus, kobolds nurture their eggs in communal nesting grounds to ensure the next generation will preserve their numbers.

Even kobolds who leave their tribes retain the instinct to survive and find comrades. An adventuring kobold regards the party as a small tribe and finds a place to contribute to the group's success. He or she shows an immediate willingness to work within the team, especially if the kobold can tackle a job nobody else in the group is suited for.

Even good-aligned kobolds see little point in fighting with honor. A fair fight achieves nothing if you die. Instead, kobolds admire trickery and subterfuge as virtues and deride as foolish any notion of fairness. The best fight to a kobold is one in which no kobold blood is spilled.

Kobolds see dragons as living gods and offer sacrifices, prayers, and anything else they find to honor their masters. Their devotion stems from their connection to Tiamat, whom they see as their ultimate goddess and mother to all dragons. Kobolds also worship their ancestors, chief among them being Kurtulmak, a figure thought to be one of Tiamat's exarchs. Adventuring kobolds never quite escape their devotion to Tiamat and continue to worship her even if doing so is offensive to their new companions. No kobold wants to face the repercussions of angering such a threatening god.

Kobold Communities

Anyone who examines kobolds' traps can see their ingenuity in construction, yet kobolds do not raise their own towns or strongholds. Instead, they squat in places other peoples have abandoned. A kobold settlement's location must be defensible, offer shelter, and provide enough water and food to support the tribe.

A typical kobold community includes a large common room where the rank and file gather, cook, and sort through the plunder. Nearby is a temple or shrine dedicated to Tiamat, along with chambers set aside for the high priest, the chieftain, and the most accomplished warriors. These rooms offer privacy for the higher-ups without sacrificing the security of having the rest of the tribe nearby.

The passages leading into the warren look safe enough to an outsider, but hidden throughout are all sorts of nasty traps to discourage intruders from venturing too far. Kobolds favor devices that humiliate as much as harm their victims. An adventurer who survives a kobold's trap usually does not do so with pride intact. The tribe might also use rats, scorpions, slimes, or drakes to help guard their warrens.

Kobolds offer a dragon whatever it wants in exchange for its favor

WILLIAM O'CONNOR

Kobold tribes not affiliated with dragons freely abandon their lairs if they come under attack. They fight to protect themselves, but should the situation become untenable, they are not above pulling up stakes and settling somewhere else. A dragon's involvement shores up the tribe's courage, and kobolds fight with uncommon boldness to protect their god.

Kobold Adventurers

Adventuring might seem an unlikely occupation for kobolds, but they have several talents that make them well-suited to the life. They can see in the dark, anticipate and avoid traps, and stay a step ahead of their enemies. Kobolds can be useful and effective allies in almost any adventuring group.

Very few kobolds become adventurers by choice, however. Some catastrophe must befall them before they traipse off looking for danger. Most take up this life after being captured by adventurers or separated from their tribes.

Rogue Growing up in environments where any misstep can bring death, poisoned darts fly with a stumble, and pits bristling with spikes lurk in every corridor, kobolds learn a healthy respect for traps. Familiarity with such hazards, combined with their furtive natures, make kobolds a natural fit for the rogue class. Kobold rogues are among the best at locating and dismantling traps. This talent, combined with their great mobility, makes kobold rogues particularly dangerous.

Sorcerer Kobolds have strong arcane traditions, and most who follow those traditions become sorcerers. They like to think that dragon's blood flows through their veins, and they believe that the best of them can tap into this essence and become like the gods they worship. Most kobold sorcerers choose the path of dragon magic.

Warlock A kobold who cannot harness the magic within might seek out other sources of power. Many kobolds make unwise bargains with strange entities, offering their souls to make themselves strong. Most kobold warlocks look to the stars and the beings that reside there for magical power, though they bargain with anything that offers to make them strong.

Assassin Kobolds avoid direct confrontation. They employ poison, traps, and ambushes to deal with enemies, all tactics that make them eminently suited to the assassin's trade. Kobolds rarely become assassins for profit, though most accept payment for their work. Instead, their techniques are natural outgrowths of how kobolds normally fight.

Roleplaying a Kobold

When creating a kobold adventurer, here are a few points to consider.

You know your way around traps. Even if another character handles the task of disarming traps, you know enough about their construction to help dismantle them when they are discovered and avoid them when they attack. Traps fascinate you, and any new device is an opportunity to add a weapon to your arsenal. Don't pass up opportunities to tackle a trap and, if possible, try to find ways to turn it to your advantage.

Fair fights are for suckers. Concepts such as honor, nobility, and fairness make little sense to you. Death comes soon enough without inviting it through some foolish belief. You use trickery and planning to defeat your enemies. You lure them into danger, drawing them into positions where your allies can finish them off. You hit enemies when they're down, dazed, or otherwise incapacitated. Your survival depends on your willingness to do whatever it takes to win.

Dragons are gods. Dragons represent everything kobolds hope to become. Everyone fears them. If dragons are not true gods, they are close enough for you. Encounters with dragons awe you, far beyond the threat they pose. You feel conflicted about fighting dragons and seek a peaceful way out of such an encounter, such as by making an offering or spouting excessive flattery. Should your efforts fail, you still support your allies, but killing the dragon should be the last resort.

You know your place. Every kobold in a tribe knows that for the rest to survive, each member must do his or her duty. As an adventuring kobold, you see your companions as your new tribe and search for a way to contribute outside of combat. You might cook meals, mend clothing, or polish armor in addition to fulfilling your role during exploration and combat.

You exercise caution. Taking heedless risks can get you killed. Better to be prepared and know what you're getting yourself into. If you get in over your head, fleeing is an important tactic. An enemy that gives chase enters unfamiliar territory, often protected by traps. As a kobold, you feel no shame in running away and expect your companions to do the same should the situation turn against you.

The world hates you. Being considered vermin by most people you meet is bound to take a toll. No matter what you accomplish, others might be anything from suspicious to hostile. Even most other reptilian humanoids look down on you, though they're more likely to show you some respect if you prove yourself. When traveling through civilized lands, consider concealing your features to avoid conflicts.

Kobold Characteristics: Ambitious, cooperative, fawning, greedy, loyal, obedient, quick, timid

Kobold Male Names: Bont, Dartak, Deekin, Forgen, Kol, Meepo, Nin, Speelok, Zeem

Kobold Female Names: Capax, Eenith, Foruul, Gumba, Iimen, Lorpe, Rowatak

Kobold Tribal Names: Black Death, Broken Fang, Gouger, Red Moon, Skull Kicker, Torn Ear

Kobold Feats

Each kobold tribe has its own methods and specialties, but all of them have a few things in common. Dungeon travel and dragon worship both hold a prominent place in kobold society. Trapmaking and evasive maneuvers let kobolds get the upper hand in battle, and they take great pains to improve these abilities.

Dragon's Indomitability

You're not entirely fearless, but you try to follow the example of the great dragons.

Prerequisite: Kobold

Benefit: You can roll two dice and use either result when making saving throws against effects that daze or stun you.

Eldritch Momentum

In the kobold tradition, warlocks learn to warp arcane energy with their movement and use it to break through enemies' defenses. Your attacks zig and zag in an unpredictable fashion that catches enemies off guard.

Prerequisite: Kobold, warlock, Warlock's Curse class feature

Benefit: If you move at least 3 squares away from where you started your turn, you gain combat advantage until the start of your next turn against creatures subject to your Warlock's Curse.

Kobold in a Corner

Getting trapped in a dead end and surrounded is the worst danger a kobold can face. When enemies surround you, your instincts to escape kick in, and you fight back angrily.

Prerequisite: Kobold

Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus to damage rolls against creatures that have combat advantage against you. This bonus increases to +2 at 11th level and +3 at 21st level.

Shiftier Maneuver

Carefully skulking around the battlefield is the kobold way to victory, and everyone in the tribe should be good at it. Your expertise is infectious.

Prerequisite: Kobold, shifty maneuver racial power

Benefit: When you use shifty maneuver, one target of the power can shift up to 2 extra squares.

Trapbuster

You understand the mechanisms used in all sorts of traps, and your ability to disarm them is second to none.

Prerequisite: Kobold, training in Thievery

Benefit: You can roll two dice and use either result when you make a Perception check to detect a trap. In addition, you never trigger a trap when you fail a Thievery check to disable it.

Kobold Utility Powers

Kobolds don't like to venture too far out of their comfort zone, so they stick to what they are best at: canny movement, teamwork, and careful exploration. Many kobolds carry strange gadgets created from scrap metal and other refuse. They make these items using formulas handed down by the tribe and their own ingenuity, honed by years of trapmaking.

When your kobold character gains a class utility power after 1st level, you can forgo taking a power granted to you by your class. Instead, you gain a kobold utility power of the same level or lower.

NEW ITEM: HURLER-SNATCHER

With some foraged twine, a supple reed, simple pulleys, and a soft cloth bindle, a kobold can piece together a crude device for getting around obstacles. These hurler-snatchers, as kobolds call them, have long been used to fling objects across gaps safely and retrieve small items lost down narrow chasms.

Using a hurler-snatcher (4 lb., 10 gp) requires a move action. When you do so, you either transfer one item you have that weighs 5 pounds or less to an unoccupied space or a willing character within 5 squares of you, or you take one similar item that the character or the space has and transfer it to yourself. If you intend to transfer the item to a character, he or she has to have a free hand and must use a free action to catch it. Otherwise, the item lands in that character's space.

The 5-pound limit on a hurler-snatcher is enough to carry most simple objects. If items are bundled together in a backpack or a sack, they're usually too heavy to flick around. Some items are too unwieldy to be transferred in this way; your DM ultimately makes the call.

The hurler-snatcher is constructed to protect what it carries, even glassware, as long as the intended receiver can catch it. Objects break in transit only in a very small number of cases. Kobolds offer no warranties on items sent by way of a hurler-snatcher.

Flee! A kobold knows better than to fight against overwhelming odds. Sometimes the only way to win a fight is to escape and fight another day. When it's time to retreat, a kobold leads the way to safety.

Flee! Kobold Utility 2

You lead your tribemates in a hasty retreat.

Daily
Move Action Close burst 2
Effect: Each ally in the burst gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses against opportunity attacks until the end of your next turn. You then shift up to your speed.

Load Slingpot Kobolds create special sling ammunition made of various substances stored in tiny clay pots. You have learned how to exercise this art through a bit of draconic magic. The magic is unpredictable, however, so you're never sure which enchantment you're going to get.

Load Slingpot Kobold Utility 2

You hurl a hastily enchanted projectile from your sling.

Encounter
Free Action Personal
Requirement: You must be wielding a sling.
Effect: You load your sling with a random type of ammunition. The next time you hit with a ranged basic attack with this sling before the end of your next turn, it has one of the following additional effects. Roll a d6 to determine the ammunition type.

1-2 Stinkpot: The target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of its next turn.
3-4 Firepot (Fire): The target takes ongoing 2 fire damage (save ends).
5-6 Gluepot: The target is immobilized until the end of its next turn.

Tunnel Scuttle Living in the tight tunnels and unpredictable pathways of a dungeon taught you how to move quickly over precarious terrain. You can climb natural chimneys and fit through tiny spaces, and do it all quickly enough to get away from danger.

Tunnel Scuttle Kobold Utility 6

You scramble up walls and through narrow spaces with ease.

Encounter
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed. During this movement, you have a climb speed equal to your speed, and can move at full speed while squeezing.

Frantic Shift Cold-blooded kobolds might not look like the quickest creatures, but they can spring about with surprising speed. They prize the ability to move safely and quickly.

Every kobold believes it has the heart of a dragon

Frantic Shift Kobold Utility 10

You hustle in and out of the fray quickly.

Encounter (Special)
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You shift 1 square.
Special: The first time you are bloodied in an encounter, you regain the use of this power.

Trap-Gang Method When kobolds go searching in corridors they believe to be trapped, they work in teams. Working together increases the odds of survival, either because teammates can warn each other or because they can distribute the brunt of a triggered trap's effects. Most big folk don't go in for this sort of thing, so adventuring kobolds "recruit" enemies for the job.

Trap-Gang Method Kobold Utility 10

You treat an enemy like a trusted member of a kobold trap-gang team. That is, you shove it in front of the trap.

At-Will
Immediate Interrupt Special
Trigger: You are damaged by an attack from a trap or a hazard while a nonminion creature is adjacent to you.
Effect: You take only half damage from the triggering attack, and one nonminion creature adjacent to you takes the other half.

DAVE ALLSOP

Svirfneblin

Subterranean gnomes dedicated to community who make strong bonds of friendship

Racial Traits

Average Height: 3´2″-3´6″
Average Weight: 55-80 lb.

Ability Scores: +2 Wisdom; +2 Strength or +2 Constitution
Size: Small
Speed: 5 squares
Vision: Darkvision
Languages: Common, Deep Speech, Elven
Skill Bonuses: +2 Dungeoneering, +2 Perception

Earth Walk: You ignore difficult terrain that is rubble, uneven stone, or an earthen construction.
Fey Origin: Your ancestors were native to the Feywild (specifically the Feydark), so you are considered a fey creature for the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin.
Under-dweller: Dungeoneering is always a class skill for you.
Stone Camouflage: You have the stone camouflage power.

Stone Camouflage Svirfneblin Utility

Your body becomes stony and magically blends with the terrain around you, making you harder to pinpoint.

Encounter ✦ Illusion
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain partial concealment until the end of your next turn, and you gain 5 temporary hit points.
Level 11: 10 temporary hit points.
Level 21: 15 temporary hit points.

Commonly referred to as deep gnomes, svirfneblin live primarily in the Underdark and rarely associate with their kindred on the surface. The two bloodlines separated so long ago that few similarities remain between them beyond a natural connection to magic. Many who don't understand the svirfneblin's way of life assume they are as dark and sinister as other creatures that live deep below the earth. For this reason, the "deep gnomes" must be vigilant against not only threats from their environment, but also from those who travel down from the surface. They have grown dour and insular by necessity, but they remain fundamentally good at heart. In a world of eternal darkness, where death lurks around every corner, a svirfneblin community provides a welcome contrast.

The deep gnomes' muted expressions convey a sense of dreariness to most outsiders and certainly don't seem welcoming. Svirfneblin act standoffish to newcomers to protect their community, but anyone who gains their trust quickly learns they form close bonds of friendship. They focus on fulfilling their duties through hard work, either in the mines or around their settlement. In their off hours, svirfneblin enjoy telling stories in the company of their family and neighbors.

Svirfneblin are a proud race that respects strength in numbers. They work well with others and value community over individual tastes. Constantly beset by threats, deep gnomes band together and form bonds of friendship that last a lifetime. They will die to protect the people they bond with.

Physical Qualities

At a distance, svirfneblin look much like their surface-dwelling cousins but are distinguishable by their generally darker skin and gaunt bodies. They have little body fat, which makes them appear emaciated. They are very short, slightly smaller than surface gnomes, and stand no more than 3½ feet tall. Females are taller than their male counterparts, though males are often stockier. Though they appear frail, svirfneblin are just as heavy as other gnomes. Their sturdy build results from the hard labor they undertake, which produces lots of muscle mass and a strong bone structure to support it.

A svirfneblin's appearance is also unique to its community's Underdark (or Feydark) region. The skin color of deep gnomes varies according to the depth and location of their residences. In places where mineral-rich soil has formed veins of gray and black stone, svirfneblin populations have a darker skin tone. In areas where lava predominates, the gnomes' skin might display shades of maroon and brown.

Attitudes and Beliefs

Svirfneblin are content folk who enjoy hard work and love seeing the results of their strenuous labor. Their close-knit community is central to their lives and an intrinsic part of their values; they maintain their discipline and will as long as their work serves the greater good. They believe in shared sacrifice for the survival of the community. Individual needs are rarely counted, a trait that leads svirfneblin to omit words such as "I" and "my" from their vocabulary even among family. These words are foreign to their life experiences, and it takes them time to learn that other creatures single out one person as distinct from the people as a whole.

Religion has an important place in deep gnome society. Svirfneblin spend much time and preparation honoring the various gods they serve, and religious duties go to only the most respected and trusted among the clan. The most prominent svirfneblin religious figure is Callarduran Smoothhands, the Master of Stone. Outsiders, and many svirfneblin priests, believe Callarduran to be an exarch of Moradin, especially in the world of Abeir-Toril. Most dwarves hold him to be a mask Moradin wears when speaking with the deep gnomes. Svirfneblin legends tell that after the Dawn War, Callarduran gave the first free svirfneblin the resources they needed to live underground, and that he set prized stones deep within the rock. Clerics of Callarduran often have the ability to summon and befriend elementals.

A svirfneblin warlock leads a band of miners in a battle to protect their home

CRAIG J SPEARING

A small number of svirfneblin revere Torog, the King that Crawls. These worshipers can't live within a normal svirfneblin community. They either band together to form their own settlements far away from the others or join up with darker creatures of the Underdark, betraying their kin.

Svirfneblin History

Gnomes can be careless about historical documentation. Rather than put down records in stone or on paper, they pass down their tales by word of mouth.

It is known that svirfneblin lived among the other gnomes when all were still imprisoned by the fomorians. When the gnomes escaped their fetters, most of them traveled to the surface. The svirfneblin instead went deeper underground, away from the fomorian realms but still within the Night Below.

Most svirfneblin tales remain secret, repeated only among the clan. The few stories they tell to other people make the svirfneblin people look cordial and helpful.

SVIRFNEBLIN SPEECH

For an example of how svirfneblin speech patterns differ, imagine a surface dweller going to the market to buy a tool. That person might say, "I would like to purchase a hammer from you." A svirfneblin might instead say "We would like to purchase a hammer from you."

You can adopt this sort of dialogue when you play a svirfneblin, but keep in mind that it might be confusing at first (both in the world and at the game table). If your svirfneblin has been away from home for an extended time, he or she might have started speaking more like a surface-dweller.

Svirfneblin Society

Svirfneblin communities are organized into clans and are located exclusively in subterranean settlements deep within the Underdark. Specialized engineers constantly seek out large caverns that can sustain the clan's population growth and societal needs, as well as the evolving nature of their environment. When a town is first settled, the leaders claim the more stable areas of the cavern and build complexes out of stalagmites located within. Remaining members of the clan choose the location of their home in order of priority, based on many factors such position, lineage, and wealth.

Of all the treasure that the svirfneblin gather, they cherish their children the most. Many families include four or more children, and rarely fewer than two. Repopulation is so important to the deep gnomes that the largest families often earn rewards and benefits. The parents of six or more children are rarely impoverished.

The majority of male svirfneblin work in their community's mining operations. Those who do not are either physically disabled or are part of the political and religious structure of the community. Even those who are not capable of helping in the mines find jobs processing raw material as it returns, or operating businesses that help support the town. Female svirfneblin are the masters of the domicile and venerated for their hard work. Their ability to manage a household, raise children, and keep the miners of their family healthy makes them the cornerstone of svirfneblin life—a concept not lost on the ruling family of any given clan.

Governance of a deep gnome settlement varies depending on the clan. Some towns operate on a purely democratic principle, giving an equal voice to all in the community. Others form committees that manage the overall direction of the clan and are empowered to make decisions on the town's behalf. The most common form stays close to the communal beliefs on which the race was founded. Both a king and a queen rule these svirfneblin towns, each holding the position for life. The king oversees mining operations, while the queen manages infrastructure. Though each takes pride in friendly competition between the sexes, both are ultimately responsible for the community's defense.

Svirfneblin Adventurers

Few svirfneblin travel outside the safety of the community. The race has grown to know strength in numbers, and for this reason alone individuals have a hard time breaking free. Those enterprising souls who yearn for adventure succeed in overcoming this fear, but do so with some remorse and regret.

Svirfneblin keep these feelings to themselves: To reveal them might weaken the bonds of the group. A svirfneblin away from home constantly longs to go back underground and would rather explore an unfamiliar dungeon than travel through a forest or surface city.

Druid Svirfneblin feel a natural connection to the world around them and many hear the call of the wild even in the Underdark. Many svirfneblin druids operate subterranean farms to train beasts of burden for daily tasks. Some also specialize in knowledge of unique terrain found only in the Underdark. The rulers of deep gnome city-states use this information when directing the expansion of their communities.

Cleric Priests in svirfneblin communities teach that Callarduran Smoothhands gave svirfneblin the tools to thrive in the Underdark. Their teachings and magic are practical rather than flashy. An adventuring cleric prepares meticulously for battle and travel, always carrying his or her own weight so as not to force the burden of upkeep and defense on others. In a group of explorers, a svirfneblin cleric puts an emphasis first on cooperation, settling disputes and making sure the others communicate effectively.

Ranger Svirfneblin rangers are some of the best in the Underdark. They spend a great deal of time away from the cherished comforts of their homes to hunt, fish, and scout. The strongest deep gnome communities are protected by hundreds of rangers, who are responsible for detecting and responding to incoming threats before they arrive.

Warden Wardens are the core of a svirfneblin militia. They are stalwart guardians of their kin and trusted defenders of home and hearth. Having a unique relationship with primal forces of earth and stone, svirfneblin wardens are indomitable adversaries.

Roleplaying a Svirfneblin

When creating a svirfneblin adventurer, here are a few points to consider.

You are a team player. Whenever a problem arises, you always advocate for everyone to be involved in the solution. You are eager to contribute your skills and knowledge to the discussion.

Strength in numbers. An individual svirfneblin never confronts a physical threat alone unless forced. You understand the intrinsic value of a coordinated group attack against a superior challenge. You can help the team find the best way to tactically take down an opponent using all the resources available.

You know the depths better than anyone. You know your way around the Underdark. You might

Svirfneblin communities are well hidden and tightly knit

NOAH BRADLEY

not like that fact, but it is true nonetheless. Travelers, adventurers, and other Underdark denizens seek you out for your expertise. Even if you don't know the exact path, you know the ever-changing landscape of the Underdark. It is a living entity to you, and you understand how it lives, breathes, and operates.

Thanks for noticing. You go about your life with pride in your people, your lineage, and your capabilities, but you can't shake the feeling that you aren't quite good enough. Having deserted or been forced to leave your community and clan, no longer having a designated place in a social order, you might sense that you've lost your purpose. This feeling might lead you to apologize for simple errors or go beyond the call of duty to prove yourself. The simplest compliment could mean the world to you.

Svirfneblin Characteristics: Proud, meek, lonely, curious, solemn, dour, cynical

Svirfneblin Male Names: Ashcoffer, Belwar, Boonler, Molgar, Sachelhoffen, Tassen, Victorbuff

Svirfneblin Female Names: Anselway, Dollidor, Fansel, Gretzlynn, Juile, Polliwopple, Wailee

Svirfneblin Clan Names: Dallydans, Jokulhaups, Mallywagers, Peppleponds

Svirfneblin Feats

The harsh life svirfneblin lead makes them tougher and more in tune with the forces of nature that shape the walls around them. Deep gnomes might not make many friends outside their settlements, but they know how to endure and survive without help.

Crew Savvy

As a member of a mining crew, you learned how to use teamwork when delving.

Prerequisite: Svirfneblin, training in Athletics

Benefit: You gain a +3 feat bonus to Athletics checks to climb. In addition, whenever you make a Dungeoneering check or an Athletics check to climb, one ally adjacent to you gains a +2 feat bonus the next time he or she makes the same sort of check before the end of your next turn.

Deep Durability

The primal spirits of earth and stone recognize you as their protector, and they shield you.

Prerequisite: Svirfneblin, warden, stone camouflage racial power

Benefit: When you use stone camouflage, you gain 3 additional temporary hit points for each enemy marked by you. The additional temporary hit points per enemy increase to 5 at 11th level and 7 at 21st level.

Deepstone Blessing

Since svirfneblin first learn to heal their own kin, their prayers confer distinct blessings. Anyone healed by a svirfneblin prayer feels his or her skin toughen and turn stony for a brief time.

Prerequisite: Svirfneblin, cleric, healing word power

Benefit: When you use healing word, the target also gains temporary hit points equal to your Constitution modifier.

Fade to Gray

The gnomes who live above have a stronger affinity for illusion than svirfneblin do. You're one of the few deep gnomes with a greater connection to such magic than to the magic of stone and earth.

Prerequisite: Svirfneblin, stone camouflage racial power

Benefit: When an attack hits you while you have partial concealment from stone camouflage, you can become invisible until the end of your next turn or until you attack.

Svirfneblin Utility Powers

Ancient connections made by the svirfneblin's ancestors give them the ability to draw on the magic of stone. The spirits of rock and earth found only cruel and evil beings in the reaches of the Underdark, until they met the deep gnomes—the first creatures who wanted to preserve the tunnels. Even though they mine and carve their settlements in the living rock, svirfneblin don't engage in wanton destruction or rituals that corrupt nature.

Each svirfneblin learns some different part of this ancient magic based on his or her role in society. It serves more as tradecraft than a magical tradition or school. As with svirfneblin history, no written record exists of how to obtain these powers: The teaching are passed down through storytelling.

When your svirfneblin character gains a class utility power after 1st level, you can forgo taking a power granted to you by your class. Instead, you gain a svirfneblin utility power of the same level or lower.

Ring of Rubble

Svirfneblin guards contain themselves and their foes within ramparts of broken rock to keep enemies from escaping without a fight.

Ring of Rubble — Svirfneblin Utility 2

You stamp your foot, and the earth around you ripples and furrows.

Daily ✦ Zone
Minor Action — Close burst 2
Effect: The outermost squares in the burst become a zone of difficult terrain for creatures that lack earth walk. The zone lasts until the end of the encounter.

Words from the Deep

The rules of svirfneblin society reinforce the community to such a degree that little politicking is needed. Svirfneblin know to do what's best for the community. Translating the ways of the isolated Underdark settlements can be difficult when dealing with surface dwellers, but sometimes a svirfneblin can make the connection.

Words from the Deep — Svirfneblin Utility 2

You call on your experience with the people of your deep home to be outgoing in the presence of other people.

Encounter
Free Action — Personal
Trigger: You would make a Diplomacy check or a Streetwise check.
Effect: You make a Dungeoneering check in place of the Diplomacy check or Streetwise check.

Deep Senses

Stone might seem to be immobile and inert, but the svirfneblin understand that even the great caves shake when trod upon. By attuning your senses to pick up these vibrations, you can detect the presence of other creatures.

Deep Senses — Svirfneblin Utility 6

You extend your mind into the stone, and you feel it shift and reverberate with the motion of your enemies.

Daily
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You gain tremorsense 5 until the end of the encounter. Once per round, you can spend a minor action to increase the radius of the tremorsense by 1 (to a maximum of 10).

Stony Disappearance

Your race has a natural ability to blend in with your surroundings underground, as reflected in your stone camouflage racial feature. Harnessing a more potent version of this magic makes you even harder to find. Successful svirfneblin scouts master this power.

Stony Disappearance — Svirfneblin Utility 6

You tap into your natural magical abilities and use them to blend in with your surroundings perfectly.

Encounter ✦ Illusion
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You become invisible until the end of your next turn or until you attack.

Stony Durability

You have a boon of the earth that strengthens your ties to rock and stone. Most svirfneblin can make their flesh a bit tougher, but you can turn your skin hard as rock. Many of the guards who protect svirfneblin communities possess this power.

Stony Durability — Svirfneblin Utility 6

A thick barrier of stone covers your skin, deflecting blows of all kinds.

Daily
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You gain resist 5 to all damage until the end of the encounter.

Crystal Shield

Svirfneblin artisans keep well hidden the secret of crafting with crystal. Such creations don't last as long as those of rock or metal, but they serve certain purposes very well. The crystal shield was created as an emergency measure for soldiers who needed to be able to move unencumbered but sometimes required extra protection in battle.

Crystal Shield — Svirfneblin Utility 10

You throw a handful of crystal powder in the air, and it forms a protective barrier of clear crystal.

Daily ✦ Conjuration
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You conjure a shield of crystal that surrounds you and moves with you. The shield has hit points equal to your healing surge value, and it lasts until the end of the encounter or until it is reduced to 0 hit points.

While the shield remains, you gain a +2 power bonus to AC and Reflex. When an attack hits your AC or Reflex, you can use the shield as a free action to absorb some or all of the damage. You still take all other effects from the attack, as well as any damage that exceeds the shield's hit points.

Summon Earth-Friend

Similar to earth elementals, the minuscule earth-friends dwell in Underdark caverns rich with mineral deposits. Veins of certain metals trap earth-friends, and sometimes svirfneblin miners free the little creatures. A single earth-friend might serve a svirfneblin family for generations. As long as it is left to its own devices most of the time, the creature allows itself to be summoned as a scout.

Summon Earth-Friend — Svirfneblin Utility 10

You call on an ancient friend of your people to assist you in scouting the dungeon.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Summoning
Minor Action — Ranged 5
Effect: You summon a Tiny earth-friend in an unoccupied space within range. The earth-friend is an ally to you and your allies.

The earth-friend lacks actions of its own. Instead, you spend actions to command it mentally, choosing from the actions in the earth-friend's description. You don't need line of sight to the earth-friend to command it. When you command the earth-friend, you and the creature share knowledge, but not senses.

When the earth-friend makes a check, you make the roll using your game statistics, not including temporary bonuses or penalties.

The earth-friend lasts until it drops below 1 hit point, at which point you lose a healing surge (or hit points equal to your healing surge value if you have no surges left). Otherwise, it lasts until you dismiss it as a minor action or until the end of the encounter.

Earth-Friend — Level 10 Summoned Creature
Tiny elemental magical beast (earth)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the earth-friend if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses - 2, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 5, burrow 5 — Tremorsense 5

Earth Glide
The earth-friend can pass through earth and rock as if it were phasing.

Nonthreatening
The earth-friend cannot flank.

Standard Action (teleportation) ✦ At-Will
Effect: The earth-friend teleports to a square adjacent to you, without needing line of sight.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The guardian walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Walk through Stone

Most people can't see how all stone belongs to one family. Svirfneblin know that ancient paths connect the rock, and their explorers learn to walk these paths.

Walk through Stone — Svirfneblin Utility 10

You step into the stone and emerge from the stone, walking through pathways older than the world itself.

Encounter ✦ Teleportation
Move Action — Personal
Requirement: You must be on a stone surface or adjacent to blocking terrain made of stone.
Effect: You teleport up to 10 squares. You don't need line of sight to the destination space, but you must end the movement on a stone surface or adjacent to blocking terrain made of stone.

Dungeon-Themed Powers

Your character's class, theme, and other background information probably say much about why he or she braves the depths (or intends to). The following sections discuss different ways for players to put a sharper focus on why their characters do what they do. Each section is about a type of people or an organization and elaborates on or is connected loosely to one of the themes presented earlier in this chapter. For example, the Deep Guides is an organization of Underdark explorers that works well with the deep delver theme.

Each of the entries that follows includes a number of attack powers for certain classes. Each entry also includes skill powers associated with useful subterranean exploration skills. You can choose these powers to flesh out a character with an associated theme, but anyone who wants to explore under the earth can benefit from them.

Gaining and Using Skill Powers

Skill powers, which first appeared in Player's Handbook 3, present an alternative to class utility powers. You can gain and use only the skill powers associated with your trained skills. Whenever you reach a level that grants you a utility power from your class, you can choose a skill power in place of a class power. The skill power you choose must be of the same level as or lower in level than the class power you would have gained.

You can use retraining to replace a class power with a skill power and vice versa, as long as the new power is of the same level as or lower in level than the replaced power.

You cannot replace a utility power from a paragon path or an epic destiny with a skill power.

WAYNE ENGLAND

CLASS POWERS

| Class and Level | Power | Page |
|---|---|---|
| Artificer 7 | Armor of darkness | 65 |
| Assassin 7 | Blinding menace | 53 |
| Barbarian 7 | Crushing charge | 70 |
| Bard 3 | Ballad of the zombie king | 68 |
| Battlemind 15 | Living shard | 60 |
| Cleric 1 | Horde of spiders | 68 |
| Druid 9 | Writhing earth | 56 |
| Fighter 9 | Pitiless grapple | 70 |
| Invoker 7 | Admonition of Oghma | 63 |
| Paladin 9 | Dispel the darkness | 53 |
| Psion 13 | Telepathic wail | 60 |
| Ranger 5 | Blinding assault | 54 |
| Ranger 5 | Rattle the senses | 56 |
| Rogue 3 | Startling offensive | 66 |
| Rogue 7 | Tight squeeze | 57 |
| Rogue 13 | Killing shadow | 54 |
| Runepriest 9 | Rune of divine providence | 63 |
| Seeker 13 | Short shot onslaught | 63 |
| Shaman 5 | Ancient progenitor spirit | 63 |
| Sorcerer 3 | Stormy emotions | 68 |
| Warden 7 | Expulsion | 57 |
| Warden 13 | Pulverizing impact | 70 |
| Warlock 9 | Command insanity | 60 |
| Warlord 5 | Terrain dominance | 70 |

SKILL POWERS

| Skill and Level | Power | Page |
|---|---|---|
| Acrobatics 6 | Timely dodge | 64 |
| Acrobatics 10 | Familiar footing | 66 |
| Arcana 2 | Cave sight | 57 |
| Arcana 6 | Demonic bargain | 69 |
| Arcana 6 | Peer through the void | 61 |
| Athletics 6 | Crushing escape | 71 |
| Dungeoneering 2 | Stay back | 54 |
| Dungeoneering 6 | Dungeoneer's guidance | 57 |
| Dungeoneering 10 | Insane logic | 61 |
| Dungeoneering 10 | Ripples in the air | 64 |
| Endurance 10 | Enter the crucible | 71 |
| Heal 2 | Iron resurgence | 71 |
| Insight 2 | Calculated acumen | 66 |
| Insight 6 | Conceal psyche | 61 |
| Insight 16 | Despana's stratagem | 69 |
| Intimidate 6 | Scatter the cowards | 71 |
| Perception 6 | Foil ambush | 54 |
| Stealth 2 | Elude senses | 57 |
| Stealth 10 | Immersed in darkness | 54 |
| Streetwise 2 | Failed diplomacy | 66 |

Fear of the Dark

"This tunnel reminds me of a place my little brother and I went exploring in when we were little. Well, little for a halfling, anyway. It only took a couple of weeks for the others to find us. That's when I found out how bad rat tastes."

—Ella, treasure hunter

Adventurers stomp through the caverns of the Underdark, spools of rope and lanterns in hand. Their boots smash patches of phosphorescent fungus, leaving a trail of black footprints. Suddenly rocks fly out from the darkness and smash the lanterns, leaving the party bewildered and lost as grimlocks emerge from the tunnels to surround it.

A mistake often made by neophytes in the Underdark is to treat it as just another dungeon. In fact, it is a world in its own right, with its own rules. It's as wide open as the wilderness above but far less forgiving to unprepared explorers. Drow city-states and enclaves command grand caverns, kuo-toas perform obscene rituals in stinking underground seas, and savage grimlock tribes prowl the tunnels, killing and eating anything they can catch. The civilizations that gained a foothold in the depths had to adapt to the dark tunnels and twisting geography. Only then could they flourish.

No topsider can hope to survive without training in the same techniques those deep dwellers developed to battle their primary enemy: the dark. The illumination cast by a wizard's light cantrip only goes so far. A sunrod lasts only so long. When the last light gutters out, nothing is left to show the way or break the oppressive, endless blackness. Beyond the light's edge, all sorts of horrors lurk, waiting for that moment when darkness falls and fear grips the heart.

Veteran adventurers who have survived expeditions into the Underdark did so by adopting the tactics and survival techniques used by its denizens. Return trips to the surface are difficult and time-consuming, so such explorers must learn to negate their enemies' advantage.

Classes and Themes

No particular class is required to deal with the darkness, although those that are best equipped to get around in difficult circumstances have advantages. Rangers and rogues can use nonvisual methods of finding their way, but anyone who can create light magically can overcome the dark in the most basic way. Assassins and paladins, by their nature, interact with darkness in radically different ways.

Deep delvers must often make their way through the blackness, so this theme is a natural fit. Escaped thralls, who have dwelt long in haunted depths, might have uncanny senses or psionic abilities to help in this hostile environment. Underdark outcasts, forced to survive along in the unforgiving dark, are also well suited to this suite of powers.

Attack Powers

Underdark peoples use the darkness to their advantage when they ambush unsuspecting travelers, snuffing out their light sources and ripping them to pieces while they can't see. These monsters expect surface dwellers to be easy pickings, and anyone who can overcome their foes' advantages can turn the tables.

Blinding Menace

The biggest obstacles assassins face in eliminating their enemies are the other foes standing between them and their targets. Blinding menace originated with drow assassins who use this hex and similar powers to make surgical strikes against enemy leaders and thus cause confusion among their foes.

Blinding Menace — Assassin Attack 7

Cloaking yourself in nightmare, you hide from any creature that might interfere with your attack against your foe.

Encounter ✦ Illusion, Implement, Psychic, Shadow
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier psychic damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn or until you attack, you are invisible to all enemies other than the target, including those that have blindsight or tremorsense.

Dispel the Darkness

Legends about drow, derro, and other Underdark peoples suggest they cannot abide the light, so accustomed are they to the dark. Dispel the darkness gives truth to the legend by dazzling enemies with wholesome light. By stripping enemies of their ability to see in the dark, you take away one of their strongest advantages.

Dispel the Darkness — Paladin Attack 9

Brilliant light flows through your weapon and fills your surroundings with purifying radiance.

Daily ✦ Aura, Divine, Radiant, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier radiant damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You activate an aura 3 that lasts until the end of the encounter. The aura is brightly lit. Any creature that starts its turn in the aura cannot benefit from any concealment until the start of its next turn.

Blinding Assault

The blind grimlocks navigate the Underdark's tunnels with other senses. Keen hearing, sense of smell, and instinct help them make their way. When they attack, therefore, they do so under cover of darkness, hoping to prey on disoriented enemies. Blinding assault takes its cue from the grimlocks, taking down the enemy while it struggles to find you.

Blinding Assault — Ranger Attack 5

Delivering a wicked strike, you momentarily rob your opponent of sight and then take advantage of its fumbling.

Daily ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee or Ranged weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength (melee) or Dexterity (ranged) vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Strength modifier damage (melee) or 1[W] + Dexterity modifier damage (ranged), and the target is blinded and cannot shift (save ends both). Until this effect ends, you can shift 1 square as a free action whenever the target misses with an attack.
Miss: Half damage, and the target takes a –2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends).

Killing Shadow

No race fights in the Underdark quite like the drow. Raiders spring up from hidden positions, attack, and then duck away. Emulating these tactics, killing shadow helps you make the most of your superior positioning and reach a new spot before your enemy can react.

Killing Shadow — Rogue Attack 13

Springing out from hiding, you deliver a swift attack and move away before your enemy can figure out what just happened.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee or Ranged weapon
Requirement: You must be wielding a crossbow, a light blade, or a sling.
Target: One creature from which you are hidden
Attack: Dexterity vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Dexterity modifier damage.
Effect: The attack doesn't cause you to stop being hidden, and you can move up to your speed as a free action.

IMPROVISING A LIGHT

Absent a light source, the Underdark seems pitch black. Veteran delvers, however, know light is not impossible to find. Luminescent fungi, crystals, slimes, and other materials can be used as light sources if you can find them.

At the DM's discretion, characters trained in Dungeoneering can search for appropriate materials underground during a short or an extended rest, making a Dungeoneering check against a hard DC of the character's level. On a success, the character creates a light source that sheds dim light out to 10 squares and lasts for two hours. On a failure, the character finds no usable materials and cannot attempt again within the same general area until after his or her next extended rest.

Skill Powers

When the lights go out, you need specialized ways to find your way around. Training in the Perception skill lets you learn some of these techniques as well as improve your nonvisual senses. You also should have training in Dungeoneering to forage in the Underdark, as well as to use some skill powers that negate the disadvantages of darkness.

Stealth is a useful choice for scouting if you have darkvision, enabling you to avoid detection even by enemies that are likewise unimpeded by the dark.

Stay Back

When you use stay back, you magnify a light source until it becomes uncomfortable to enemies accustomed to darkness. The stronger the light source, the greater the power's effect becomes.

Stay Back — Dungeoneering Utility 2

You sweep your torch or lantern around you to dazzle enemies accustomed to total darkness.

Encounter
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: You must be carrying a light source.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, enemies in the squares illuminated by the light source you are carrying take a –2 penalty to attack rolls.

Foil Ambush

Surface races rarely make much headway into the Underdark since the denizens know how to exploit their environment to get the drop on intruders. You have studied their tactics.

Foil Ambush — Perception Utility 6

Something out of place alerts you to imminent danger, letting you foil an enemy's ambush.

Daily
No Action Personal
Trigger: You are surprised while conscious.
Effect: You are not surprised, and you are aware of the location of any enemy within 10 squares of you that is hidden. You then shift up to half your speed as a free action.

Immersed in Darkness

Shadows offer little concealment from those able to see in darkness. No matter how well you think you have hidden, such creatures can find you at a glance. This power is an advanced hiding technique that lets you almost merge with shadows to elude even the sharpest eye.

Immersed in Darkness — Stealth Utility 10

You know how to use shadows to stay concealed even from creatures that can see in the dark.

Encounter
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: You must be in dim light or darkness.
Effect: You become invisible until the start of your next turn, until you attack, or until you enter bright light.

Secrets of the Deep Guides

"This is a bottomless pit, my friends: two miles straight down. Hang on tight, and stick close to me."

—Karl, deep delver

The foremost explorers of the Underdark's countless caverns, the loose organization called the Deep Guides is made up of peerless delvers. These talented survivalists, scouts, cartographers, and navigators range throughout the depths, ensuring open lanes of travel. Motivated by both a desire for exploration and the patronage of wealthy merchants, these trailblazers of the Underdark bring civilization into the Night Below.

History

The Deep Guides began with an unlikely friendship that developed over forty years ago. Two rival adventurers, the human Jasyn of Therund and the dwarf Marholt Arlestone, found themselves trapped in the Underdark in the aftermath of an expedition gone bad. For years the two had competed to find the legendary ruby of Sereth Van, and both arrived at the gem's location serendipitously. The treasure hunters, however, didn't plan for a nest of purple worms surrounding the ruby, and they were driven back into the tunnels. Each blamed the other for their mutual failure, and they lost the path during their bickering. Just as they realized their predicament, a violent quake trapped them in a hitherto unknown region of the Underdark.

Forced to rely on each other for survival, Marholt and Jasyn set aside their differences and, after a four-month trek, found refuge. They emerged in a huge lava tube that held a river teeming with subterranean life. When they finally reached the surface, Jasyn realized that the two were in the immense Dawnforge mountain range, an imposing barrier to trade for the many realms nearby. The two, now fast friends and keen for any opportunity to amass wealth, came up with the same idea: They could use the underground river to bypass the Dawnforges, opening up new trade routes and earning a fortune. The Deep Guides organization was born.

Jasyn and Marholt approached local lords and merchants, and they obtained supplies and resources to map the river way beneath the mountains. Marholt gained support from nearby dwarf chiefs as well, and the Deep Guides soon grew to boast dozens of members throughout the surrounding regions. Trade, community, and travel between nations swelled, making the Deep Guides' founders rich enough to become lords themselves.

The Schism

As the years passed, Marholt and Jasyn eventually withdrew from active leadership of the Guides to live in comfort in their home cities. Old age finally took Jasyn, who succumbed to illness and died in bed. Marholt, with some years left thanks to his dwarven vitality, grieved for his friend but was determined not to leave the world in the same way. He had one more journey to make. The founding Deep Guide gathered his pickaxe, ropes, and torches, and descended alone into the resting place of the ruby of Sereth Van. He never returned.

Both Jasyn and Marholt had many sons and daughters, whose petty squabbles over inheritance jeopardized the fate of the Deep Guides. Political allegiances, racial bias, and unabashed greed broke the organization into several independent factions, sometimes hostile to one another, and each with its own motives and methods.

The Deep Guides Today

Little consensus exists today among the bickering factions of Deep Guides. Each claims to be pursuing the original intention of the organization: exploring and mapping the Underdark. However, their motives vary wildly. No company of Deep Guides is evil, but the groups' mutual resentment prevents them from cooperating as the organization did in early days. The bitterness between Jasyn's and Marholt's children doesn't usually affect individual guides, who spend most of their time in the Underdark on missions. Confrontations between rival companies have become tense and even violent on occasion, however.

Each company of Deep Guides operates independently, making alliances with caravan masters, lords, and travelers at its own discretion. Each has a different leadership style and its own priorities, though most members are still explorers at heart. Some companies are run like mercantile enterprises, while others are relaxed with a rugged feel, like the camaraderie of a hunting lodge. Each has a similar organization. Typically, the company's leaders negotiate contracts, providing equipment and recruiting laborers as needed to its members. A typical task can range from clearing out a nest of monsters to mapping a newly opened tunnel; after its completion, the guide receives payment.

The explorers of the Deep Guides are an adventurous lot concerned mostly with discovery and excitement. They leave the politics to those who stay behind at headquarters or on the surface. Individual guides are allowed to operate independently, as long as they give the company's leaders a portion of earnings under the Deep Guides name.

Joining the Deep Guides

As a member of the Deep Guides, you are among the world's premier underground explorers. Before you decide to join up, though, be aware that you'll be sent deep into uncharted territory where you are prey for any number of Underdark monsters.

If you're daring enough to make the commitment, you can expect journeys that make surface explorers weak in the knees. You have the support of other guides, who can provide you with refuge, equipment, and sometimes information to aid you in your delves. The Deep Guides don't accept just anyone, though—you need to prove that you have what it takes to survive in the depths.

Classes and Themes

Your choice of class goes a long way in determining your role as one of the Deep Guides. The majority of members are rangers, since that class enjoys a useful variety of skills and has the combat prowess needed to survive underground. Rangers excel at exploration, being self-reliant in areas without established roads or reliable sustenance. Rogues are also common, since they are experts at negotiating treacherous terrain and hazards. They are often assigned to disable traps in the path of caravans, or to set some of their own to clear out skulking monsters.

More combat-oriented classes, such as wardens, are always welcome in any company of Deep Guides. Their strength and toughness are invaluable when clearing a lair of monsters or guarding vulnerable caravans and travelers.

Druids, despite their aboveground inclinations, bring much to the Deep Guides. The druids' wild shape power lets them move through caverns in the form of native beasts, and those who have training in both Perception and Dungeoneering are as valuable below ground as they are on the surface.

The deep delver theme is a natural choice for your Deep Guides character. It gives you an edge when exploring subterranean environments that could mean the difference between life and death. The Underdark envoy is a good fit as well.

Even without those themes, training in Athletics is helpful for the rigorous physical demands needed to move through the wild places of the Underdark. Since many of the Deep Guides' expeditions bring you into contact with cultures of the Underdark, don't forget Diplomacy.

Attack Powers

Conventional battle tactics and abilities don't always work in the Underdark. Cramped fighting conditions, limited line of sight, and monsters adapted to that environment can deny victory even to experienced adventurers. Members of the Deep Guides bring their knowledge of subterranean survival to combat as well as exploration. They can turn the tables on dungeon-dwelling foes, using the Underdark's terrain as a weapon or denying subterranean creatures their natural advantages, to give cave-dwelling beasties a nasty surprise.

Writhing Earth

A constant challenge to battling underground is contending with the rugged terrain that is ubiquitous in caverns. Deep Guides who speak the primal language of earth and rock can sweep this terrain aside using writhing earth, sending a blast of rubble into their foes while clearing a path for themselves.

Writhing Earth — Druid Attack 9

The earth groans all around, constantly creating and dissolving debris to block your enemies and smooth paths for your allies.

Daily ✦ Implement, Primal, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Wisdom modifier damage, and the target falls prone.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The blast creates a zone of difficult terrain for your enemies. The zone lasts until the end of the encounter.

Rattle the Senses

The most dangerous enemies of the Underdark are able to detect you without light, and in some cases even without eyes! Through preternatural hearing, echolocation, or even detecting vibrations in the ground, these enemies can feel you coming, but rattle the senses denies them this natural advantage.

Rattle the Senses — Ranger Attack 5

A precise strike makes your enemy reel in disorientation, robbing it of its ability to use its specialized senses.

Daily ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee or Ranged weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength (melee) or Dexterity (ranged) vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage (melee) or Dexterity modifier damage (ranged), and the target is dazed (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target loses blindsight and tremorsense until the end of your next turn.

Tight Squeeze

The narrow spaces in many caves can be the downfall of some heroes. Even skilled warriors, trapped in a corner with no room to maneuver or swing a weapon, are easy prey for the mandibles of an umber hulk. Tight squeeze lets you outmaneuver your enemies, ensuring that they're the ones trapped in cramped areas, instead of you.

Tight Squeeze — Rogue Attack 7

With a daring movement, you strike your foe and trick it into a narrow space.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Special: If you're squeezing when you use this power, you don't take the penalty to the attack roll from squeezing.
Hit: 2[W] + Dexterity modifier damage, and you swap places with the target if possible, forcing it to squeeze if necessary. You then shift up to half your speed.

Expulsion

Creatures that burrow or cling to walls can be tricky to deal with. Deep Guides of the warden class use expulsion to keep such enemies on the dungeon floor.

Expulsion — Warden Attack 7

You strike the ground and send a rolling tremor through the earth.

Daily ✦ Primal, Thunder, Weapon
Standard Action Close blast 3
Special: You ignore blocking terrain when determining line of effect for this attack.
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Strength vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1[W] + Strength modifier thunder damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn. The target emerges to the nearest unoccupied space if it is burrowing or falls if it is climbing, and it cannot burrow or climb until the end of your next turn.

Skill Powers

Training in the Dungeoneering skill should be a priority for your character since you'll be spending much of your time underground. Stealth and Perception are also useful choices for guides who scout into unknown places.

As well, a little bit of magical talent (represented by the Arcana skill) can give you the edge when ordinary senses fail.

Cave Sight

Inspired by the echoing chirps of cave-dwelling creatures, spell users of the Deep Guides have developed methods of their own for mapping out caverns. Using cave sight, you can get a clear vision of the dungeon's geography, as well as sense hidden passages or threats that wait beyond.

Cave Sight — Arcana Utility 2

You close your eyes, projecting arcane awareness to give you a mental picture of the cavern ahead.

Daily
Minor Action Close burst 20
Effect: You learn the general layout of terrain features in the burst. You cannot sense through solid objects, such as cave walls, but you do sense around corners and into narrow gaps. Additionally, you can make a Perception check to detect hidden creatures, objects, and traps as though you were within 10 squares of them.

Dungeoneer's Guidance

The best Underdark guides always keep an eye on their companions, intervening before missteps or accidents send the party tumbling into a bottomless pit or into the jaws of a waiting monster.

Dungeoneer's Guidance — Dungeoneering Utility 6

Your survival skills step in to support an ally.

Encounter
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: An ally you can see and who can hear you makes an Acrobatics, Athletics, Dungeoneering, Nature, or Perception check and dislikes the result.
Effect: Make a Dungeoneering check. The triggering ally can use the result of your check in place of his or her own result.

Elude Senses

For most, no amount of sneaking can foil the keen senses of beasts native to subterranean environments. The Deep Guides, however, developed elude senses to ensure that creatures relying on senses other than normal sight cannot detect them.

Elude Senses — Stealth Utility 2

You slip past the notice of creatures that have adapted to life underground.

Encounter
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, creatures can't use darkvision, blindsight, or tremorsense to detect you. You can be detected with other senses as normal.

Shadow of the Ziggurat

"I must confess these caverns fill me with dread. They feel different from the corridors before . . . familiar in a way I can't understand."

—Mord, escaped thrall

Something disturbs the oily surface of the Dark Lake. Ripples spread slowly, washing against the eight sides of the enigmatic structure that rises sheer from the fathomless depths, its black stones brooding in oppressive silence. The surface of the lake breaks, revealing for a moment a shape not meant for mortal eyes before it slips again beneath the stygian waters.

Growing Madness

The Dark Lake Ziggurat (Underdark, page 42) is a place of terrible import. An artifact created by entities from the Far Realm, it exudes an alien unwholesomeness. Heroes of the sane world point to the dreadful structure when rallying forces against the aberrations of the depths.

Yet the ziggurat is but one of many such places in the Underdark that spread evil to the world above. In recent years the traffic to these insane locales has increased, pointing to the growing influence of the Far Realm. Individuals affected by this horrid presence are being drawn to the dungeons and caverns of the Underdark. The weak-willed never return; the strong triumph over madness.

Insane Masters

Aberrant creatures are the true lords of the Underdark, more so then even the drow. The dark elves possess a culture and history that the surface races can comprehend, but aberrations are inscrutable. They seem intent on dominating all life, though scholars can only speculate on their true nature and motives.

Aboleths, beholders, and mind flayers are the best known of these monsters, but the weird darkness holds numerous others. Their presence portends dire things to come as the Far Realm slowly uncoils its tentacles across the world. More and more incidents on the surface are being instigated by intellects from below—sometimes subtle, sometimes catastrophic.

Few individuals realize the truth behind these malignant events. Only those who have encountered the Far Realm's corruption and survived its maddening influence understand the threat. They are compelled to explore and overcome the terrible dark, even when their instincts scream at them not to. Whether they experience very strong emotions or are acutely sensitive to psychic phenomena, they hear the Far Realm's call more clearly than others.

Making Contact

Every adventurer in the Underdark eventually comes across the aberrant horrors lurking in its darkest corners. Such an encounter changes a person—even one with the iron will of a hero. Those most committed to defeating the corruption of the Far Realm, though, usually feel it long before they descend below the surface.

For you this influence might be subtle, something lurking in the back of your mind that made you odd or unapproachable during your youth. Did you suffer from nightmares or visions as a child? If so, how have they guided your life? Maybe you dreamed of writhing shapes in the dark and are drawn downward out of a desire to understand what you saw. You delve into dungeons not by choice, but by some impulse that you don't quite understand. Do you fear what lies below, or push on into the depths hoping to discover what awaits you?

Your experience with aberrants could be much more terrifying and personal. These creatures are notorious for enslaving mortals, dominating the mind and crushing the soul. Were you once a slave who managed to escape? You might be following an echo of your old master's voice in your mind.

TOUCHED BY MADNESS

Anyone who has experienced the insidious horror of aberrant monsters isn't likely to be completely normal. The Far Realm's influence seeps unnoticed into the surface world, and those touched by it might not even realize their corruption. If your character suffered this experience, you can express it through roleplaying. You might portray your character as driven by ominous thoughts he or she doesn't understand. Such barely controlled madness offers a way to inject a bit of Far Realm weirdness into the game. Take care not to dominate the group, though—others want to express their characters too.

Staying Sane

You risk more than your life when you confront aberrations. Prolonged exposure to their sickening mental contact can harm your mind as much as their tentacles rend your flesh. This damage might not be immediate; it burrows into your psyche to manifest days or weeks later. Confusion, déjà vu, nocturnal terrors, and hallucinations are all symptoms of having one's mind touched by these monsters. Those who have been mentally dominated experience these symptoms worse than others, but simply being the target of a psychic attack can be enough to disturb your mental balance. How do you succeed in holding onto your sanity?

The Dark Lake Ziggurat is home to a host of unimaginable aberrant monstrosities

ADAM PAQUETTE

Fighting aberrations has affected the way you look at the world. Have you become numbed to their hideous physical forms, or does each glimpse of an aberrant creature make your skin crawl? Perhaps you developed an aversion to natural things, such as insects or worms, that remind you of them. Peering into the maw of the Far Realm might eat away at your moral or religious sense, making you nihilistic or withdrawn.

The greatest weapon of the Far Realm is its assault on intellect; the more you know about it, the more susceptible you are to its horrors. Characters who deal with aberrations at sword point don't concern themselves with understanding their foes. Scholarly characters who probe into reality-bending paradoxes open themselves up to the Far Realm's madness, obsessed with things no mortal mind is capable of understanding.

Classes and Themes

Not all classes are equally suited to wandering the depths, and fewer still to combating aberrations. Those who use the psionic power source are the most likely to seek out and engage aberrant foes, being highly sensitive to psychic energy since the shattering of the Living Gate. Such characters are naturally drawn to dungeons stained by the Far Realm's influence. Although their psionic powers can be potent weapons, they are also easily corrupted by aberrant foes. In the quest to learn more about mental horrors, many a battlemind or psion has opened one door too many, only to find a monster of nightmare waiting for them.

Arcane dungeoneering characters are often drawn to the lairs of Far Realm monsters, usually out of a desire for knowledge and power. Some pursue aberrations to discover ancient lore connected to their origins, or to acquire forbidden secrets that no sane master would teach; warlocks in particular might be brazen enough to try to control them.

Since many aberrations rely on psychic manipulation, themes that enhance Will are best suited to this area of lore. The escaped thrall theme is ideal for such a background; alternatively, a bloodsworn character might be seeking vengeance against an aberrant mastermind that attacked his or her family or community.

Attack Powers

Adventurers who face aberrant creatures too often end up devoured, enslaved, or driven mad. Those who survive such encounters have developed effective methods to defeat them. Such techniques exploit aberrant creatures' psychic abilities or use specialized magic to burn away their otherworldly flesh.

Living Shard

In the dim epochs of history, the Living Gate held back the terrors of the Far Realm. Though the gate has long since been shattered, living shard enables you to manifest a tiny fragment of the gate's energy. This shard overwhelms the minds of your enemies and disintegrates the bodies of aberrations.

Living Shard — Battlemind Attack 15

Your strike embeds a crystalline fragment in your enemy's flesh, overwhelming it with psionic energy channeled from the Living Gate.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Radiant, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target is dazed and gains vulnerable 5 psychic (save ends both).
Miss: Half damage, and the target gains vulnerable 5 psychic (save ends).
Effect: Until the vulnerability ends, the target takes 10 radiant damage whenever it uses a psychic power.

Telepathic Wail

The aberrant creatures below rarely communicate in ways familiar to surface dwellers. Most transmit their sickening thoughts with telepathy, which makes them especially receptive to the mental activity of their prospective victims. With telepathic wail, you ensure that they hear your thoughts loud and clear.

Telepathic Wail — Psion Attack 13

You project a keening psychic scream into the minds around you and rob nearby creatures of hearing.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is deafened until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and the target loses any psychic resistance or immunity until the end of your next turn.
Augment 4
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is deafened and dazed until the end of your next turn. If the target deals psychic damage before the end of your next turn, it is stunned instead of dazed.

For some, the evil of the Far Realm is never far away

KIERAN YANNER

Command Insanity

Though many aberrant creatures can enslave the minds of mortals, they themselves are subservient to the insane laws of the Far Realm. With command insanity you control its otherworldly nature.

Command Insanity — Warlock Attack 9

Your eyes reflect the madness of the Far Realm, crushing your enemy's will with the overwhelming weight of insanity.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Charm, Implement
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution or Charisma vs. Will
Hit: The target is dominated (save ends). If the target is aberrant, it takes a -2 penalty to saving throws against this effect.
Aftereffect: The target is dazed (save ends).
Miss: The target is dazed (save ends).

Skill Powers

Only a fool dares face aberrants without training in Dungeoneering—especially since most such horrors make their lairs in the Underdark. Not only does this skill help you navigate and survive the depths, it can also give you vital insight into your foe. Knowing the unique strengths, vulnerabilities, and behavior of these alien beings can mean the difference between striking a victorious blow and having your brain sucked from your skull.

Sometimes an aberrant's tricks are more subtle, involving illusions. Training in Insight and Arcana are handy for distinguishing between reality and delusion.

Peer Through the Void

Some adventurers, especially those whose minds have been touched by aberrant creatures, view the world through different eyes. By using peer through the void you shut off the sane part of your mind, welcoming the chaos of senses to better combat aberrant terrors.

Peer Through the Void — Arcana Utility 6

You part the veil between worlds, seeing creatures from the Far Realm as they really are.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the peer through the void stance. Until the stance ends, you gain blindsight 3, and aberrant creatures grant combat advantage to you. You take a -2 penalty to attack rolls against creatures outside the range of your blindsight.

Insane Logic

Though creatures from the Far Realm obey laws from a different reality, they can still be made vulnerable to worldly forces if their true nature is understood. Insane logic gives you that momentary flash of madness needed to face aberrant creatures on equal terms.

Insane Logic — Dungeoneering Utility 10

You abandon conventions of the world's natural laws to break through an aberrant creature's defenses.

Encounter
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Choose one aberrant creature that you can see within 5 squares of you. Make a Dungeoneering check to determine that creature's resistances and vulnerabilities. On a success, your attacks ignore the creature's resistances until the end of the encounter.

Conceal Psyche

Those who have survived encounters with aberrant beings have instinctively learned to shield their thoughts. Conceal psyche protects you from psychic attacks by burying your intellect in the deepest corners of your mind.

Conceal Psyche — Insight Utility 6

You hide the core of your identity deep in your subconscious.

Encounter
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain a +4 power bonus to Will and a +4 power bonus to saving throws against charm and psychic effects until the end of your next turn.
Special: If you are dominated and a save can end the domination effect, you can expend this power at the start of your turn to make a saving throw to end that effect.

FIGHTING THE ABERRANTS

You'll need every advantage to overcome the aberrant monsters of the Underdark. Here are some tricks the best delvers have picked up over the years.

- ✦ Items, feats, or class features that grant psychic resistance can greatly improve your odds of survival.
- ✦ Use attacks that target defenses other than Will, since many aberrations are controllers with strong mental resilience.
- ✦ Few aberrant creatures are minions, so powers that deal high damage to a single foe are more useful than close and area effects.

Seekers of Lost Lore

"Have you heard of the Library of Darkness and Light? Over a hundred volumes on the magic of good and evil, compiled from thirteen ancient civilizations and written in four living languages and two dead ones—and that's before we crack open the vault!"

—Ella, treasure hunter

The forces of good and evil rise and fall like the tides of the ocean. Both sides amass strength only to lose it again, leaving a wealth of lost knowledge for future generations to discover. As time moves on, the world becomes cluttered with great tomes, talismans, relics, artifacts, and other products of these times long past.

Many explorers and adventurers, whatever their professed motivations, have some amount of greed in their hearts. They might think most often in terms of how much a recovered treasure would bring if it were sold, or turned in for a reward. For others, the potential monetary return means nothing in comparison to what can be gained from possession of the treasure. The temptation of lost lore is strong, and many search the corners of the world to dig it from its resting place. Amateur scholars from all walks of life assemble teams to quench their thirst for knowledge. Their reasons for taking up such a career are usually benign, but some have selfish and devious purposes. Seekers of lost lore meticulously research the locations and history of mighty items in libraries, temples, and other storehouses of scholarship. They spend a lot of time learning how to deal with the threats they might face. Only after assembling enough information do they set out to claim their treasure.

If the supposed location of a piece of lost lore is not a secret known only to the heroes, then more searchers might enter the fray as time moves on. Multiple groups of creatures often race to recover the same artifact, hurrying through an ancient dungeon complex to get there first. Even in a situation when the characters have no competition in the form of monsters and other enemies, every seeker of lost lore knows well that the treasure is being protected by the dungeon itself, likely through the use of hazards and traps. For all these reasons, those who quest after bygone knowledge need to be as capable and determined as they can possibly be.

Classes and Themes

Any sort of character can be drawn to the promise of more power through knowledge, but those who specialize in ancient lore more often pursue lost relics that embody long-buried truths.

Will this explorer succeed in grabbing the prize of lost lore, or suffer the same fate as those who came before him?

JESPER EJSING

Perhaps understandably, the characters who gravitate toward being seekers of lost lore are predominantly users of the divine or the primal power source. Many deities (and their counterparts in the spirit world) have a special appreciation for knowledge and lore, and they engender that appreciation in their worshipers. A religious character might follow this path to suss out a legendary weapon or artifact dating back to the Dawn War, or search out an irredeemably evil object to destroy it.

Characters with the treasure hunter theme often also consider themselves seekers of lost lore, since those characters already specialize in seeking out great artifacts (most of which also happen to be worth a lot of gold).

Attack Powers

Adventurers who have taken on the life of a seeker of lost lore must be clever and able to adapt to any situation, because they are liable to be competing against many others—not just rival adventurers, but great entities that would do anything to acquire the object of their search.

Admonition of Oghma

Seekers of lost lore can be consumed by their work. They spend most of their waking hours entranced in the study of the items they seek, possibly due to a residual property of the magic that binds the items to ensure they are never forgotten. The god of knowledge opens a conduit to such seekers, compelling them to go out and retrieve the items rather than remain forever studying, with timely warnings to protect them during their travels.

Admonition of Oghma Invoker Attack 7

A split-second view of the future flashes before you, revealing a threat to come.

Encounter ✦ Divine, Implement
Immediate Reaction Ranged 5
Trigger: An enemy ends its turn within 5 squares of you.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Wisdom modifier damage, and the target is slowed until the end of its next turn.

Rune of Divine Providence

During the Dawn War, each god created a unique icon of divine power to serve his or her purposes. Many of these were shattered or lost during the clash, and after it had ended, the gods sought their restoration. Runepriests are natural seekers of lost artifacts, envoys of the gods sent to recover their ancient relics, and benefit from their patrons' protection.

Rune of Divine Providence Runepriest Attack 9

You strike your enemy and call upon your god to wrap you and your allies in divine supremacy.

Daily ✦ Aura, Divine, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. While in the aura, your allies gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses.
Sustain Minor: The aura persists until the end of your next turn.

Short Shot Onslaught

Fighting in close quarters can be a daunting and difficult proposition. Some delvers have developed superior tactics to overcome this challenge through training and persistence.

Short Shot Onslaught Seeker Attack 13

Your time spent underground has forced you to adapt to skirmishing in close quarters.

Encounter ✦ Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 3
Target: One, two, or three creatures in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Wisdom modifier damage.
Effect: After all of this power's attacks are resolved, you can use a free action to shift up to 2 squares for each attack that hit. You ignore difficult terrain during this movement.

Ancient Progenitor Spirit

The spirit world frightens the ignorant. It is associated with death and the great passing. Shamans understand that life extends beyond the mortal shell and that great ancestors wait to welcome us home once more.

Ancient Progenitor Spirit Shaman Attack 5

With a low hum, your spirit companion fades and the essence of an ancient ancestor comes to your aid, invading the minds of enemies foolish enough to stay close.

Daily ✦ Implement, Primal, Psychic, Spirit, Zone
Standard Action Close burst spirit 2
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d10 + Wisdom modifier psychic damage, and the target grants combat advantage and cannot benefit from any concealment (save ends both).
Effect: Your spirit companion disappears, and the burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Enemies in the zone take a -2 penalty to attack rolls, and any enemy that ends its turn in the zone takes 5 psychic damage.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn.

Skill Powers

If you seek that which is lost, make sure you know what you're doing. Training in Dungeoneering is essential for navigating the many perils of ancient ruins, temple complexes, and Underdark lairs. And Acrobatics helps you negotiate narrow ledges and avoid the inevitable pitfalls.

Timely Dodge Your peripheral awareness has been honed by years of exploring underground. Sometimes you can avoid an attack without being conscious of it, realizing the danger only after you have escaped.

Timely Dodge — Acrobatics Utility 6

Something out of the corner of your eye causes you to step out of the way of danger.

Encounter
Immediate Interrupt — Personal
Trigger: An enemy targets you with an attack.
Effect: You shift up to half your speed. The triggering enemy can choose a new target for the attack if you are now out of range.

Ripples in the Air It is said that the world is a living being, caught between the gods and primordials during the Dawn War. Each ebb and flow from creation rippled throughout the world and finite vibrations echo with it. You have spent so much time beneath the surface that you can see the vibrations in your mind—giving you clarity and sight where light might not exist.

Ripples in the Air — Dungeoneering Utility 10

You can navigate even in complete darkness.

Daily
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You gain tremorsense 5 until the end of your next turn.
Sustain Minor: The tremorsense persists until the end of your next turn.

Thieves' Guild of Maelbrathyr

"Maelbrathyr? I've heard of the place. Nice work, if you can survive it."

—Khiira, Underdark envoy

When Torog dragged the city of Maelbrathyr down into the Underdark (see the sidebar), no one expected it to survive, let alone turn into a breeding ground for ruffians and miscreants. Few who live there question the methods that keep the city running.

Resettling the city and giving it life once more required a large undertaking and an immense amount of money. Maelbrathyr's unique new structure also inspired a group of entrepreneurs to call the shattered city their home. In the shadow of Torog's revenge, influential individuals established crime guilds, which are now flourishing with the covert assistance of the city's de facto ruler.

Hidden Organization

The thieves' guild of Maelbrathyr has a rigid cell-based structure, difficult to fully comprehend and nearly impossible to track. If the organization has a head, his or her identity remains a secret to all. Even the most senior captains are unsure where their orders come from. Most outsiders give up on trying to solve the enigma of the guild. Those who persist soon disappear and are never heard from again.

The guild has eyes and ears everywhere. Potential members do not seek it out but are recruited from the streets. Waylaid and knocked out, they awaken in a secret location to undergo a horrific initiation. Those who survive this ordeal start out serving as footpads. As they accomplish more missions and goals, they move up in rank and are given greater responsibility.

Aleeria's Influence

Aleeria Salitzar is one of the broken city's three mad rulers, and the only one who wields any real authority at the moment (see the sidebar). Changeable and cruel, she inspires terror in her enemies—and only slightly less fear in others. Even so, Aleeria knows that her grip on the city is only as strong as her alliances.

Aleeria knows that to maintain any semblance of power, she needs to manage those who control the city's wealth. To that end, she has been working closely with the thieves' guild in her city. It took some time, but she ingratiated herself with an insider in the organization. Through this secret contact, she attempts to direct the guild's activities—although its decentralized structure and her own fits of rage make such efforts only intermittently successful. Still, she enjoys some of the fruits of their illicit trade.

WAYNE ENGLAND

The darkness of Maelbrathyr is excellent cover for criminal activity

Classes and Themes

As befits a criminal organization, rogues are the most common class in this thieves' guild. However, Maelbrathyr's unique situation means that other sorts of characters with specialized talents are desirable to the organization.

Warlocks are often connected to dark forces, and their arcane talents are valuable for certain jobs that ordinary criminal practitioners just can't handle. They tend to be morally flexible, a useful quality. In addition, the guild places a high value on members who have expertise as artificers, because their skill at tailoring armor and other equipment is hard to find elsewhere in the city.

The Underdark envoy theme is extremely useful to members of the thieves' guild, since navigating the maze of Maelbrathyr's politics requires the most subtle touch. Relationships within the guild are tricky as well, especially considering Aleeria's influence through her anonymous contact. An Underdark outcast might find a home in the thieves' guild after losing all hope of return to his or her former society.

Attack Powers

Members of the Maelbrathyr thieves' guild must call upon a wide variety of abilities. Success comes only from the right combination of secrecy and capability.

THE FALL OF MAELBRATHYR

Maelbrathyr was pulled down into the Underdark centuries ago by Torog, the King that Crawls. The god of torment took revenge on the proud city when its champions dared to enter his torture dens and rescue a prisoner known as the Ruby Wizard.

The surviving heroes returned triumphant to the surface—only to be greeted by disaster. Torog dragged Maelbrathyr into the depths, shattering the city as it fell. Much was lost forever, but the parts that survived came to rest in four pieces. Most of the buildings remained intact, and much of the population survived.

They were the unlucky ones. The maimed god first reclaimed his prisoner, then spent years slowly and painfully killing everyone who still lived in Maelbrathyr. The three heroes were transformed into ageless forms condemned to eternal torture. Maddened by pain and unable to escape, they have become its insane lords.

Aleeria Salitzar is frozen with unending ice from the waist down, while her upper body is consumed with eternal flame. Her mood swings between dark brooding to furious rage. She is the ostensible ruler of Maelbrathyr, since the others are too distracted by their torments. Hannault Thrayban is possessed by the souls of two fellow adventurers whom he murdered, and the trapped personalities constantly struggle to gain ascendancy. Ordu Dekaan, flayed in a rolling cage of blades, is too indecisive to stick with any course of action for long.

Armor of Darkness

Maelbrathyr is home to unique artisans, armorsmiths, and weaponsmiths. Many of them have trained as artificers to create special arms and armor. Inevitably, some of these craftspeople experimented with the shadowy forces at play in the forsaken city, imbuing their creations with a dark energy.

Armor of Darkness Artificer Attack 7

Your armor is imbued with a tenebrous and chaotic shadow, which lashes out in defense, sapping your foes' life force to bolster your own.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold, Implement, Necrotic
Immediate Reaction Melee 1
Trigger: An adjacent enemy attacks you.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier cold and necrotic damage.
Effect: You and each ally adjacent to you gain 5 temporary hit points.

TYLER JACOBSON

THE BLEAK CARNIVAL

The chaotic environment of Maelbrathyr admirably masks clandestine activity, but things get even more out of hand when the Bleak Carnival arrives in town. During the annual event, visitors from all across the Underdark flock to the event along with shady dealers from the surface. The festival offers a chance to buy and sell just about anything, licit or not. The thieves' guild makes valuable contacts, transacts in special wares (including slaves, contraband, and stolen goods), and obtains new assignments during the carnival. It's also a good time for clandestine assassinations; the bodies are often not discovered until the tents and stalls have been packed away once more. "Recruitment drives" (that is, kidnapping) also coincide with the festivities.

Startling Offensive

The thieves' guild teaches that in the Underdark, you don't have to be the strongest or the most accomplished fighter. You just need to strike first and strike to kill.

Startling Offensive — Rogue Attack 3

You strike before your foe even realizes that you are a threat.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Immediate Reaction — Melee 1
Requirement: You must be wielding a light blade.
Trigger: An enemy enters a square within 3 squares of you.
Effect: You shift up to 2 squares to a square adjacent to the triggering enemy and make the following attack with combat advantage.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Dexterity vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Skill Powers

Members of the guild share a general pool of skills, but each has a specialized role. One might be a "face," learning how to read and trick people, while another is an acrobatic cat burglar who climbs walls and walks tightropes. Maelbrathyr has a unique position in the Underdark, and its thieves become experts in dealing with its challenges.

Familiar Footing

Skilled acrobats can improvise and adapt to any situation with balance, grace, and skill. In an unforgiving setting, they quickly adjust to meet the challenge.

Familiar Footing — Acrobatics Utility 10

You are comfortable maneuvering around precarious terrain.

Daily
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You ignore difficult terrain until the end of the encounter.

Calculated Acumen

In warfare, information can be a deadly weapon. Knowing your enemies' weaknesses helps you and your allies overcome them.

Calculated Acumen — Insight Utility 2

Your understanding of battle gives you information on your enemy's tactics.

Encounter
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: Choose one creature within 10 squares of you. You learn the vulnerabilities of that creature, and it grants combat advantage to you until the end of your next turn.

Failed Diplomacy

When talking won't get the job done, and a fight is imminent, you need to be ready before the other side is.

Failed Diplomacy — Streetwise Utility 2

Negotiations are breaking down and will end in bloodshed. You realize this fact a split-second before your enemies do.

Daily
Free Action — Close burst 5
Trigger: You and your allies roll initiative.
Target: You and each ally in the burst
Effect: Each target gains a +2 power bonus to the initiative check. In addition, the target has combat advantage against all enemies until the end of his or her next turn.

WAYNE ENGLAND

A night sky shines underground in the Vault of the Drow

ADAM PAQUETTE

From the Vault of the Drow

"The place is said to be as lovely as it is terrible: an entire realm of drow and dark creatures in service to Lolth. I would wipe such evil from the world if only I were able."
—Meliera, bloodsworn

A gleaming but sinister gem, the Vault of the Drow is one of the most spectacular and awe-inspiring locations in the Underdark. Traveling to the great cavern is treacherous and extremely dangerous, a journey that only experienced adventurers should consider. Within its immense breadth, though, lies a place of great beauty and mystery.

Only one known road gives access to the area. An approaching traveler is greeted by bizarre sights, accompanied by a chill breeze. Countless mauve, violet, and deep blue crystals sparkle like stars in the ceiling and walls of the vault. These formations are remnants of unfinished creation, suspended in the cavern since the days of the Dawn War. Below these faux constellations, growths of pale fungus shimmer with golden, sapphire, and ruby hues. A soft hum buzzes within the vault, the product of native cricket-like insects that inhabit the fungal patches. To those who can see into the darkness, the walls of the vault appear hazy and somewhat insubstantial.

The road continues down into a gorge between steep cliffs. Crushed crystals faintly shimmering with blue light keep visitors from wandering off the path and falling into the darkness. From there, the road leads into an Underdark countryside that is filled with fungi of varying sizes, crystalline columns, and immense spans of lichens and molds.

The Black Tower

Roughly a mile from the entrance to the vault, a great mound of rock and crystal rises to dominate the road. This obsidian tower forces all who approach to choose between going around it to the right or left, into dark and unwelcoming reaches, or entering through the well-traveled middle way.

The black tower is the first line of defense for the infamous drow city of Erelhei-Cinlu. Soldiers patrol the area, challenging visitors to report to the tower and state their business. Officers conduct routine checks of travelers and seize their weapons and armor during questioning.

Noncitizens are issued cloaks that glow with a light visible only to drow nobles and senior military officers, and to bounty hunters who have received a special tattoo that confers this sight. However, individuals who display a brooch of one of the merchant clans or noble houses need not wear the cloak as long as they wear the pin at all times. (Travelers from outside the city might gain such favor with a house for accomplishing a requested task.) Any who do not follow these rules, or try to circumvent them in any way, are slain.

Erelhei-Cinlu

The gem of the vault is the vast and vibrant city-stronghold of Erelhei-Cinlu. Crenellated obsidian walls 30 feet high surround this centuries-old settlement, punctuated at irregular intervals by towers tall enough to repel the largest of creatures.

Erelhei-Cinlu is a metropolitan hub of political intrigue, rivalries, and secrets. Female drow known as the matron mothers rule their noble houses through intimidation and magical might. Their goddess, Lolth, rewards their faith with special abilities. Arcane academies train favored male drow as potent spellcasters specializing in necromancy and nethermancy. The vast majority of the males, though, are considered inferior and relegated to militia duty. These small military forces are led by a house's weaponmasters, elite soldiers who have demonstrated leadership and courage in defense of the city.

Classes and Themes

The dominant females of Erelhei-Cinlu (and thus of the vault) are clerics who lead the worship of Lolth. As such, female drow characters with a connection to the city are most often clerics, although a female who fled or otherwise became separated from that society might adopt another class.

Male drow who show promise are given training in the arcane arts. A male drow character who grew up in or around the city might be cultivated as a bard or a sorcerer, both professions that females rarely undertake.

Underdark envoy is a likely theme for a character connected to Erelhei-Cinlu. Perhaps you are a representative of a matron mother, or (much like Khiira) you fled the city and came to depend on social expertise to make your way in the Underdark. Deep delver would be an interesting theme for a character who has abandoned the Vault of the Drow, whether you are an escaped slave or a drow who does not want to accept the life dictated for you.

Attack Powers

Each of the unique powers that are a hallmark of Erelhei-Cinlu and the vault has its foundation in one of the multitudinous facets of drow culture. These powers are often the province of soldiers, emissaries, and other non-drow in the service of Lolth.

Ballad of the Zombie King

Over the centuries, many folktales and stories have been passed down in Erelhei-Cinlu. One tells of the zombie king, a dreadful monster that lies in stasis somewhere near the Vault. The location of his resting place is unknown, but stories say that at some secret time, he will be unleashed upon the city. Behind him will be an immense sea of the dead—souls claimed in the many wars the city has endured. Recounting this tale unnerves all who hear it.

Ballad of the Zombie King Bard Attack 3

The mere mention of the zombie king sends chills down the spine of even the most fearless.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Fear, Implement, Psychic
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Horde of Spiders

Loyal priestesses of Lolth are gifted with unique abilities by the Demon Queen of Spiders. With a single prayer, such a cleric can summon a swarm of arachnids to consume any who dare defy Lolth's will.

Horde of Spiders Cleric Attack 1

Tiny black spiders assault your enemy, burrowing into its skin and causing terrible pain.

Daily ✦ Divine, Implement, Necrotic, Poison
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength or Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier necrotic damage, and the target takes ongoing 5 poison damage and grants combat advantage (save ends both).
Miss: Half damage, and the target grants combat advantage (save ends).

WAYNE ENGLAND

Stormy Emotions

Sorcerers are considered heretical arcane practitioners in Erelhei-Cinlu. If they are caught casting spells without having been certified by one of the magical academies, they are thrown in prison for decades, if not slain outright. Because they lack formal training, sorcerers must harness magic through other means, such as channeling their tempestuous feelings.

Stormy Emotions — Sorcerer Attack 3

Weaving raw emotion into your spell, you unleash a brutal attack against those around you.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold, Implement, Lightning
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 cold and lightning damage, and you can push the target 1 square and knock it prone.

Skill Powers

Denizens of Erelhei-Cinlu have to be resourceful to deal with the unique and interesting situations that are part of their existence. Each house has its own specialty.

In an environment where a mere slip of the tongue can mean horrible death, learning to read nuances is essential to survival. Training in Insight, Arcana, or Perception represents the ability to use those cues to your advantage.

Demonic Bargain

Many drow treat with demons, harnessing the power of those destructive creatures to further their twisted plans. Working with the beasts of the Abyss is never without risk, however.

Demonic Bargain — Arcana Utility 6

You call on a demonic entity to wreak greater destruction, but you tear part of your own mind in the process.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Psychic
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You roll damage and dislike the result.
Effect: You reroll the damage and must use the second result. You then take psychic damage equal to twice your level.

Despana's Stratagem

House Despana is known for both its pride and its martial prowess. Its warriors, gladiators, and soldiers are renowned for their tactical and strategic superiority. Those who gain favor with this house might learn some of their battlecraft.

Despana's Strategem — Insight Utility 16

You watch as the battle unfolds and direct your party to gain the advantage.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action Close burst 3
Target: You and each ally in the burst
Effect: Each target does not grant combat advantage or provoke opportunity attacks until the end of your next turn.

Battle Tactics of Cor Talcor

"I will stand in the crucible of the warmasters and prove myself."

—Korag, Underdark outcast

The gong echoes as another warrior falls to the cavern floor, blood trickling into the dwarven runes etched across its surface. Onlookers staring from the carved balconies grumble pitilessly. "He's too slow, too weak," they say. "Let this one ponder his failure alone in the chamber of shame." The victor stands at attention as the chirurgeons carry away his defeated opponent, watching the warmasters on their golden thrones amid the chamber's great columns. Again the gong sounds, but this time an umber hulk is unchained and prodded from its cell. It immediately closes on the lone dwarf champion, but only when the warmasters signal their readiness to the dwarf does he raise his weapon to face his foe.

The legendary dwarven citadel Cor Talcor—the Fortress of Grudges—is a place like no other, above or below the surface. It is far deeper than other dwarven settlements, so much so that it challenges the drow and mind flayer kingdoms of the depths. Here ruthless warmasters mold warriors into champions, passing down generations of specialized combat tactics. Only the strong are accepted as candidates, and only the mightiest among them survive the training. Those who emerge are among the most feared combatants of the Underdark: cold, calculating, and merciless.

The warmasters of Cor Talcor practice ancient traditions, some so esoteric that they have been forgotten by even the oldest dwarf clans. Some scholars believe that these reflect dwarven culture as it existed under the enslavement of the titans—disciplined and focused, without any shred of fear or hesitation. Trainees are immersed in these traditions, hammering out weakness through physical and mental ordeals. Those who pass become champions who hold back the horrors below, sometimes returning to their clans to lead armies. Other veterans of Cor Talcor venture into the heart of their enemies' realms to challenge them directly.

Refuge of the Unwanted

Though Cor Talcor has a storied legacy among dwarves, it is shunned by other clans. Its warmasters owe allegiance to no one, waging war as they please. They have toppled sovereign realms, broken alliances, and roused the anger of the creatures below on many occasions. Their actions supposedly benefit the greater good, but many clan leaders resent the warmasters' cavalier attitude . Moreover, the Fortress of Grudges openly accepts candidates from among the dregs of dwarven society. Thieves, debtors, and even outcasts are welcome, for the warmasters know that those who do not bow to their authority will perish. The survivors are purified and transformed in the crucible: as strong as steel and as keen as a dwarven battleaxe.

Classes and Themes

The Fortress of Grudges produces warriors. Those without the will or the skill to wage brutal warfare do not emerge alive. Fighter and warlord are the most common classes among those who overcome the many challenges of Cor Talcor. Barbarians are normally heedless of their lives, but those who survive the crucible are fearsome indeed. Wardens learn to draw even more deeply on their earthborn strength. Other martial classes might make the cut occasionally, but Cor Talcor is not kind to characters who rely on subtlety or magical arts.

Underdark outcast is the obvious theme for a character who has passed the rigorous tests of the warmasters. Such characters seek acceptance here, among others cut off from their people, or hope to win redemption on its blood-soaked floor. A bloodsworn who is dedicated to the destruction of a mighty enemy might face Cor Talcor's challenges to gain the combat expertise needed to win out.

Attack Powers

The battle tactics of Cor Talcor reflect the fortress's pitiless demands. Its champions are brutal and efficient, mastering the subterranean environment and punishing enemies of their people. Adventurers who would learn their techniques must prove themselves on the crucible floor.

Crushing Charge

The warriors of Cor Talcor have learned to wield the rocky terrain of their underground homes as a weapon. Crushing charge not only slams your foe into a wall, but does so hard enough to make the wall hit back.

Crushing Charge — Barbarian Attack 7

The impact of your charge smashes your foe back to crush it against solid terrain.

Encounter ✦ Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee 1
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage, and you push the target up to 2 squares. If the target ends this push adjacent to blocking terrain, the target takes damage equal to your Strength modifier.
Special: When charging, you can use this power in place of a melee basic attack.

Pitiless Grapple

An esoteric form of ritualized dwarven wrestling enables warriors to defeat larger foes even without a weapon. Students of Cor Talcor practice these skills by grappling with cavern-dwelling beasts.

Pitiless Grapple — Fighter Attack 9

You grip your foe mercilessly, striking terrifying blows as it struggles to escape.

Daily ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee 1
Requirement: You must have at least one hand free.
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. Reflex
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier damage, and you grab the target. Until the grab ends, your melee attacks against the target can score a critical hit on a roll of 18-20.
Miss: Half damage.

Pulverizing Impact

The solemn stones of Cor Talcor reverberate with a mystic strength. Wardens draw on this power to smash enemies against jagged rocks or other rough terrain.

Pulverizing Impact — Warden Attack 13

You drive your weapon into the earth, shattering rock and spraying debris into nearby enemies.

Encounter ✦ Primal, Thunder, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Strength vs. Reflex
Hit: 2[W] + Strength modifier thunder damage. If the target is in difficult terrain, it takes extra damage equal to your Constitution modifier.
Earthstrength: Add 5 to the extra damage.

Terrain Dominance

No race is more adept at waging war underground than the dwarves. With terrain dominance, you use their battle planning to incorporate the rocky terrain of the Underdark into your strategy.

Terrain Dominance — Warlord Attack 5

You drive your foe into hindering terrain, showing your allies how to utilize the battlefield to their advantage.

Daily ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage, and you slide the target up to 3 squares. If the target ends this slide in difficult terrain, it falls prone.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you and your allies gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls against targets on difficult terrain.

Skill Powers

You need more than weapon prowess to survive the crucible of Cor Talcor. The warmasters' harsh training deals with all aspects of battle, from dressing wounds to mental conditioning.

Crushing Escape

The warriors of Cor Talcor spend long hours wrestling in the stone arenas until the impact of their bodies against rock is nothing to them. With crushing escape you punish anyone foolish enough to attempt to grapple you, not only freeing yourself but also setting the foe up for a painful counterattack.

Crushing Escape — Athletics Utility 6

You smash free from your enemy's grasp, sending it reeling and making it susceptible to your next attack.

Encounter
Free Action — Personal
Trigger: You make an escape attempt using Athletics.
Effect: You gain a power bonus to your Athletics check equal to your Strength modifier. If you escape and a creature was grabbing you, that creature gains vulnerable 5 to your attacks until the end of your next turn.

Enter the Crucible

Cor Talcor's warriors become physical exemplars of their race, able to withstand punishment that would crush lesser combatants.

Enter the Crucible — Endurance Utility 10

Your body returns to the disciplined stance that enabled you to survive Cor Talcor's crucible, giving you a ceaseless resilience to attacks.

Daily
Minor Action — Personal
Requirement: You must have at least one healing surge remaining.
Effect: You lose a healing surge. Until the end of the encounter, you cannot be weakened, and you gain resist 10 to all damage.

Iron Resurgence

The surgeons of Cor Talcor practice harsh methods of healing, meant to test the recipient's threshold for pain as much as to repair injuries. With iron resurgence you forcibly set bones and bind wounds.

Iron Resurgence — Heal Utility 2

Though your hands do little to comfort the wounded, you ensure that an injury will not keep an ally out of the battle.

Encounter ✦ Healing
Minor Action — Melee 1
Target: You or one ally; must be bloodied and have at least two healing surges remaining
Effect: The target loses a healing surge and can then spend one or two healing surges. The target also gains temporary hit points equal to half his or her healing surge value.

WILLIAM O'CONNOR

Korag holds back a rampaging troll at Cor Talcor

Scatter the Cowards

The weak and infirm are quickly weeded out in the crucible, leaving behind only the strong. You have bested dozens of these individuals during the trials, giving you a warrior's discipline that promises death to the cowards that close in around you.

Scatter the Cowards — Intimidate Utility 6

The fearsomeness of your presence sends foes slinking away.

Encounter
Move Action — Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed. During this movement, minions cannot attack you, and you can push any creature that misses you with an attack 1 square as a free action.

CHAPTER 2

Strive to Survive

Physical training, proper gear, and growing up in the Underdark don't guarantee success when you delve into a dungeon. It's all about knowledge. Listen to the scarred old folks at the inn who have tried raiding dungeons and failed. Try to find copies of the few books written by successful adventurers who retired wealthy.

This chapter doesn't cover all the details that can be gleaned from those sources, but it's a good start.

Top Five Rules of Dungeon Delving

If you know nothing else before you go into a dungeon, remember these five tips. They are about pure survival. You'll need more than these tricks if you hope to beat the monsters, best the traps, and haul out the treasure, but at least these rules will keep you from dying like a complete fool.

1. Don't split the party. The biggest rule in the dungeon is the same as anywhere else. If only the halfling can fit through that narrow tunnel, nobody can go to his rescue when a monster on the other side paralyzes him and starts nibbling away.

2. Map everything. Learn the standardized symbols for mapping, and pace out every passage you go through. Whenever you get a chance to rest, review your maps and plot the best course of retreat in case you need to make a quick escape. A word of warning if you're traveling in the Underdark: That place has a way of reshaping itself from time to time, so your map might not be trustworthy. Take extra precautions down there.

3. Gear up. Use good judgment when buying your equipment and supplies. Sure, plenty of gadgets will help out in specific situations, but don't purchase too much stuff or you'll end up loaded with junk you never use. Better to bring more rope, pitons, and rations that you know will come in handy than a dozen tools you might not need.

4. Track time. Without the course of the sun to guide you, it's easy to lose track of time in a dungeon. Keeping a regular sleeping schedule is tough, too, when you're constantly looking out for danger. Use a candle clock (see Mordenkainen's Magnificent Emporium) or some other means, mundane or magical, to keep time.

5. Know when to turn back. Plenty of adventurers press on deeper into a dungeon even when they know the odds are against them. We call those people corpses. You'll probably meet a few, or you'll become one yourself if you make the same mistake.

Further Studies

If you're not in too big a hurry to get yourself killed, familiarize yourself with the rest of this chapter before you pack up and hit the dungeon.

Expert Delving Tactics: Learn how to travel in a dungeon carefully and safely. You might run into ancient traps and strange environmental hazards, but this advice can help you best all challenges.

Dungeon Types: Dungeons come in many forms, from working prisons to lost mines to active volcanoes. Understanding variations in dungeon design lets you prepare for a dungeon's unique dangers and challenges, including what creatures might live or lurk within and what special rewards might hide in its depths.

Dungeon Denizens: Read up on the creatures that walk, slither, or flap through hellish underground tunnels. Identify the signs of danger before you stumble into a stirge nest, literally walk into a gelatinous cube, or get eaten by what you thought was a treasure chest.

Infamous Dungeons: Think you've mastered the previous advice and are ready for the big time? These extremely dangerous dungeons are the ones you've always heard about in tall tales. Separate the facts, however scant and disheartening they might be, from the fiction.

Dungeoneers' Tools: Smart dungeon delvers know that the ordinary supplies in an adventurer's kit don't always get the job done. Items such as a mirror or a rubbing kit might not seem like much, but they can mean the difference between a delve's success or failure. This section also provides alchemical items adventurers might take into a dungeon or make from raw materials found there.

WILLIAM O'CONNOR

Expert Delving Tactics

Knowing how to explore is a skill set that many adventuring parties overlook. Brash heroes can be reckless after accepting a job from an employer, and they might tromp off to a dungeon without considering the dangers that lurk within it. A skilled dungeoneer anticipates challenges and makes sure the group is well prepared for any contingencies.

Climbing

Climbing is a requirement in many dungeon complexes, where rope, crampons, and a strong arm are necessary to make progress. Whether you're scaling a cavern wall or climbing out of a pit trap, expert tactics can help.

When climbing, you can eke out a +2 bonus to your Athletics check by using a climber's kit, and you can get another +2 bonus with dagger boots (Mordenkainen's). Of course, your allies can use the aid another action to give you a further +2 boost. But the key to ensuring a safe trip up or down lies in the humble rope.

The Athletics DC to climb a rope is 10. Even if you're scaling a sheer wall of smooth glass covered in duck fat, the task has a DC of 10—as long as you can figure out a way to affix a rope. A grappling hook (included in a climber's kit) is the normal way to accomplish this, but on occasion, lassoing something might make more sense. Don't forget magical options such as the climber's rope, the elixir of climbing (both from Mordenkainen's Magnificent Emporium), the rope of climbing, and the flying hook. Boots of spider climbing (Adventurer's Vault) are mighty nice as well.

Reducing the DC when you climb means that Athletics checks are easier if you take damage or if you have to catch hold when something threatens to knock you off. Because a rope has only a few hit points, it can be a huge liability if you're in a situation where it can take damage. One area fire attack is likely to destroy it, and a melee attack with an edged weapon—or even certain ranged attacks—could also sever it.

One way to avoid combat while climbing a rope is to rappel down to a position of safety, moving more quickly than normal. When rappelling with a single rope, you wouldn't gain much speed without increasing the danger (and thus increasing the DC). The DM might allow you to risk climbing down at full speed with a DC of 15.

Finally, remember that you can use the run action while climbing. Running gives you a boost of 2 to your speed and thus nets you 5 extra feet of movement with each move action to climb. Plus, you take no penalty to skill checks while running. It's a fine tactic as long as nothing is trying to kill you.

Darkness

If everyone in the party has darkvision, you might not care about the blackness of the dungeon, but as long as someone needs light to see, you'll need to combat this problem. In such situations, some adventuring parties rely on the trusted spell of a wizard or the ritual of an expert practitioner, but what do you do when neither is available?

For expert delvers, the most commonly used sources of illumination are sunrods, lamps, and torches, but other sources of light might be close at hand—literally. Does your magic weapon or implement glow? How about your other magic items? Such light sources are dim but serviceable.

You can also pick up unusual backup sources of illumination as you find them. Whenever you encounter phosphorescent fungi, glowing crystals, or strangely radiant liquids bubbling in some wizard's lab, make sure to fill your pockets. In general, such improvised light sources shed light equivalent to a candle. Another advantage is that they don't need flint and steel to function.

Remember too that various magical effects can dispel darkness, at least for a brief moment. When the lights suddenly go out, the flare from a wizard's magic missile or a cleric's sacred flame can give everyone an idea of what's around you and who stands where.

Carrying a torch or other handheld light source can interfere with your ability to wield a weapon and a shield in combat. But just because such an item is handheld doesn't mean you literally have to hold it in your hand. Invest in a miner's helmet (Mordenkainen's) for 10 gp, and stick that sunrod or candle on your head and out of the way.

A word of warning: Even though your light illuminates only a limited radius, you and your light can be seen from much farther away. The human eye can detect a light as small as a candle flame from miles away in the dark, so spotting your sunrod's brilliant radiance will be easy for any dungeon denizen. A bull's-eye lantern (page 115) is an excellent investment that limits the amount of light visible from a distance. Taking advantage of powers or items that confer darkvision, even for a limited time, also lets you avoid notice by Underdark beasties when you need it most. The cat's-eye headband (Adventurer's Vault 2) and unguent of darkvision (Adventurer's Vault) are both relatively low-cost magic items.

Secret Doors

Locating a secret door can equate to finding hidden treasure, a safe route around danger, a good place to rest, or a way to "skip to the end" and go straight to the villain's lair. You might spot a secret door passively, but most of the time such passages are hidden well enough that you must actively search. You can give yourself a bonus to the Perception check, or automatically find the door, by using these tactics.

Little cracks are inevitable around even a well-concealed door. Pass a candle slowly near the wall and look for a flicker in the flame due to airflow, or watch smoke pooling on the ceiling and see if it escapes through cracks. You can also pour water on the floor and watch to see if it drains away.

Sound can help you find a secret door, as long as you aren't worried about someone hearing your efforts. Knock on stone with a crowbar or rap on wood with your knuckles to listen for changes in tone, and put your ear up against a wall to listen for noise beyond. A listening cone (page 115) is invaluable for this purpose.

Many secret doors are operated by levers or buttons that are concealed in nearby features or objects. Try pushing, pulling, and twisting accoutrements such as torch sconces, the arms and eyes of statues, and books on shelves. Run your hand over walls and floors to see if you can detect edges or depressions.

Finally, don't neglect the obvious. Pick up the rug. Move aside the bed. Pull the bookshelf or the tapestry away from the wall. You might just find a trapdoor or a hatch.

Stealth

Nothing favors dungeon delvers as much as silence and the advantage of surprise. Of course, not everyone is cut out to be a footpad, but it takes more than being quiet to move stealthily through a dungeon.

In the echoing halls and dark chambers of an underground environment, succeeding at being stealthy means controlling three factors: noise, light, and changes to the dungeon that can reveal your presence. You'll have no chance of surprise if enemies hear you coming or see light suddenly splay out from the crack under a door. If the dungeon's inhabitants wander across your path and find that details of the environment have been altered (be it a chalk mark on the wall or dead bodies strewn about), they'll likely raise the alarm and follow your trail.

If someone in the party is wearing heavy armor, chances are that character's Stealth check won't measure up to those of others in the group. You can make a bad situation a little better with items such as footpads or boots of elvenkind (both in Mordenkainen's Magnificent Emporium), but the small bonus usually isn't worth the effort. In any event, don't fret too much about that dwarf paladin in plate. The kind of stealth you really need in the dungeon isn't the kind that lets you sneak up on the monsters in the next room. Instead, you should think about not drawing the monsters from a few rooms over. The best way to accomplish that is to fight as quietly as possible. Fireball and lightning bolt dish out a lot of damage but also make a lot of noise. Plenty of other spells are just as effective and less thunderous. The best way to minimize noise is to keep the fight brief so that enemies don't have a chance to raise an alarm; stunning attacks are particularly helpful in this regard. Essentially, though, battles are noisy affairs. If you want to dramatically increase your chances, take a few minutes to use a Silence ritual from a scroll and burst into a room just as you finish it. Better yet, learn and use the Eavesdropper's Foil ritual (Eberron® Player's Guide) so that the sound suppression moves with you.

Light in a darkened dungeon is sure to give you away. When the rogue carefully opens the door a crack to peek in the next room, torchlight leaking in over his or her shoulder advertises your presence as much as shouting does. You can avoid giving early warning of your approach by dousing the lights and having someone with darkvision take the lead. Use a light source that you can activate quickly so you can see what's going on. A cover over a sunrod or a lantern with shutters works well, too.

If you really don't want anyone to know you're in the dungeon, always leave things as you found them as much as you can. Relock doors and treasure chests, close secret passages, and reset any furniture you moved. After a battle, hide the bodies in an out-of-the-way location and clean up the blood and scorch marks; prestidigitation works well for this task. If you can't hide a permanent change, disguise it: You could make an attack look like it came from some other dungeon denizens, for example. Even if your efforts aren't fully convincing, you might gain some time as your enemies try to figure out exactly what happened and which way you went.

Clear the Rooms

If you leave places unexplored in your wake, you can get into trouble fast in the dungeon. Foes you've left behind might come out of their rooms and surround you, or you might face more subtle threats such as traps being reset and doors being relocked and barred.

Keep things simple by exploring in stages. When you enter an area that has many exits, figure out a way to bar the ones you're not using. Then proceed into the next area and repeat. If you can't lock or block an unexplored door, you can at least stack objects against it. That way, when something opens the door, the objects will fall and give you a chance to hear the commotion. You can bring noisemaking material with you, such as bells strung on a cord, but you can also use handy dungeon furnishing, including chairs or barrels. If you can manage it, try to arrange different noises to occur in different areas behind you. Then you'll know if the door that opened is in the crypts or near the sewers, and you might be able to draw conclusions about what's coming.

As you progress, you also need to figure out what to do with the doors you've opened. In some circumstances, if you simply close them but don't lock or bar them, you might be endangering yourself more than if you left them open. Closed doors block noise, so pursuers can creep up on you that much more easily. Leaving a door open also lets you more easily hear any noise from a more distant door against which you've stacked objects. Finally, if you need to run for it, having a bunch of closed and barred doors in your way makes escape more difficult.

If leaving doors open feels too risky, you can close, bar, or stack objects against only the nearest one. You'll gain at least a moment's warning against any attack from that quarter, and you'll have to open only one door if you need to flee. Consider creating a regular door-alarm object that you can place and pick up quickly. A staff with metal rings fastened to the top works well and doubles as a walking stick or makeshift weapon.

Although magical ways exist to set alarms or lock doors, such as the Arcane Lock ritual, they are costly and time-consuming. Save such precautions for when you rest.

Rest Stops

Taking a good long rest in the dungeon can be critical to your success and survival. You have two options when resting, and which you should use depends on how you have explored.

If you've been trying to be stealthy and covering your tracks, your best bet is to hide. Pick a location far from the main thoroughfares and as tucked away as you can manage. If you want early warning of foes on their way, leave the door to your rest area open and affix some noisemaking device to the next most distant door. Alternatively, you can heavily barricade the entrance so that enemies have to batter their way in, giving you time to prepare.

If you've been clearing rooms and leaving a path open behind you, then lock or bar every nearby entrance and rest in a place with good sight lines to distant points. You can place lights away from your camp at entrance points and keep illumination to a minimum where you are resting. That way, you'll have a good chance of seeing enemies long before they see you and be able to attack at range as they close the distance.

If you have the resources, another option is available to you: magic. The Rope Trick ritual (Manual of the Planes) works well, but it takes time. Instead, you could use an exodus knife (Adventurer's Vault) to get virtually the same effect in a matter of seconds. Rituals such as Eye of Alarm and magic items such as a watchful eye (Adventurer's Vault 2) can warn of enemies sneaking up on you. The alarm traps that a trapsmith can create are useful for protection while you rest.

Sustenance

Maybe it should go without saying that you probably shouldn't eat or drink any substance you run across while you're underground. Bring enough food and water for many days when you enter a dungeon—more days than you anticipate you will be staying. That way you can be sure you'll have enough for your needs and those of fellow adventurers who happen to lose their stores. Extra food is also a handy way to distract hungry monsters; you can make a trail of morsels to lead an enemy into a trap. If you don't want to be loaded down with provisions, and money is no object, you can use magical means to provide sustenance, such as the Traveler's Feast ritual.

All that said, a dungeon is not necessarily devoid of its own dependable food sources. For one thing, intelligent creatures that live in dungeons usually store or carry supplies. When you're running low, you might have to steal from them to survive.

Likewise, you might be able to replenish your drinking water. In a natural cavern, look for places where you can collect runoff from stalactites in a waterskin or, in a pinch, a cup-shaped piece of leather or metal. In a worked dungeon, look for deposits of fungi to reveal the presence of water. Use caution with any pooled water. Boil before drinking!

If you must forage in the dungeon, follow the lead of the party's dungeoneering expert (such as a deep delver). Edible fungi or lichen and pools of brackish water, though unappetizing, are preferable to tasty-looking but hazardous sources such as ancient fountains or the vittles in an ogre's kitchen. The fountain might be enchanted with evil magic or harbor a disease, and the meat hanging in the ogre's larder might not be pork.

Water Dangers

Water is a key consideration when you prepare for an expedition into the depths. Many dungeons have underground rivers or lakes, treasure might be hidden at the bottom of a temple pool, and you never know when those stone doors will seal behind you and the water will come pouring in. Heavy armor makes swimming difficult, but don't fret. With a little preparation, you can make your way through most water hazards without having to strip down.

Heavy armor can be a fighter's worst enemy in water

ERIC BELISLE

If you know you are going to enter deep water, start out by holding your breath. You've got at least 3 minutes (30 rounds) before you start to drown—likely longer than that if you have training in Endurance. Pair weak swimmers with strong ones, tying one of each together, so the entire party can muddle through to the other side. Alternatively, once some of the group makes it to dry land (paying out rope behind them as they go), they can haul across companions who can't swim well. Even in rough and stormy water, this strategy should work as long as someone in the party has a decent chance of succeeding on the Athletics check to swim.

The real danger in water is having to fight while submerged. If you've taken any damage since your last turn while holding your breath (even if the 3-minute grace period has not elapsed), you must make a DC 20 Endurance check at the end of your turn. Each time you fail, you not only lose a healing surge, but the next time you need to make the check, the DC increases by 5. A character who has many surges, such as a fighter, might be okay for a while, but most adventurers will lose all their surges very quickly—especially if they're using some of them to heal combat damage as well. At that point, death is assured unless you can start breathing again within a round or two.

If you aren't holding your breath, damage does not provoke these Endurance or Athletics checks, so stay on the surface as much as possible when a fight breaks out. A floating shield (Adventurer's Vault) is an inexpensive and helpful item for this purpose, but a simple flotation bladder (page 114) should keep you from sinking below the surface.

You can find ways to eke out bonuses to your Athletics checks to swim or Endurance checks to hold your breath, but the best solution is some means of breathing water. The Water Breathing ritual is great, as are elixirs of water breathing (Mordenkainen's).

Traps

Dungeons are full of traps, and you never know how many you will face or what they will be like. You can't be too cautious when preparing for nasty surprises that could end your expedition immediately. Many delvers either become trap experts or hire one to accompany their group and perhaps teach them the ropes. The trapsmith theme is an excellent choice for a party member or a companion.

Those who have such training are always conscious of the possible presence of traps. Other explorers have to try harder to remain alert. When you are venturing underground or moving from one dungeon area to another, pay attention to the places where a trap would do the most harm. For instance, always check before traversing a narrow corridor. In a tight space, a trap can deal the greatest amount of damage to the largest number of intruders. Keep an eye out for hints of hidden trip wires, pressure plates, and elements that seem out of the ordinary.

Be most wary of traps in places where they would be most useful to the trapper and have the least impact on the day-to-day lives of things living in the area. Putting a trap along a main thoroughfare makes little sense—it's far too likely for the trap to catch unintended victims. For the same reason, a creature wouldn't usually trap its own bed or a drawer in its everyday worktable. You should, though, expect to find traps in places and on objects that need to be guarded or are near defensive positions. A treasure chest in the middle of a room or a jewel-encrusted sword displayed on a pedestal just scream of trap potential, and a secret door or compartment is likely to be trapped as well. The more a place is meant to be a defensive structure and the less it is a living space, the more likely it is to be protected. If you're assaulting the redoubt of kobolds or the sanctum of a mad wizard, expect traps on doors, in floors, on the ceiling—entire rooms and passages might be designed to kill. A royal tomb or an imperial treasure vault might be nothing but one gigantic death trap.

If you're the one placing and setting the traps, think about the above advice so you can counter the expectations of enemies. For example, if you know that a trip wire is often set low and in a specific place, try putting the wire higher up or in an unusual spot. The intruder might miss it completely while focusing on the expected location.

Hazards

Show an expert delver a dungeon, and he or she will show you a collection of hazards—the most common threats for any subterranean explorer. Many hazards are natural and include such dangers as cave-ins, floods, fires, and pockets of poisonous gas. How you prepare for these dangers will determine your chances of surviving them.

Cave-ins are frequent occurrences in dungeons, due to the age of the complex, earthquakes, or other natural reasons, but sometimes they are triggered by traps. If your group is caught in a cave-in, the first thing to do after the dust has settled is to ensure that no one is trapped under rubble. Once everyone is accounted for, and you don't see an obvious exit, try sniffing around for a source of fresh air that might indicate an opening. You'll also need a way to move the rubble or bypass it. Magic that enables you to burrow or gain phasing makes getting out a lot easier, or you can create a teleportation circle with the Linked Portal ritual (assuming you've got a portal outside). The Clear the Path ritual (Forgotten Realms® Player's Guide) is tailor-made to clear away a cave-in. It not only permanently removes dirt and debris, but clears difficult terrain as an added benefit.

Floods that might be messy nuisances on the surface can be lethal in caverns and tunnels deep below the ground. Enclosed spaces fill up with water rapidly, and strong currents can sweep away even the strongest delver. As soon as you realize water is rushing toward you, get to higher ground as quickly as possible. If no such ground is immediately available, run—you might be able to stay ahead of the flood for a short time and perhaps find a better spot. Take precautions in case you can't get away. Squeeze your waterskin dry and breathe into it—even that stale air is better than trying to breathe water. Flotation bladders (page 114) can also serve this purpose. If you wind up underwater, you can still use magical lights such as sunrods to illuminate your way. Try to find areas where pockets of air can form, such as in caverns with high or irregular roofs. These small bubbles of safety might buy you enough time to come up with an escape plan.

Poisonous gas is a less common hazard, but an expert delver must be ready for anything. Traps can release noxious fumes, and pockets of gas are scattered throughout the Underdark. When exploring, you might accidentally rupture a pocket and release the contents. You can't combat this hazard effectively; it's best to leave the area as quickly as possible. If you must continue forward, provide an alternative air supply for all party members, such as inflated waterskins. You have 3 minutes of holding your breath to make it past the danger, but if that isn't long enough, or if you end up in combat, you face the same issues as with holding your breath while swimming.

Rituals

Rituals can be valuable resources when exploring a dungeon. The ability to perform tasks that would overburden a group is worth its weight in gold. In addition to the rituals mentioned earlier in this section, the following are examples of heroic tier rituals that could benefit a party of delvers.

Dark Light (Forgotten Realms Player's Guide): As with the Explorer's Fire ritual (see below), Dark Light creates a way for you to see without your light being visible. The light source is portable, which makes moving stealthily in a dark dungeon much easier.

Detect Secret Doors (Player's Handbook): This ritual should be in every spellbook. When you perform it, you immediately find any secret or hidden doors in sight. The ritual can also help you out of a bind in dungeons that have special tunnels designed to give residents a timely escape from harm.

Explorer's Fire (Dragon 366): This ritual creates a campfire that cannot be seen beyond the area it immediately illuminates. It's perfect for those times when you're resting in an open location with long sight lines. You can remain in a warm and bright area without being seen until enemies approach.

Hand of Fate (Player's Handbook): Divine spellcasters favor this ritual, which lets you ask up to three questions about possible courses of action. A translucent blue hand appears and indicates the most rewarding course of action based on the available options. This ritual is especially helpful when your party must choose whether to go down the left or right tunnel, which lever to pull to deactivate a trap, and so on.

DUNGEON DON'TS

Novices at dungeon exploration mistakenly do things that might seem like smart tactics but can easily go awry. Avoid these common errors and live a little longer.

Herd Animals: If the dungeon is loaded with traps, surely a few cows or a herd of sheep can clear them out. Plus, if there's a fire trap, lunch is taken care of!

Well, no—things don't work out quite that way. For one thing, farm animals can't open doors, so you'll have to get in front of the herd whenever a door blocks your way. And if you're behind the herd, you can't control what direction it will take or even whether all the animals will go in the same direction. Food and water for the animals is problematic as well. If you can't be sure of forage, you'll be laden down with extra supplies. In the end, all you're likely to do is draw attention to yourself, slow your progress, and feed the dungeon denizens.

Check Everything: Poke the floor with a ten-foot pole as you move through the hall and check every door for traps. Better safe than sorry!

This cliché ignores the fact that greater risks can net greater rewards. Plus, if you have your head down and are moving at a crawl, you're giving enemies more time to rally their forces and set up ambushes or surround you. If you're unwilling to open a door before tinkering with it for several minutes, you won't surprise anything lurking on the other side. More than anything, though, checking every square inch of an area for traps is boring. It's no fun for the group or the DM. You'll use your time more profitably by checking only in likely spots.

Knock (Player's Handbook): With this ritual, you can open a locked door, chest, gate, or some other object—even a portal that has been sealed with Arcane Lock or barred on the far side. It works well when combined with the Detect Secret Doors ritual.

Lower Water (Arcane Power): Performing this ritual takes too long to help you during a flash flood, but it can tip the odds heavily in your favor if you know a foe lurks in a body of water. Instead of fighting an aquatic enemy at a disadvantage while swimming, you could try to force it onto dry land.

Magic Mouth (Player's Handbook): You could buy higher-level and more expensive rituals with more bells and whistles, but the humble Magic Mouth has a feature that can't be beat: You define the trigger for making the mouth speak. Set the right condition, and the ritual is a flawless detector of creatures. The rules don't specify what conditions can be set, so check with the DM first. If the required conditions are too narrow, consider Skull Watch (Open Grave) or Wyvern Watch (Player's Handbook 2) instead.

Shrink (Arcane Power): The ritual does what it says. Reducing an object in size by 25 percent or more can help you get that big chest out the door or make a solid gold idol more manageable, but other uses can be even more helpful. A shrunken door doesn't fit its hinges anymore. A trap with a miniaturized part probably won't work. And if you need to hide the corpse of a monster, making it smaller always helps.

Speak with Dead (Player's Handbook): If you can't capture an enemy and get it to talk, you can always get answers from its corpse. Need to circumvent a trap, find a secret door, or learn which hall leads where? Ask all three questions of the dungeon dweller you just killed. Hungering for long-lost lore about the tomb? Ask the bones interred there.

Traveler's Camouflage (Primal Power): With this ritual, you can cloak yourself and your allies in a camouflaging shroud. Not only do you become stealthier, but other creatures cannot track your movement easily. It's a great way to flee from a dungeon or sneak into a chamber unnoticed.

Undead Servitor (Open Grave): With this ritual, you imbue a humanoid corpse of natural origin with the ability to move under its own power. Furthermore, the corpse understands one language of your choice. Although the servitor is of no use in combat, it never tires and obeys you at all times. It's perfect for opening a suspicious chest, leading guards on a wild-goose chase, scaring superstitious humanoids, carrying heavy bags of gold, and any other task you can think of. Keep in mind, though, that if it takes any damage, you're out 150 gp (as well as the time needed to perform the ritual again). On the other hand, if you keep it safe from harm, it lasts indefinitely. You can think of it as the party mascot—assuming you can sweet-talk the paladin and put up with the stench.

Dungeon Types

A dungeon is always created for a reason, and almost always that reason is directly tied to the physical nature of the place. Some dungeon builders need a place to live, such as kobolds that stake out a warren. Others want to get at the riches under the earth, as with dwarves and their mines.

A dungeon's creator might use it as a place to hide secrets, whether a lich performing dark rituals in a laboratory or a group of mighty beings that have imprisoned a demon far from civilization. The type of dungeon you're heading into, and the reason for its existence, are the major factors that affect your preparation. Anything you can learn about what's ahead of you before you get there will improve your chances of success and survival.

Cave

Caves are the most common dungeon type in the natural world. Many were formed during the last days of the Dawn War, when the violent earth finally began to settle. Even today, mountain ranges continue to push up from the core of the world, creating underground complexes that can stretch for miles.

Caves feature in the history and folktales of many races, whether as settings of grim stories or metaphors in parables of morality and might. They are dark, mysterious, and, yes, spooky. Whether the way in is a narrow fault or a yawning chasm, a cave waiting to be explored by intrepid heroes stands at the beginning of a great story.

Variations

Many types of caves exist, but the following are the most common. The real world has many examples of these varieties of caves, and plenty of photographs exist in reference sources, so finding visual inspiration should be no problem.

Solution caves form when soft rock such as chalk, gypsum, or limestone is dissolved by groundwater seeping down through the earth to form a weak natural acid. Here's where you find the classic cavern dressing of stalactites, stalagmites, and columns.

Primary caves arise at the same time that the rock surrounding the cave is laid down. For example, when a volcano erupts, pockets can form within the lava as it cools and hardens. (In fact, the volcano cave is a type unto itself, discussed later in this section.)

Sea caves are found in coastal areas. Waves crash against a rocky shore, eroding it over time to form caverns. Underground rivers can also create caves where their waters breach the earth to reach the sea.

Glacier caves appear deep within the ice of glaciers. As water melts, it flows down and away through cracks and fissures, carving out passages. Weird entities or creatures that were frozen long ago might await in or near these formations.

Exploring

A cave can be deceptively large. What looks like a small cleft in a hillside might be the entrance to a vast network of tunnels and chambers.

Dangers Any cave can feature a host of dangers, from challenging terrain to the risk of cave-ins to hostile and hungry creatures that dwell there. Particularly in the Underdark, isolated caves are attractive to monsters or humanoids that are seeking a sheltered and defensible lair.

Inhabitants A cave can be inhabited by any kinds of creatures. Bears, some dragons, primitive humanoids, and many other monsters dwell in caverns; plenty of creatures (including adventurers) use caves as temporary refuges. A cave might also serve as an enemy's base of operations, perhaps a seaside cavern where a band of pirates stores its treasure or the catacombs beneath a city occupied by a thieves' guild.

Rewards What you find in a cave depends largely on its inhabitants and their tendency to collect valuables. The cave walls might hold ore veins or valuable crystals. Beyond tangible rewards, a cave might also contain the seeds of future adventures, such as a message scrawled on a cavern wall.

Crypt

Leaders with a lot of popularity whose subjects have a lot of money end up in tombs that have a lot of space for their dried-up remains and all their stuff. Crypt creators spare no expense in building these houses for the dead, and even the most remote hallways of a finely wrought crypt could be inlaid with fine stone tiles. Events over the passage of centuries can imbue such sites with dark magic or see protective wards become tainted with evil, turning a crypt into one part holy sanctum and one part deadly dungeon.

Variations

Plenty of crypts resemble other types of dungeons: collections of underground passages and chambers filled with traps to keep out intruders. A crypt might lie under an earthen barrow or beneath a temple. The first challenge in delving such a site is locating it—those who go to the trouble of digging a crypt beneath the ground do their best to prevent adventurers and other grave robbers from finding it later.

Crashing waves form a sea cave

NOAH BRADLEY

In contrast, an ostentatious aboveground crypt has no qualms about making its presence known. Such a structure might contain deadlier traps and more dead ends than an underground crypt to make up for the larger number of intruders expected to assault it. Mausoleums fit into this category, such as those built for monarchs, high priests, and other lofty figures. Some aboveground crypts extend underground as well, with multiple levels of interior rooms, subterranean chambers, and sloping tunnels connecting them.

Exploring

Secret doors, false burial chambers, illusory walls—crypt builders do everything they can to trick intruders. Trust nothing. Even the loot you claim might be designed to throw you off the track of more valuable treasures.

Dangers By design, a crypt is no place for the living. A crypt's builder knows that after the tomb is sealed, no living guardians will remain behind to watch over it. For that reason, the traps protecting the treasures and bodies in a crypt can be extremely lethal. Prominent crypts feature at least a few corpses of would-be interlopers.

Many cultures hold great hostility toward those who defile the dead, and sealed tombs often have foul curses placed on them. Reading the wrong inscription or touching the royal treasure can inflict blindness, bad luck, a festering disease—or worse.

Inhabitants Places of death give rise to the undead, and even the savviest tomb builders can fail to predict whether a tomb's location holds the ambient magic to create those foul creatures. A buried monarch might return from the dead to guard his tomb personally, facing off against grave robbers while aided by the undead warriors and servants that were buried alongside him.

When tomb builders require guardian creatures within a crypt, they create constructs that need no nourishment or air. A dusty golem can remain vigilant for centuries, waiting to unleash the vengeance of its creator on intruders.

Rewards A crypt is stuffed with the material wealth of the figure or figures buried there, including gems, art objects, and ancient coins. Long-lost lore can also be found within a crypt, along with ancient technology, books of forgotten history, and maps to unknown lands.

Death Trap

A death trap lures thrill-seekers with promises of great treasure. The foolhardy who set forth into it find only a grueling gauntlet of perils, half-starved guardian creatures, and tortures unimaginable—all culminating in imprisonment or a grisly death.

A death trap is the most extreme expression of the dungeon concept, merciless and fatal to all but the most skilled explorers. It has no purpose other than to kill or (sometimes worse) capture.

Variations

Beyond being "just" a killing machine, a death trap is usually created for a purpose that sets it apart from others of its type. It might have been built to test creatures of a certain race, to measure candidates' skill with a specific type of magic, or to capture prey. In such a case, all the dungeon's tests and traps contribute to fulfilling this purpose.

Some death traps are little more than random collections of rooms with plain corridors connecting them. In such a dungeon, the individual traps and encounters don't follow a theme or serve a larger purpose. Other death traps exhibit a consistent style with repeated motifs that show the creators' attention to detail. For such builders, a death trap is a work of art, and possibly the culmination of a life's ambition.

The sheer lethality of a death trap means it can afford to draw attention to itself in a way other dungeons can't. The greatest death traps are not secrets. People fear to speak their names, and the lands around them stand deserted. A death trap might be topped with a towering iron front gate or surrounded with warnings about the danger inside. It could be hollowed out of a rocky spire that has been carved to look like a skull. The entrance could be hidden among a row of magic portals, with a wrong choice meaning instant death.

Exploring

If you explore haphazardly in a death trap, you'll quickly prove the appropriateness of that name. This type of dungeon demands discretion in your approach. Pick the right times to look for hidden passages and to study runes, but also know when to keep on a focused path and move quickly. Methodical mapping and the careful use of dungeoneering tools can't guarantee your safety, but both tactics are necessary.

Watch for clues that can help you overcome traps and bypass hazards safely. No set of scratches on the floor is too minor, no drop of blood too small. Don't read runes without taking precautions first. Above all else, never use a magic item found in a death trap before subjecting it to extremely careful study.

The heart of a death trap is a place of great significance, whether it's the citadel of the dungeon's creator, a shrine to an otherworldly entity, or the resting place of an artifact. Finding your way there is never easy, and a death trap might contain numerous false central chambers.

Dangers

Anything goes in a death trap, where nothing is out of the realm of possibility as long as it's dangerous. Any hallway could collapse to drop you into a pit of acid. Any door might be protected by explosive runes or some other magic trap. Any gap between bricks could spew poison gas. Any statue could animate and attack.

Inhabitants

Any dungeon shows hallmarks of the creatures that created it, but a death trap reflects only the choices of its designer. One dungeon's creator might be sadistic enough to build a death trap solely for entertainment. Another could be testing challengers for a specific purpose: worthy opponents, potential recruits for a great cause, sturdy humanoid stock for foul magical experiments, or the like.

Among the most common creators of death traps are liches, ancient dragons, mind flayers, and devils. These creatures have long life spans, high intelligence, and a consuming desire to test or torture others. The creatures set loose within a death trap are chosen for their toughness, their bloodthirstiness, and (if appropriate) how they conform to the dungeon's purpose. A death trap is rarely a living, breathing ecology, however; the monsters within one usually have no relationship to one another.

Rewards

Every death trap has a great boon at its heart, whether a hoard of treasure, lost lore, or a face-to-face meeting with a formidable being. Reaching the end can change your life, though you might pay a high price to get there.

Floating Castle

The antithesis of a typical dungeon, a floating castle, or cloud castle, is built high above the ground rather than deep below it. Defying nature, each of these great redoubts is enabled to float in the air by incredible magic. The building blocks of a floating castle might be composed of lighter-than-air material, or the clouds that are its foundation might have been transformed into a spongy yet firm surface.

A small number of cloud castles exist in the world, but the Elemental Chaos is rife with them. Many such places in the natural world are built on supernatural cloud-stuff manifested from the Plane Below, or constructed from the magically buoyant stone found in some locations there. The Feywild also contains a large number of such citadels. The noble eladrin built them in ages past, and the secrets of their construction are now lost even to the noble archfey who rule from their high thrones.

Variations

Floating castles can be as different from one another as the shapes clouds take in the sky. Imagine some vision of the heavens, and you have the basis for a new kingdom of the air.

Storm Castle: A storm castle floats in the eye of a perpetual storm. Its walls are black thunderheads, and the bars of its prison are trapped lightning bolts. As you walk its halls, heat lightning flashes through the floors and ceiling, providing surprising instances of illumination.

Dawn Citadel: This palace of mandarin and rose is as much a product of light as mist. A dawn citadel floats across the world in perpetual flight from the sun, always keeping daybreak a heartbeat behind. The beautiful half-light of such cloud castles often obscures some darkness in the soul of its builder.

Drifting Dungeons: A floating castle can be encompassed in different layers of clouds like levels of a dungeon, yet in this case the connections between levels change as the different cloud layers shift with the wind. Different layers of cloud might plunge explorers into different environments: high white clouds in the sun, cold gray clouds filled with snow, and angry black clouds of rain and lightning.

Fog Fortress: A fog fortress lies hidden in the mists, its walls and floors indistinguishable from the surrounding clouds. Only experimentation or the keen senses of an inhabitant can determine where the structure lies. Tremorsense is a boon to explorers who find themselves unable to rely on their normal means of finding their way around.

Exploring

Traveling to a cloud castle can be an adventure in itself. You'll need access to a means of long-distance flight or a teleportation circle. (Giant beanstalks are generally not available.)

The architecture of a cloud castle is much like that of any castle on the ground, though its construction tends to sprawl vertically rather than horizontally. Visitors might need to negotiate tall spires, twisting staircases that rise through open air, and sky bridges arcing over a limitless void.

Not all such dungeons still house their original residents. An abandoned castle built by giants might now be full of manticores, wyverns, and other flying interlopers. Blue dragons in particular like to lay claim to floating castles, from where they can watch the world from on high as they scheme.

ADAM PAQUETTE

Djinns, eladrin, and other magical beings raise castles in the clouds

FOR THE DM: THE CLOUD CASTLE ENVIRONMENT

Since cloud castles defy gravity, their magic can affect how creatures move within their environs. The following variant rules reinforce the feel of adventuring in the sky.

Walking on Clouds: The magic clouds on which the castle stands are semisolid. Any creature that is knocked prone on clouds must make a moderate Acrobatics check. With a success, the creature bounces back to its feet. A failed check means that the creature sinks 5 feet into the clouds. The cloud functions much like water once the creature enters it.

Jumping and Gliding: The castle's magic enables those moving within it to float and leap to great heights. When making a high jump, calculate the height as though it were a long jump. Creatures also gain a +5 bonus to Athletics checks to jump or climb.

Falling into Clouds: A creature that falls into magic clouds takes half the normal falling damage, and falls a number of feet into the clouds equal to this damage. If this distance is greater than the clouds' thickness, the creature then falls as normal.

Dangers The most immediate danger of a cloud castle is its most obvious—if you fall off, you'll likely die. Beyond that, it can be home to the same sorts of monsters and traps found in any earthbound castle. Its unique dangers are environmental rather than being embodied in the creations of the castle's builders.

Elemental magic can go awry in a cloud castle, whose own magic keeps the air breathable and the severe high-altitude weather under control. Any effect that interferes with those forces might fail or have unpredictable results, at the DM's discretion. In other cases, a castle might not offer any protection from the elements. In particular, the hall of a storm giant lord might be located within a perpetual thunderstorm, featuring cloud-to-cloud lightning strikes, high winds, driving rain or hail, and other elemental features that threaten intruders.

Inhabitants Floating castles are built by djinns, storm giants, and other masters of the air, who consider anyone unable to fly unworthy of visiting their aerial domains. The djinns' sky castles were abandoned long ago but still float in the Elemental Chaos. Their caliphs gone, these great citadels await the rulers of the next age. In the natural world, if you see a great black thunderhead that seems to move deliberately across the sky as it unleashes violence, you could be looking at a storm giant's home.

Lesser flying creatures often serve the builders of cloud castles as guards and messengers that carry out their master's bidding in the world below. Sphinxes act as the gatekeepers at many cloud castles, and even the death of its master does not end a sphinx's servitude. Such creatures can sometimes be found protecting abandoned fortresses, still awaiting visitors who can answer their riddles.

Rewards An extraordinary setting warrants extraordinary treasure. Plain coins and gems matter little to the ruler of a floating castle, who is more likely to collect ornate vases, fine art, magic devices, and even creatures of myth, legend, and folktale.

Ice Palace

In snow-covered wastes and within forsaken mountains, ice palaces are home to some of the hardiest, most violent creatures in the world. The icy tunnels and frigid rock of such dungeons require specialized resources and demand resilience in those who explore them.

Variations

Most ice palaces originate as natural caverns in frigid lands. Cold winds blow through tunnels in mountains, coating every wall with frost and leaving icicles hanging from the ceiling, slanting in the direction the wind blows.

More fantastical structures are dug out of glaciers or created with magic. Solid ice forms the entire complex: walls, sculptures, pillars, ornate ceilings, and even doors. These great palaces are the thematic opposite of natural caverns. Rather than inhospitable, austere hideaways, they are delicate-looking and elegant—almost welcoming.

The Elemental Chaos contains the largest and most extravagant ice palaces, many inhabited by frost titans. Innumerable ice dungeons are found in Cania, a frigid layer of the Nine Hells. Ice devils prowl them in search of new victims to capture in the name of their master, Mephistopheles.

Sailors sometimes encounter icebergs containing hollowed-out cavities. One of these iceberg dungeons might carry creatures of elemental cold into warmer climates, keeping them comfortable while they form plans for conquest.

Exploring

Adventurers must rely on climbing gear to explore an ice palace. One fall can land you in a pit whose slippery walls cannot be scaled easily. Even with the proper gear, climbing can be tricky. In many places, the only surface to hammer a piton into is a sheet of ice that could be far less sturdy than it looks.

Even when you're not climbing them, walls can pose problems. Light glimmering through translucent ice can cast odd shadows in nearby areas, which might be real enemies or threatening phantoms. During battle, a wall might shatter to spill icy debris across the ground.

Dangers The main hazards of an ice cave are the extreme cold, slippery surfaces, and icicles and sheets of ice that frequently fall from the ceiling. Be careful when using magic that deals fire damage, or simply carrying a torch. Sources of heat can soften or melt the surroundings, making the environment even more treacherous.

Inhabitants White dragons, frost giants, and other creatures of cold rule over ice palaces. Dragons seek out existing caverns to use as lairs, filling them with treasure. Giants expand on natural cave systems to build large halls, usually with slave labor. A giant's hall has a severe appearance, with blocky stone columns and furnishings sheathed in ice and snow. Ice archons serve in the frozen domains of these creatures.

Cold-dwelling beasts such as winterclaw owlbears also make lairs in the ice, and the burrowing of one remorhaz can create an entire cavern complex. Few natural creatures can bear living in such an environment, however; conditions are too extreme even for most barbarian tribes. Goliaths are a notable exception, adept at turning mountainous ice tunnels into comfortable homes.

The forbidding nature of an ice palace makes it an excellent prison. Entities that cannot easily be killed are frozen by magic and buried deep in an icy catacomb in the hope that they will never be found.

Rewards The treasure you find in an ice palace depends on its residents. Dragons and giants amass great wealth, but the dens of lesser beasts contain little of value.

Magic Laboratory

The darkest dungeon lords build vile laboratories in which they undertake twisted experiments. Necromancers, summoners, and artificers make use of magic laboratories, filling such sites with fanatical servants and vicious contraptions, as well as new kinds of monsters.

Variations

Magic laboratories encompass a wide variety of designs, each related to its creator and purpose. A necromancer's laboratory is filled with body parts preserved in jars containing unknown fluids. A conniving artificer might create a magic machine shop featuring racks of tools and clockwork components used to build mechanical devices. No matter what the variation, however, every laboratory serves as a testing ground for some creation or experiment.

Necromancers use their workshops to create new and diabolical undead, weaving profane magic with the power of the divine. A necromantic laboratory has shelves filled with rare herbs and components, with preserved body parts and organs neatly organized nearby. A large worktable provides space to disassemble corpses and put them back together again. The smell is repulsive, testing the perseverance of even the hardiest adventurers.

Summoners and artificers have less gory decor. Their shelves are lined with books, devices, and reagents that they use to call on and control their creations, whether monsters from other worlds or mechanical minions.

Exploring

Because a laboratory is typically a working dungeon, you can expect to encounter guardian creatures and traps. A laboratory's builder is by its nature detail-oriented, so the area might be filled with all manner of mysterious devices and decorative elements that have a common theme.

Dangers The dangers of a magic laboratory are usually obvious. Strange mechanisms and substances, traps, hazards, guardian monsters, constructs, and other threats lurk throughout the dungeon. Many of a laboratory's defenses could be bizarre-looking objects and creatures whose true nature might not be obvious at first.

Alchemical concoctions are common in magic laboratories. They might be used to form hazardous terrain in the form of pools or spills, augment guardian creatures, or serve as makeshift weapons.

Inhabitants The most common inhabitants of a magic laboratory are the unique creatures that have been created there or are assigned to protect it. Alchemical constructs, clockwork beasts, and golems of every material stand watch against trespassers. Necromancers employ ever-vigilant patrols of skeletons, zombies, and ghouls. Summoners deploy lesser elementals and savage monsters to guard their laboratories and lairs.

Rewards A laboratory environment holds exciting treasures limited only by its creator's imagination. Such loot can include unique new potions and elixirs, recipes, magic items, and even never-before-seen servant creatures.

Maze

Mazes and labyrinths are expensive defenses, every one created by a wealthy ruler to protect something of great value: perhaps a secret lair, a unique spellbook, a peerless magic blade, or an artifact of legend. A few despots have been known to erect a maze out of sheer boredom, seeking entertainment from dropping unsuspecting mortals into its mind-boggling twists and turns.

Variants

The simplest maze is a dungeon whose halls bend in unfathomable ways and lead in confusing directions. Many passages lead to dead ends, forcing you to double back in search of the correct route. Many elements can be layered onto this basic construction; magical effects, puzzles, and other challenges add complexity and danger to a maze.

Teleportation Pads: These devices are usually small platforms, which might be concealed or obvious. Stepping onto one pad instantly transports you to another area within the dungeon.

Puzzles: Some maze dungeons require explorers to solve puzzles before they can advance through a particular area. In general, the greater the reward, the more difficult the puzzle.

The Third Dimension: The most complex mazes extend not only horizontally but onto multiple levels. Particularly when it incorporates teleportation, a three-dimensional labyrinth can pose a serious challenge to even the most careful adventurers.

Exploring

The best method for exploring a maze is a careful room-to-room search for clues to what lies ahead. You might want to designate one player as the mapper, who is responsible for keeping track of the characters' progress from room to room. As the dungeon unfolds, the map expands with it and keeps the party on track. Be aware, though, that some mazes change configuration at random intervals or teleport explorers between identical-looking areas, limiting a map's utility. In such cases, marking up the walls or floors as you go along can help you determine if you're visiting new territory.

Dangers

A maze is designed to confuse and frustrate intruders, and it can disorient you if you decide to flee from some danger or if you become stuck trying to figure out a puzzle. In addition to well-hidden traps and fiendish puzzles, many mazes are stocked with monsters on ceaseless patrol (or perhaps they're as lost as you are).

Inhabitants

The creator of a maze often fills the complex with creatures that terrorize, torment, and slow intruders rather than simply killing them. Expect such a dungeon to contain bizarre monsters and hazards whose existence together doesn't make sense in a natural environment. For example, a beholder might wander one part of a maze, while a colony of myconids inhabits a section of twisting corridors not far away.

Rewards

Mazes that have stood unsolved for long years can hold substantial rewards. A maze might be the resting place of a unique item, an artifact, or a relic of the time before the Dawn War. In addition to whatever it was designed to hide, it might also contain the gear, magic items, and wealth of previous explorers who died trying to find its treasure.

Mine

Untold wealth resides beneath the surface of the world. Silver, gold, platinum, and precious gems have drawn nearly every humanoid race to construct mines for obtaining those riches. Cut into mountainsides or down the tunnels of the Underdark, mines are the conduit through which pours the treasure of clans and empires. When a mine's wealth has been depleted, the shafts and other workings of the construction remain, offering a way for mysteries and monsters to descend into their depths.

Variations

Most mines are lengthy tunnels dug into the earth, extending downward from a handful of entrances on the surface. Smaller passages spread out from the main shafts as miners follow promising veins of ore and pockets of gems.

When active, a mine is abuzz with activity and workers toiling day and night. Dormant mines are different. Their tunnels are no longer maintained, so occasional collapses and cave-ins seal off old passages or create new ones. These played-out mines become more like natural cave complexes, drawing creatures to take shelter in them. Large populations of subterranean monsters can occupy the biggest mines, or an abandoned shaft might become home to a single dark entity—some ancient creature that was disturbed when a mining operation dug too deeply.

Exploring

Mines created by humanoids feature passages that are easy to navigate, whether on foot or using carts designed to transport ore. Many mines have connections to deeper caves as well—even to the Underdark.

Dangers Even an active mine is dangerous, with cave-ins and pockets of poison gas a constant threat to workers and explorers alike. Skilled miners use struts to reinforce tunnels and carefully test new passages before fully excavating them.

When a mine has been abandoned, it holds different dangers. No matter how cautious you are, you might trigger a collapse as you explore, and the possibility of becoming lost in a mine is always a threat. Some dormant mines feature traps set by the previous miners, hoping to deter the greedy from following the tunnels to plunder new workings or carve out homes. These deterrents might be as simple as weakened supports to bring down the roof of a tunnel with but a nudge.

Inhabitants Humans, dwarves, svirfneblin, goliaths, gnomes, kobolds—members of almost all humanoid races hear the call to pursue resources and riches underground. While a mine is active, it is heavily populated by miners, most of whom don't take kindly to intruders snooping around their claim. This attitude is particularly prevalent among underground peoples, whose mines have strong connections to their ancestral holds. Outsiders caught trespassing in such areas can expect a hostile or violent greeting.

After the excavation in a mine has ceased, the inhabitants can be different—though the reception they give to interlopers is likely similar. Old tunnels are quickly repopulated by creatures looking for defensible homes, from goblin squatters to hibernating cave bears, nesting stirges to rust monster packs. If a mine connects to the Underdark, even fouler monsters might use it for access to the surface.

Rewards Most mines are empty for a reason: There simply isn't any more treasure to be found. In some cases, however, the miners might have decided not to venture into hard-to-reach areas that an adventuring group is perfectly suited to tackle. Miners might also be driven off their claim by monsters, leaving behind rich ore and precious gems for those brave enough to take them. The victims of these monsters might also hire adventuring parties to clear the threats that chased them from their excavation.

Prison

Perhaps the most literal of all dungeon types, a prison dungeon is where the enemies of authority waste away behind bars. Such holes are synonymous with torture and darkness, and few ever return from one. Sealed away in a prison's depths are a thousand tales of hardship, testifying to the horrors that even civilized beings can visit upon one another.

Variations

A prison is built in a secure location, whether within the walls of a fortress, beneath a castle's inner ward, or even through a dimensional portal in another plane. Prisons for humanoids are cramped, depressing warrens of narrow tunnels and tiny, dark cells. Iron bars and sturdy doors separate each chamber, and the clamor of chains echoes throughout the depths. The stench of filthy bodies draws flies, and rats crawl among shackled inmates. Implements of torture dangle from the walls. Sunlight is a fading dream.

Some beings cannot be contained by conventional prisons. Fiendish villains, ancient monsters, and demigods or exarchs can be restrained only with great magic. Such a creature is held in isolation, with the location of its prison kept secret so that its followers cannot attempt to free it. The bonds or cells that hold such prisoners are strengthened by arcane spellcraft, the walls and doors ensorcelled with mystic wards.

Exploring

A prison has layers of defenses to prevent escape. Those jailed within one must contend with locked doors, barred corridors, patrols of guards, and other obstacles. (If you're on a rescue mission, you'll have to deal with those things as well—from the other side.) Rumors might circulate among inmates of secret paths left over from the prison's construction or created by daring escapees.

Dangers The challenges of a prison dungeon begin with the guards who patrol the entryway and corridors. They are quick to attack anyone they see moving unescorted through the complex.

FOR THE DM: JAILBREAK!

A prison jailbreak makes an excellent scenario for a dramatic adventure, particularly in the heroic tier. At this level, the adventurers don't yet have access to rituals or powers that let them easily bypass a prison's security, so coming up with a plan for infiltration presents a formidable challenge.

Offer the players several possible ways to break into the prison, then let them make choices based on their characters' abilities. These decisions can lead to exciting and memorable escapades that require the heroes to rely on timing, precision, and ability to avoid capture. A skill challenge played out in stages can simulate the progress of the jailbreak, perhaps with a few plot twists thrown in to keep things exciting.

A prison breakout is a classic adventure plot

Even if the guards can be eluded, a prison often contains hidden defenses or traps to deal with attempted escapes or to keep friends outside from supplying aid. Some prisons are laid out as mazes so that even in the event of a security breach, intruders or escapees will have difficulty navigating networks of identical corridors.

The biggest danger in a prison is often the prisoners themselves. These desperate individuals might attack adventurers who are breaking in, hoping to seize their weapons and magic.

Inhabitants

A prison can hold any kind of creature. Humanoid prisoners range from hardened murderers to political iconoclasts. Such characters have usually done something to offend their society or ruler, though their actions weren't necessarily evil. Some were imprisoned unfairly or by mistake, or made enemies by taking a stand against corrupt laws. On the other hand, a prisoner might be an archvillain, guilty of dreadful crimes, or a creature of such strength that no force or magic can destroy it.

Ultimately, no one wants to inhabit a prison—not even the guards employed to protect it.

Rewards

Little tangible wealth is to be found in a prison, though its warden might seize captives' goods for his or her own use or to turn over to the authorities. Escape or rescue is its own reward. In some cases, a rescued prisoner might be rich or influential enough to provide remuneration after the fact, or might offer valuable information. You could also break out someone wrongly imprisoned just for the warm feeling of doing good.

Sewer

Building a dungeon from scratch is difficult in an already existing urban environment. The sewers of a city, however, can exhibit many of the features of a dungeon, including access to secret areas and forgotten catacombs. Taking over a sewer complex might appeal to a villain whose plans are focused in a populated area or who must make use of an existing locale and isn't too fussy.

Variations

An undercity tunnel system might be a storm sewer, which collects excess rainfall and funnels it away from the city streets and into a nearby body of water, or a sanitary sewer designed to deal with refuse and waste. Sewers large enough to serve as dungeons can combine both designs, which makes living there unpleasant for most creatures. The only beings that call a sewer home are those that can tolerate its filth or have no other place to go.

JULIE DILLON

The main variant of a sewer dungeon is the abandoned system beneath a deserted city. Creatures looking for a home or a safe place might move into an abandoned sewer in the same way they do an abandoned mine. With no chance of attracting the attention of city authorities, they have no need to hide their activities in the sewer.

Exploring

A sewer has numerous entrances throughout a city, so adventurers can easily enter and leave the dungeon. Their enemies have the same advantage, which makes them that much more difficult to catch. Sewer dwellers might also open up new entrances to their tunnels by digging upward to infiltrate buildings for use as bases aboveground.

A sewer often has walkways on either side of the channel, so you shouldn't need to wade or swim under normal circumstances. Still, the place stinks, both from sewage and from the rot-feeding growth that flourishes within its dank tunnels. Sewers aren't built to be traveled through, and some sections might be blocked by bars or shrink down to narrow pipes or passages. Those that have long-term inhabitants are riddled with secret passages and loose grates that can be easily moved.

You could navigate a sewer using only the dim daylight that filters down through storm drains, though doing so can make for slow going. If the creatures living in a sewer have darkvision or other enhanced senses, you're better off carrying light despite the risk of detection.

Dangers Anyone traveling through or living in a sewer fears heavy rains. During a storm, the tunnels quickly fill with runoff, and creatures inside need to make for higher ground.

Sewer-dwellers that have a penchant for traps might build special dams with quick-release levers to open them and force pursuers back. A sewer's narrow walkways make traps somewhat more effective, since adventurers have less room to spread out while exploring.

Human and animal waste, poisonous liquids dumped by tanneries and other industries, and dead animals all float through a sanitary sewer. Sewer water also carries diseases such as filth fever, making moving through it as risky as it is disgusting.

Inhabitants Skulking creatures such as goblins seek out the familiar underground terrain of a sewer when they infest a humanoid city. Criminals and outcasts who want to remain close to civilization take refuge in a city's sewers. Thieves, particularly wererats, use sewer tunnels to move unseen beneath a settlement. A sewer might become contested territory during a feud between gangs or underworld guilds. Criminals hiding out in sewers use simple shelters or collapsible tents and keep their gear packed at all times, ready to retreat whenever the weather or the law becomes a threat.

Sewers teem with scurrying rats, cockroaches, centipedes, and other vermin, but these creatures present no threat to adventurers. In fact, you can get early warning of the lairs of larger predators by watching out for locations free of vermin. Monstrous creatures also thrive in sewers: Otyughs are at home in the stench and filth, stirges swarm in humid tunnels, oozes drip from the ceiling, and carrion crawlers lurk on all surfaces, feeding on smaller vermin as they wait for better prey to come along.

Rewards The same thieves' guilds that use sewers for transportation also conceal their loot there. Loose bricks and false walls conceal hoards of coins, false identification papers, disguise kits, and useful magic items. In addition, a villain who controls a remote dungeon might create a teleportation circle in an urban sewer, providing a way to quickly enter the city or move supplies to operatives there.

Volcano

A volcano is a rupture in the surface of the world that allows boiling magma, searing ash, and dangerous gases to escape from below. The destructive and unpredictable nature of volcanoes makes them the most dangerous of natural dungeons.

Volcanoes embody the force of unfinished creation, providing a window into the Elemental Chaos, and are natural sources of gems and other riches. As streams of lava flow and cool, bubbles in the liquid form tunnels and caverns. These naturally strong shafts create a complex and formidable underground network.

Variants

Unlike other types of natural dungeons, volcanoes can be found in most places in the world, from the remote Underdark to the mountain ranges of the most civilized surface lands. A volcano dungeon can be as small as a few interconnected chambers, or it can fill the interior of a mountain with twisting passages and vast vaults.

Exploring

The simplest volcano dungeon is a flat network of tunnels extending in every direction. Different areas can feature thematic terrain, such as rivers of magma, lava falls, and rocky bridges over burning lakes.

Dangers The searing heat and lack of oxygen in a volcano can tax even the most stalwart explorers.

FOR THE DM: VOLCANIC TERRAIN

Volcanic terrain is not only challenging but also exceedingly dangerous, particularly for heroic tier characters. Falling into lava, for example, is quickly fatal for most characters. Your players should understand that exploring a volcano is a dangerous and exhausting activity. You can use the threats of a volcano dungeon to encourage them to think of smart tactics, presenting them with challenges and obstacles rather than a succession of death traps.

Falling rocks, crumbling cavern walls, and unstable ground must all be taken into account.

Inhabitants Great monsters thrive in this landscape, whether they have a connection to elemental fire or simply seek the warmth of the caverns. Active volcanoes arise around rifts to the Elemental Chaos, attracting creatures of raw elemental energy. Fire elementals and fiery demons are the most common of these. Other creatures that lair in or near volcanoes include mephits, fire drakes, and red dragons.

Rewards Volcanoes carry rare gems to the surface inside streams of magma, and they can be a rich source of rare metals as well. Smiths are always looking for raw volcanic ore to create new alloys. When the lava from a volcano originates in the deepest reaches of the Elemental Chaos, it is often imbued with elemental magic, making it prized by artificers and other arcane practitioners.

Many ancient red dragons make their lairs in the cores of volcanoes, which provide maximum defensibility for their hoards. The oldest are said to possess lost artifacts, rare magic arms and armor, and unsurpassed wealth in coin and gems.

Warren

The confusing dens of kobolds, goblins, ankhegs, and other subterranean creatures consist of unstable caverns connected by twisting, narrow tunnels. A warren dungeon is usually a shallow construction, dug down just below the surface or extending off naturally occurring underground passageways.

Variations

Intelligent creatures build warrens that resemble villages, divided into specialized sections. The hives and dens of beasts such as ankhegs and bulettes feature a smaller number of chambers in which these monsters sleep and breed when they are not hunting.

Each intelligent race that builds warrens does so in a different style. Kobolds lair near underground hot springs or volcanic vents for warmth (and potential nearness to dragons). Goblins trap and breed beasts such as drakes, krenshars, wolves, and spiders to guard their warrens. Svirfneblin conceal their homes' entrances, using illusion magic to make their cozy dens look dangerous or abandoned.

Exploring

Even if a warren was built to be defensible, most of its rooms serve everyday needs. Bedchambers, kitchens, shrines, and privies are more common than armories and guardrooms. Trapped passages are common, however, particularly in kobold warrens.

Dangers Creatures that dig out warrens are typically of small stature. Their lairs are ill suited to the taller races, which face a considerable challenge when squeezing through low, narrow passageways. Becoming stuck in a narrow tunnel might seem a minor inconvenience at first, but even the stupidest goblin knows how to take advantage of a cornered foe.

Kobold warrens teem with traps, making them even more dangerous than other warrens. Their residents ably bypass hazards that can spell destruction for blundering intruders. Even if a trap doesn't kill its target, being tagged by one leaves a blood trail that kobolds can follow.

Inhabitants Kobolds, goblins, and the like viciously defend their warrens against intruders. This isn't some dungeon that they guard as mercenaries—it's their home.

Unlike an outpost full of soldiers, a warren can contain children, the elderly, and other noncombatants. Adventurers who avoid attacking such creatures can sometimes negotiate passage through a warren. Even noncombatants will take up arms quickly if they are threatened. Kobolds are able to use tooth and claw from the time they're hatched; elderly deep gnomes might fight with the desperation of having nothing to lose; and few creatures are more ferocious than mothers protecting their young.

Rewards Warrens are rarely filled with treasure, but they can be great sources of tools and supplies. For a group on a long expedition, a store of cured meats and ale might be worth more than coins or gems. Information is another valuable, if intangible, reward for entering a warren. As well, local rulers might pay well to have a nest of troublemakers cleared out.

Dungeon Denizens

Sometimes the best weapon a dungeon delver can have is knowledge of how to deal with the monsters that lurk underground. So lend an ear to the voices of experience quoted in this section as they tell their tales and dispense their advice, and grab a piece of parchment—you'll want to take notes.

This section spotlights a group of monsters that have a long history in the D&D game—including the beholder, the mind flayer, and the rust monster, to name a few. They've been "kept alive" as the game has evolved because they're just so . . . monstrous.

Aboleths

"Beware of what waits for us below, my friends. Drive any thought that is not your own from your mind, for it will betray you and leave you vulnerable to their corruption. Take solace in the knowledge that these horrors are flesh and blood, and they feel pain."

—Mord, escaped thrall

Aboleths are the slimy overlords of the subterranean realm. Their bodies are bizarre and revolting, their abilities maddening, their motives and origins inscrutable. In short, aboleths embody the alien horror of the Far Realm. Their emergence is a sign that cosmic forces are turning their gaze toward the sane world.

Aboleths dwell in subterranean lakes and oceans, surfacing to bend others to their malevolence. With hosts of corrupted thralls in their service, they instigate schemes with far-reaching consequences. When confronted, an aboleth turns its attackers against themselves by dominating their minds. The lash of its slimy tentacles destroys an enemy's sanity, and those who fall to an aboleth are doomed to become victims of its desecration.

When an aboleth is the hidden master of an evil scheme, its enemies typically don't realize the truth until the monster reveals itself. This subterfuge makes preparing for battle difficult, so adventurers must learn the telltale signs of an aboleth's presence. The creatures frequently send thralls to the surface to spy and instigate their plots. These thralls can be identified by their emotionless insistence on completing their assigned tasks. Those who manage to escape sometimes feel a gibbering in their minds that crescendos when an aboleth is nearby, and observant delvers might notice trails of slime leading to the edge of a dark lake.

WARREN

Stirges above, bones beneath, and adventurers in the middle

EVA WIDERMANN

Ankhegs

"We didn't get too many ankhegs back home. Too rocky. Usually they'd show up by accident, drawn to the sound of our smithies. When they'd appear, they'd get all riled up and spit acid everywhere. We had to take them down quick, before the acid tarnished the forge."

—Korag, dwarf outcast

Ankhegs hunt humanoids, so they stick close to settlements to gain easy access to their prey. The burrowing creatures avoid detection by staying underground. When on the hunt, an ankheg comes to the surface just long enough to snatch a victim, then drag it into the beast's tunnels to tear it apart with razor-sharp mandibles. The more the victim struggles, the angrier the ankheg gets, and the nastier the fight becomes. Since adventurers have a tendency to fight back, ankhegs can get extremely nasty.

The good news is that most ankhegs hunt alone. They don't gather in large numbers because each one needs a lot of food to survive, and having too many ankhegs in one area depletes the food supply. They do work together during the mating cycle, though, digging a burrow where they drop their eggs. The parents grow more aggressive, both to drive off predators and to bring in meat for the broodlings when they hatch.

READING THE SIGNS

By Khel Nighteyes, veteran dungeoneer

Time and time again I hear of adventurers kicking in dungeon doors or stomping through caverns, practically ringing the dinner bell for monsters. We Deep Guides favor discretion. The best way to avoid monsters is to keep your eyes open; the signs are all around you. Let me give you some examples.

Abnormally clean dungeon walls are a good clue that an ooze is squelching around nearby.

Butchered bodies are a sure sign of grimlocks, but the savage creatures also leave greasy handprints and tufts of ropy hair wherever they go.

Think a bit of treasure scattered conveniently in your path is too good to be true? It is. It usually means that a roper is lurking overhead.

Aboleths have a fixation on bizarre shapes and angles, making their thralls build monolithic structures near their lairs.

Beholders

"Don't listen to the lies spread by gossipers! There is only one, and it is Xocol'yalax! Others are pretenders, not worthy of my sight! Now recount the ten thousand odes of my greatness that I taught you, and make them perfect this time!"

—Xocol'yalax, beholder

When people on the surface world whisper about the terrible creatures that lurk in far depths, they're usually talking about beholders. Nothing compares to a beholder's otherworldly appearance and capabilities. Its eyestalks writhe like a nest of snakes, spitting magic energy with every glance. It need only look at a victim to burn or freeze or disintegrate it. If a beholder's enemy survives the barrage of eye rays, the floating creature simply opens its mouth to bring to bear its vicious bite.

Beholders' megalomaniacal delusions are as dangerous as their abilities. They create subterranean domains for themselves, taking on titles such as "supreme majesty" or "all-seeing overlord." A beholder delights in imposing its will on others, especially when the lesser beings consciously accept its superiority. Beholders build menageries of slaves and collect creatures that they find interesting. The superiority complex of beholders would be humorous if they didn't insist on trying to rule the world.

Carrion Crawlers

"Whole nests of the things would gorge themselves in the killing caverns of the orc wars. The beasts were so intent on shoveling the dead into their mouths that you could slip right past them, if you could stand the stink."

—Korag, dwarf outcast

Carrion crawlers wallow in filth, decay, and slime. They scour subterranean environments for easy meals among the dead or dying, but if they can't find those, they ambush live prey with their poisonous tentacles. The caterpillar-like bodies of these creatures let them launch these ambushes from bizarre angles, attacking from dungeon walls or ceilings so that enemies cannot fight back easily. Experienced delvers know to watch out for pools of dripping slime in tunnels—a drooling crawler might be lurking overhead.

The sight and sound of a carrion crawler feeding can make the bravest adventurer queasy. The hideous sucking noises are more disturbing when you consider that their meal might still be alive. Being paralyzed by a carrion crawler's poison is one of a delver's worst fears: shoveled headfirst into the monster's maw, fully aware but utterly powerless.

Cave Fishers

"Meepo already feel like little worm all alone in the dark. Why nasty monsters hook him like one, too?"

—Meepo the kobold

These insectlike predators cast their sticky nets into the tunnels of dungeons, angling for everything from buzzing stirges to errant explorers. Cave fishers prefer overhangs or ledges in moist caverns. Their craggy carapaces let them hide perfectly against a cavern wall, where they wait patiently for prey to wander near. Some cave fishers spin a noose of filament that snatches a creature, strangling it. Others fire harpoon-like spikes into the flesh of their victims. Either way, a cave fisher immobilizes its prey, then carries it back to the nest to be feasted on by the beast's ravenous brood.

Cave fishers rely on cunning rather than strength to catch their meals. They usually stay in areas close to the surface, which typically see heavy foot traffic by small humanoids. A lone goblin or kobold can't put up much of a fight, but a fully equipped adventurer can take down a cave fisher—if you can close with the creature. There's the problem. Cave fishers crawl along walls and ceilings like spiders, favoring ambush locations where their prey has limited maneuverability or cover.

Grimlocks

"Drow slave-pits are overflowing with grimlocks. Those brutes are as cruel as their masters and would fight to the death even if drow whips weren't behind them. Against a grimlock, one blow—well timed, swift, and perfectly aimed to the heart—will do more than a dozen errant cuts."

—Meliera, bloodsworn

Even among the harsh races of the Underdark, grimlocks stand out as some of the most savage and violent. The fearless raiders wander the endless caverns, always on the move and quick to slay whatever they encounter. Although they use only primitive stone or bone weapons, their brutish strength can overpower most humanoids. Untold millennia underground have given them uncanny senses, enabling them to function in complete darkness. This ability is a serious problem for surface dwellers— although grimlocks can't see the flicker of torchlight, they can feel its warmth, and they go for the person with the light first.

The tiny glimpses of grimlocks' tribal culture that adventurers have seen suggest that the creatures don't spend all their time brutalizing and eating everything they find. They have an ingrained hatred of outsiders, though, so no one has been able to live among them. Grimlocks savagely attack dungeon delvers, but they battle other subterranean monsters as well. This hatred might come from the fact that many Underdark creatures enslave them. Grimlocks attack mind flayers more zealously than they do any other race.

Hook Horrors

"We use t' file down hook horror claws and use 'em as arches for our homes. Didn't need keystones 'cause the claws were strong enough t' hold up the entire roof without buckling. Findin' ways to use the claws wasn't hard. Getting 'em's another matter."

—Thorry, trapsmith

These creatures range through caverns in search of food. Similar to great bears of the upper world, hook horrors are renowned for their orneriness. They don't go looking for fights, but if surprised, cornered, or wounded, they hit back hard. The creatures' size and chitinous plating make them incredibly strong and resilient. Their claws are nearly six feet long, studded with jagged barbs and ending in a fishhook shape larger than a human hand. When angered, a hook horror smashes a foe with these claws, pulls an enemy close, and rends flesh with its beaked jaws.

Underdark explorers have suggested that hook horrors might be more than violent beasts. Solitary creatures have exhibited complex behavior that suggests intelligence. Additionally, hook horror clans, usually consisting of a handful of individuals, have been seen demonstrating teamwork, compassion, and ritualized behavior. Thus, some delvers say that avoiding their territory is not only safer but more respectful.

Mimics

"Look, when I tell you not to touch anything, I have a very good reason. Let's just say that sometimes the dungeon bites back."

—Karl, deep delver

Although mimics come from the Far Realm, they have found the world's dungeons to be good hunting grounds. These amorphous, slime-like creatures take the forms of everyday objects in their chosen environments. Treasure chests, religious altars, and elaborate doorways are among their favorite shapes because they attract the attention of curious passersby. A mimic waits, indistinguishable from the surrounding features until prey comes within reach. Then the creature shows its true nature, becoming a writhing mass of ooze, teeth, and tendrils.

Experienced adventurers know to be alert for a mimic whenever they discover an interesting object while dungeon delving, and such caution has denied the creatures many potential meals over the years. As a result, some mimics have wised up, taking the forms of humanoids and actively hunting gullible prey. As these mimics become more common in dungeons—and sometimes on the surface world—adventurers might start second-guessing everyone they meet, wondering if a new acquaintance is really a toothy mass of hungry slime.

Mind Flayers

"There were hundreds of skulls in that pit, practically spilling over the edge. But that wasn't what made me run—it was the mangled holes in each skull's forehead, like something had bitten right through it."

—Risha, drow assassin of Maelbrathyr

No creatures haunt the nightmares of dungeon-delvers more than mind flayers. Their far-reaching schemes and boundless hatred of other races puts them among the supreme villains of the Underdark. Their combination of psychically enslaved servitors and withering mental attacks makes them a threat for any group of adventurers. Defeat at the hands of a mind flayer is a fate worse than death, leading to either slavery or a sickening feast on the victim's brain.

Mind flayers are obsessed with the perfection of their species. They reproduce by corrupting other creatures and capture promising hosts that can be transformed into new mind flayers. This need spurs their cabals to expand into new realms, where they work to subvert existing centers of power. If an attempt at transformation produces disappointing results, the mind flayers might call for the systematic genocide of the host's race. On the other hand, a successful transformation means that mind flayers seek out similar creatures to undergo the process. Unfortunately for adventurers, their skills and abilities make them attractive targets.

Myconids

"It started when we found spores clinging to the soles of our boots after we returned from the tunnels, and it just didn't stop. Mushrooms began popping up over the whole village, crowding us out of our houses and smothering our gardens. It wasn't long before they started moving around, wondering what we were doing in their home."

—Durthee, svirfneblin refugee

The idea of walking mushrooms might make some adventurers snicker, but experienced delvers know that the implacable spread of myconids is no laughing matter. Colonies of these plant creatures are expanding throughout the world. Thriving in dank environments such as caverns and dungeons, myconids take hold of an area quickly. Their spores create huge fungal masses that crowd out other plants and animals. Their lairs are pungent with decay, and the growth is sometimes so thick that explorers have to hack their way through. Myconids don't take kindly to those who damage their colony, nor do they have patience for opponents who try to slow their advance.

Despite their hostility, myconids are not evil. Some people can understand and perhaps empathize with their need to expand. Opening negotiations with a myconid sovereign is a good tactic for those who don't want to fight a charging army of spiny fungi. Once they are attacked, myconids pour from their lair like a colony of fire ants, and they don't stop until they or their foes are compost.

Oozes and Slimes

"The trick to dealing with oozes is to give them something to focus on. They're as brainless as they are deadly, so if you poke them with something, they're likely to fixate on it. Just be sure it's not something that dissolves too quickly."

—Karl, deep delver

Clinging to dungeon walls or seeping formlessly through cracks, oozes and slimes exist only to feed on anything their acidic bodies touch. They don't think or feel, and they barely react to external stimuli. They are driven by the instinct to consume and lurk in the moist darkness, waiting for a meal to pass by. Everything is food to them, and their goopy bodies scrub clean dungeon walls and adventurers' bones alike.

The best way to protect yourself from oozes is to pay attention. The creatures are generally lethargic, especially after eating, when they become torpid masses of jelly. Even active oozes move very slowly; most adventurers can walk away from one without breaking a sweat. The danger is that oozes and slimes can become almost invisible in the right conditions. You could walk right into one before realizing it. Never stick your hand into a damp niche before checking first, and always prod pools of water before drinking.

Otyughs

"Ick! No want to smell fat stink-monster!"

—Splik, grudging goblin guide

Plenty of explorers attest that otyughs are the most foul, filthy, diseased sacks of tentacles and flesh in dungeons. Although the creatures are products of the natural world, they reek with what some swear must be a supernatural stench that is second only to the smell of troglodytes. It's as if their bloated, flabby bodies absorb the rot and decay around them.

An otyugh is almost invisible when wallowing in a pile of filth, its skin adapting to match the color of the putrid surroundings. A consummate scavenger by nature, the creature's aggression stems mostly from its territorial nature. It lays claim to a rich feeding ground and tries to drive off or consume all who intrude. An otyugh entangles a creature in its tentacles, which are covered with vicious hooks that sink into flesh, then pulls the victim into its cesspool and chews it up.

Most otyughs are irritable loners, squatting idly in a noisome pit or slowly wandering through dungeons until they find a place disgusting enough to make their own. Only priests of Torog, god of the Underdark, show any affinity for otyughs, though the slimy creatures are exploited by troglodytes, hobgoblins, and other dungeon-dwelling races for both waste removal and defense.

Purple Worms

"Sing the tale of Vonak Bloodoath, who fought and slew the bale worm. For seven days he struggled in the belly of the beast, his golden axe painted crimson. Vonak knew no fear and felt no weariness, and at last he cleaved the monster's heart. So mighty was the worm's thrashing that it shook the mountains."

–A dwarven legend told in Cor Talcor

Dungeon monsters don't come bigger, nastier, or hungrier than purple worms. These hundred-foot-long horrors burrow through stone and earth at great speed, driven only to eat. One titanic worm's burrowing can create tremors or sinkholes large enough to threaten whole communities. Like a force of nature, it can burst through a fortress wall, writhing and thrashing at armies that are helpless to stop it. The monster opens its huge mouth and simply crawls forward, shoveling masses of prey into its gullet. Inside its body, the victims are awash in digestive slime that quickly dissolves their flesh. Everything from a kobold to a giant is food to a purple worm.

As the apex predators in the Underdark, purple worms have a rich mythology. Their appearances have marked the destruction of cities, the creation of important underground landscapes, and speculation about the true depth of the Night Below. The drow consider the worms a test sent by Lolth to judge their worth. Goblins think that the worms are hungry gods that will shatter the world if not fed. Dwarves view them much as surface-dwellers do ravaging dragons.

Ropers

"How's this for a trap idea? It blends perfectly into th' wall and shoots out lines that grab 'n' pull you up into it, where a bunch o' sharp stuff tears you to pieces. Makin' one? Who said anything about makin' one? It's already here. Just look up."

–Thorry, trapsmith

Patient, ravenous, and cruel, a roper can wait weeks for prey to stumble within reach of its tentacles. When prey draws near, the roper hurls long tentacles to snare and reel the victim into its gaping maw. As if that weren't bad enough, ropers sadistically enjoy the struggles of their victims, laughing horribly as they chew their food.

Ropers are occasionally talkative, and one might converse with a likely meal before attacking (though it is hardly good company). Some dungeon-dwelling races, such as goblins, look to ropers as oracles or gods. A roper might offer guidance or protection in exchange for offerings of wealth—and the chance to snatch a supplicant here and there for an easy meal. Since ropers have tremendous life spans and can hibernate for decades, their gullets might hold ancient treasures.

Rust Monsters

"Oh, how I hate those things. Not because they eat swords or armor or all that nonsense, but because they ruin the nicest treasure! The best thing to do is blast them with something loud and flashy; it makes them scatter like cockroaches."

–Ella, treasure hunter

A relatively docile and inoffensive rust monster can upset the nerves of mighty heroes more than can the most despicable demon. Physically, rust monsters are hardly threatening. They are spindly and flighty, their antennas atwitter as they scuttle, and are quick to flee unless someone is carrying metal objects. The smell of metal makes rust monsters aggressive, but adventurers clad in armor or laden with treasure drive them into a feeding frenzy. A hungry rust monster charges toward metal heedless of opposition, scampering back to safety only after it is sated.

Most people hate rust monsters with a passion that is astounding but fully deserved. If left unchecked,

THE ALBINO RUST MONSTER

A lament by Vanion Braveheart

They were on us like locusts, dozens of rust monsters pouring from the honeycomb of tunnels all around. I drew my sword Red Wind by instinct and immediately knew it was a mistake. A huge beast pushed through the throng and charged me. It was bigger than a horse, and its shell glistened pale white in the torchlight. I gave ground, but the monster came on, its mandibles clacking. It barreled over me, wrenching my sword from my hands. I watched in horror as Red Wind, an enchanted blade inherited from the knights of Nerath, withered to dust in the monster's jaws.

We were overwhelmed and had no choice but to flee. That giant rust monster is still down there, fattened on the magic of my lost sword.

the beasts can cause havoc to whole communities. In dwarven culture, not killing a rust monster one encounters is a crime, and some adventurers claim that dragons hired them to clear out nests of the creatures lurking near their hoards.

Stirges

"There's nothing worse than walking into a stirge lair unawares. They swarm you in seconds, sometimes so thick you can't even see through them to find the way out. Experienced Deep Guides can read the signs that stirges are near and toss a rock down the tunnel to distract them long enough for everyone to run past."

—Karl, deep delver

Among the world's most widespread monsters, stirges infest underground environments just as they do the nooks and crannies on the surface. Cavern stirges swarm in colonies large enough to turn a cave's ceiling into a writhing mass of spindly claws and leathery wings. Although some of these stirges find exits to the surface world at night to hunt, many are satisfied with the ample prey of the Underdark. In fact, some prefer to stay in dungeons, which have fewer places for prey to hide.

Trying to fight a swarm of stirges is a fool's proposition, especially while underground, so travelers and explorers have developed other ways to deal with a colony. The drow use a particular type of spider that nests among the stirges and hunts the creatures to extinction. Svirfneblin poison a swarm by placing tainted animal carcasses outside its lair. Adventurers have found success using fires to smoke the stirges out of their caverns.

Troglodytes

"I remember that a troglodyte chieftain was brought before my mother in chains. She wanted to see if its kind could be hired as mercenaries or at least enslaved. The beast lashed out and tried to escape. The guards stopped it, but my mother slew them anyway—not because they failed to keep the creature chained, but because its stink couldn't be washed from their clothes."

—Khiira, Underdark envoy

These reptilian degenerates are known for their violence, barbarism, and nauseating stench. Nothing smells worse than a pack of troglodytes, slick with stink and slavering for fresh meat (though otyughs come close). A troglodyte raid is notoriously swift and ruthless, rarely driven by riches. The creatures attack groups that are vulnerable, whether a settlement of surface homesteaders or the families of dwarf miners. Most troglodytes carry some type of stone-tipped weapon, though they might revert to claws and fangs in the heat of battle. If their victims don't choke from the stench, they're slashed to ribbons by berserker talons.

Troglodytes form obsessively territorial clans. Sometimes these groups are as eager to kill each other as they are other races, though competing clans put aside their differences when given an opportunity to spill the blood of other creatures.

Troglodytes are well adapted to life underground. They scramble over rocky terrain easily and can go for days at a time without food.

Umber Hulks

"Umber hulk tunnels are risky for travelers. The creatures do so much thrashing when they burrow that their holes could cave in at any time. When you also consider that umber hulk migrations follow patterns, suddenly that purple worm tunnel sounds mighty appealing."

—Jasyn of Therund, founding Deep Guide

Umber hulks are greatly feared in the Underdark, and not just because their claws rip through stone as if it were parchment. Their reputation is also due to their ravenous appetite. When hungry, umber hulks never stop looking for food. Their hunting methods aren't subtle; an umber hulk typically bursts through a stone tunnel and tears its prey apart with savage blows. Their scimitar-sized mandibles bristle with serrations, and their armored shells are thicker than plate armor. Veteran delvers know that when the ground shakes, it's time to take cover.

Umber hulks are solitary hunters, but their tunnels are thick with small creatures scavenging their kills or relying on the larger beasts for protection. After feasting, an umber hulk might let these vermin crawl over its mandibles and claws to pick clean any remaining scraps.

Umber hulks rest only when molting. This process leaves them in a torpid state for several days as they shed their exoskeletons and emerge even bigger, faster, and stronger. This period is one of the few times of vulnerability in an umber hulk's life. Discarded shells are marvelous finds for dungeoneers because they can be sold or fashioned into supremely sturdy armor and shields.

DUNGEON VERMIN

Although dungeons are infested with monstrous vermin, all but the most desolate of caverns are rife with insects and other tiny creatures. Cave crickets up to a foot long feed on mold and algae. Schools of blind albino fish swim in drowned tunnels. Lizards skitter along walls and ceilings. Worms and beetles crawl in the muck under rocks and in decaying matter. These and other vermin provide sustenance for the larger creatures of the Underdark, including wayward adventurers who run out of rations.

Count Strahd von Zarovich of Castle Ravenloft—master of all he surveys, and much more

CLYDE CALDWELL

Infamous Dungeons

Explorers find plenty of dungeons throughout the wilderness, but only a handful of these complexes stand out. Fewer still become legendary enough to make the list of infamous dungeons. The locations described here are some of the greatest dungeons of all time.

Hints of the dangers and legends of the treasures that await explorers in these dangerous locales might be enough to draw your character to seek them out, so here you'll also get some advice for how to deal with what you might face when you get there. As you read about each dungeon, consider how you and your adventuring group might be linked to it. Perhaps you grew up in the shadow of one of these places. With the DM's consent, your character might be a veteran of an attempt on the dungeon and already have some special knowledge. Alternatively, a loved one might have disappeared in pursuit of the secrets of one of these strongholds, and you or a fellow adventurer hope to discover that person's fate. Whatever brings you there, one day you too might stand at the threshold of an infamous dungeon.

Castle Ravenloft

The towering Balinok Mountains crowd conspiratorially together, their hunched shoulders thickly cloaked by a forest of enormous pines. No road describes a path between the massed trees or wends up the treacherous slopes. The Svalich Woods are still, silent, and dark, the trees closely set and the undergrowth a tangle through which only the mountains' frequent fogs can easily pass. The lumberjack's axe and the hunter's bow have no place here. Those who briefly dare to ascend the Balinoks tell of the seemingly insignificant sights and sounds that drove them to flee: a sudden creak of tree boughs caught in an unfelt wind, or a great paw print in the mud that slowly fills with water.

Yet the Vistani—that insular tribe that travels the world in gaily colored wagons—say there is a way through the Balinoks, which one might stumble upon after struggling for days through the mists and brush of the Svalich Woods. If you follow that path, the Vistani claim, you come to a pair of great gates of iron bars, braced between tall stone pillars, that swing inward at the slightest touch. Once beyond the gates, you stand on the soil of the land known as Barovia.

The Barovians, if they truly exist, have lived for centuries in a valley within the Balinoks, never once traveling from their home. From first breath to last, each Barovian labors within sight of the spires of Castle Ravenloft, a great keep perched a thousand feet above them on a pillar of rock that juts from the mountainside. The master of the castle, and of Barovia, is a self-styled count by the name of Strahd von Zarovich.

The Vistani who imparted this knowledge to you also carried with them a letter from the burgomaster of Barovia. In it he pleads for someone to come and help his lady love, Ireena, who has fallen ill from some strange malady. The burgomaster has promised all his wealth to any who could remove the affliction.

Another letter has recently surfaced in the Ivlis River, which flows out of the Balinok Mountains. Found on the bloated and clawed corpse of a man presumed to be its courier, the water-damaged dispatch tells a different tale. It was written in a different hand from the burgomaster's letter and is dated weeks before the Vistani came into possession of that message. The garbled text that remains legible reads as follows.

Hail thee of . . . and valor: I, . . . of Barovia, send you honor—with despair. My adopted d . . . fair . . . been these past nig . . . by a creature calling itself . . . For over . . . dear Ireena languishes and . . . from an unh . . . caused by this vile beast. Yet I fear, too, that the creatu . . . some more cunning . . . He has become too pow . . . be fought . . .

So I . . . leave us for dead and . . . encircle this land with . . . Let holy men call . . . that the evil may be held within . . . weeping Barovia. . . . save the world from . . .

There is much wealth entrapped in . . . Return for your reward after we are all departed . . .

Burgomas . . .

Playing a Vistani

The Vistani are a tribal people of humanoids of various races who share a common culture of nomadism and mystic arts. Their bands roam the world in house-wagons, often pausing near other communities until they wear out their welcome. These wanderers have a reputation for talents of foresight, black curses, and lax morals—some of it true to varying degrees. The Vistani might put on a bright face for the sake of outsiders, but they are secretive and insular, and their warm smiles can turn cold in an instant.

Even if the Vistani in the adventure are some of the villains, you could play a Vistani character who is working against them. Alternatively, your character might be from a Vistani tribe in another part of the world, seeking to discover what ties the Barovian Vistani have to their land and its master. For more information on creating a Vistani character, see "Playing Vistani" in Dragon 380.

SURVIVING ISN'T EVERYTHING

Throughout the history of the D&D game, certain adventures have become part of the shared experience. These adventures cause DMs all over the world to cackle with glee and give experienced players the shakes. This chapter presents eight of these D&D icons: the vampire's castle, the sealed mountain stronghold, the haunted ruin, the buried city, the pharaoh's pyramid, the volcano vault, the trap-ridden tomb, and the demonic temple. If you've never pitted your characters against these terrifying dungeons, then you are missing an important part of what it means to be a D&D player.

To say you explored the Tomb of Horrors is one thing; to say you lived through it . . . well, that's a rare honor. There's no better way to gain D&D player "cred" than to step through the gates of Castle Ravenloft and test your mettle against Count Strahd von Zarovich, or defy the wizard Keraptis by stealing Wave, Whelm, and Blackrazor from his insane dungeon below White Plume Mountain. The dungeons described herein are nasty, they're out to get you, and if you're not careful, they'll chew you up and swallow you whole.

This section provides fodder for your imagination, a "behind the curtain" peek at eight dungeons littered with the gnawed-on skeletal remains of adventurers from bygone D&D campaigns. If any of these descriptions whet your appetite, urge your DM to take a crack at running them. Although many of these adventures were written for earlier editions of the rules, a skilled DM can usually convert the necessary rules. If doing that sort of thing doesn't interest your DM, then at least you can use any description that sounds appealing to give him or her an idea of the kind of dungeon you'd like to explore.

Of the adventures presented here, the one I've run most often is Tomb of Horrors, and the end result was always the same: The player characters who went in never came out, usually falling victim not to the main villain of the adventure but to the dungeon itself. As a player, I've thrown characters into all eight of these dungeons and fared no better. In fact, of the dungeons presented here, I can claim victory over none of them, but I have many stories about how my characters perished, stories that resonate with other players who have suffered similar losses over the years, all in good fun. Often it's the ill-fated expedition into the dungeon that we remember best and which conjures the biggest laughs.

—Chris Perkins
D&D Senior Producer

Background: Barovian Escapee

Most of the time, you lived a pleasant life in Barovia. Simple rules guided your existence: Obey the burgomaster. Do not consort with the Vistani. Do not go out after sunset. And always do as Count Strahd von Zarovich commands.

Several times each year, some village residents receive invitations written in the count's hand and bearing his seal pressed into crimson wax. Those who return tell of lavish banquets and parties that last through the night. Some do not return, though. They are afterward said to be "living with the count," and they are never seen outside the castle again.

Or so you thought—until the night you saw your sweetheart for the last time.

You awoke to the sound of your name being called from the yard outside. Your love, who had answered an invitation from Strahd some time ago, and whom you had secretly grieved as lost to you ever since, stood beneath your window, pale in the moonlight. Her faint words warned you that your name was now on the guest list and that you must not come to the castle—in fact, you had to leave Barovia that night.

Of course you wavered, but nonetheless, fighting against everything you had been taught, you went out into the night and followed the one you loved most in the world down the road toward the gateway into the forest. She stood aside and implored you to pass through the gate. When you did so and turned back to look, no one stood behind you, but in the distance a pack of wolves crept out of the woods onto the road. You fled for your life into the forest.

You spent weeks wandering the mountains. Eventually you found a road, which led you to a new land. You're still not certain you did the right thing in leaving your homeland, even though life is better in many ways beyond Barovia's borders.

And . . . more than guilt haunts you. Recently you have heard stories of a black coach being pulled by exquisite black stallions. It appears from time to time, traveling the roads with no one driving it, and no passenger is glimpsed beyond its swaying velvet curtains. Its last reported location is always somewhere behind you, leading you to wonder if it is drawing closer.

It is, you fear, the same black coach that carries the count's guests to his castle.

Associated Skill: Perception or Stealth.

CASTLE RAVENLOFT, PAST AND PRESENT

Ravenloft has a lively D&D history since its debut as an AD&D adventure in 1983. The venue was developed as a full-fledged campaign setting throughout the 1990s, updated to 3rd Edition rules, and reincarnated as an award-winning board game in 2010. Nearly two dozen novels and a host of follow-on adventures in the same setting also contributed to Castle Ravenloft's fame.

The enduring popularity of the setting lies partly in its similarity to Bram Stoker's Dracula, but the eerie mood and open structure of the first adventure, written by Tracy and Laura Hickman, is what really makes Ravenloft work. Strahd wasn't just waiting in a room in his castle somewhere. Instead he would go on the offensive, attacking the adventurers when they were in the most dire situations and then escaping before he could be cornered.

Continuing the Story

Clearly, something strange is going on in the shadow of Castle Ravenloft. Either the Vistani cannot be trusted, or they don't know about the earlier letter found on the dead courier. If that water-damaged message is true, then the missive the Vistani came into possession of must be a fake.

If that's the case, then someone—perhaps Strahd—wants adventurers to try to rescue Ireena, so desperately that the earlier letter was brutally quashed. But why would a being who has existed securely for so long need the likes of you to upset his apple cart? So, does someone else want Ireena rescued? Maybe the Vistani want to keep access to Barovia open for some reason, and new visitors are somehow key to that plan.

Some magic must be at work if a castle and town can remain unknown for centuries. Strahd is probably a wizard of impressive ability, and likely undead if he has maintained control for so long. Unassailable, intelligent, and with a passive population of living people under his thumb—even without the evidence of the waterlogged letter, how could he be anything other than a vampire?

To discover the truth, you'll likely have to face Strahd in his castle. Taking on a vampire is difficult enough, but one who has access to the most potent spells and rituals presents a much greater challenge. If Strahd sent the letter that is held by the Vistani, then he is watching for your arrival. You'll have no hope of surprise. Perhaps the author of the waterlogged letter is right; maybe the best thing to do is somehow wall off Barovia and leave its citizens to their doom. But with so many innocent lives hanging in the balance, that approach would be anything but heroic. If you plan to end the vampire's existence, you'll need to find and destroy his coffin.

Moonlight reveals the central tower of the ancient wizard's fortress

Ghost Tower of Inverness

The four outer towers of Castle Inverness still stand above its ruins. They lean at different angles like tombstones guarding neglected graves, jutting from the ivy-choked rubble that was once the walls of a mighty fortress. Castle Inverness is one of the three infamous "ghost towers" of the Nentir Vale, but unlike the other two, it is not merely a focus for the activities of undead.

On certain nights, when the fog rises as high as the old walls' tops, moonlight seems to strike something in the mist. Clouds take shape, drifting around a huge yet unseen object between the four towers. Then, suddenly, the luminous cylindrical tower of the central keep stands once again, jutting boldly into the sky, defying death and time.

When clouds skirt across the moon's face, the Ghost Tower's image wavers. And when the moon is fully obscured, the tower vanishes into shadows and mist. The fog flows freely once more, and the apparition vanishes until some other bewitched evening.

Few willingly draw near this accursed place. Even without the appearance of the Ghost Tower, Castle Inverness has long been shunned by the locals. The legends of its tyrannical rise, and of the supernatural perils that remain after its fall, are still the stuff of bard song and tavern tales.

Tales say that in elder days the great fortress called Inverness gave its lord mastery over all land that could be surveyed from its high central keep, and twice that distance beyond the bounds of mortal vision. The walls of this castle were proof against every enemy and all things magical or natural. In it dwelled the great wizard Galap-Dreidel at the height of his glory. He had lifted the keep from the bedrock to make a kingdom of others' lands for himself. When lords and royals came to challenge his claim, Galap-Dreidel's spells struck them down long before they could even see Castle Inverness. Thus were the boundaries of Galap-Dreidel's lands discerned.

Most grand and terrible of all Galap-Dreidel's work was the keep's great inner tower where the wizard's most prized possession, an eldritch jewel known only as the Soul Gem, was said to rest. Legend says that it was like a great white diamond that glowed with the brilliance of the sun. In years long past it had fallen from the sky and landed in the foothills, where Galap-Dreidel discovered it. Through magic most arcane and knowledge forbidden to mortals

NOAH BRADLEY

THE GHOST TOWER, PAST AND PRESENT

"You are hereby granted title to, and ownership of, any and all treasures (save only the Soul Gem) that you remove from Keep Inverness and its grounds. These gains shall be subject to the Ducal treasure tariff of 20%."

With these words, the adventure begins for players of the 1980 module The Ghost Tower of Inverness, by Allen Hammack. That publication was preceded by a tournament version that one could purchase only at WinterCon VIII in 1979 in a zip bag containing 40 loose-leaf pages. But even in its more professionally published form, the adventure's tournament pedigree was on full display. Discussions of scoring the players' efforts riddle the adventure text, which presents an oftentimes nonsensical dungeon full of desperation-inducing challenges. Instead of puzzles that players might figure out and solve, many rooms plunged them into life-threatening situations without any rhyme or reason. The players succeeded due to luck and sheer determination, or their characters died.

Since then, the Ghost Tower of Inverness has appeared from time to time in various products. Most recently, it was featured in the D&D Encounters™ season March of the Phantom Brigade. In that adventure, the party travels with a group of would-be settlers to the ruined Castle Inverness, only to be attacked by spirits led by the ghost of someone who was killed while exploring the ruins.

Continuing the Story

What remains in the ruins of Castle Inverness is not clear from the legend, but even if the keep is gone, the four outer towers yet stand, and dungeons might lie beneath the rubble. Given the frightening appearance of the tower, and the penchant for the other ghost towers of the Nentir Vale to attract undead, you're unlikely to face living foes in the ruins. Prepare yourself for battling undead, but keep in mind that a great wizard built the place and supposedly set it apart from time. If the ghostly reappearance of the central keep is more than a mere haunting, the traps and monsters originally placed there by Galap-Dreidel might still exist. Summoned foes and enthralled minions of any kind could await more victims for sport. No recent stories mention the Soul Gem, so that dreadful artifact might still be protecting itself.

If you seek the Soul Gem, do so on a foggy but moonlit night when very few clouds are in the sky, just to be on the safe side. Otherwise, you risk becoming unstuck in time along with the tower, only to emerge months or even years later.

did he shape the stone to his will. Stories say that the light of the gem dragged souls screaming from their mortal flesh and trapped them within its many facets. They also claim that whoever controlled the gem could call forth the stolen souls and make them do his or her bidding. Galap-Dreidel harnessed this power and used it against those who opposed his will.

To protect the Soul Gem, Galap-Dreidel raised up the great central tower and filled his castle with horrible creatures and traps. Then, using a great incantation, he wrested the tower from the fabric of time so that those within would not be affected by the passage of years. Thus his traps never deteriorated, nor did his guardians age or need food. Some legends tell that he even taught the gem to protect itself from those who would take it from him. Of course, his creatures still had need of amusement, so at times Galap-Dreidel would take a prisoner from the surrounding lands and set the victim free in the tower for their sport.

A time came when Galap-Dreidel left his keep and did not return. When at last it seemed safe to assume that the wizard was not coming back, a mob of superstitious people from the surrounding lands laid siege to the castle. Without the wizard to protect it, its walls fell before the force of their rage, and they even threw down the great tower. Despite this victory over their former master, people feared the ruins—for on foggy nights the keep seemed to return. Did the old magic and monsters also return, or perhaps the ghost of Galap-Dreidel himself? No one knows for certain, but that's what the bards seem to suggest.

In recent years, the infamy of Inverness has grown, causing storytellers to once more recount the old tales of its rise and fall. Heedless or ignorant of those stories, a group of settlers built a village within the area encompassed by the four towers. This irreverence eventually prompted a ghost to approach the gates of the village, but even the dire warning of that spirit could not shake the fools from their convictions.

Within a fortnight thereafter, an army of phantoms overran the village of Inverness, setting buildings ablaze with spectral fire and slitting throats with intangible blades.

Background: Inverness Survivor

You were there when the ghost of Salazar Vladistone demanded single combat with Brother Splintershield, the leader of the Inverness settlement. You watched as Brother Splintershield smugly renounced the spirit's claim to the place from inside the boundary of the cleansing ritual he had performed. You had heard some of the stories about the ghost towers of the Nentir Vale, and denying the ghost didn't seem right, with it standing there before you all. Deeply unsettled by the encounter, you left thinking that something bad was going to happen.

You were right. On a cold midwinter night you awoke to screams of terror, and you didn't have to wait long to understand why. Several ghosts of soldiers came through your walls and ordered you to leave. They needn't have bothered—the sight alone of the terrible apparitions had you scurrying for the exit. Some in your village tried to fight, but to no avail. Their pitchforks and swords passed harmlessly through the spirits, while the ghosts' spectral weapons slashed your friends' bodies. Phantom arrows flickering with pale flames ignited real fires in the buildings. Hot blood steamed on icy ground.

You fled with many others, and in the days of travel that followed, more died from starvation, sickness, exhaustion, and cold. With each new corpse in a grave dug shallow in frost-hardened ground, your desire for vengeance grew. You were lucky; you survived the ordeal. But how can you take revenge on the dead? When you got back to civilization, you resolved to find out.

Associated Skill: Arcana, Nature, or Religion.

Feat: Haunted

Your encounter with the spectral undead has haunted you with more than nightmares and terror. Somehow you seem to have acquired a spirit other than your own. You know you're not possessed. The ghost inside seems to be more of a passenger, subtly guiding you with feelings, drawing your attention to peculiar things, and occasionally warning you of danger. It has never spoken, and sometimes it doesn't seem to be there at all, but you know you aren't imagining. You are not mad. You're not.

Prerequisite: 21st level

Benefit: When you make a Perception check or an Insight check, you can roll twice and use either result.

The Lost City

The city lay bejeweled and soft under the sun, wine-drunk and sated by plentiful fields. Those who might call themselves its enemy felt no hate for it, only envy and lust. Its beauty captured even the hearts of some gods, binding them to it so that they would be worshiped by no others. It was called Cynidicea, Jewel of the Desert, and it is still out there somewhere, buried beneath the sands.

Legend has it that Cynidicea's last and greatest king was a wise leader named Alexander. Under his stewardship, the harsh desert became fecund and pliable. The citizens of Cynidicea played beneath the groaning boughs of fruitful orchards, luxuriated in seductive pools of limpid water, danced over the black earth of verdant fields, and slept deeply, knowing that they were loved by their three patron gods.

When King Alexander at last died, his queen, Zenobia, and the other Cynidiceans turned their tear-streaked faces skyward and built a great tomb to bring their beloved leader closer to the gods. A mighty ziggurat, it reached one hundred feet into the air, and atop it stood statues of the three gods of Cynidicea, each holding up its hands, urging Alexander's spirit onward.

As long as Cynidicea's people looked to the heavens, all was well, but in the process of expanding the sacred tomb, they also delved downward into the darkness beneath the ziggurat. There they awoke something terrible, a beast of hunger with an evil mind.

Zargon had come to life.

Despite the swords and spells of great heroes, Zargon could not be killed. The grip of its tentacles crushed the resistance of Cynidicea, and it impaled every member of the royal line upon its horn to crown itself with their blood. Only one thing could save the Cynidiceans now: surrender and sacrifice. The beast vowed that if they were supplicant before Zargon and offered their lives to him, the beast would spare the city and enable it to prosper once more.

Supplicate themselves they did, and Zargon lived up to his vile words, but the city did not truly return to its former glory. The Cynidiceans fell into hedonistic behavior, holding wild feasts celebrated with savage glee. Embarrassed by their bestial behavior when control of their faculties returned, they began to wear masks during such debauchery so that others might not know them. Eventually the masks became the faces others recognized, but by then the Cynidiceans could not even remember feeling shame.

Its fields untended, orchards gone wild, pools stagnant, and walls unguarded, Cynidicea was ripe to fall. The barbarian horde that came to claim it found insensate citizens lying in the street. The barbarians obliged them with a different kind of oblivion and razed the city in their search for wealth.

They stole little, because Cynidicea took its riches to the grave: Most of its citizens had already moved beneath the tomb to serve Zargon in the depths. There the barbarians would not go. They left behind a dead city, and the unfettered desert buried its bones.

The ziggurat is out there somewhere, too great or too terrible for the sands to swallow entirely. No doubt the Cynidiceans' wealth too remains within its bowels, though what is left of the people or of Zargon none can say for certain.

Background: Blessed of Zargon

You were born to die. You have the sign of Zargon upon your brow—a birthmark that represents his horn—and your flesh is his food. You were raised in the mad, masked society of the Lost City, your life degenerated into a haze of animal frenzy and ignorant zealotry. When the time came for you to at last meet your dark god, you felt fear and doubt for the first time. That fear gave you strength—strength enough to disobey and run.

Your flight to the surface is a poorly remembered nightmare. Your head at last cleared when you removed the mask from your pale face and raised your awestruck eyes to the sun for the first time. You wandered in a trackless wasteland for days before a band of desert nomads found you, and they were kind. They took you to a distant city and introduced you to a world you could never have imagined.

Yet in dreams you still see the golden-masked priests and the blood-red eye of the god that marked you as his own. In your head you hear Zargon's terrible voice, and in your heart you feel the bestial urges of the Lost City's perpetual carnival. To your knowledge, no sacrifice has ever escaped Zargon's maw. Surely the Cynidiceans will come for you. Surely you must some day return to the Lost City.

Zargon has marked you as his own.

Associated Skill: Dungeoneering or Endurance.

THE LOST CITY, PAST AND PRESENT

The Lost City saw its first and most famous incarnation in 1982 as a Basic D&D adventure of the same name by Tom Moldvay. The dungeon in the ziggurat was detailed room by room as in a typical module, but the underground city of the Cynidiceans was described in broader terms. The intent was to help DMs create their own adventure in the depths, with some inspiration. And did it ever! For most people who played The Lost City, the dungeon in the ziggurat was only the appetizer to the feast that was ruined Cynidicea.

The city was described in Dragon 315 in "Mystara: The Lost City," and an adventure in Dungeon 142, "Masque of Dreams," took characters to the brink of entering the ziggurat. Zargon and the Cynidiceans received 3rd Edition interpretations in the Elder Evils™ supplement.

Continuing the Story

If you're going to explore the Lost City, you'll need to find it first. Ancient maps roughly place it in the desert (perhaps south of some mountains and east of another still-extant realm), but unless you like desert wandering, you'll need better directions. Perhaps the barbarians who raided the place have passed down knowledge of its location. Legend says they were known as the Heldann, but do they still go by that name? Do they even exist now?

When you set out for the ruins, prepare for a long desert journey as well as the hardships involved in delving into a dungeon beneath the sands. Lots of food and water are of paramount importance, and if you expect to haul out all the treasure of the city, make sure you have a way to bring it home. Consider hiring camels and experienced desert travelers as guides who will wait for your return after you enter the ziggurat.

Once in the dungeon, be especially wary of traps. The Cynidiceans haven't been seen in the sun for hundreds of years, so they clearly didn't intend to leave the ziggurat and have probably warded it against raiders. Undead are also likely in such a place. And, if Zargon still exists, no stories say how the great beast can be killed.

The desert sands hide the lost tomb of a cursed pharaoh

Pyramid of Amun-Re

Those who travel the Desert of Desolation know to avoid the Ragged Man, a thin apparition that wanders the dunes clad only in rags. This creature is the spirit of Pharaoh Amun-Re. From a distance it does not acknowledge any sight or sound, but when someone foolishly draws near, the specter suddenly clutches at that person and moans its message, not releasing the listener until it has finished.

"I am Amun-Re, son of Takosh-Re of the house of Mo-Pelar. That which you see is but my shadow, which has walked these lands for time uncounted in search of mighty heroes of valor, to plead their aid.

"In my time was I Pharaoh of this land now before you. Then, Bakar was a green and beautiful land, blessed by the gods of Heaven Westward with the wondrous spring of Athis, which gave life to our land and nurtured our crops. Yet robbers did raid the tombs of my forefathers and take from them tokens of their passage into the lands of the dead, thus keeping them from their reward after life. I swore that, at all costs, I would not fall prey to their evil deeds.

"So it was that I made mighty and terrible war upon my neighbors, plundering their lands of wealth for my own passage. I did enter a contract with a great mage to work a mighty wonder, and, upon the sweat and blood of my people, I did build a theft-proof tomb.

"My people turned against me with bitter hatred. I not only robbed our borderlands but taxed grievously my own people. They rose up in anger, demanding their gold and gems, their lives and freedom.

"I cursed them, saying, 'By the ruling staff and the Star Gem of Mo-Pelar, I curse you. Threaten not my life, or by them and by the holy name of Osiris, will the stopping of my heart also stop the Spring of Athis from her life-giving flow. As the river slows and dies, so shall your land wither in the wilderness. This do I swear by Osiris's holy name and these implements of my power.'

"From the sea of upraised fists before me, rose one with a spear. The shaft sped from the darkness, and so too that night did the Spring of Athis stop its flow.

"In death, my spirit gleefully approached my pyramid. But Osiris stopped my spirit from entering that tomb, for, said he, 'Your monument to life was to be the benefit you brought to the people under your stewardship, not this edifice of stone. As you looked only to your death in life, so shall you look only to your life in death. I am bound to fulfill your curse, for you have called it down with power in my name. But I do curse you as well, Amun-Re. You shall not enter this tomb where the implements are of your voyage to heaven until some mortal soul does despoil this place, taking your staff of ruling and the Star Gem of Mo-Pelar from your theft-proof tomb.'

ADAM PAQUETTE

"Even have I talked with the wind in hope of help. Uncounted seasons have passed, and my kingdom is not now to be seen in these desert lands. Of it nothing remains save for my tomb, which stands now as then, untouched by time, sands, wind, or any living one. Though many have tried to plunder my wealth, none has succeeded, and I am forbidden passage to the afterlife until one succeeds.

"My wealth is thine if thou can but best that which I have built. Remove both my staff of ruling and the Star Gem from my tomb. So then will you gain great wealth, and so then will you release me. Follow my path to wealth or woe, to thy destiny or thy doom."

After this Amun-Re says nothing else, but he dogs the steps of those who heard his message, pointing to someplace far away through the wasted landscape—a location that was once his home and should be his resting place. Thus do people know that the Pyramid of Amun-Re lies hidden somewhere in the sands, and that his treasures remain untouched.

PYRAMID OF AMUN-RE, PAST AND PRESENT

The adventure that puts characters on the path to the Pyramid of Amun-Re starts with them being accused of a crime they did not commit and threatened with death unless they seek out the fortress of raiders in the desert. But the threat is a little . . . quirky.

"And, whereas those persons did attain entry to said residence and did short-sheet the wizard's bed and do all manner of petty pranks and did leave for the wizard a certain maid for an alleged date with said wizard;

"And, whereas said wizard did return to said residence with yet another wench, whereupon both the first and the second did begin a loud commotion and disturbance the like of which has never before shaken this stately court and upset the wizard to no end . . ."

Published in 1982, Pharaoh was the first Egyptian-themed D&D adventure. It appeared on shelves a year after Raiders of the Lost Ark, but that timing was coincidental. The adventure had been written and self-published a few years earlier by Laura and Tracy Hickman for locals in Utah. Soon after, a business partnership went poorly and, driven into bankruptcy, Tracy sent the modules to TSR, Inc., "so that I could buy shoes for my children." But TSR didn't want just the module—it wanted Tracy as well.

Pharaoh became the first in the Desert of Desolation series, which also included Oasis of the White Palm and Lost Tomb of Martek. The three adventures were collected in 1987 in the Desert of Desolation compilation, at which point the series was placed in the Forgotten Realms setting in the desert of Raurin.

Continuing the Story

If you intend to explore the place, Amun-Re will lead you to his tomb, but first you must encounter his spirit, and then you must follow it for days or weeks to reach your goal. A magical means of producing food and water might serve you better than a dozen camels carrying your gear.

In life Amun-Re acted as a god-king, a mortal member of the pantheon that included Osiris. He was punished by that pantheon, but those gods vanished with the pharaoh's civilization. Perhaps they took new names and still act as deities, or perhaps they died; in either case, they stopped answering the prayers of the people inhabiting the growing wasteland that became the Desert of Desolation. Despite this abandonment, some worshipers still hold the ancient sites holy. Known only as dervishes by outsiders, these people protect ruins throughout the Desert of Desolation. Since Amun-Re still seeks someone to plunder his tomb, the dervishes must be protecting it. From their point of view, the law of the gods is absolute—even after death. Osiris punished Amun-Re, and he must stay punished.

Within the pyramid, you are unlikely to find many living foes except those that are immortal or elemental. No doubt it is trapped, likely in ways meant to seal in thieves as well as lock them out. Prepare for undead monsters, and also consider magical ways to extract yourselves if things start looking grim.

If the pyramid contains a mummy (which seems a good bet) you should be concerned about mummy rot. The infection claims the lives of most victims in just a few nights and is extremely difficult to resist without magical help, so the Cure Disease ritual is essential. If you don't have someone who can reliably perform the ritual from a book, purchase many scrolls. You'll know when someone is infected: Healing, even from divine magic, has less effect than normal.

White Plume Mountain

Search ye far or search ye near,
You'll find no trace of the three
Unless you follow instructions clear,
For the weapons abide with me.

North past forest, farm, and furrow
You must go to the feathered mound
Then down away from the sun you'll burrow–
Forget life, forget light, forget sound.

To rescue Wave, you must do battle
With the Beast in the Boiling Bubble.
Crost cavern vast, where chain-links rattle
Lies Whelm, past waterspouts double.

Blackrazor yet remains to be won
Underneath inverted ziggurat.
That garnered, think not that you're done,
For now you'll find you are caught.

I care not, former owners brave,
What heroes you seek to hire.
Though mighty, I'll make each one my slave
Or send him to the fire.
–K

It happened in one night. Three of the mightiest weapons known to humanity vanished from the vaults and strongboxes of the people who claimed ownership of them. The owners scoured their homes for hidden places where the weapons might have been concealed. Neglectful guards and suspicious servants found their necks on the headman's block or in the grip of nooses. Bounty hunters filled their purses by rounding up known and suspected thieves. When the three owners discovered their shared plight, they took stock of their common foes and sent assassins to take revenge on those individuals. Still, no trace of the weapons—the hammer known as Whelm, the trident called Wave, and the infamous soul-rending sword, Blackrazor—appeared. Only when the owners relented and offered outlandish rewards for the weapons' return did a clue come forth.

Each former owner received a scroll upon which a poetic riddle had been written in a fine hand. It mentioned all three weapons by name and provided tantalizing hints to the weapons' locations. The conceited challenge of the last six lines appeared over the sign of Keraptis, an infamous wizard thought to have died more than a millennium ago. According to bards' tales, Keraptis ruled a kingdom, becoming ever more wicked and cruel as he grew in spellcasting prowess. One day his long-suffering people rose up to depose him. Keraptis was forced to flee but could not find refuge in any land, for he had made many enemies during his time on the throne. At last he fled into a mountain, never again to emerge.

Many treasure-seekers came in answer to the posted rewards to meet with the owners, and the contents of the riddle have thus been spread far and wide—even the last six lines and the signature on the letters, which the owners often sought to hide for fear of frightening off all those who might take up the quest. They needn't have bothered with that precaution. To most people, the "feathered mound" seems to be a reference to White Plume Mountain—and that is terrifying enough.

White Plume Mountain looms over a maze of ogre-haunted moors and marshy valleys crawling with trolls. From its peak spews a great jet of water that spreads out high in the sky and falls as spray upon the mountain's eastern slopes. Smaller vents in the mountain hurl lesser columns of fog into the air, making the peak look "feathered." Rumor has it that Dragotha, the so-called Death Dragon, soars silent and fleshless through these mists on flights from its nearby lair. And Thingizzard, Witch of the Fens, roams the damp canyons of the lowest slopes, her cackle echoing miles from the mountain's base. To make matters worse, White Plume Mountain has long been reputed to be the home of demons and other vile spirits.

Fireside tales told in whispers speak of just one entrance into the mountain other than the crater at its peak: the Wizard's Mouth. It is through this cave that the mountain breathes. A great sucking wind flows into the darkness, and a few faltering heartbeats later, a blast of fog moans out. Assuming that Wizard's Mouth was just a fanciful name for the cave, people have made up all sorts of stories about it, but in fact White Plume Mountain might be the very place to which Keraptis fled 1,300 years ago. Now, it seems, he yet lives and hides in the mountain with the three treasures—or at least, someone wants people to think so. There's only one way to find out the truth.

White Plume Quests

Adventurers can gain far more for braving White Plume Mountain than the rewards posted by the weapon's owners. The following additional quests might provide compelling reasons for venturing into the Wizard's Mouth.

Whelm's Savior: Whelm is a mighty warhammer crafted by dwarves, dedicated to the defeat of their enemies by a passionate warrior of Moradin. Surely it does not belong in the hands of those who locked it away in a vault, much less the wizard who has now

WHITE PLUME MOUNTAIN, PAST AND PRESENT

"White Plume Mountain was written as a sample document to persuade TSR to hire me as a game designer. I just plundered all the dungeons I'd designed over the previous four years, took out the best bits, and cobbled it all together. It worked; TSR hired me, bought the scenario, and published it as a module without changing a word. I'm a little embarrassed to this day by Blackrazor, inasmuch as it's such a blatant rip-off of Elric's Stormbringer; I would not have put it into the scenario if I ever thought it might be published."

– Lawrence Schick, from an interview with James Maliszewski on Grognardia.blogspot.com

White Plume Mountain's odd funhouse mix of elements made it a popular adventure after its publication in 1979, despite the fact that the characters never face Keraptis, the nominal villain of the dungeon. Nor do they learn why he stole the items from their unnamed and mysterious original owners, or why he lured adventurers to come and get them. The assumption, which has proved largely correct over the years, is that once characters get their hands on the three weapons and escape White Plume Mountain, the players don't really care.

Lawrence Schick's original adventure was revised and expanded in 1981, and eighteen years later it received a sequel in the form of Return to White Plume Mountain. In 2005, fans of the original could get a version updated to the 3.5 rules, and since then the elements of White Plume Mountain have made sporadic appearances. The 4th Edition incarnations of Wave and Whelm appeared in The Plane Below and Open Grave, respectively, and the Thrall of Blackrazor was a miniature in the Unhallowed™ set of Dungeons & Dragons Miniatures.

Continuing the Story

Before you run off in pursuit of Wave, Whelm, and Blackrazor, it pays to learn something about their former owners. Just who are these individuals who once claimed them, and how did they come by such legendary items? Which is worth more, the rewards or the weapons? Are the owners likely to pay? If you do not relinquish such treasures, how long will you have to keep looking over your shoulder and watching the shadows for the glint of an assassin's blade?

Stealth is your best asset as you approach the mountain. Even the smoke of a cook fire might draw monsters from miles around in the moors, or pique the curiosity of Dragotha or Thingizzard. Keraptis will know soon enough once you are inside the mountain, after all—if he does yet live. The wizard (or whoever sent the notes to the owners) has some plan, perhaps one that requires heroic individuals to serve as slaves, so you should prepare by obtaining ways to guard your mind against domination.

If Keraptis still exists, he might be a lich, a vampire, or some other sentient undead with spellcasting ability. Arm yourself against such creatures as a precaution, but remember that the wizard could also have living minions of any sort.

stolen it. It belongs with dwarves, and dwarves should reclaim it.

Blackrazor's Promise: Blackrazor is rumored to have many powers, but the one that interests you is its supposed ability to destroy souls. Such hunger might sound evil, but is allowing even greater evils to roam the world any better? With such a sword, you could slay vampires easily and destroy liches without fussing over a phylactery. You might even use the weapon against Keraptis himself. Who knows what other deeds you might accomplish with such a weapon? You might destroy the supposedly immortal Zargon of the Lost City (page 102) or put an end to the legendary Acererak in the Tomb of Horrors (page 108).

Wave's Tyranny: The trident Wave has one purpose: forcing others to acknowledge the primacy of the sea. All the works of elf, dwarf, human, and more are sand castles built on a beach between tides. Soon the sea will reclaim all, and the empires of the deep shall once again reign supreme. Wave might be the key to bringing this apocalypse to pass. It has championed this cause in the name of Melora and also in the name of primordials such as Solkara the Crushing Wave. In the hands of the faithful, Wave deals death or disfigurement to all who refuse to submit. This weapon could do no harm while it was secreted in its owner's vault, but the one who holds it now taunts challengers to come and claim the weapon. Destroying the weapon is the only way to be certain it stays out of the hands of those who would drown the world.

Tomb of Horrors

Day 123
Much has happened, and my heart is sorely heavy; we lost Tiefon yesterday. Today, Grunther lost an arm.

A damnable patch of green slime covered Tiefon head to foot in but an eyeblink. The dwarf didn't even have a chance to scream before he was rendered into so much putrescent plasma. We couldn't even recover his belongings in the mess. Never has a companion been lost to me so suddenly or so completely; we don't even have a body for Sather to restore the soul's connection to.

To compound matters, Grunther the big warrior and Falon's friend stuck his arm where he shouldn't have during one of our backtracks. With a horrible scream he pulled it back, but it was completely gone, cut as if by a razor. . . .

Day 124
Disaster seems to dog our every step now. It seems that with every chamber we win through by using our wits as our guide, we pay the price of another life. It is Aron to whom I allude. The archer was felled by a strange gas, and before we could retrieve him, a huge, magical juggernaut on stone rollers issued forth from a hidden door and rolled over the supine elf, crushing him to a pulp. When the gas cleared and the juggernaut retreated, we recovered the body. Sather tried her best, but the damage was too extensive; Aron's life had permanently fled from him. Sather was heartbroken. I think she and Aron were very close, closer than the rest of us ever realized. We composed the remains as best we could, but Sather sits and stares now, and the rest of us worry about her. We shall rest another day before we attempt to persuade her to venture onward.

Day 127
How arrogant of me to think that with but a hop, skip, and jump I should have delivered into my hands the singular material necessary to move on to the lost city and fortress which I seek. I should have done more research, I should have been more careful, I should not have brought my friends here to die.

–From Journal of the Tomb, by Desatysso

The great mage Desatysso held sway over the mountains, using his wizardry to subjugate the many giants that plodded over their peaks and crawled through

TOMB OF HORRORS, PAST AND PRESENT

Gary Gygax designed Tomb of Horrors for the first Origins Game Fair in 1975. "There were several very expert players in my campaign, and this was meant as yet another challenge to their skill—and the persistence of their theretofore-invincible characters. Specifically, I had in mind foiling Rob Kuntz's PC, Robilar, and Ernie Gygax's PC, Tenser." The adventure quickly became infamous among D&D players for its deadly tricks. It didn't matter how tough or skilled you were; if you weren't cautious and clever, the dungeon got its due.

In 1998, Bruce R. Cordell's Return to the Tomb of Horrors took players back to the legendary dungeon. In it, the adventure picks up many years after Acererak is presumed to have been destroyed by adventurers going through the original Tomb of Horrors adventure. Gary Gygax wrote a foreword for the product, lauding the new adventure as "demanding" and "thrilling."

Acererak and the Tomb of Horrors have reappeared many times in the years since. In the 3rd Edition of the D&D game, Acererak made a notable appearance as a vestige that could be contacted by members of a class known as binders. Statistics for Acererak in 4th Edition appear in Open Grave.

The ultimate 4th Edition expression of the Tomb of Horrors is the Tomb of Horrors book by Ari Marmell and Scott Fitzgerald Gray. This adventure takes its cue from Return to the Tomb of Horrors, building upon the history established by that adventure. Now Skull City is in ruins, and the tomb of Acererak awaits new victims to expose to its horrors, both known and unknown.

Continuing the Story
What can prepare you for the most deadly dungeon of them all? A healthy dose of caution. If something looks like a trap, it is—and it probably contains another trap you didn't anticipate. If you see some mystery and are tempted to reach out and grab it, don't.

Arm yourselves with magical means of exploration and interaction that function at a distance so you won't be in the wrong place at the wrong time. Simple powers such as mage hand can be helpful in exploring the dungeon, and the Hand of Fate ritual can help you choose between options—even if they're both bad. Of course, you shouldn't leave behind mundane means of safe exploration such as a ten-foot pole or a set of thieves' tools. You might want to stash several in a bag of holding or a handy haversack. Make sure to distribute useful items such as potions among the party members, and bring along multiple sources of healing; if the cleric is suddenly disintegrated while carrying all your supplies, it won't be long before everyone else ends up dead. Finally, take common-sense precautions against undead—a likely sort of foe, considering Skull City and Acererak's reputation. Items that grant you resistance to necrotic damage might well be helpful.

The Tomb of Horrors still awaits new prey

EVA WIDERMANN

their caves. When the giants thundered down into the hills and laid waste to all before their avalanche rush, people in the area knew that Desatysso was dead. But some time passed before anyone learned the truth of how he died.

An embittered companion of Desatysso survived the disaster that befell the mage and kept his journal hidden for many years. When the accursed diary was at last freed from her age-gnarled grip, others discovered that Desatysso had gone into the Tomb of Horrors armed with special knowledge of its old master, the lich Acererak.

Who has not heard the legends of the Tomb of Horrors, crypt of a hundred heroes? Who does not know the name of its thrice-dead master, once half-demon and half-human, then a lich, then a demilich, and finally destroyed once and for all on the cusp of achieving mastery over undeath? Who has not feared Skull City, built by necromancers around the Tomb of Horrors, home to as many of the dead as the living? These are the tales everyone hears, but where does the truth lie?

Desatysso ventured into the tomb long after the lich was supposedly vanquished. Although he failed in his quest, others took up his notes and the clues he left behind. By then, Skull City had grown up around the Tomb of Horrors. Constructed by necromancers hungry for scraps of Acererak's knowledge, the city rose in secret. It grew steadily as it attracted first spellcasters, then mercenaries and disreputable merchants, and eventually all manner of people willing to walk the streets with the undead.

Those who followed Desatysso's clues succeeded in infiltrating Skull City and entered the Tomb of Horrors. Although some died, other heroes succeeded in discovering Acererak's plot to put himself in control of all undead. For the third time, Acererak perished. Affairs in Skull City spun out of control with the revelation of Acererak's plot and his failure, and the city broke apart in violent infighting. The Tomb of Horrors once again was an abandoned ruin.

These facts any bard can tell you, but they do not explain why lights once again flicker in the ruins of Skull City at night. Nor can they tell why copies of Desatysso's journal appear on the shelves of booksellers without anyone noticing who put them there. Black-cowled wizards huddle with strangers who seem to sit in their own shadows, and the name Acererak is heard to pass their lips. Has the thrice-dead wizard again risen from his grave? Will the Tomb of Horrors, long thought to have been looted, once again lure bold fools with untold treasures? And if so, what new devilry has Acererak dreamed up?

Backgrounds and Feats

Dragon 371 presents a wealth of material for connecting your character to the Tomb of Horrors, in an article called "Legacy of Acererak." In it you'll find backgrounds and feats that you can use to flesh out your character's history and his or her affiliation with the tomb, Skull City, or the strange cabal of Acererak worshipers known as the Bleak Academy.

Temple of Elemental Evil

Sometimes they thundered in like a storm, their horses churning roads into slurries of sword-spilt blood. Sometimes they crept among the people, their corruption undetected and as contagious as plague. When they came to a village seeking wealth or goods, none could resist, nor hope. When they called a name or pointed someone out, people had to choose: Surrender, and thereby gain a few more days' breath; or resist, which meant swift death for the lucky and days of torture before execution for the rest.

Unknown multitudes met their doom in the Temple of Elemental Evil. Children went to the fire. Men were drowned. Women were sacrificed to blackest evil. If you were chosen to be a slave, those fates hung over you for however long you pleased your masters, be they the ochre-robed priests or the thugs who served them.

The Cult of the Elder Elemental Eye spared no one. Nobles and peasants alike saw their homes burned, families murdered, and friends taken. The only defense was conversion—but mere words would not suffice. To protect yourself, you had to join in the villainy by robbing neighbors and enslaving friends. If you converted and your relatives did not, as a dreadful test of your faith you had to bring them forward for sacrifice.

Such evil could not long be tolerated by the neighbors of the temple, and so armies assembled to fight the cult and destroy its works. Yet the cultists had more than mortal forces: Elemental beings and demonic creatures fought alongside them.

Their losses were terrible, but the forces of good ultimately triumphed. With magic and might, the armies tore down the walls guarding the Temple of Elemental Evil and drove back its greatest defender, a demon of rot and ruin. This creature, unable to be slain, was bound in the dungeons below the temple and sealed in with magic. All the forces involved signed an accord never to open the place again—despite the wealth of a nation having been locked away with the demon. With the cult vanquished and its demonic leader imprisoned, the armies of good left to bind their wounds and bury their dead.

As the lands around the temple recovered from their enslavement and the war for their freedom, the defeat of the temple seemed to invigorate the realm. Crops grew more fruitful and animals fatter. Wells long thought putrid or dry filled with clear water. People did not forget the horrors, but they could reflect upon them as something from the past.

That was many years ago. Now, bandits roam the roads and mercenaries demand money to protect travelers and villages, but the difference between them is sometimes just a mask. People once again fear their neighbors. And the quiet sounds in the shadows could be ochre robes rustling.

Background: Cult Survivor

You were young when the Cult of the Elder Elemental Eye held sway over all the surrounding lands, but not too young to remember. How could you forget? Your parents were taken during the last days before the war.

When the armies of the surrounding lands rode through the streets of your village, pennants flying as they drove your oppressors before them, you were swept up in their wake and ready to spill blood. But your uncle held you back. He took the dagger from your hand and bade you stay still. You were not ready to fight, and he would not allow you to die so soon after you came into his care.

Your uncle was a simple man of the fields and market, and he would have stayed as well, but your bravery shamed him. Bearing your father's sword and your mother's shield, he joined the army to fight the cult. Word of victory returned, but your uncle did not. Nor did you ever see your parents again.

Your aunt raised you and sought to protect you from the world. She thought that if she could keep you away from violence and hide from you the truth about the cult and the temple, you might somehow avoid being hurt by such things. But her efforts only inflamed your desire to know more and to be ready for the next battle. You often slipped away to stand in the shadow of the temple, searching through the weeds and rubble of the battlefield for your parents' sword and shield. You wonder if your mother and father are still alive, slaves locked behind the temple's doors.

Now bandits again rove the roads, and the village elders whisper that the old sense of terror has returned. If the cult is back, the temple is the source—you're sure of that. And this time you're ready to fight.

Associated Skill: Arcana, Athletics, or Religion.

Background: Former Cult Sympathizer

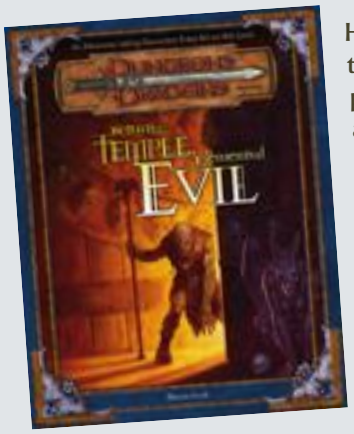
You have done terrible things, acts that still have you waking in a cold sweat more than a decade later. You had killed before and you have killed since, but you remember everything about each person you were forced to execute or enslave for the cult: the color of frightened eyes, the trails traced by tears on upturned faces, brave last words, heart-wrenching pleas and screams, even the sudden warmth of spit on your face.

TEMPLE OF ELEMENTAL EVIL, PAST AND PRESENT

In 1979, TSR Inc. published a slim adventure entitled The Village of Hommlet, which detailed a small farming village, its inhabitants, and a nearby moat house populated by evil creatures. This adventure was originally intended as the first part of a larger series culminating in the exploration of the newly repopulated Temple of Elemental Evil. The temple didn't see print for six long years, until it was presented as part of a 128-page "superadventure" named The Temple of Elemental Evil. This book included a chapter that updated and revised The Village of Hommlet, gathering the entire story line between two covers.



Over the years, Hommlet and the temple have reappeared in a novel, a computer game, and even another superadventure: Return to the Temple of Elemental Evil (published in 2001 and set years after the original). The 4th Edition of the D&D game refers to the Temple of Elemental Evil many times, including two different adventures that take characters back to Hommlet and its moat house: one created for the Origins Game Fair in 2008 and the other as a DM reward for RPGA™ players. Zuggtmoy, the demonic ultimate villain of the Temple of Elemental Evil, appears with 4th Edition statistics in the Demonomicon™ supplement, and the Cult of the Elder Elemental Eye is discussed in The Plane Below™ and Heroes of the Elemental Chaos™.

Continuing the Story

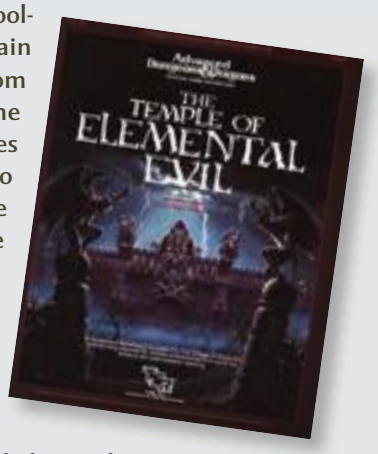
Stories of the Temple of Elemental Evil that one can hear today describe all sorts of horrors working on behalf of the cultists: elementals, undead, demons, oozes, and more. Preparing for any one kind of foe would thus be foolish, but you can gain some advantage from this knowledge. One reason that the forces of good were able to defeat the Cult of the Elder Elemental Eye was that the cultists' forces were divided among the four basic elements, as well as another faction loyal to the demon. This division led to rivalry and suspicion among the groups, allowing subterfuge to set one element against another or against those loyal to the demon. Even if such divisions don't exist within the temple today, you might open up old wounds and thus inflame your enemies' latent hate for one another.



Whatever foes you might face, you can at least prepare for the environments in the dungeons. An area devoted to elemental fire will obviously be hot, so take along precautions such as potions of fire resistance. Similarly, the likely presence of water in an area suggests the efficacy of a Water Breathing ritual. The ability to fly or a feather fall effect could be useful in an airy dungeon. And the magical ability to dig quickly or meld into stone could be invaluable in a place that highlights elemental earth.

You wonder every day if you should have been as courageous as they were—if you should have rejected the Cult of the Elder Elemental Eye and died in the terrible dungeons beneath the temple. Is life worth living with so much blood on your hands? Can you even consider your desperate existence a life? When you encounter anyone new, you search your memory, frantically hoping that the face is not one you recognize. At the same time, something inside you burns to be called out for your crimes. At least then the torment might finally end.

Yet each time you consider giving in, you find the strength to stay alive and stay hidden. You're not really strong, though—you're just afraid. What else would you be willing to do to avoid death? If the time again comes when you must choose between what is right and what is safe, will you add more faces to the host that haunts you, or will you accept their judgment in the afterlife?

Associated Skill: Bluff, Insight, or Intimidate.

Gates of Firestorm Peak

The Firefestival might be canceled this year, and at the worst possible time. This month-long annual celebration, held in the village of Longbridge, has become famous over the years. During this festival, people try to outdo one another with their enthusiasm for firebrand battles, fireworks, and candle displays. Of course, no celebration can be complete without food and drink, and the Firefestival is when the locals break out their fire brandy, smoked ales, and spiciest foods. Even sweet treats set the mouth aflame, with candied hot peppers and cinnamon delights prepared specially for the occasion. All this activity occurs in the shadow of the famous Firestorm Peak, the mountain that the festival celebrates.

Firestorm Peak has two claims to fame. Once every twenty-seven years, flames burn across its highest reaches, called down from the sky by an unknown magic and raging afterward for a month regardless of the weather. The mountain also hides some secret behind huge, rune-encrusted doors of glass as hard as steel, and nothing can lever them open or break the mountain around them. They open by themselves when the fires burn, and close again as the flames die out twenty-eight days later.

Nearly twenty-seven years have passed since the last appearance of the firestorm. That means that this year the comet called the Dragon's Tear will again appear in the sky, its red tail arcing over the mountaintop, and Firestorm Peak will explode anew with supernatural flames and send them roaring toward the stars. Anticipation and enthusiasm for this event began to build more than a decade ago, and this year should have seen the biggest and best Firefestival ever—but that won't happen.

People in nearby towns have decided not to go to Longbridge this year. They believe the village is cursed, and the people of Longbridge grudgingly agree. For some time now, cows' milk has been coming out sour. Chickens, when they lay at all, produce only soft-shelled eggs filled with blood. Deer have turned upon their hunters and gored them to death. Stories tell of long-docile animals turned fiendish overnight, driving some townsfolk to drown their pets. Even people have been affected: Tension has led to short tempers and frequent fights, and manic violence erupts without any obvious cause. The gallows in Longbridge had to be expanded to keep up with the number of convicted criminals, but the purpling bodies swaying there have served as little deterrent. Things just seem to be getting worse.

As the time of the Firefestival draws nearer, people watch the skies for the first crimson hint of the Dragon's Tear. Will it bring weal or woe? Can the sight of fire on the mountain bring back some hope to Longbridge, or will the flames be the signal for some new villainy to begin?

GATES OF FIRESTORM PEAK, PAST AND PRESENT

The Gates of Firestorm Peak, by Bruce R. Cordell, hasn't been revisited throughout the history of the game as have other infamous dungeons. It appeared just once, as a 2nd Edition AD&D® adventure. Yet that adventure had an enormous impact on the D&D game, for it was the birthplace of the Far Realm. Before that time, D&D had no concept of a plane of alien geometry and maddening entities, but today the Far Realm has been firmly established in the cosmology of the game.

Continuing the Story

What dangers lurk within the mountain today none can say, but the runes on the gates and their construction hint at eladrin origin. Eladrin do not typically build tunnel complexes, so the location must have been meant to contain a dark secret or imprison something foul. The link between the Dragon's Tear comet and the opening of the gates suggests star pact magic, an idea supported by the fact that the last person known to have entered Firestorm Peak was a warlock called Madreus (known as "the butcher of Havenburg" for dark deeds done in that city). Perhaps the Dragon's Tear is an unrecognized member of the host of weird constellations named in the Revelations of Melech (described in "Wish upon a Star" in Dragon 366), thus linking it to the Far Realm.

Warlock magic can be difficult to defend against, but star pact magic tends to deal radiant, cold, or psychic damage. If beings of the Far Realm are involved, having protection against psychic damage would be prudent. Also, since the strange powers of warlocks and Far Realm beings often control the minds of their targets or otherwise affect their victims repeatedly, having ways to gain extra saving throws could be important.

Ice Iron

The glyph-covered gates of Firestorm Peak are made of nephelium, also known as "ice iron." This unusual metal has the properties of iron when forged, but like gold it does not rust and, amazingly, it is as transparent as glass. For years people have collected small amounts of ice iron from streams around Firestorm Peak, particularly from the Quickstep River that flows through Longbridge. Indeed, most of the communities on the river arose from the presence of prospectors panning for flecks of the precious metal in the shallowest spots.

For many years, ice iron made this area rich. The metal was impossible to obtain by mining—no one could see any trace of it in the surrounding rock—and panning for it was far more difficult than panning for gold, since it is nearly invisible in water. These factors made ice iron fabulously rare, and it fetched twice the value of gold by weight. Those who purchased it were typically wealthy lords who used the metal for small windows in their fortresses. Today the Quickstep River has been panned out, and ice iron is almost never found in its bed. If any more of the stuff exists, it might lie beyond the gates of Firestorm Peak—and in fact, the gates themselves are made of it. So far, though, the gates have proven impervious to any attempt to break them or free them from the surrounding rock, and none who have passed beyond when they opened during the firestorm have ever returned.

Background: Longbridge Local

You grew up in Longbridge during the last days of the ice iron rush and can remember running back and forth across the river, pounding the boards of the Long Bridge with your tiny feet, rushing to bring grains of the clear metal to the assayer. One day, in your haste to "quick step across the Quickstep" (as your father used to say), you dropped the bag of hard-won metal and watched it plunge into the river through a gap in the bridge. No punishment from your parents could match the terror and guilt you felt as you saw your family's fortune slip away.

Now the future of your family and many others in Longbridge is more uncertain than ever. The ice iron rush is over, and the curse that besets the village seems like it will never end. You've seen good people—even close friends you grew up with—become desperate, go bad, and finally swing from the gallows. The town was a happier place when the metal was here. But no amount of panning in the river or digging in the hills has turned up even a flake of ice iron for as long as the curse has been active.

Yet the gates of Firestorm Peak are made of the stuff. Clearly, that fact is significant, but in exactly what way remains to be determined. You've made a study of all the legends and history, so you know the gates are invulnerable when they're shut. But what about when they're open? Even if they are still invulnerable, there could be more ice iron inside the mountain. You know one sure way to find out.

Associated Skill: Arcana or History.

The path ahead is unmistakable . . . when the only other way to go is straight down

STEPHEN TAPPIN

Dungeoneers' Tools

Adventurers who plumb the depths need to understand that, unlike an aboveground expedition, a dungeon delve promises little hope of replenishing or resupplying. Subterranean adventurers must rely only on what they bring with them, which makes planning—and packing—gear for the trip as important as keeping one's weapons in fighting shape.

In addition to the core rulebooks, the Mordenkainen's Magnificent Emporium supplement includes an extensive collection of adventuring gear and alchemical items, which is augmented by the entries here.

Adventuring Gear

A piece of equipment doesn't need to be a magic item to be useful. The most mundane tool can be a lifesaver in the right situation.

ADVENTURING GEAR

| Item | Price | Weight |
|---|---|---|
| Artisan's tools | 5 gp | 5 lb. |
| Delver's kit | 40 gp | 28 lb. |
| Crowbar | 2 gp | 4 lb. |
| Iron spikes (10) | 1 gp | 5 lb. |
| Manacles, iron | 10 gp | 2 lb. |
| Miner's helmet | 10 gp | 3 lb. |
| Sacks (2) | 1 gp | 1 lb. |
| Surveyor's gear | 15 gp | 5 lb. |
| Ten-foot pole | 1 gp | 8 lb. |
| Drill | 10 gp | 2 lb. |
| Flotation bladder | 2 gp | 1 lb. |
| Hacksaw | 5 gp | 1 lb. |
| Lantern, bull's-eye | 12 gp | 2 lb. |
| Listening cone | 8 sp | 1 lb. |
| Mirror | 10 gp | 1 lb. |
| Rubbing kit | 5 gp | 1 lb. |
| Ruby lenses | 25 gp | 3 lb. |
| Shovel | 2 gp | 8 lb. |
| Tongs | 3 gp | 2 lb. |
| Vial bandolier | 6 gp | 1 lb. |

Artisan's Tools: This collection of simple hand tools, nails, and a measuring stick is often seen in the home of a city-dwelling crafter, but adventurers would do well to take a set of these tools along. With them you can perform minor repairs, fashion basic wooden or metal objects, or dismantle simple locks.

Delver's Kit: This kit includes a crowbar, ten iron spikes, iron manacles, a miner's helmet, two sacks, surveyor's gear, and a ten-foot pole.

Crowbar: Wielding this metal pry bar gives you a +2 bonus to Strength checks to break open locked doors or containers.

Miner's Helmet: You can attach a lantern, a sunrod, or some other light source to the forehead reflector of this headgear to provide hands-free illumination.

Iron Manacles: When you put these shackles on a helpless or otherwise incapacitated creature, that creature is restrained until it escapes or is freed. The Acrobatics check to escape from these restraints is against a hard DC of the creature's level.

The Strength check to break the manacles is against a DC that depends on the quality of the manacles, whether iron (DC 24) or adamantine (DC 31).

Iron Spikes: Hammering one of these blunt, wide metal wedges between a door and its frame requires a standard action and adds 5 to the DC of checks to open the door. If nothing but a spike is holding a door shut, the base DC to open it is 15. Spiking a door is noisy; each time you drive in a spike, creatures within 20 squares can make a Perception check with a +5 bonus to hear you.

Sack: This sturdy burlap sack holds up to 50 pounds and has a volume of 1½ cubic feet.

Surveyor's Gear: With this plumb line, measuring chain with pins, and slate for recording notes, you gain a +2 bonus to Perception checks to search for secret doors or hidden rooms, but using the gear takes at least 5 minutes.

Ten-Foot Pole: Prodding dangerous-looking things with a ten-foot pole lets you trigger many traps from the safety of 2 squares away.

Drill: This handheld tool comes with six tough metal bits. A drill can bore a hole through wood, stone, and even some metals with enough time and effort. A typical bit can drill through 6 inches of stone or 2 inches of iron (a process requiring up to 6 hours) before it breaks or its cutting power is exhausted. Each additional set of bits costs another 10 gp.

Flotation Bladder: The risk of drowning in a cold underground lake leads some adventurers to carry these containers of cured animal hide. A character can blow into a flotation bladder to inflate it and then hang onto it to keep his or her head above water. If you're using a flotation bladder, failing an Athletics check to swim by 5 or more leaves you treading water instead of sinking.

Hacksaw: This thin-bladed saw can cut through tough material, even metal, although doing so can be quite slow. Harder materials dull the blade quickly, so a hacksaw is best used to cut thin or small objects. A single hacksaw blade can cut through a 1-inch-thick piece of iron (or larger objects of softer materials, at the DM's discretion) in up to 2 hours, before it breaks or its cutting power is exhausted. Each additional blade costs another 5 gp.

USING EQUIPMENT EFFECTIVELY

Gear is good. If a piece of equipment wasn't important for some reason already, you wouldn't bother to bring it along. That said, you can get more out of your tools by being both creative and systematic in your thinking about them.

Innovate: Many kinds of gear are so specialized that they don't lend themselves to being used in new ways, but many others have versatility that's waiting to be put to use. Need a temporary container for a small amount of liquid? Close off one end of your listening cone and fill it up. Think about what's included in the surveyor's gear that comes with a delver's kit, not just in terms of the bonus to Perception checks but with an eye toward other uses for those chains and that piece of slate. Your DM might not give you a bonus or some other game benefit every time you try to use a tool in a nonstandard way, but there are other ways to reward this sort of creativity.

Organize: Being organized is more than a matter of lugging around as much gear as you can carry. The more different kinds of gear you have, the more you need to care about how you store each item on your person or transport it—in case you need something in a hurry. One tip: Hang your crowbar from your belt rather than stowing it in your pack. That way, when something relieves you of your weapon, you have an impromptu club close at hand.

Lantern, Bull's-Eye: A bull's-eye lantern is equipped with a lens that enables it to project a beam of bright light 2 squares wide out to 10 squares. This way, you can illuminate long hallways without lighting up the whole area.

Listening Cone: Put the mouth of this cone of pressed iron against a flat surface and place your ear against its flattened tip to amplify the sounds you might hear beyond. This item grants a +2 bonus to Perception checks to listen through doors and walls.

Mirror: The finest mirrors are made of silvered glass and are prohibitively costly, so most adventurers favor these less expensive handheld disks of polished metal. A mirror can let you safely look around corners without being seen, avoid the direct gaze of a medusa, or reflect light to signal distant allies (or to lure enemies).

Rubbing Kit: The materials in this scroll case enable you to transfer an image of ancient runes or carvings onto a different surface to be deciphered later. The case contains several thin sheets of parchment and a stick of soft charcoal. After placing a piece of parchment over the surface to be copied, rub the charcoal against it while applying gentle pressure. With a standard action, you can make a rubbing covering 1 square foot. One kit contains enough material for ten such rubbings.

The right tools make dungeoneering quicker and safer

ERIC BELISLE

Ruby Lenses: These red glass inserts let you reduce a lantern's brightness without limiting the area it illuminates. The red glow is easier on the eyes, and it doesn't attract as much attention as the bright light of an unfiltered flame. The light that passes through a ruby lens is dim, but its radius is unchanged.

Shovel: With this sturdy tool you can dig through deep, dense, or unappetizing material to locate treasure (or bury your hard-won prizes for security), scoop up small objects that might be dangerous or unpleasant to handle, or clobber an enemy in a pinch.

Tongs: These foot-long metal pincers are similar to those used in smithies. With them, you can manipulate objects at times when using your hands is too risky, such as when you're reaching into a scalding brazier, an unknown liquid, or a dark hole.

Vial Bandolier: Stitched onto this well-crafted leather shoulder harness are ten padded holsters that can hold doses of potions, poisons, and elixirs, ensuring easy access while cushioning them against accidental breakage.

Alchemical Items

Dungeoneers have developed many recipes for items to assist them in their expeditions. Traded around taverns or sold in outfitter's shops, these alchemical items give explorers unique advantages in tricky situations.

Reading the Table

The alchemical formulas used to create the items in this section have three common characteristics, all summarized on the table.

Key Skills: You must have training in at least one of the indicated skills to use a particular formula.

Market Price: What you pay to purchase the formula (which can also be thought of as the recipe).

Creation Time: How long it takes to produce one dose or application of the alchemical item.

Item Categories

Each alchemical item in this section has a category that defines how the item is used or its general effect.

Oil: Oils are applied to other objects (typically weapons), granting those objects temporary properties or powers.

Volatile: An item of this category explodes or expands when shattered or broken, often dealing damage by the creation of a specific type of energy, such as acid, cold, fire, or lightning.

Poison: A poison is a toxin that hampers or harms a creature.

Other: Some items create miscellaneous effects that don't fall into one of the above categories. These have no designation other than "Alchemical Item."

Item Descriptions

For convenience, the formula cost of each of the alchemical items in this section is repeated in its statistics block. The other gold piece values represent the cost of the components (or ingredients) needed to create the substance for a single application.

Aboleth Slime

This revolting goo is an alchemical concentration of the aberrant poisons in aboleths' mucus, which must be harvested from the foul pools in which the creatures dwell. Splashing aboleth slime over a living creature brings it spasms of pain as its form twists uncontrollably. The process of collecting the disgusting stuff is exceedingly hazardous, making this formula both hard to find and very expensive.

Aboleth Slime Level 15+ Uncommon

This cloudy sludge racks your enemy's body with pain and unwelcome transformation.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 15 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 25 | 25,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 30 | 125,000 gp |

Alchemical Item: Poison Formula Cost: 4,500 gp
Key Skill: Arcana, Dungeoneering, or Nature Time: 1 hour

ALCHEMICAL FORMULAS

| Name | Key Skills | Market Price | Creation Time |
|---|---|---|---|
| Aboleth slime | Arcana, Dungeoneering, Nature | 4,500 gp | 1 hour |
| Longbreath | Healing, Nature | 160 gp | 30 minutes |
| Pacification dust | Dungeoneering, Nature | 200 gp | 30 minutes |
| Phantom ink | Arcana, Dungeoneering, Thievery | 70 gp | 30 minutes |
| Stone eater | Arcana, Dungeoneering, Thievery | 700 gp | 1 hour |
| Violet phosphor | Arcana, Nature | 70 gp | 30 minutes |

Attack Power (Polymorph) ✦ Consumable (Standard Action)
Attack: Ranged 5/10 (one creature); the item's level + 3 vs. Fortitude
Hit: The target takes ongoing 10 damage and is weakened (save ends both).
Level 25 or 30: Ongoing 15 damage.
Effect: The target gains the aberrant origin until the end of the encounter.

Longbreath

Druids and other priests of nature gods capture fresh air in skins or large bottles and infuse it with healing vapors. A deep inhalation from this container not only provides air but also invigorates the lungs to enable them to retain it longer.

Longbreath — Level 4+ Common

The refreshing air inside this container fills your lungs far more fully than its volume would suggest.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | 40 gp | Lvl 24 | 21,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | 800 gp | | |

Alchemical Item — Formula Cost: 160 gp
Key Skill: Healing or Nature — Time: 30 min.
Utility Power ✦ Consumable (Minor Action)
Effect: You inhale the contents of the container. Until the start of your next short or extended rest, you gain a +5 item bonus to Endurance checks to avoid suffocation.
Level 14: +7 item bonus.
Level 24: +10 item bonus.

Pacification Dust

Svirfneblin harvest spores from nearby myconid colonies to create this dust. Like the creatures it comes from, it momentarily befuddles the senses of those it touches.

Pacification Dust — Level 5+ Rare

This powder of fungal spores renders those caught in it sluggish.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | 50 gp | Lvl 20 | 5,000 gp |
| Lvl 10 | 200 gp | Lvl 25 | 25,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 30 | 125,000 gp |

Alchemical Item: Poison — Formula Cost: 200 gp
Key Skill: Dungeoneering or Nature — Time: 30 min.
Attack Power (Poison) ✦ Consumable (Standard Action)
Attack: Area burst 1 within 10 (creatures in the burst); the item's level + 3 vs. Fortitude
Hit: The target cannot take a standard action until the end of your next turn.
Aftereffect: The target is slowed until the end of its next turn.
Level 25 or 30: The duration of both the hit and the aftereffect is instead (save ends).

Phantom Ink

This paste is made from a variety of Underdark mushroom known as indigo svirf. When exposed to torchlight or another source of fire, it glows dimly but is not visible to creatures that see only by means of darkvision. Explorers make use of phantom ink to leave messages or directions in underground areas that are frequented by drow or other enemies that have darkvision. One application is enough for a message one to two sentences long.

Phantom Ink — Level 2 Common

The dark fluid within this small ceramic bottle glows dimly in torchlight.

Lvl 2 — 25 gp
Alchemical Item: Oil — Formula Cost: 70 gp
Key Skill: Arcana, Dungeoneering, or Thievery — Time: 30 min.
Utility Power ✦ Consumable (Standard Action)
Effect: You apply the ink to an area no larger than 5 square feet on a solid object. That area emits dim light that is visible only in lamplight, torchlight, or some other light shed by an open flame. The light lasts 24 hours.

Stone Eater

This potent but specialized acid is derived from the digestive juices of purple worms. The substance must be harvested minutes after the beast's passage through an area, before it dries to a useless crust. The alchemical mixture dissolves minerals in a matter of minutes. A typical jar contains enough substance to consume a Medium-sized stone object.

Stone Eater — Level 10+ Common

Pouring the contents of this jar onto stone causes the material to begin dissolving.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 10 | 200 gp | Lvl 20 | 5,000 gp |

Alchemical Item: Volatile — Formula Cost: 700 gp
Key Skill: Arcana, Dungeoneering, or Thievery — Time: 1 hour
Utility Power (Acid) ✦ Consumable (Standard Action)
Effect: You apply the stone eater to an unattended, nonmagical stone object or 1 square of a stone wall or floor. After 5 minutes, that object takes 40 acid damage.
Level 20: 80 acid damage.

Violet Phosphor

Resourceful Underdark explorers extract the luminous compounds from subterranean fungi to create this substance. When shaken, the liquid in this glass vial glows with a long-lasting light.

Violet Phosphor — Level 1 Common

Vigorously agitating this small, transparent vial causes the liquid inside to emit a soft purple glow.

Lvl 1 — 20 gp
Alchemical Item — Formula Cost: 70 gp
Key Skill: Arcana or Nature — Time: 30 min.
Utility Power ✦ Consumable (Minor Action)
Effect: You shake the container, and it sheds bright light in a 5-square radius. The light lasts up to 4 hours.

CHAPTER 3

Master of the Dungeon

When Dungeons & Dragons started, it used "referee" (a term originating with the war games that were the ancestors of roleplaying games) to refer to what we now call the Dungeon Master. Today, many roleplaying games use words such as "narrator," "director," or "storyteller" to indicate how the rules of narrative shape the flow of the game as opposed to the rules of a simulated world.

So, should you be a heartless referee enforcing the rules of a cruel world? Or are you a flexible storyteller, softening the game's threat to let the heroes' exploits reach a dramatically satisfying ending?

Either. Or both. Plenty of old-school dungeons reinforced the cold, hard facts of an adventurer's life. But the game has always put fun at the table above adherence to the rules. Neither kind of play is right or wrong, as long as everybody's on the same page.

Your group might gravitate toward either extreme, or fall somewhere in the middle. Have a discussion regarding what style of play everyone favors. It's okay to run a no-holds-barred meat grinder if that's what the players expect. The players won't have much fun, though, if you give them no warning before your dungeon chews up characters into which they have poured significant time and effort. As always, you should adjust your DMing style to conform to your players' expectations.

Nasty in Your Narrative: The most story-focused games of deep roleplaying, full of sessions when "we never rolled the dice once," can still have a touch of ruthlessness. Think of when a character you loved in a movie, a book, or a TV series died abruptly. Done right, such a moment can be riveting and meaningful. Done wrong, it is an exercise in hair-pulling frustration. You should always feel free to let the chips fall where they may—death can be random and sudden—but avoid arbitrary affronts to the reality of the game. Falling in lava is unfortunate, but a goblin's arrow mysteriously dealing four times its normal damage is just unfair.

Compassion on the Crawl: In like fashion, a hard-core dungeon crawl can be reshaped by an unexpected injection of old-fashioned drama. When a party accustomed to fighting ogres and spotting killer traps comes upon a lost child in a dungeon, the players might expect ambush or deceit. But if the child really is a victim of circumstance, how will the adventurers handle it? Can a hardened, pragmatic crew feel sympathy for an innocent and decide to escort that individual to safety, even if they know that doing so might put them in danger?

Advice and Tools

This chapter examines a number of ways to craft an interesting dungeon—both in the construction and in the playing.

Involving the Characters: Delving through a dungeon's dank tunnels needs to be meaningful and interesting. If a character has a stake in what's happening, his or her player will be more immersed in what's going on. This section shows how to connect the characters' concerns to what's happening underground, in the form of adventure seeds for each of the themes in Chapter 1. It continues with some broad-based advice on how to get the characters interacting with the environment through exploration and puzzle solving.

Creating an Underdark Adventure: The scope and variety of the Underdark distinguish this underground realm from other types of dungeons. The advice in this section is about capturing the feel of traveling in the Underdark, and fitting your plots and battles to this environment. You can use the "An Underdark Trek" skill challenge to play out the trials the heroes must face as they traverse its caverns.

Dungeon Makers: Dwarves and minotaurs don't build their underground lairs the same way. You can add creature flavor to your dungeons based on who or what made them. This section explores the features typically found in the dungeons of various races and groups, with descriptions of specific features you can build on when you design your own work.

Special Rewards: This section describes scrolls of power, which enable characters to wield the magic of the gods with memorable spells such as power word kill and wish. It also includes a few special companions the adventurers might encounter in the dungeon.

RALPH HORSLEY

Involving the Characters

When the adventurers take their first steps into the dungeon, you need ways to keep them moving forward. This section discusses how to customize your dungeon to draw both characters and players deeper into the story of your adventure.

Themes and Adventure Hooks

A player's choice of theme and background says a great deal about his or her character's goals and motivations—sometimes more so than race or class. A theme shouts at the DM, "This is what my character wants to care about in our adventures!"

A good adventure should feature multiple ways to engage the players on this level. For example, an adventure that starts by calling out a treasure hunter to find priceless, forbidden books in an abandoned Underdark library offers many options to involve other characters. An escaped thrall might learn that mind flayers have occupied the library and are close to deciphering the books. If the party prevents this event by destroying the books, the Underdark envoy can lead an effort to prevent feuding drow houses from going to war over the missing tomes.

Several examples of incorporating story hooks into adventures are presented here, using the themes and sample characters from chapter 1. Each of the adventure hooks is classified in one or two of the following categories, which you can consider when devising your own theme and background connections.

Announcement The simplest approach to incorporating adventure hooks is to plant monsters, locations, or plot devices that directly speak to one or more characters, and to be blatant about it. This method is an easy way to get the adventure moving.

Foreshadowing Take a plot that is important to the adventure as a whole and link clues regarding that plot to the backstory of one of the characters. When those clues come up in the adventure, only that player will know their significance.

Misdirection Place red herrings that appear to tie to a character's theme, but that eventually lead to dead ends or more complicated truths. Even if the players can see through your deception, they might enjoy playing out the consequences of this adventure hook as though their characters were none the wiser.

Newcomer Introduce a character, an organization, a monster, an ideology, or a plot element that has certain aspects in common with one of the adventurers, but opposes that character's goals in some way. A newcomer might serve as a guide, be in a rival group seeking the same goal as the party, or be revealed as a figure from an adventurer's past that he or she must reluctantly solicit to gain crucial information.

Tough Choice Put a character in a situation where following the behavior suggested by his or her theme creates tension with that character's moral code, or puts the party in a dangerous situation.

Improvising Theme Connections

It happens to every DM. A question comes up regarding something important and you haven't prepared an answer. "If this dwarf became king last month, what happened to the old king?" "Wait, didn't you say the soil's soft and muddy? Why didn't we find the killer's tracks?"

If you're put on the spot, you can look to the theme or background of the character for answers. The player asking the questions has demonstrated that he or she cares about the topic, so give that character a chance to pursue it.

- A bloodsworn might ask if the old king died or left under suspicious circumstances. Perhaps her quarry, has some sort of connection to the event.
- If a deep delver inquires about a lack of tracks, you might decide that the culprit is a creature that has earth glide (such as many earth elemental beings).
- On the other hand, if a trapsmith wants to know why there were no footprints, you could say that the killer used a trapped rune with a delay before its effect triggered, then left before the rain started.
- An escaped thrall who wants to know what happened to the old king might gain a weird insight or experience a vision that suggests he is now a prisoner of illithids.
- If the treasure hunter asked what happened to the king, you might instead decide that he abdicated to search for a fabled lost dwarven hoard.
- An Underdark envoy might care to parley with the new king. Perhaps he wants to learn of the former king's fate, and he suspects a nearby drow city is involved.
- An Underdark outcast might hope that the change in rulership will allow him to restore contact with his former life. Perhaps the new ruler requires him to pass a test that demonstrates his worthiness.

Bloodsworn

Hooking a bloodsworn into an adventure might seem easy—all you need to do is include his or her hated enemy. But you can't have a 3rd-level party face off against a drow outpost or a 12th-level pack of monsters. Instead, create some hooks that establish connections to the enemy without requiring the foe to appear.

Relics and secondary characters encountered during an adventure might reveal the secret plots of an adversary. Alternatively, a bloodsworn hero might run into other groups that share his or her enmity. Such groups might eventually become allies—or they could be rivals, fighting to see who is more worthy to take on their hated foe.

The tough choice technique can be used to great effect with a bloodsworn character. Putting one in a situation in which the party needs help from the enemy, or where the consequences of acting against the enemy could be dire, can push the character's beliefs to the limit. Use this device sparingly, however, so that the bloodsworn's player doesn't feel as though his or her theme is irrelevant.

Rook in the Corner (Announcement): In a series of towns they travel through, the adventurers see wanted posters showing different names but all bearing the likeness of a drow named Rook. The posters enumerate no crimes he has committed—being a drow is enough. Eventually, a group of well-armed guards informs them that Rook was last seen going into a deep cave—one they are forbidden to enter—that connects to the Underdark.

To Topple an Enclave (Tough Choice): Drow outcasts calling themselves the Scorpion Brigade plot to destroy their former enclave of Thes-Kesselav. The adventurers discover the brigade's base in caves near the city, where the drow have stockpiled dozens of maps, attack plans, and magic items. Will Meliera take this chance to cause havoc and destruction in the city, even at the risk of betrayal by these outcasts?

Behlo the Vengeance Seeker (Newcomer): Like Meliera, the halfling Behlo saw his loved ones die at the hands of the drow. He not only wants all dark elves dead, but longs also to kill any who harbor or serve them—even as slaves. He remains suspicious of elves and eladrin as well, believing that those of the same blood as the drow are not to be trusted.

Deep Delver

More so than other characters, the deep delver thrives when the environment is at its most challenging. An adventure shaped for a deep delver should contain extraordinary cavern complexes, great chasms, and other terrain that can exist only in the Underdark. Vast and unexplored areas of the map can hook a character who has this theme.

A deep delver also likes to demonstrate his or her skill at survival and navigation underground. Add secondary characters who need help traveling through the tunnels—or escaping them. Talk about arduous journeys and barely navigable terrain. You don't need to call for endless skill checks for simple journeys. Simply mention how the deep delver assists the adventurers and their companions as they travel.

The Mercenary Papers (Announcement): After defeating the leader of a group of monsters, Karl and his allies discover notes from a drow merchant house. These notes describe arrangements to purchase a large number of grimlock slaves for use as soldiers.

Deia Smallfeather (Newcomer): Karl encounters Deia, a former Deep Guide. She had suspicions that something was amiss in the organization and left shortly before Karl joined. Living aboveground now, she is reluctant to return beneath the surface and explore the caverns again.

Freedom for One (Tough Choice): The adventurers and a group of companions they are escorting through the Underdark are captured. A companion reveals a way that one of the party might escape—but only one. Karl's ability to navigate the Underdark is the best hope for getting a message out or finding help. Will he keep his promise to never desert his comrades, or will he risk leaving them alone to attempt a possible rescue?

Escaped Thrall

A former master casts a long shadow over an escaped thrall's life. Make that slaver a major enemy in your game, whether as the mastermind behind an ambitious plot or the lieutenant of an even greater evil. You can show the scope of the thrall master's scheme by having the adventurers come across other thralls not yet lucky enough to win their freedom, or by providing maddening visions to the escaped thrall suggesting the master's involvement in multiple devious plots.

Incorporate allies and enemies of the thrall master into your campaign. If the escaped thrall was in the sway of a mind flayer, look to aberrant enemies and potential allies such as githyanki. A vampire slaver might suggest encounters with vampire hunters allied with Pelor or the Raven Queen.

An escaped thrall's imprisonment leaves both mental and physical scars. Your job is to set up situations where the character's pain can resurface. The foreshadowing and tough choice categories of adventure hooks bring the escaped thrall's past to the forefront, where it provides a dark subtext to the character's heroic actions. Use this approach in moderation, however, or you risk making the thrall a liability to the rest of the party.

The Branded Agents (Foreshadowing/Newcomer): Other former thralls of the aboleths appear in cities, where they unconsciously perform the dark tasks of their aberrant masters. When these sleeper agents are captured or attacked, an abolethic safeguard triggers. This causes them to go mad and melt into puddles of slime, creating a psychic backlash that only Mord can sense.

The Passage of Pain (Tough Choice): On the trail of a slaver, the adventurers encounter a locked stone door that can normally be opened only by an aboleth or one of its servitors. Mord can open it, but only by tapping into the repressed horror of his youth. If he does so, no one can be certain that he will return from his descent into madness.

The Drowned Temple (Announcement): A vision wakes Mord in the middle of the night—a dark dream of a temple of Ioun collapsing into a sinkhole. The tentacled bodies of aboleths rise from the sunken ground, surrounded by a cadre of child slaves. Father Michelson's bloodied body lies slumped against an altar. Is this a nightmare? Has this already happened? Or is Mord being warned of events not yet come to pass?

Trapsmith

A trapsmith can be drawn into an adventure by promises of danger and problems to solve. Because such characters spend their lives getting into tense situations, you need to keep escalating the level of risk. Each trap should be more dangerous than the last, each situation more precarious.

Part of what attracts a player to this theme is the idea of having skills unique to that character. So put the trapsmith in a position where he or she alone can overcome the defenses of the dungeon. Establishing a connection between the character and whoever is responsible for the dungeon's traps can make the trapsmith's job feel more personal.

This theme will have a bearing on how you design the mechanical components of your adventures. You should include a greater number of traps than usual in your dungeon, and have enemies sneak up on the party only to set off the trapsmith's own devices.

The Unbreakable (Announcement/Tough Choice): The enormous and complex trap known as the Unbreakable seals off an open shaft running straight down through solid granite. Numerous factions will pay good money to see it disarmed, and they want to hire Thorry for the task. The Unbreakable is several stories deep, with rooms of traps that can trigger crushing walls, planar imprisonment wards, and disintegration spells. Few know that an imprisoned primordial lies beneath the Unbreakable, and that the trap is designed not to keep intruders out, but to hold the ancient being within.

Ella grabs the treasure but sets off a nasty trap

BEN WOOTTEN

Seven-Pointed Star (Foreshadowing): The kobold traps that the adventurers have been coming across have been simple and easy to disable so far. One small detail stands out, though: a star with seven points carved somewhere on each device. Thorry remembers seeing this symbol on the trap that took his fingers. Could the kobold responsible for that injury still be alive?

Tegan Burrwood (Newcomer): Thorry's strange take on good fortune puts him at odds with worshipers of Avandra, the god of luck. Tegan, a devotee of the goddess, believes that Thorry is blessed, and she wants him and his companions to help guide her expedition. Can Thorry suffer through her exaltations of his greatness and blessed luck long enough to collect the huge payment she promises?

Treasure Hunter

Immense hoards and risky situations draw a treasure hunter like a moth to a flame. The classic dungeon crawl appeals to such characters, for whom no adventure is too dangerous as long as a good profit waits at the end.

The announcement approach can easily grab a treasure hunter's attention, as you describe the ancient idol or the opulent chambers waiting to be found in a dungeon. Such a character can readily be subjected to a tough choice as well. Anything that provides a motivation beyond getting rich is a potentially interesting deviation from the norm. As demonstrated in Ella's story, a treasure hunter can seek a specific item for reasons beyond profit. Also, take notice when the treasure hunter starts to care about allied characters or comes to hate a particular type of enemy. You can then ensure that protecting the allies conflicts with finding treasure, or you can put the hated enemies in the way of attaining a legendary hoard.

The Red King's Crown (Announcement): Ella finds an illuminated manuscript with pictures of a noble eladrin of the Feydark known as the Red King. The illustrations show him clad in finery, but the crown he wears is clearly the one that belongs to the Green Man.

The Unseen Cage (Foreshadowing): The adventurers find a series of large caverns in the Underdark that would make perfect living quarters, but they are uninhabited. Ella feels a strange sensation that she experienced before on the Green Man's hill—a feeling that something is imprisoned here.

The Green Man Will Burn (Misdirection): The rituals of the fey are foreign to the people of the world. When rumors arise that the Green Man will be burned on a pyre at the winter solstice, Ella has no way of knowing that the burning is merely symbolic, and that the "Green Man" is an unfortunate captive of firbolgs. The firbolgs do not let the adventurers leave, however—and one carries the true Green Man's scepter as part of the rite.

Underdark Envoy

This theme is all about face-to-face contact. Negotiating with rival factions, talking circles around sentries, and setting enemies against each other are all part of the envoy's job. Bring secondary characters and political situations into the mix when engaging an Underdark envoy—particularly characters you know will fall quickly for an envoy's eloquent charm.

Be aware, however, that arriving at too many diplomatic resolutions to conflict runs the risk of annoying other party members itching for a fight. The envoy character doesn't need to be fully effective every time. Even when negotiations break down into battle, enemies might be swayed by the envoy's efforts. An enemy who can't be turned to the party's side might still give the adventurers good advice or agree to not sound the alarm.

An envoy is particularly vulnerable to the misdirection approach, since political maneuvering is more than it seems even at the best of times. Don't be afraid to drop major hints (or simply tell the player) what's going on behind the scenes so that the envoy character can cut through the noise. The tough choice approach also makes sense for an Underdark envoy, considering the ways in which diplomacy can lead to unexpected complications.

Trapped by Both Sides (Announcement): A gnome refugee camp sits on a fey crossing, pinned between fomorian lands in the Feydark and a svirfneblin city in the natural world. The svirfneblin are suspicious of the gnomes and refuse to share their land, leaving them at the fomorians' mercy. The gnomes need someone to negotiate with the svirfneblin and win the right to escape from the fey crossing before they are wiped out. To make matters worse, no one knows when the giants have planned their attack.

Bjorgand (Newcomer): Khiira met the brusque fire giant delegate Bjorgand years ago, and he has reappeared in one debate after another ever since. Khiira does not bat an eye at killing in secret, but Bjorgand and his allies make their thuggery blatant. The fire giant negotiates with threats and particularly enjoys browbeating whomever the sly drow bard represents in her negotiations.

Drow Turncoats (Misdirection): Hired killers from Khiira's home city track her down. Instead of assaulting her, they appear to swayed by her words when they meet, seeming less interested in killing her than in discovering how she escaped and found a new life. These assassins are secretly under orders from Khiira's mother to falsely pledge themselves to the envoy's service. After they meet her allies and contacts, they will carry out the order to slaughter Khiira and anyone who helps her.

Underdark Outcast

You'll need to get a good read on a player's reasons for playing an outcast before you begin incorporating hooks related to this theme. Though it's likely the player wants to see the character's former life play a part in the campaign, some players prefer their outcast's backstory to stay in the past.

For a player who does want to explore his or her outcast's unfinished business, use the foreshadowing and announcement methods to connect that past to parts of the larger campaign narrative. Bring in secondary characters previously known to the outcast, and have clues leading back to his or her former society. Be careful with such plot elements, however, if the character doesn't want to physically return to his or her lost home. Instead, introduce secondary characters who are also outcasts, but from other races or civilizations.

A newcomer can work well to frame the loss that an outcast character has endured. Create secondary characters of a similar upbringing who were not cast out, or other outcasts who have taken a darker path or suffered in other ways.

The Ailing King (Announcement): Korag's father, Chief Beltag, lies dying. Enemies of Barduum have been kept at bay by old treaties that will end with the chief's death. Their forces are encircling the entrance to Barduum's tunnels, awaiting the chance to attack. Korag can never be chief, but can he defend his kin now as he should have years ago? And will he be reconciled with his father before the old dwarf passes away?

Krass (Newcomer): Krass is a young goblin kicked out of his tribe after his snooping brought a band of orc soldiers down on them. Though he failed his people the same way Korag did, the goblin believes he did nothing wrong, maintaining that the others in his tribe should know how to run and hide as well as he does. He tells Korag to take pride in being an outcast—even as he resists the dwarf's efforts to win back his gear that the goblin stole.

Not Again (Foreshadowing): The party has been assigned to protect a merchant expedition traveling to a svirfneblin outpost in the Underdark. When drow ambush the caravan, Korag realizes that the attack is meant as a diversion to keep the adventurers away from the outpost—the true target of the drow raid. Korag is faced with an echo of the situation that resulted in his exile. If he supports his comrades against the ambushers, the svirfneblin will fall. But saving the deep gnomes would require abandoning the party. Will Korag be able to choose, and if so, which group will he forsake?

Exploration and Choices

When two seemingly identical tunnels lead into the unexplored darkness, the adventurers' decision about which path to take is effectively random. To avoid leaving things up to chance at this juncture, you can present choices that provoke and intrigue your players by placing careful clues that suggest the dangers they might face.

One of the simplest ways to make exploration interesting is to add distinguishing characteristics that differentiate the characters' choices. What if one tunnel leads downward and smells of fetid water, while the other goes to the west and hums with echoing, ghostly whispers? The heroes still won't know which way to go, but the choice they make feels more meaningful if it is based on their reactions to what might lie ahead.

Repeat a Motif: Find a thematic element to emphasize in each section of a dungeon. Spider statues might suggest the presence of drow, while the same statues defaced with reptilian scales could be seen in a drow area that has been taken over by kuo-toas. Skulls with holes in them lying in the shadows of caverns, spirals carved into the walls, multiple idols with gemstone eyes in different colors, or objects appearing in groups of a specific number can reinforce the presence of the builder of your dungeon or the monsters that dwell there.

Note Environmental Changes: You can create the sense that the party's explorations are progressing by mentioning minor differences in temperature, humidity, and air pressure. That's only the start, though. The D&D game offers endless opportunities for otherworldly phenomena, such as ice that

IMPROVISING EXPLORATION

You don't need to know in advance what's behind every door or down every passage; instead, plant clues that you can expand on later. A door that radiates heat might lead to the lair of a fiery creature, a portal to the Elemental Chaos, or an incubation chamber. Determine whether your players have expectations for what lies ahead, then use those expectations for inspiration. If you can arrange for such discussions to come at the end of a session, or hash them out between sessions, you can better use your preparation time to flesh out the details in a way that your players will appreciate.

Solving a puzzle often requires a team effort

JULIE DILLON

mysteriously coats a chamber or passage, walls covered with color-changing fungi, insects that swarm in strange patterns, or terrain that warps and shifts. Planar incursions can also alter the landscape, creating chambers and caverns that transition between the Underdark and the Feydark, the Elemental Chaos, or the Far Realm.

Appeal to the Senses: As the adventurers move through the darkness, vision might be their least useful sense. Think about the sounds that echo within a dark cavern, the scents of rotting flesh or burgeoning fungus, or the texture of a wall where the energy of the Far Realm warps the world. A seasoned Underdark explorer might even be able to taste a drop of blood along the heroes' path to see what kind of injured creature might be lurking ahead.

Use Obstructions Carefully: Blocking off a tunnel seems like an easy way to prevent adventurers from passing, while a locked door might make the players only more determined to get through it. You can use obstructions to create intrigue and generate curiosity about what lies beyond. Put a "mere" locked door in front of interesting clues, extra treasure, and other items you intend for the adventurers to find. If you want to seal off an area more securely, make it obvious what kind of key or tool is needed to pass a door, a magic ward, or a monstrous gatekeeper. Even as the players realize they can't go in that direction yet, their characters have something to look for as they continue in another direction.

Leave Things Blank: The baseline motivation for any adventurer is a bold curiosity regarding the unknown. If you provide the adventurers with a map, leave large areas of it blank. If the characters see visions in a scrying pool, mention that certain parts of what they view are obscured by darkness. Create locations of which even the creatures of the Underdark do not speak. Those blank spaces might have never been explored, making your adventurers the pioneers who map them for the first time.

Mysteries and Puzzles

Some of the iconic elements of a dungeon adventure are the mysterious statue, the complex magical protective ward, and the inscrutable monster posing a riddle. Often created or placed underground by a long-forgotten builder, such a challenge provides a safeguard against the characters' intrusion even as it hints at the builder's overall purpose. Puzzles and mysteries beg to be explored and investigated, just as do the caverns and chambers they are a part of.

A simple mystery can intrigue and entertain nearly any group of players. One easy way to spark an investigation is to plant information that's a little off-kilter, prompting the players to think, "What's wrong with this picture?" If three of four statues face the same direction, why is the fourth looking off to the side? Why are some of the tiles on the floor red and others gold? The answer might be fairly easy to arrive at: Discover that the head of the fourth statue can be pivoted, rotate it so that it matches the others, and suddenly a secret door opens. Alternatively, an initial investigation might reveal a more complex puzzle, a riddle, or a trap.

Because in-game puzzles work best when you test the players' ingenuity rather than the attributes of their characters, be mindful of how willing the players are to be tested in this way. Some groups will happily spend an entire game session trying to figure out a single riddle. Others might be better served with a simpler puzzle that can be solved by trial and error. The following suggestions can help you make puzzles an interesting and dynamic part of a dungeon adventure.

Begin with the Familiar: Start with forms of puzzles and riddles the players are familiar with, then twist the structure or the concept to make something new. You might base a puzzle on sudoku or chess, or borrow the design of a trap from a movie, a novel, or a comic book. You could start with the classic riddle of the sphinx, then adapt it so that the answer involves a D&D creature. You could create a rebus (a passage of text in which words are replaced with pictures that match the sounds when said aloud), substituting strange symbols from the game world whose meaning the players must deduce.

Drop Clues: When you create a puzzle, think about how the players and their characters will approach it. Some amount of trial and error is to be expected, so make up a list of clues that can be found if the heroes search the immediate area, or attempt skill checks, or recall facts from earlier areas in the dungeon. Introducing clues in a natural way is easier to do if you have a few in mind early, rather than having to think them up on the spot.

It Doesn't Work, But . . .: Even a wrong answer or a failed attempt can still contribute to the solution of a puzzle. When a character tries to pull the blue gem loose from the wall, he might receive a nasty shock. But the adventurers now know that the gem is probably associated with the engraving of a lightning-filled storm cloud on the far wall.

Show Why the Puzzle Is There: The nature of a puzzle should speak to why it has been placed in the dungeon and why it works the way it does. A door that opens only if it is dealt cold damage might have been built by frost giants. A complex riddle might be child's play for the intellect of the mind flayer that placed it as a magical ward, keeping thralls and intruders out while allowing other illithids to pass.

Have Consistent Results: The pieces of a puzzle should follow logic to avoid confusing the players. A rune triggered by the presence of fire should be activated equally well by a burning hands spell, a fire seeds invocation, or a flaming torch. Likewise, identical puzzles in the same dungeon should all follow the same internal logic. If the rune mentioned above appeared in another location, the players should be able to expect it to function in the same way that the first one did.

Put in a Reset Button: This guideline can benefit you as well as your players. The more variables a puzzle contains, the harder it can be for the players to retrace their steps if they make a wrong move. To keep a complicated puzzle from slowing things down if the characters get off track, you can build in an easy way to reset the puzzle back to its starting condition, using the assumption that whoever created the puzzle would want it to return to its default state for the next creature that tries to solve it.

This "reset button" might be obvious to the characters, so that they can activate it whenever they want, or it could be an automatic feature that returns the puzzle to its original state if the players find themselves stumped (or whenever you decide to trigger it).

Call it Quits: If a puzzle or a riddle fails to engage the players, don't force it. If the players are struggling for a solution, drop hints couched as memories from a character's backstory. If they are truly stumped, present an alternative way to move along so you don't bog down the game. You can work it so that taking the easy way leads to tougher consequences. For example, nastier fights, lesser rewards, or unsavory characters needing to be bargained with might lie at the end of a route that bypasses a puzzle-locked door.

WAYNE ENGLAND

The Underdark is full of fabulous terrain

Creating an Underdark Adventure

A party of heroes could spend a lifetime in the Underdark and not come close to exhausting its mysteries or its dangers. The Underdark is one of the best locales in which to set a dungeon adventure. Its staggering size and range of monsters give you a great set of tools to create a challenging and memorable story.

Descending into Darkness

As the name of the game says, underground adventures are an essential part of Dungeons & Dragons. Dungeons are exciting places for adventurers to raid, loot, and explore. The heroes enter the dungeon, do their thing, and then usually leave the same way they came in. The Underdark, however, is much more.

The first point to understand is that the Underdark is not a mere dungeon—even one of unbelievable size. A dungeon has walls and boundaries, whereas the Underdark extends helter-skelter in all directions. It is a world within the world, and it likely covers the same area as all the realms of the surface. The Underdark is endless caverns and vast oceans, lost cities and great citadels teeming with life. Capturing the unique features of this environment is instrumental to creating Underdark adventures that offer maximum fun.

Infinite Scope

The vastness of the Underdark is one of its most alluring features, for DMs and players alike. This untamed wilderness is so large that it can never be fully explored. Add to this the bizarre creatures and magic that pervade its depths, and you can see how and why the conventions of traditional adventuring are left behind on the surface world. The Underdark offers great freedom to you as a DM, enabling you to create new wonders around every corner so that your players never know what to expect.

This freedom comes at a cost, though. The immensity of the Underdark can easily overwhelm even the most dedicated gaming group. Its passages have so many branches that choosing the right one by chance seems impossible. Every false turn threatens to take a party off course and into danger. Tales tell of would-be adventurers who get no farther than wandering the caves of the Underdark looking for a way out. Getting a lost group back on track without obvious contrivance can be difficult, and if the players feel as if the thread of the adventure has gotten lost as well, the game loses its excitement and sense of wonder.

MIKE SCHLEY

Keeping the Underdark under control requires direction on your part. Create a game plan for how you want your players to experience this unearthly realm. Then make that plan clear to them, so that they have an idea of what to expect when it comes time to plan their expedition.

An Underdark Overview

A vast expanse lies deep under the surface of the world. The Underdark's tunnels, caverns, lakes, and hidden cities make it in some ways the greatest dungeon of all. Adventure always awaits in the Night Below. The Underdark™ supplement describes these subterranean realms in much greater detail, but here's the short version.

The Shallows: Reaching 2 miles below the surface, this region provides a meeting ground between the deep-digging races of the surface (such as dwarves and goblins) and creatures native to the underworld realms (including duergar and troglodytes). The Shallows is a beachhead to the Deeps, a place where explorers have some measure of safety and knowledge of their surroundings. Still, the numberless caverns and vicious creatures haunting the dark places mean that no one is truly safe.

The Deeps: Far more alien and dangerous than the Shallows, the area known as the Deeps houses mad aberrations, the cruel cities of the drow, and innumerable dangers that would never be seen in the light. Vast lightless seas and places of chaotic elemental influence exist in the Deeps, and staying there for too long can warp one's mind.

The Feydark: Since the Feywild is an echo plane of the natural world, it too has an Underdark. The grotesque mad giants called fomorians rule the Feydark. Gnomes and a few other races have carved out small homes in its tunnels, but they must always beware cyclops patrols.

The Shadowdark: The other echo plane, the Shadowfell, is already dark and cold, but its Underdark goes a step beyond. Nothing can match the despair and hopelessness one feels when traveling its halls. Apart from the cryptic loremasters called incunabula, few residents of the Shadowdark still draw breath. The undead roam the pitch-black expanse of the World Tomb.

The Setting's Role

When you have an idea of how big you want your Underdark to be, consider what part you want it to play in the campaign. What do you and your players hope to get out of an Underdark adventure? The answer should be something unique to this realm—a goal or quest beyond anything that can be accomplished by a simple dungeon delve.

Make sure your game takes the characters to the Underdark for the right reasons, driven by the campaign narrative and with hooks that can appeal to the whole party. The Underdark can seriously challenge even the most hardened adventurers, particularly those whose race or backstory ties them strongly to the surface world. For elves, eladrin, halflings, and others, the Underdark can be an alien and terrifying place—and a wonderful opportunity to push those characters outside their traditional comfort zone.

On the other hand, a campaign built around characters at home in the Underdark can have a very different feel. To skilled delvers or those who have always lived below the surface, the Underdark is a wilderness waiting for great heroes to conquer it. The caverns and tunnels of this realm are no less wondrous or dangerous than they are for surface-born characters, but the heroes of the Underdark have the tools to take on those dangers.

KEEPING IT INTERESTING

Ask yourself this question before you begin your Underdark adventure: Do you want to create an elaborate spelunking simulation or a scenario that focuses less on realism and more on action? If the answer is the former, make sure that this kind of simulation is something your players are as interested in as you are. The constant grind of skill checks and provisioning necessary to accurately describe real-world caving will slow down your game, but can provide a satisfyingly gritty realism to your adventures.

Most DMs find that it is faster—and ultimately more useful—to provide only the gist of the delve before getting on with the action. The tone of the Underdark is important, as are the trials of underground exploration, but don't forget that everyone's fun should come first. Develop a feel for what level of realism your group appreciates, then help craft the narrative of how their characters overcome the challenges before them. These are heroes, after all, and it's more interesting for them to triumph over significant adversity than be broken down by endless small challenges.

Crafting the Feel

It doesn't matter how well conceived your Underdark adventure is if you don't invest time in describing the look, sound, and feel of its unique features. Without attention to the physical and visual, an Underdark adventure can too easily become a series of encounters set in bland, mostly empty caverns. Luckily for you, the Underdark is one of the most evocative environments in which to stage an adventure.

Legendary Infamy: When setting the stage for an expedition to the Underdark, introduce that realm long before the characters make it a specific destination. Tavern stories, menacing plots, mysterious artifacts, or missing persons can go a long way toward establishing the Underdark's fearsome reputation in your world.

Uncanny Terrain: The geography of the Underdark is unparalleled in scope. Near-bottomless chasms, mile-high vaults, fungal forests, freezing seas, caverns whose walls are the fossilized bones of long-dead primordials—you can use any idea from your imagination to punctuate the tunnels and caverns that wind their way to the bottom of the world. Work up a list of memorable sites for your players to experience and interact with during their delve, so that the journey never has to fall back on a boring series of passageways.

Effect on Characters: Life in the Underdark takes its toll on an adventurer. Clothing becomes crusted with mud and dust. Gear frays at the edges or is battered by one too many falls. Eyes that have adjust to the darkness find even the brightness of a torch painful to bear. Making use of cavern fungus for sustenance leaves the consumer malnourished over time. Most insidious of all, the stygian gloom and tomb-like stillness of this realm is enough to drive explorers mad.

The physical and emotional stress of exploring the Underdark can wear away at a character's resolve, making him or her think and do strange things. Though you shouldn't encumber characters with unnecessary penalties, a creative description of the mood and physical demands of the Underdark can inspire creative roleplaying and lend a stark realism to the atmosphere of your game.

Inhuman Cultures: The Underdark's scattered cities are dangerous points of shadow in an even more dangerous darkness. Few such settlements resemble the cities of the surface world. Tales of dwarven strongholds and drow enclaves are familiar to many adventurers, but inhuman monsters such as aboleths and beholders also create settlements and societies here.

Adventurers will rarely find succor in such cities. Even the most benign Underdark cultures are distrustful of strangers. At their worst, the races of the Underdark enslave outsiders as a matter of course. Think about ways to portray such civilizations as exotic yet believable. Mind flayer cities still need resources to thrive, even if those resources are extracted by mindless thralls feeding on the corpses of the slaves who fell before them.

The Unknown: Never underestimate the attraction of a good mystery. The Underdark's landscape gives you ample room in which to place enigmatic ruins, inexplicable portals, and bizarre encounters. No surface dweller can ever understand what truly goes on in a beholder's lair, and neither should you. Unleash your inner weirdness by giving the players a taste of the Underdark's deepest mysteries, letting facts develop over time. Let the bare bones of intrigue inspire the players to chime in with their own theories, then build on those theories to create a satisfying conclusion.

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

You can introduce sensory prompts from time to time to bring the unique environment of the Underdark to life. Examples include the following.

- Pulses of light shine up mysteriously from a chasm whose bottom cannot be seen.
- Vermin swarm so thickly that they create an impassable wall across a broad cavern.
- Animals known to be extinct on the surface are found below ground, having adapted to a life in the Underdark.
- In a broad grotto, crystals bloom in flowerlike shapes.
- A strangely porous rock muffles all sound nearby it, creating hushed echoes.
- A fiery wind howls out of a twisting tunnel.
- A sinkhole cave holds the remains of a fortress or a city that collapsed into the Underdark from the surface.
- A long-dead explorer has left a cryptic message scrawled on a cavern wall.
- A strange maze is revealed to be the immense fossilized remains of an unknown monster.
- Hot, stinging clouds of smoke and vapor boil up from a volcanic vent.
- An eerie whistling, like a fey song, echoes through small channels in the rock.
- A section of tunnel, covered in strange growths, is actually the gullet of an enormous dungeon denizen.
- A dark pit seems to contain the night sky, complete with familiar constellations.
- Cavern walls of soft chalk display scratches like those of fingernails reaching from ceiling to floor.

Developing a Plot

Once you've created the foundations of what the Underdark is in your campaign and how it should feel, you need to come up with a reason to go there. Developing a plot for an Underdark adventure is similar to crafting adventures in other settings, but you should keep a few important differences in mind.

An Underdark adventure will likely take the heroes far from their homes or usual stomping grounds, and it might keep them there for a lengthy amount of time. Their motivation for delving had better be a good one. Without the proper setup, the players will wonder what was the point of entering the Underdark in the first place—or will feel as if they're being dragged along by a cumbersome plot.

Creating a memorable campaign hook should be among your first concerns when designing an Underdark adventure. It's not enough that you want the adventurers to fight the drow—you need to present them with a compelling reason to do so.

Character Background

A character whose background involves the Underdark, even in a tangential way, can create a good opportunity to get a party underground. Adventurers who have any of the character themes presented in this book are perfect candidates for an Underdark adventure. By leveraging elements from a character's backstory, you create a personal stake in the adventure that can make it more exciting. Here are some examples.

- An Underdark native is called back to his or her homeland after being accused of a crime.
- Drow agents go to great lengths to pursue a character who was formerly a prized slave.
- The child of a famous explorer discovers his or her parent's journals and learns of unfinished underground adventures.

Monstrous Plots

The monsters that populate the D&D game offer plenty of excitement for characters braving the Underdark, but connecting those monsters to the heroes can take some work. By looking for opportunities to bring the peril of the Underdark to the surface world, you can inspire the adventurers to pursue that peril and destroy it.

- An important secondary character is suddenly revealed as being under the sway of mind flayers spying on the party.
- A tribe of Underdark goblins is building a scaffold to ascend a rift that has opened near a village.
- The child of a ruler has been kidnapped by an aboleth and must be rescued.

Wondrous valuables lie hidden in the Underdark

MILIVOJ ĆERAN

Dark Cultures

The workings of the Underdark's many civilizations are relevant to adventurers, particularly those hailing from the depths. An Underdark adventure can involve characters in political drama and intrigue among cultures wholly different from those of the surface world.

- Civil war in a beholder city overflows into surrounding regions when the leader of the eye tyrants is turned to stone by a medusa empress.
- Territorial disputes boil over between dwarves and svirfneblin, forcing the adventurers to choose a side.
- A duergar baron wishes to defect from his evil city and must be escorted safely to a dwarven stronghold.

Fabled Treasure

As the impetus for dungeon delves since the very beginning of the game, fabulous treasure and lost artifacts hold a strong allure for any self-respecting adventurer. The Underdark has no shortage of treasures lost or hidden in its labyrinthine depths.

- The hoard of a slain deep dragon spills into an open rift, attracting avaricious individuals of all races.
- Magnificent crystals rise from the footsteps of a forgotten primordial that wanders the Deeps.
- The vaults of Erelhei-Cinlu have been raided by a drow traitor, who was subsequently captured by the kuo-toas of the Dark Lake.

Dramatic Circumstances

Sometimes the campaign can unfold in a way that brings the characters to the Underdark without warning. Unexpected events can hurl the heroes into the depths, challenging their adaptability in new ways.

- Stepping through a portal in a wizard's tower takes the party to the Deeps, along the shore of the Spire Sea.
- A fleeing thief takes shelter in a cavern that leads to the Underdark, forcing the adventurers to pursue.
- Giant sinkholes open up during an explosive battle, swallowing up heroes and villains alike.

UNDERDARK EVOLUTION

My players' first exposure to the Underdark was something of an accident. The characters found themselves in a position to pursue a drow infiltrator who had stolen their treasure, then fled deep underground. I assumed the party would steer clear of this plot thread because I had always given the Underdark a creepy and dangerous reputation. They surprised me when they decided to risk going below. I quickly created a series of encounters and sights for them to experience during a two-week trek. Eventually the party found a drow outpost. After barely managing to overcome its defenders, they learned that despite their weeks of delving, they still had miles to go. Hard-pressed and short on supplies, the characters cut their losses and returned to the surface. I decided to make that return journey an adventure unto itself.

These adventures were a lot of fun because they allowed me to introduce a setting that lived up to its reputation. The players enjoyed being pushed to their limits, so much so that finding their way out again felt like a victory. The next time the characters entered its depths, they did so with experience and planning on their side. Four months later, they emerged as veteran dungeoneers (and a good deal wealthier).

—Jeff Morgenroth

Underdark Combat Encounters

Crafting combat encounters for an Underdark campaign lets you utilize every trick in your DM's toolkit. Any sort of terrain feature, hazard, or other challenge you can imagine can be a feature of your individually crafted Underdark setting. This section takes a closer look at some of the more distinctive aspects of the environment in the world beneath the world.

The Battlefield

The Underdark is a unique field of combat. On one hand, these dark realms feature the wide-open spaces typical of wilderness encounters. On the other, the caverns and vaults of the Underdark are filled with blocking terrain that provides the feel of a confined dungeon brawl. Unlike dungeons, whose walls and floors usually consist of flat, worked stone, Underdark terrain is rugged and dynamic. Exploiting this contrast can go a long way toward making an Underdark encounter feel unique. A battlefield's layout becomes as important as the monsters with which you choose to populate that battlefield.

Natural Caverns: Most of the passages and chambers of the Underdark have been created by natural forces and so follow no overall design. Lack of symmetry is the norm, but you should plan for more than an endless number of randomly branching tunnels and side rooms. Create unusual angles and shapes for the chambers of your Underdark dungeon. Have wide corridors suddenly narrow down, forcing the adventurers to squeeze through them. Create rough-edged masses of blocking terrain to simulate huge conglomerations of rock and crystal that must be climbed or bypassed. Encouraging tactical thinking from the players at all times is a big part of Underdark encounter design.

Terrain: In the real world, caves are extremely challenging to traverse. Even if realism is your goal, however, be wary of making every square of the Underdark difficult terrain. Such terrain can be more common in Underdark encounters than in a typical dungeon or wilderness encounter, but keep it within reason. Caves might feature a scattering of stalagmites or fallen debris. Certain areas can challenge characters by containing mostly difficult terrain, with clear squares becoming valuable assets in the fight.

Tight Squeezes: More so than in other dungeons, terrain that confines the combatants is prevalent in the Underdark. Characters seeking a protected alcove or a more advantageous position might be forced to squeeze through a crevice. Low ceilings can force larger combatants to stoop in combat, possibly fighting at a penalty. Try to keep such locations focused to specific areas, however, letting them add variety to the fight without wholly defining it.

TALKING THE TALK

Want to describe your Underdark locations as something more than "caves"? Use the terms below.

Bedrock: The solid rock that makes up the walls of a cave.

Chasm: A pit whose depth cannot be determined.

Cleft: A relatively small opening made by the splitting of rock.

Dormant Cave: A cave without running or dripping water.

Grotto: A cave with numerous stalagmites (floor) and stalactites (ceiling), typically containing a large amount of water as well.

Karst: A complex cavern created through the erosion of stone by running water.

Live Cave: A cave with flowing water.

Pillar: A freestanding column of bedrock reaching from floor to roof, remaining after the surrounding rock has eroded.

Ossuary: A cave filled with bones or fossils.

Rift: A cave that runs vertically, formed by tectonic upheaval.

Sea: A giant body of saltwater that fills vaults and covers great distances, usually connected to an aboveground ocean.

Shaft: A vertical tunnel that sometimes brings air from the surface.

Speleothem: Any rock formation created by mineral deposits, such as stalagmites and stalactites.

Spring: A natural upwelling of water, often laden with undrinkable minerals.

Tunnel: Any long and relatively narrow passage that connects caverns.

Vault: A cave of awesome size and height, the ceiling of which might be a mile or more above the floor.

Elevation: Cave floors almost never occupy a level plane; they slope up and down in rocky drifts or end in sheer barriers and ledge walls. Consider adding shifts in elevation to create a dynamic sense of positioning in caverns. Ledges, pits, and large rock formations can also provide ways to vary the height of different areas of the battlefield, making reach or ranged weapons particularly useful. Characters who have training in Athletics or Acrobatics have a chance to shine in such encounters.

Fantastic Terrain: The raw, chaotic force that created the Underdark remains prevalent throughout its depths. Use the presence of fantastic terrain to dress up your caverns and heighten the narrative elements of the dungeon. Seismic activity, the tainted presence of ancient monsters, or the legacy of great magic lost underground at the time of the Dawn War can all suggest fantastic terrain for use in your encounters.

Light Sources

The need for artificial light is a constant challenge for Underdark explorers. In addition to carrying a supply of torches or oil if magical light is not readily available, players must keep track of which characters are responsible for the light. The group should choose one or two players who will track their light sources' duration and radius.

You and the players should be familiar with the effect of bright light, dim light, and darkness on combat, so that you can keep the action moving when the battlefield becomes obscured. Remember that solid objects block a light source, and that Underdark creatures will take advantage of the adventurers' dependence on light by targeting the individuals carrying it.

Though the threat of total darkness should always be on the adventurers' minds, you can provide ways to improvise if a primary source of light is lost. For example, luminescent fungus is common in the Underdark and can provide temporary dim light.

Skill Challenge: An Underdark Trek

Adventurers who dare the depths need more than weapons, wits, and magic to survive. The Underdark teems with dangers, and those who brave its caverns must make use of every bit of their skill and ingenuity. This section provides a sample skill challenge you can use to mark a party's progress through the Underdark. It is made up of two components, one using individual checks and one using group checks.

Individual Checks: Making Progress

Surface dwellers can quickly become overwhelmed by the scope of the Underdark's tunnels. Without the sun or other landmarks to reckon by, explorers can become helplessly lost without a master dungeoneer to lead the way. This skill challenge simulates a lengthy trek through the Underdark, the goal of which is to arrive at a particular location. The skill challenge represents activity during a day or two of travel, and can easily be broken up by combat and roleplaying encounters.

Level: In the Shallows, the level of the skill challenge is equal to the level of the party. In the Deeps, the level of the skill challenge is two levels higher than the level of the party.

Complexity: 3 (requires 8 successes before 3 failures). Increase the complexity to 4 or 5 to simulate longer treks, increasing the maximum number of successes for primary skills accordingly.

Primary Skills: Athletics, Dungeoneering, Endurance, Perception.

Athletics (moderate DC by level, 4 successes maximum): The character climbs through caverns, leaps over pits, or pushes aside barriers to help the party move through rugged terrain.

Dungeoneering (moderate DC by level, 4 successes maximum): The character's savvy and insight enables the party to find the best path, avoid hazards, identify sources of food and water, and move safely through the treacherous depths.

Endurance (moderate DC by level, 2 successes maximum): The character pushes through fatigue, endures areas of stale air, and toughs out the psychological effects of constant darkness.

Perception (moderate DC by level, 2 successes maximum): Ever watchful for new passageways, monsters, or hidden advantages, the character uses his or her sharp eyes to help the party avoid trouble.

Secondary Skills: Insight, Heal.

Insight (hard DC by level): By paying close attention to the condition of his or her allies, the character helps the party overcome an Underdark hazard. A successful check against a hard DC, in addition to counting as a success in the challenge, gives each character a +2 bonus to the first skill check made during the next Underdark hazard the group encounters (see below).

Heal (hard DC by level, when a character loses a healing surge from an Underdark hazard): The character treats the injuries of one character that resulted from a failed group check to avoid an Underdark hazard. The character does not lose a healing surge, though he or she still suffers any other penalties.

Success: If the characters earn enough successes before 3 failures, they arrive at their intended destination.

Failure: If the characters attain 3 failures, they become lost in the Underdark. They have a combat encounter of a level equal to that of the skill challenge. The characters must start the skill challenge again in an attempt to reach their destination or to return to their starting point.

Group Checks: Overcoming Hazards

The characters can encounter numerous setbacks during their trek. Choose a number of skill checks between two and four, with four suitable for an adventure in the Shallows and two representing the more challenging Deeps. Each time that number of skill checks has been attempted in this challenge, choose one of the following hazards and have the characters make a group skill check against the given DC. If half the group succeeds, the party earns 1 success in the challenge, which does not count toward the maximum number of successes allowed for that skill. If the group check is failed, it does not count as a failure in the skill challenge, but the adventurers suffer the described setback.

These setbacks usually last until the next Underdark hazard is encountered. When a combat encounter occurs during the skill challenge, any ongoing setback applies to all the characters during that encounter. At your discretion, some setbacks (such as penalties for fighting in cramped tunnels) can be applied to enemies as well.

Cramped Tunnels: The characters must crawl through a series of narrow and claustrophobic tunnels by succeeding on a group Acrobatics check (easy DC by level). On a failed check, each character loses a healing surge. In addition, until the next hazard, the characters each take a –2 penalty to all skill checks, due to their disorientation.

Eerie Phenomena: The party is unsettled by patches of twisting shadows, veins of mysteriously glowing minerals, or the menacing sound of an unknown creature in the darkness. The characters must succeed on a group Insight check (easy DC by level). On a failed check, each character takes a –2 penalty to Perception checks and initiative checks until the next hazard.

Rugged Terrain: The characters must clamber over rubble, maneuver through stalagmites, or otherwise negotiate challenging terrain by succeeding on a group Athletics check (moderate DC by level). On a failed check, each character loses a healing surge. In addition, until the next hazard, each character takes a –2 penalty to Athletics checks and Endurance checks because of fatigue.

Foul Air: The characters must succeed on a group Endurance check (hard DC by level) to avoid succumbing to low oxygen levels or poisonous fumes. On a failed check, each character loses a healing surge.

Underdark Vermin: A swarm of cave-dwelling vermin or a patch of hazardous fungus represents a potential hazard. The characters must succeed on a group Nature check (easy DC by level). On a failed check, until the next hazard, the characters each take a –2 penalty to all skill checks.

Utter Silence: The caverns ahead are as still as death. The characters must succeed on a group Stealth check (moderate DC by level) or attract a hungry predator. On a failed check, the heroes have a combat encounter one or two levels lower than the level of the party. The characters are automatically surprised during this encounter.

Dungeon Makers

Every organization or race that braves the Underdark creates dungeons in a specific style. An adventurer who knows how to read the works of different dungeon makers can quickly identify what kinds of traps—and treasure—might lie ahead.

Cultists

Few worshipers create dungeon complexes by choice, and those that do are usually vile. Driven underground or into the wild, these iconoclasts create their sites of worship in the dark places of the world.

Such dungeons are typically dangerous places to those not of the cult's faith, which is dedicated to a forgotten god or otherworldly evil. A cult calls its dungeon a safe haven; the world at large sees it as a place of blasphemy.

Living the Faith

Cultists spend their time worshiping, praying, or indulging in the dark secrets of their faith. As a result, their living and eating quarters are drab and utilitarian, showing little concern for comfort.

Barracks: A cult sizable enough to build a dungeon has a large congregation of zealous followers. These individuals are housed in cramped barracks chambers, possessing only their robes and a religious symbol or some other token of faith.

TEN TRAPPINGS OF A CULT'S DUNGEON

1. A mural depicting the cult's future rise to power.
2. Sacred animals roaming the halls freely.
3. The embalmed body of the cult's founder.
4. Defiled holy symbols of other religions.
5. A symbol of the cult worked into mundane objects.
6. Reminders of punishment for disobeying the cult's leaders.
7. Distant chanting.
8. Incendiary bins to burn forbidden objects.
9. A statue of the cult's otherworldly patron.
10. Deceptively welcoming entrances to lure new members.

Communal Living Spaces: Cultists work, worship, and take their meals in crowded common rooms. Such areas are designed to take away the identity of the individual, focusing on mass veneration and single-minded obedience.

Chosen Ones's Quarters: The only people in a cult who have private chambers are typically its leaders. Their rooms are locked and mysterious, separated from the rest of the supplicants by a veil of reverence and fanatical guards.

Chambers of Worship

Veneration of a higher power is the only reason a cult dungeon exists. When worshipers create an area in the dungeon, they do so with that purpose in mind. Images honoring the god, creature, or philosophy of the cult are common, taking the form of elaborate murals, tapestries, or carvings depicting its supposed greatness.

Altar: The dominant feature of any cult's dungeon is the altar, where cultists make foul offerings to their patron. Great numbers of cultists are found here at all times, making this the most dangerous place in the dungeon. The exact nature of the altar depends on the cult, but these chambers always contain unwholesome magic.

Meditation Chambers: These smaller rooms are quiet and isolated, smelling heavily of incense and bedecked with religious icons. Acolytes meditating on their cult's secrets can be found here at all times.

Drow

Elegant and refined, drow-built dungeons are an extension of that race's legendary decadence. More than just homes and fortresses, drow dungeons are crafted to indulge a fetish for pain and an appreciation of dark beauty. Just as elves draw the details of their civilization from the natural world, drow shape their cities and buildings to mimic the natural features of the Underdark.

Drow are masters of subterranean construction. Magic, an enslaved workforce, and boundless creativity combine to create structures that enthrall and terrify outsiders.

Decadent Domiciles

The residences of the noble houses of the drow shine like cruel beacons out of the shadows of their cities. Functional as well as beautiful, these great estates exemplify the dark elves' love of magic and depravity, and their self-declared superiority. The spires of these edifices are meant to inspire envy and fear in all who see them.

Fortress Estates: The drow ruling houses possess tremendous wealth, and their leaders are not shy about showing it. Their estates are fortresses featuring outer walls, towers, and well-defended chambers. Drow nobles ostentatiously one-up each other with new construction that shows off their family's affluence. They set towers apart from other buildings, ensuring that no one can approach those structures' entrances without being spotted by guards. The interior of a drow noble's home is lush with opulent excess, much of it plundered from other houses.

Chambers of Indulgence: In the high towers of a drow estate stand the halls where matrons and noble scions indulge in decadent excess. Filled with sumptuous couches, diaphanous fabrics, freely flowing wine, and depraved entertainment, these rooms overflow with comforts and diversions, giving the entitled drow nobility a place to carouse their days away.

Slave Pens: All drow houses boast impressive slave pens, kept out of sight in the lower chambers. Some families turn these spaces into vast mercantile enterprises, making their fortunes by selling slaves. Others create elaborate training yards to prepare thralls for combat in a city's gladiatorial arena. No matter what their decorative appearance, slave pens are dismal places of chains, filth, and death.

Frontier Outposts

Surrounding the metropolitan drow settlements are a variety of guard posts and garrisons that protect each city's borders. Architecturally, these fortresses display the same artistic grace found in the cities, making them resemble noble villas more than military strongholds. Those who doubt the strength of these outposts because of their appearance learn the lesson of their lives when the drow rise to defend them.

Impregnable Defenses: Drow outposts are built atop chasms, cliffs, and even huge stalagmites, making them difficult to attack. Most feature only a single entrance, fiendishly defended by magical wards, cramped labyrinths, or cultivated slimes. Drow take pleasure in tormenting invaders before they are slain, and so they sometimes create false gates and passages that lead far into their strongholds. The leaders of an attacking force think they have the element of surprise, but in reality they are being drawn into a trap.

Hall of Blades: All frontier outposts have an area where male drow practice the arts of combat and killing. These large chambers or courtyards are decorated with images of conquest that inspire drow warriors to hate any creatures not of their kind. Cruel weapons hang from racks along every wall, with dueling circles rising in tiers above the ground.

Secret Paths: Secret tunnels spin out from a drow outpost like the lines of a spider's web. Cleverly concealed, they are sometimes hidden even from the drow guarding a fortress. Such pathways provide clandestine access for spies or agents on important missions for the great houses or the priestesses of Lolth. Corrupt captains sometimes sell passage through these tunnels, though they offer no aid against any creatures or wards that might be guarding them.

Within the Web of Lolth

Rising in an unsettling swarm of barbed towers, the great temples of Lolth dominate the skyline of every drow city. Imperious and threatening, these structures are a constant reminder of the authority of Lolth's priestesses. An eldritch fire glows behind the spiderwebs that drape a temple of Lolth like a veil, as elaborate statues and carvings leer from the eaves.

Webbed Vault: The central area of a temple is a vast chamber large enough to hold hundreds of worshipers. A glass dome overhead sheds a cold and pale light. The high priestess evangelizes from a mighty dais at the head of the chamber, while spiders lurk in the dark tangle of webs that choke its upper reaches.

Torture Theatre: Drow take pleasure in the suffering of others, and their dungeons are public displays within Lolth's temple. Here prisoners are creatively restrained and ritually tormented for the amusement of the populace, who howl with delight as the priestesses perform their ceremonies.

Sacrificial Chamber: Deep within the mystic inner chambers of the temple stands the sacrificial altar where important victims are offered up to the Spider Queen. The sacrificial chamber is bedecked in grotesque artwork of gruesome detail and awful magnificence that reveals the dark elves' love of cruelty.

Handmaidens' Font: Tucked away in the topmost spire of a temple is a place that only the highest priestesses can enter. In this simple chamber stands a basin whose bottom reveals a portal to the Demonweb Pits. Priestesses use the font to commune with the yochlols, the handmaidens of Lolth.

Duergar

The settlements of the duergar rival those of their dwarf cousins in craft and construction. While a duergar fortress is every bit as magnificent and long-lasting as any dwarven redoubt, the dwarves build out of a sense of pride and community. In contrast, duergar architecture and construction reflects only that race's greed and cruelty.

The dungeons of the duergar are bastions of their campaign of evil, which imperiously claims ownership of all resources and treasure in their surroundings. The ancient tunnels and pathways of duergar mines are places where few subterranean travelers dare to tread.

Fortress Cities

The fortresses of the duergar are impenetrable ramparts. Highly defensible, a duergar citadel might be cut into a cliff face or built of stone blocks set into place by long-dead slaves. Behind the walls of a duergar fortress stands a city that reflects the evil of its dark masters.

Duergar fortresses are as grim and terrible as their builders

Outer Defenses: The walls of a duergar fortress rise abruptly from the floor of its cavern, usually surrounded by a moat. This might be a trench littered with cast-off chunks of jagged metal, a stream of flaming oil piped from a well discovered by duergar miners, or a searing pit of molten lava.

DUERGAR DESTINY

By Duke Thangaart of Balecrag

Our self-righteous cousins would have you believe that their cities are the strongest and most glorious in all the Underdark. Bah! What do they know of strength and glory? Their cities crumble while ours grow ever greater! This is because they slavishly honor the clan, while we duergar honor only the strong.

Hellfire burns in our veins, giving us the vitality to conquer, to thrive, to live! Let the dwarves bow their heads in their shabby caves. The duergar will make thrones of mountains.

Monolithic Buildings: Duergar buildings are dour and utilitarian, rising up like stone slabs and devoid of ornamentation beyond the occasional runic label at the entrance. Would-be invaders of a duergar city are stymied by a lack of landmarks along its endlessly similar streets.

Cavernous Halls

The interior of their buildings is where the duergar invest their greatest skills of craft and design. Not willing to waste time or wealth embellishing public spaces, the duergar create great vaults whose columns and walls are studded with intricate carvings and gems. They proudly display their mined or plundered treasures among images of their infernal kings.

Workshops: Duergar keep well-equipped workshops in their lairs, where raw gems and precious metals are transformed into more valuable jewelry and relics. The slaves who toil for them keep these workshops running day and night.

Foyers: Duergar dungeons open into a circular antechamber containing passages to other rooms beyond. Meant to honor their race's connection to the Nine Hells, the floor of this foyer is set with a great seal covered in grotesque carvings.

ADAM PAQUETTE

Trophy Room: Duergar nobles practically live in these great halls, which are packed with choice treasures accumulated over generations of greed and evil.

Throne Room: Just as the dwarves cling to the trappings of the ancients, so do the duergar. Unlike the dwarves, though, their regal chambers are designed to intimidate visitors more than to honor the race's ancestors.

Infernal Embassy: The duergar's close connection to the infernal realms sees a steady stream of fiendish emissaries within their settlements. Duergar dungeons contain chambers designed to cater to the needs of a devilish guest.

Slave Labor

Duergar are driven by a lust for conquest and ownership. To fuel that ambition, they ceaselessly delve into new areas in search of precious ore or gems. To be more precise, their slaves delve. No duergar will lift a finger to perform hard labor with a legion of thralls on hand.

Hazardous Tunnels: Duergar care little for the safety of their slave miners, coldly factoring in expected deaths from cave-ins, starvation, or monsters when they plan their excavations. Their tunnels spread in a chaotic web wherever the duergar seek the wealth of the Underdark.

Forge: Fueled by infernal fires or the burning of prisoners' corpses, duergar forges work an endless number of slaves to death as they produce the weapons and tools of their masters' reign.

Dwarves

Those who understand dwarves know the pride that members of that race take in smithing and stonework. Renowned for their attention to detail and their dedication to quality, dwarves build their fortresses and dungeons to last.

No other race matches the dwarves' ability to mix beauty and efficiency. Every room and structure in a dwarven dungeon has a purpose, and even the most utilitarian chambers show the painstaking care of master architects and artists. The dwarven style is rigidly geometric, severe, and meant to inspire awe. Complexes feature vaulted ceilings in underground halls, stairways that lead to hundreds of mine tunnels, and gigantic forges that continually churn out marvels. These structures serve more than a utilitarian function. They make the hearts of the dwarves who build and dwell within them swell with pride.

Mines and Metal

Dwarves love wealth in the form of precious metals and rare stones that hide deep within the earth. Their underground domains are a combination of mine and vault. When they tap into a rich vein of ore or a deposit of geodes, dwarf miners slowly turn a mine into a home. Dwarves don't simply fill any suitably large chamber with treasure. They decorate their stone walls and pillars with gold, set gemstones into their tables, and weave mithral into fine tapestries. Their smiths craft excellent weapons and armor, and their nobles drink from gem-studded silver goblets.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Mine Shaft: Spreading out around a dwarven hall like fracture lines, multiple mine shafts lead ever deeper into the earth. Dwarven mines are narrow and dark, traversed with rails on which carts carry ore to the distant forges. A mine shaft carries the constant risk of collapse, either from earthquakes or the movement of burrowing monsters such as purple worms and xorns. Built to follow veins of ore and gems, dwarven mine shafts are not logically laid out like the rest of a settlement. Outsiders can easily become lost in the twisting tunnels.

Forge: Dwarves create huge workshops for their smiths, with dozens of stone worktables and anvils surrounding the forge. Some forges employ magic furnaces, while others tap into natural magma pools.

Built for Defense

After dwarves uncover their precious treasures, they fight to the death to keep them. Their fortifications are unparalleled at keeping out intruders while allowing the dwarves to endure even the longest sieges.

Gate: Every dwarven dungeon has an imposing front gate, ornately decorated and crafted of stone or metal. Dwarves sometimes conceal these gates with illusion magic, then reveal them at a time designed to impress visitors most effectively. Throughout a dwarven dungeon, smaller gates and portcullises create deeper lines of defense.

Murder Holes: Dwarves seldom shy away from a face-to-face fight, but that attitude changes when invaders hit them where they live. Dwarven dungeons feature secret side passages with narrow openings that connect to the main corridors. Through these murder holes, dwarves attack their enemies with hot oil or crossbow bolts, breaking up their attacks and driving them into traps.

Choke Points: As much as dwarves appreciate towering ceilings and wide avenues, they make sure that all approaches to their inner citadel pass through choke points at strategic locations. These narrow defiles force attackers into close confines, where multiple defenders can shoot and strike at enemies approaching down a narrow tunnel.

Life Goes On

While it is occupied, a dwarven city bustles with activity. Only when abandoned does it come to feel like a true dungeon. When dwarves flee or retreat from a fortress, they take their belongings but leave their structures intact. Their pride tells them they'll be back to reclaim the glorious home they have lost.

Grand Hall: During their frequent communal meals, dwarves gather at long tables to partake of copious amounts of food and drink. A stage for performances and speeches, a huge kitchen, and racks of mugs speak to the raucous gatherings that once filled an empty grand hall with the din of celebrating dwarves.

ON TRAPS

By Tegget Bronzecrown

No dwarf should ever build anything like a worthless kobold's snare or pit. A trap is a work of art, as much so as a suit of armor or a great statue of a dead king. Design your traps as an integral part of the architecture in your halls. Lay down every passage with your traps in mind.

The possibility that you and your kin will need to abandon your halls is ever present. But by ensuring that your home remains defended, you make easier your clan's inevitable return. A real dwarven trap must resist being destroyed or disabled, and it must have a reset mechanism. A device sprung once and spent has no worth. Your traps must endure as long as the dwarf race draws breath.

Smash invaders with heavy stone slabs. Drop them into deep pits where they can starve like the vermin they are. Outsiders lust hungrily for the riches of the dwarves, so a trap that triggers when an intruder interferes with the jewels on a pillar or statue is one that will surely be sprung.

Distillery: In dwarven distilleries, veteran brewmasters craft ale, whiskey, and other potent spirits. Kegs might yet remain in their racks in an abandoned distillery, but be warned—only the truly brave or foolish risk drinking dwarven liquor that has aged an unknown number of years.

Animal Pens: Unlike many Underdark dwellers, dwarves have the same taste in food and drink as the races of the surface world. They prefer beef and mutton to spider and mushrooms, milk and honey over rusty water and lichens. Some dwarven citadels maintain aboveground settlements where food animals are raised. Underground pens are used to house overflow livestock that enables the dwarves to maintain a food supply while under siege.

Temple: Even though they pay small tributes to many gods, dwarves revere Moradin more than any other deity. Moradin is the only god certain to have a temple in a dwarven community, never far from the central forge. Along with more mundane offerings, master crafters place their finest works in the god's shrine, which is protected by traps.

Throne Room: Dwarves observe a strict political hierarchy, and the throne room symbolizes the authority of their lord. The walls of a throne room are lined with images and stories of rulers going back centuries.

Humans

As with all their endeavors, humans create dungeons in pursuit of a larger goal. Ambition drives them underground to conquer new territories, get rich, or discover unknown lore. A human-built dungeon can serve as a staging ground for the search for underground riches, the secret prison of a citadel, or a last foothold in enemy territory. Humans weren't made to live underground, however, and they have no formal tradition of subterranean settlements. Thus, each human dungeon is unique in design and purpose.

Quick and Dirty

Humans use whatever supplies they have at hand when they dig their dungeons, reinforce them, and build structures within them. Functionality comes first, and explorers in a human dungeon rarely see a consistent quality of work and materials. Since a dungeon made by humans is a means to an end, its builders feel no obligation to have it last for all time. Such dungeons are typically either full of toiling workers or long deserted.

Workers' Quarters: Bedrolls line the walls of these rough-hewn tunnels, filled with workers sleeping off a recent shift even as others use the space as a thoroughfare. Wooden struts hold up the ceiling, which sometimes sheds small chunks of earth and

DISPATCH TO KARL BRASLIN

Regarding progress on excavation #3

Received your message, understand your concerns. Project must move forward. Rewards will make all this worth it, I assure you.

Following strategies will ensure success in venture.

- Increasing budget to produce iron struts instead of wood.
- Sending twenty more prospective miners to you. Should arrive within three weeks. Will need training on site.
- Authorizing you to hire new wizard to replace the departed Zenteem.

Do not forget—four months until deadline, when we will default on major loans. Your stake is in jeopardy, as is mine.

Best of luck moving forward.

Regards,

Kaia Elding

stone. Workers hit by debris simply turn over and fall back asleep.

Water Wheel: An underground waterfall is the site of a wooden water wheel. Its rotation powers a nearby rock crusher, while workers fill buckets at the falls to carry water to the dig site.

Planning Office: The overseer of the operation works out of an old carriage-wagon that has been wheeled deeper into the dungeon as its main shaft is widened. The coach's interior is plastered with maps and plans.

Big Ropes: The dungeon makers found a chasm in their path. Rather than spend time building a bridge, they ran a heavy rope across the gap on an incline. Workers burdened with gear slide down the rope to the work area. Coming back requires climbing up a precarious set of steps built into the opposite cliff face, then sliding down another rope coming back in the other direction. A third rope system employs pulleys and metal buckets, allowing the transportation of ore and equipment back and forth.

Expanding the Frontier

Just as they have always pushed out to explore the unconquered lands of the surface world, humans constantly seek to expand their territories underground. Where a subterranean race such as dwarves might stop short of a drow-inhabited area, humans keep right on going.

Pitted Tunnel: The large cavities in this tunnel seemed like a blessing at first, since they made digging easier. Soon, however, human miners discovered that they had dug through a bulette's hunting ground. The creature is far too formidable to be directly assaulted, so the miners have learned to hide during the forays that occur every week or so.

Contested Ground: A line of human soldiers sits on one side of a cavern as workers file past. On the other side, a few drow warriors stand guard. Neither side can afford to take troops away from this unofficial border, but neither can be certain of victory if a battle breaks out. The stalemate has continued for weeks, and the tension is rising.

Sun God's Chamber: A tunnel through solid stone takes a sideways turn to route around an uncovered artifact—a metal cylinder half excavated from a rocky wall. It bears the symbol of Pelor, and the crystals growing around it shine with the light of the sun. The miners who uncovered it could tell that part of the text on the cylinder was a warning, but their efforts to decipher the rest have so far been in vain.

KOBOLDS

Kobolds prefer to live in natural caverns and tunnels that offer the honeycombs of small passages they favor—and which they protect with effective traps.

Kobolds love sites with plenty of twists and turns, from city sewers to ancient limestone caverns. In some cases, they undertake excavations to increase the number of passages in their lair, even if only to throw off invaders. A kobold dungeon demonstrates that race's cleverness and adaptability through its twists, turns, and hazards.

Cramped Passages

Kobolds grow anxious in open areas, so they make a point of lairing in cramped chambers. Doing this also ensures that only creatures of their size can move through kobold tunnels at speed, forcing larger pursuers to stoop or crawl. Outsiders can become easily confused and disoriented in these restrictive passages, making them vulnerable to the traps that wait at every turn.

Collapsing Ceilings: Kobolds entice would-be intruders into their lairs by way of large, easily navigated passageways. These routes lead to dead ends, however, giving the intruders nowhere to turn when kobold sentries knock out the struts that hold up the ceiling. While the kobolds sneak to safety through concealed side tunnels, the resulting cave-in finishes off the intruders.

False Leads: Explorers think they've picked the right path to the heart of a kobold lair when the traps they encounter become more frequent. Savvy kobolds know about this assumption, and in a fiendish bit of reverse psychology, some kobold tribes lay their deadliest traps along false paths, leading overly confident invaders away from their lairs.

THE MESSY END OF VANCE THE DASHING

Recounted by Herc Muleback, loyal henchman

It had been four hours since my boss, Vance the Dashing, went down into the kobold warrens. I'd almost given up hope of his return. Then I jumped up when I heard footsteps from the mouth of the cave and saw the familiar brim of his swashbuckler's hat. My jaw dropped when I saw the golden glow of what he held in his hands. He'd found it—the jeweled Egg of Kurtulmak!

Yet the look on his face wasn't the grin I'd expected. Then I saw the bloodstains on his ripped tunic, the darts bristling up and down his back, and the wire trip-lines dangling from his limbs. Vance stared right through me, his eyes glassy as the egg dropped from his hands. He collapsed face first in the dirt, dead. From the look of it, he never even had a chance to draw his sword.

Intersections: Kobolds strategically excavate chambers where certain tunnels connect, creating larger intersections. These areas provide enough room to create complex traps and to set up full-scale ambushes when intruders get too close for comfort.

Home in the Tunnels

Beyond the twists and turns of a kobold tribe's outer defenses lies the group's home. The larger caverns in this area are packed with kobolds and interlinked by the same cramped passages that surround them.

Living Quarters: The most spacious areas of any kobold warren are the living quarters that house most of the tribe. Craggy and cluttered natural caverns are typically chosen for such areas, providing numerous nooks and crannies in which different family groups take up occupation.

Shrine: All large kobold clans carve a shrine to Tiamat out of the rock of their lair. This area is the only place in the dungeon where treasure is strewn openly, since no kobold would dare to steal an offering from its clan's patron deity.

Hatchery: These secure locations are where the females of a tribe lay their eggs and where hatchlings are raised. Kobolds keep these caverns hot and humid to ensure the health of their offspring.

Food and Supply Cache: These areas are filled with materials captured from the surrounding environs. A cache chamber is cluttered and filthy, with mold or mushrooms growing in piles of stolen gear.

Vermin Corral: Cave crickets, centipedes, spiders, and lizards skitter within these rickety paddocks. A corral is typically built around an area rich with the molds or algae on which the domestic creatures of a kobold clan graze.

Kuo-Toas

The stench of rotting fish. The reverent chanting to mad gods. The screams of sacrificial victims. These are the signs that a kuo-toa dungeon lies ahead. The underground lairs of kuo-toas are horrid places filled with equally horrid creatures, but the rewards they offer are great. Kuo-toas hoard their wealth near their dark shrines as offerings to the insane beings they worship.

Kuo-toas make their lairs in natural caverns that have been eroded by water seeping through the Underdark. Walking into their dank, twisting caves is like entering another world where the ocean has consumed the land and fish rule over all. Rippling black pools reflect light from phosphorescent fungi along the walls, creating the feeling of being trapped underwater.

Sacred Pools

The amphibious kuo-toas are most comfortable in water, so they build colonies around the deep, murky pools that dot the Underdark. They treat their pools as holy places, connected to the deepest underground seas where dwell the gods of the deep.

Kuo-toas believe that aboleths have a connection to their deep gods, and some kuo-toa colonies lie directly atop aboleth lairs. Any passage leading downward into darkness from a kuo-toa lair is a route that all explorers should think twice about following.

Breeding Pool: Kuo-toas lay their eggs in shallow pools of clear water, a stark contrast to the murky sumps found elsewhere in their lairs. Not far away, other pools hold kuo-toa fingerlings, not yet a year old and unable to breathe air. Vicious guards protect these pools and look after the young. The leaders of the kuo-toas keep separate royal spawning pools near their quarters.

Offering Pool: The wealth that kuo-toas pillage from other creatures is cast into the depths of this diamond-shaped black pool as an offering to the deep gods. The pool's chamber is usually deserted, though ranking kuo-toas sometimes come here to retrieve valuable treasures for their personal quarters.

A Wealth of Slaves

Above their brackish pools, the kuo-toas build the cells and pens in which dwell slaves drawn from other races. Kuo-toa lairs bustle with activity, but slaves do all the real work. Overseers keep watch as slaves catch fish, clean, dig new tunnels, and craft the kuo-toas' signature hunting weapons. Other kuo-toas use their time to worship at their weird altars, or undertake excursions into the Underdark seeking enemies or more slaves.

Kuo-toas guard their precious young ferociously

Slave Pens: At the rare times when slaves are allowed to sleep or eat, they are stuffed into closely guarded, cramped pens built of thick wooden bars. Each pen offers little more than a shallow pool of filthy water to drink, a rocky floor to sleep on, and a reeking pit for waste. Slaves are fed rats, fungus, and insects. The kuo-toas save their precious fish for themselves.

Workshop: Kuo-toas set their slaves to work crafting specialized weapons for hunting, along with trinkets to offer to their gods. Their workshops are flat-floored chambers strewn with simple tools.

Purging Chamber: Kuo-toas have a racial tendency to descend into madness. In a futile attempt to prevent the insanity from infecting others, an individual affected by this condition is either exiled or sent to the lair's purging chamber. Sane kuo-toas will not come near a mad one, so they order their slaves to force those so afflicted through the single entrance to this small room. Slaves attack the mad kuo-toa with spears until they slay it, then leave its body to rot.

Worship and Rule

The deep gods influence every aspect of kuo-toa society. When kuo-toas create their dungeons, they lay them out based on ancient patterns that they believe have been passed down by their gods. They do not craft many adornments, and the statues and wall art they do create are displayed near their deepest pools and holiest sites.

Meditation Cell: Kuo-toa monitors use these small, secluded areas to go through the mental exercises that stave off their racial madness. These areas are left dark and unadorned so that meditating monitors can turn their focus inward.

Sacrificial Shrine: In a smaller kuo-toa community, the shrine is no more than a simple stone slab caked with dried blood. In the largest and oldest settlements, kuo-toas have created tall, tiered ziggurats on which their victims are ritually murdered.

Whip Chambers: The whips are the leaders and religious scholars of the kuo-toa race. They maintain austere chambers in which they keep their spellbooks and religious artifacts.

MILIVOJ ĆERAN

Mind Flayers

If anyone knows how to keep a secret, it's an illithid. An explorer on the trail of a mind flayer might enter a dungeon, explore it thoroughly, and find no trace of any creature within. In fact, the seemingly ancient ruins are a decoy, designed to keep anyone from finding the otherworldly structures hidden below.

A true mind flayer dungeon is a sprawling mass of chambers, planned and built according to intentions that make sense only to creatures of the Far Realm. It takes on a geometrically rigid spiral configuration, from which rise domes, bulbous towers, and twisting tubes.

Living Architecture

Mind flayers craft their structures to display features of living tissue. The walls of a mind flayer dungeon might have eyes, mouths, or even beating hearts. Illithids favor vertical architecture, with spires and domes looming high above the streets of their cities.

Slaver's Tower: Bone struts and thick tendons support this high tower. Inside, prisoners are lashed to the walls while they await the dark ritual that will make them into thralls.

Domed Arena: Mind flayers pit thralls against one another in mortal combat, but not as sport. Rather, the illithids treat such contests as experiments, carefully noting the strengths and weaknesses of the different races. The dome above is made of bone struts covered with stretched, translucent skin.

Rippling Tunnel: This tunnel's pulsating walls drip with slime, and explorers must move along it as if they were traversing the inside of a living creature.

Pervasive Psionics

A mind flayer dungeon thrums with psionic energy. Sneaking into such a site can be difficult when the very walls can sense the thoughts of intruders. Illithids imprint specific psychic patterns on their thralls, then set up psionic wards to alert them when anyone not imprinted enters certain areas.

Elder Brain Pool: In a mind flayer city, a singular creature known as an elder brain leads the illithids in their dark plans of conquest. Formed from the combined minds of deceased illithids, an elder brain dwells in a secure chamber at the center of a city. Soaking in a briny pool, it issues orders as it flares with tangible manifestations of psionic power.

Psionic Gatehouse: When a creature steps onto the spongy floor of this wedge-shaped chamber, the doors seal shut. In Deep Speech, a solemn voice declares that the way of the mind opens the path beyond. Only by demonstrating psionic ability or tricking the sensor can an intruder open the doors.

Crystal Library: In addition to a collection of standard books and tomes, a mind flayer library contains a small chamber in which rainbow-hued crystals line the walls. These contain psychic impressions implanted by telepathy, which can be unlocked through concentration. But, since those memories were peeled from creatures as their brains were eaten, the experience can be unpleasant.

Alien Experiments

Mind flayers dissect and reassemble sentient creatures so they can learn how to pervert their minds and bodies.

Laboratory: Several wide tables of green-gray metal line the center of this chamber. Partially vivisected creatures are held there, terror-stricken and wracked with pain. Tools extend from the ceiling—articulated arms of metal, bone, and muscle that bristle with implements of dissection and torture. Racks lining the walls are stacked high with organs in jars, writhing worms, and the body parts of Far Realm monstrosities.

Monster Cages: The creatures that survive the illithids' experiments live in small cages hanging from the ceiling of this large chamber. Normal creatures exposed to portals to the Far Realm, hybrids stitched together from mismatched parts, and deformed humanoids created during failed experiments can all be found here, living in constant agony. The stench is overwhelming, and these pitiful creatures beg for release—or death—if discovered.

THE LAIR OF THE MIND EATERS

Excerpt from the novella by Erin Gale Soulforge

Ever closer to the center of the spiral did I travel, heart racing and mind muddled. Never did I see such grotesqueries as those that formed the very bedrock of this city.

Darkened towers heavy with sinew and quietly groaning as if in pain reached up into the blackness of the cavern, one I could not see the height of but could sense was of unfathomable scale. Laughter rang out, and I soon realized it was my own.

I felt the seams of my mind pulling loose as my dread twisted in the grip of some fell power, bringing upon me a new emotion I could not fathom. Forging onward still, I came upon one last door, imperious and inlaid with scenes of death and dominion.

Ecstasy gripped me when dread should have, as I realized my path had for some time been leading me back to where I entered . . . I now stood at the place of my arrival, and could finally escape this hell beneath the earth.

Minotaurs

In the Underdark, the mazes of minotaurs spread out as webs of twisting passageways nearly impossible to escape. Some labyrinths are built by peaceable minotaurs bearing no ill will toward other humanoids. Others are crafted by great brutes that view the lesser races only as sacrifices for Baphomet, and whose complex passageways are the stuff of legend.

Twists without End

A minotaur labyrinth can drive intruders mad as they try to navigate its multitude of turns and corners—assuming they don't die of thirst or starvation first. A labyrinth on the surface might allow crafty adventurers to climb or fly to safety, but an underground maze offers no such option. Explorers here must trust to their mapmaking skills.

Stranded Monsters: Many creatures wander into a labyrinth and never emerge again, though not all such creatures perish. Sometimes monsters are able to find food and a place to lair, turning a labyrinth into an unlikely home.

Barriers: Rare is the minotaur labyrinth that consists of nothing except halls and turns. Most feature rivers, gorges, cliff faces, and vast chasms that explorers must negotiate.

Titanic Construction: The strength and ingenuity of minotaurs is demonstrated by the scope of their mazes. Huge bridges, towering staircases, and high walls abound to challenge intruders.

Center of the Maze

At the heart of most sizable labyrinths stands a minotaur city. Although not as densely populated as other humanoid settlements, a minotaur city is as strong as the stone from which it is carved.

Confusing Architecture: The center of a labyrinth can sometimes be as confusing as the maze that leads to it. Major roads suddenly become dead ends, buildings are chopped off in mid-rise, and passages can give onto pits or secret stairways without reason.

Plaza: This area at the center of all the paths of a labyrinth serves as a meeting place where minotaurs gather in times of war or celebration. Outsiders who end up in the plaza can become quickly confused as to which of its numerous entrances is the one they just passed through.

Shrine to Baphomet: To the regret of many visitors, an altar dedicated to the Horned King stands near the heart of most minotaur mazes. These barbaric shrines are caked with the blood of sacrificial victims and the leavings of dreadful feasts.

Wizards

All adventurers know that wizards are the masterminds behind some of the world's most unforgiving dungeons. Whether designed to house a trove of arcane lore or to keep the mundane world and its occupants at a distance, a wizard's dungeon is a place of bizarre wonders.

Such a dungeon is created in a place of power, whether in a mountainside holding an ancient arcane relic or on the perimeter of the abandoned temple of a long-dead god. No matter what its location or how dire the rumors of its magical defenses, a wizard's dungeon always attracts ambitious adventurers seeking to claim its treasures.

An Artist's Masterpiece

Wizards are not content to carve their dungeons from mundane caverns. They go out of their way to create or transform the dungeon environment with magic. A wizard considers himself or herself an artist, so that a dungeon becomes a medium for the individual's expression of arcane prowess.

Challenges Galore: Nearly every room and corridor in a wizard's dungeon holds potential danger to vex intruders or to test the worthiness of would-be allies. Flaming jets could suddenly shoot from the walls, or furniture might animate when someone touches it. The true nature of a wizard's dungeon is never what it appears.

Mystic Design: The floor plans of some wizards' dungeons are designed to reflect or harness arcane energy. These chambers and passages create mystic symbols when properly mapped, offering clues to uncovering a wizard's secrets.

Magical Locomotion: Many wizards create dungeons that require fantastic means of movement to traverse, from vertical shafts with no handholds to floating platforms that shuttle travelers over hazardous terrain.

Arcane Secrets Abound

Wizards create dungeons as a focus for magical research. For some, a dungeon is a testing ground for experimenting with new spells and magic items. Other wizards create dungeons to house the disastrous results of such experiments.

Laboratories: Wizards can't resist the opportunity to study their magic and find new ways to use it. Their dungeons frequently feature well-stocked laboratories where experiments are conducted. Vast piles of scrolls and racks of alchemical compounds abound in these workshops.

Summoning Chamber: This foreboding room is present in many an archmage's dungeon and is always bad news for adventurers. Within, the wizard communes with otherworldly entities that are able

TWENTY WEIRD THINGS IN A WIZARD'S DUNGEON

1. Signs or symbols that warn intruders to beware.
2. A ceiling that appears as a starry night sky.
3. A fountain that flows backward.
4. Animated shadows that move across floors or walls.
5. The stuffed body of a never-before-seen creature.
6. Piles of books being sorted by faeries or imps.
7. A well that draws water from the deep ocean.
8. Rats skittering along the ceiling.
9. Candles or torches burning with green flame.
10. Portraits with moving features or backgrounds.
11. Self-building bridges or passages.
12. A globe showing the geography of another world.
13. A mirror that shows the viewer's aged reflection.
14. Jars filled with obscure creatures, living or dead.
15. Doors that change location when not observed.
16. Glowing crystals singing the history of the listener.
17. The head or other body part of a historical figure.
18. Flagstones that illuminate when walked on.
19. A tunnel that seems to extend forever.
20. A chamber where time moves slowly or quickly.

to cross into the world through magic circles or other kinds of dimensional portals. These creatures are often bound to a wizard's command and thus eager to attack intruders.

Treasure Vault: The wealth of wizards is the stuff of legend. Every wizardly dungeon has a treasure vault, hidden in a warded cache or sealed behind mighty doors. Protected by passwords, riddles, or cunning magical seals, a wizard's vault can make those who survive entering it rich beyond their wildest dreams.

Sanctum: This carefully placed and secure chamber is where a wizard rests, studies, and ponders the mysteries of the cosmos. Some sanctums rest atop the rest of a wizard's dungeon in a secret apex level, while others are hidden in the dungeon's uttermost depths.

YUAN-TI

Filled with shadows, poison, and slithering menace, the dungeons of the yuan-ti are places of sanctity to their cold-blooded race. Hidden from the eyes of the world, nearby yet ever elusive, yuan-ti dungeons shelter the servants of Zehir as they hatch their insidious plots and dream of a time when their coils will encircle the world.

The scope of a yuan-ti dungeon varies depending on its role in the schemes of that race. Some are newly built extensions of a cult's secret lair within a city. Others are many-tunneled complexes built in a time before recorded history. All evoke a primal dread in intruders.

Places of Refuge

The yuan-ti's plan for domination begins with infiltrating the population centers of the world. The creatures establish safe houses in abandoned buildings or the homes of mesmerized citizens. From there, they work tirelessly to subvert the authority of a settlement, coming and going in secret.

Benevolent Fronts: A yuan-ti dungeon in the cities lurks behind the false front of a charitable organization or other benevolent group. The yuan-ti take great care to ensure that this deception is meticulously detailed, throwing off suspicion of what lies beneath.

Hidden Caches: Cultists operating safe houses keep supplies on hand for use by yuan-ti spies, including magic items, poisons, ritual scrolls, and bribe money. Their hiding places are sometimes no more secretive than a cellar or a space beneath the floorboards of a building, with a venomous snake left among the goods to protect them from thieves.

Escape Route: A yuan-ti cult maintains secret passages that its members can use to escape if their true nature is discovered. Such a route might lead deeper into an adjoining yuan-ti dungeon, or to an inconspicuous exit in the city above.

Lair of the Snakes

Yuan-ti dungeons are terrifying places, possessing an ancient and exotic wonder. Winding passages connect a dungeon's chambers, which are sculpted into serpentine curves.

The yuan-ti are perfectionists in their architecture, creating magnificent structures with impeccable detail. These works are cold and passionless, however, as befits a reptilian race. Fanged jaws, sinuous bodies, and scaled surfaces are a constant motif, rippling subtly in the shadows to rattle the nerves of intruders.

Cunning Construction: Yuan-ti dungeons have numerous secret passages that crisscross between chambers. In many cases, these passages also lead to the surface, providing easy ways in and out for yuan-ti spies.

Temple to Zehir: All yuan-ti revere Zehir, god of darkness, and they create grand temples to honor him. These sites feature stepped pyramids, giant statues, sacrificial pits, and images of snakes throughout.

Transformation Chamber: The most fearsome site in any yuan-ti dungeon is the chamber where the dark curses of that race are worked on victims and thralls. These places reek of sorcery and poison, and they echo with the screams of the unwitting creatures that enter and are forever changed.

Special Rewards

The deepest and most heavily fortified dungeons could well contain magical treasures that surpass anything known in the surface world. This section presents scrolls of power, magic items that provide godlike power to those who wield them.

It also contains stories and statistics for a quartet of dungeon companions—secondary characters that can enhance an adventure story and fill useful roles in a party at the same time.

Scrolls of Power

A scroll of power is a specially prepared magic item that contains an unusually rare spell, prayer, evocation, discipline, or hex. Created by gods, exarchs, and archwizards, these scrolls are among the mightiest and rarest of all magic items.

A scroll of power can be used by any character as a standard action. Once it is used, the magic of the scroll dissipates and cannot be brought forth again.

Item Descriptions

Each scroll of power description has three elements.

Tier: Like artifacts, scrolls of power are designed for a given tier of play.

Benefit: The effect created by the activation of the scroll.

Award: The sort of adventure or campaign style the scroll might benefit.

Mass Heal

Lady Dusk, the compassionate leader of a prominent healers' guild, spent her life traveling the world. Selfless and courageous, she sought always to mend the wounds of the suffering.

One day, Lady Dusk received a message from an old half-elf friend. Trinadel was an adventurous sort, forever looking to unravel ancient lore and uncover rare artifacts. The letter spoke of his stay in the village of Barovia, below the grim walls of Castle Ravenloft. Many in the village were ill, he wrote, and Dusk's services might help ease their affliction. He also mentioned the eerie nature of the place, and how he could not help but feel that he was being watched.

The urgency of the letter inspired Dusk to make the journey. Before long, she and her party entered the strange mists that surrounded Barovia. Disoriented and confused, the group quickly lost its way despite the best efforts of the ranger Rindasu. As the fog thickened, the howling of evil beasts began to rise. The group raced on, hoping to escape the abyssal wolves that shadowed their movement. But with each wolf slain, two more seemingly appeared from the shadows.

Finally surrounded, the party was forced to stop. The stalwart paladin Bryce stepped forward to protect his companions, who were exhausted and on the cusp of defeat. Lady Dusk knew that if she did not act quickly, she and her companions would perish.

Whispering a quick prayer to Sune, Dusk quickly drew forth a sacred scroll that was their only hope for survival. As she uttered its incantation, a divine light flared across the battlefield, and the mortal wounds that had ravaged the party were no more. Revitalized and ready for battle again, the adventurers drove off the wolves and raced through the woods to reach Barovia at last. No one spoke, but Dusk offered silent thanks to Sune for the prayer that had saved them.

This scroll was created during the Dawn War—a gift granted to mortal warriors fearless enough to stand at the gods' side against the forces of chaos. The power of Mass Heal was dispersed throughout the ravaged lands of the world and actively hunted by the primordials and their servants. No one knows how many of these relics survived those chaotic early days, but legends tell of worthy adventurers who receive visions regarding a scroll's location.

Tier: Paragon.

Benefit: Each ally within 10 squares of the user is restored to full hit points and maximum healing surges, and is cured of all diseases currently affecting him or her. In addition, each ally is immune to fear until the end of the encounter and gains temporary hit points equal to his or her bloodied value.

Award: Mass Heal is an excellent reward for a party that completes a difficult quest for a deity or a religious organization. The scroll might be hidden deep within the crypt of a long-dead hero, protected by guardian spirits or constructs. In the game, it can reverse the outcome of a climactic encounter or enable a party low on resources to continue an adventure as if starting fresh.

Polymorph

Bah'Li, battle mage of the high elves, had been fighting for weeks. The Tyrantclaw orcs' onslaught was more difficult to quell than he had originally anticipated. With his forces depleted and failure becoming a clear possibility, Bah'Li returned to his camp on the sandy beaches of the island. There, in secret, he opened an ornate rune-etched scroll case—the one his father had bestowed on him prior to his departure. He was told that the power of the scroll could never be spoken of, and that when he found himself in a battle from which there was no escape, its use would turn the tide.

A long-forgotten god was the inspiration for the dark mages who developed this fearsome spell—and who paid the price for twisting the laws of nature with their magic. Legends say that this unnamed god would steal the souls of the innocent and maliciously reshape them into creatures of horror.

Knowing that his acolytes yearned to share this dark magic of transformation, the god gifted them with a small portion of his power. The mages worked endlessly to craft the incantations that would grant them access to their god's designs. In the end, however, those designs were their undoing, as their vengeful god's magic transformed them into the creatures they sought to shape.

Today, precious few Polymorph scrolls of power exist, and all carry a hint of the evil that crafted them. Though Polymorph can be used safely, its benefit comes at a price.

Tier: Heroic.

Benefit: The scroll's user assumes the form of an elite monster of his or her level + 2 or lower. Until the end of the encounter, the user has the hit points, defenses, traits, powers, and special abilities of the monster, instead of his or her own. At the end of the encounter, the user resumes his or her normal form and takes damage equal to the bloodied value of the monster.

Award: The copies of Polymorph that still exist are protected by mighty wizards and other guardians. Adventurers might be given this scroll to use as a last resort when performing a task of grave importance.

Power Word Kill

For six days, Emirikol the Chaotic had battled the storm titan Volturnus. The renegade wizard used every spell he knew, calling down elemental fury against the monstrous foe. He summoned demons to rend the titan's flesh and blasted its mind with raw arcane power. Though battered and bloodied, Volturnus yet came on. With the titan's fury raining down on him, Emirikol climbed a rocky spur where the battle would conclude face to face. Volturnus thundered out a booming laugh, thinking the wizard would soon be dead. Yet there on the storm-swept rocks, Emirikol shouted out the word of undoing. Volturnus shrieked. The winds howled. Lightning raked the clouds. Then the titan fell dead, a threat no more.

For the first wizards, all the world's languages were insufficient for commanding arcane energy. Lacking the ability and vocabulary to voice the esoteric concepts behind their spellcraft, they created an arcane lexicon—a language of magic—from which the first power words were created.

Every wizard spell contains words of power, without which its magic would not take effect. Most are harmless on their own, manifesting magic only when shaped by a caster. A few, however, embody enough potential that merely speaking the words aloud is enough to draw that magic forth.

These most potent arcane effects—Power Word Stun, Power Word Blind, and the dreadful Power Word Kill—proved exceedingly dangerous when loosed on the world. Many archmages took it upon themselves to purge these words of power from the arcane lexicon, destroying spellbooks and revising history. The power words were lost, or so they hoped. As it happened, not every wizard was willing to part with such awesome arcane might.

Tier: Paragon.

Benefit: One mortal creature that the user can see dies. The creature must be of the same level as the user or lower. The user then drops to 0 hit points.

Award: The few copies of Power Word Kill that were preserved by the ancient wizards have been lost or hidden for centuries. Adventurers might uncover one of these scrolls in an ancient arcane laboratory, buried in a vault deep in the Underdark, or in a forgotten library of some dead civilization such as the tiefling empire Bael Turath or the serpent kingdom of Zannad. Wizards who hold copies of Power Word Kill guard them closely, fearing that the scrolls will be used against them.

Wish

The dying god sat on the throne of his crumbling fortress, contemplating the end of all that was. His children had bested him, and now the magic that was his lifeblood was failing. Time and the world would change as they always did, but he would no longer be a part of that.

With the last of his immortal might, he began the process of scribing a set of scrolls of power as an eternal testament to his strength and will. The scroll of Wish would be a final gift to his lost followers—the power of the gods themselves bestowed on mortal hands.

While casting the scrolls down into the world, he knew that mortals would one day find them buried deep in the tombs and dungeons of the past. He would not live to see the day that they were discovered. But as his life faded, he was content to know that his prowess would once more reshape the world.

When the world was young and the Dawn War raged across all lands, gods and primordials alike coveted the loyalty and assistance of the mortals who would heed their call. Each side did what they could to entice followers to their cause. Some gave gifts of arms, armor, and artifacts. Others offered access to forbidden lore—the most potent of which was the ability to reshape the nature of time and reality.

WAYNE ENGLAND

A wish is as great as its caster can imagine

In time, the use of the wish spell grew out of control. The mortals who had knowledge of it began to dream about challenging the masters of the Astral Sea and the Elemental Chaos. During the last days of the Dawn War, the gods and the primordials fought to erase all knowledge of it from mortal memory.

FOR THE DM: BE CAREFUL WHAT THEY WISH FOR

Wish has been the most powerful spell in every version of the Dungeons & Dragons game. Use this scroll with care. Ensure that your players know that the request of the entity that grants the wish is likely to be very challenging to fulfill. Unlike what is suggested in older editions of the game, you should respect the intent of the player who activates the scroll, not try to reverse or undo the wish by twisting the player's wording.

This most potent magic still lingers in the world, however, trapped in scrolls of power whose creation has been lost to time. Those who have heard the rumors of the Wish scrolls constantly seek out their resting places. Agents of the gods and the primordials are likewise keen to discover these lost scrolls, knowing that one employed by the wrong hands might enable the servants of imprisoned primordials to break their masters' chains.

Tier: Epic.

Benefit: The user of this scroll can make one request of a powerful entity. Some examples of valid wishes include: personal improvement (+4 to one ability score of the user's choice), a single uncommon or rare magic item, a clue to the secret name of a primordial, or the last known whereabouts of an artifact. The user must perform a service for the entity in recompense. Failure to complete the service has dire consequences.

Award: A Wish scroll might be granted as a reward for performing a service for an exarch, or might be uncovered in the tomb of a legendary hero. Rumors exist that some demon lords protect copies of this scroll, as do the scribes of the world's most prestigious library. No one can confirm these rumors, however, since revealing that one possesses such a scroll would likely cause mass hysteria and draw the attention of those who covet it.

BEN WOOTTEN

Dungeon Companions

Adventurers can come across intangible rewards during a dungeon delve, such as assistance from an unusual and unexpected source. The following characters can be used as companions to supplement the heroes' abilities during their underground adventures. Each presents a unique personality, background, and strengths that can be integrated into an adventure's plot. For more information on companion characters, see Dungeon Master's Guide 2.

Akaana Vir'tlar

"Fine, we'll do it your way . . . for now."

Entitled and petulant in attitude, this adolescent drow heiress doesn't know how alone she truly is. Her home, the drow city Aoroon, lies entombed in the venomous webs of the demon-spider Yorgrix—along with the shriveled husks of her formerly influential family. As a child hostage under the cruel eyes of a rival house's matriarch in a neighboring city, Akaana was spared the destruction of Aoroon. She was determined to be reunited with the survivors of her family, though, and used her magical talents to escape her captors. She now slips through the shadows of the Underdark, unaware of the danger ahead or the matriarch's assassins in hot pursuit.

Gaining Akaana

Akaana is young and sheltered, and not yet fully corrupted by the ways of her kind. At the same time, she is firmly indoctrinated in drow superiority, carrying herself as if she were a queen. The source of her arcane gifts is shrouded in mystery. She needs direction to fully develop them without hurting herself or others.

The adventurers might encounter Akaana as she wanders through the Underdark, or perhaps as she sneaks into their camp to steal food. She is quick to bargain for an alliance, but she refuses to plead for one. Accustomed to male slaves waiting on her in a sumptuous fashion, Akaana is dismissive toward males in the party. A strong female character, on the other hand, might find herself becoming a role model for this arrogant but vulnerable "princess."

Akaana Vir'tlar Level 13 Controller
Medium fey humanoid, drow

HP 68; Bloodied 34; Healing Surges 6 — Initiative +9
AC 26, Fortitude 24, Reflex 27, Will 27 — Perception +7
Speed 6 — Darkvision

Standard Actions

⊕ Dagger (weapon) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); +20 vs. AC
Hit: 2d4 + 9 damage.

Scare (fear, psychic) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Close blast 3 (creatures in the blast); +17 vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + 9 psychic damage, and the target cannot make opportunity attacks against Akaana until the end of her next turn.

Dark Gathering (psychic, zone) ✦ Encounter
Attack: Area burst 2 within 10 (enemies in the burst); +17 vs. Will
Hit: 1d10 + 9 psychic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of Akaana's next turn. If the target is in the origin square of the burst, the target is also blinded until the end of Akaana's next turn.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of Akaana's next turn and is heavily obscured to enemies.

Move Actions

Spider Climb ✦ Encounter
Effect: Akaana climbs up to her speed.

Minor Actions

Cloud of Darkness (zone) ✦ Encounter
Effect: Close burst 1. The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of Akaana's next turn. The cloud blocks line of sight for all creatures except Akaana. Any creature other than Akaana is blinded while entirely within the cloud.

Umbral Leap (teleportation) ✦ Encounter
Requirement: Akaana must be in a square of dim light or darkness.
Effect: Akaana teleports up to 10 squares to a square of dim light or darkness. Akaana need not see her destination, but if she cannot occupy that square, the teleportation is negated.

Triggered Actions

Lingering Magic ✦ Encounter
Trigger: An effect caused by one of Akaana's powers would end on her current turn.
Effect (Free Action): The triggering effect instead ends at the end of Akaana's next turn.

Skills Arcana +14, Intimidate +14, Stealth +14

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Str 8 (+5) | Dex 16 (+9) | Wis 12 (+7) |
| Con 10 (+6) | Int 17 (+9) | Cha 17 (+9) |

Alignment unaligned — Languages Common, Elven
Equipment robes, dagger, jewelry

Meepo

"Meepo is just a pawn in big game of life."

The morose kobold named Meepo has always been something of an outsider in his tribe. A runt even by kobold standards, he was assigned to the dangerous task of caring for a white dragon wyrmling hatched from a stolen egg. Ordinarily, such a job would be a great honor. In Meepo's case, though, the tribe's leader secretly hoped that the dragon would kill the wretched kobold. Fortunately for Meepo, he has consistently proven quick enough to avoid becoming the wyrmling's next meal, and he has become enamored of the creature despite its efforts to kill him.

| Meepo | Level 1 Striker |
|---|---|
| Small natural humanoid (reptile), kobold | |
| HP 26; Bloodied 13; Healing Surges 8 | Initiative +4 |
| AC 16, Fortitude 13, Reflex 16, Will 13 | Perception +7 |
| Speed 6 | Darkvision |
| Traits | |
| Combat Advantage | |
| Meepo deals 1d6 extra damage against any target granting combat advantage to him. | |
| Trap Sense | |
| Meepo gains a +2 bonus to all defenses against attacks made by traps. | |
| Standard Actions | |
| ⊕ Spear (weapon) ✦ At-Will | |
| Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); +7 vs. AC | |
| Hit: 1d8 + 4 damage. | |
| ⊗ Sling (weapon) ✦ At-Will | |
| Attack: Ranged 10/20 (one creature); +7 vs. AC | |
| Hit: 1d6 + 4 damage. | |
| Minor Actions | |
| Shifty Maneuver ✦ Encounter | |
| Effect: Close burst 2 (Meepo and allies in the burst); the target can shift 1 square as a free action. | |
| Triggered Actions | |
| ↯ Opportunistic Jab (weapon) ✦ Encounter | |
| Trigger: An enemy misses Meepo with an attack. | |
| Effect (Immediate Reaction): Meepo uses spear against the triggering enemy, and that creature grants combat advantage to Meepo for this attack. | |
| Skills Stealth +9, Thievery +9 | |
| Str 8 (-1) Dex 18 (+4) Wis 14 (+2) | |
| Con 14 (+2) Int 12 (+1) Cha 10 (+0) | |
| Alignment unaligned Languages Common, Draconic | |
| Equipment leather armor, spear, sling, 20 bullets | |

Gaining Meepo

Meepo lacks the cruelty found in many kobolds; he is a sensitive fellow. Any injury to his beloved dragon causes him to break down in fear for the dragon and of the punishment he might face for failure to keep the dragon safe.

Characters are most likely to encounter Meepo after a rival kobold tribe, a pack of goblins, or some other group has kidnapped the dragon. If the adventurers help Meepo recover his friend, he gladly helps them. Any character who treats him well could gain Meepo as a long-term ally and companion.

EVA WIDERMANN

Thresher

"Master save Thresher. Thresher help master."

None of the svirfneblin of Glimmerhollow would have guessed that when the feral troglodyte they nicknamed "Thresher" disappeared, the tunnels surrounding their town would grow more dangerous. A few gnome deaths were ascribed to Thresher, but the svirfneblin didn't realize that the troglodyte kept the tunnels leading to their city safer. Preferring aggressive prey, Thresher took down wandering monsters, bold svirfneblin, and potential invaders alike.

Gaining Thresher

Adventurers might encounter Thresher as a prisoner. If the characters free her, they find that Thresher speaks haltingly, although she is uncommonly intelligent for her kind. She might express her gratitude by leaving dead prey as gifts for those who freed her. If treated well, Thresher could show up when least expected, joining a battle on the side of her new friends.

Thresher Level 6 Striker
Medium natural humanoid (reptile), troglodyte

HP 53; Bloodied 26; Healing Surges 9 — Initiative +5
AC 21, Fortitude 20, Reflex 18, Will 19 — Perception +6
Speed 5 — Darkvision

Traits

Combat Advantage
Thresher deals 1d6 extra damage against any target granting combat advantage to her.

Troglodyte Stench ✦ Aura 1
Living enemies take a -2 penalty to attack rolls while in the aura.

Standard Actions

⊕ Claw ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); +12 vs. AC
Hit: 1d6 + 7 damage.

⸸ Tooth and Claw ✦ Encounter
Attack: Melee 1 (one or two creatures); +12 vs. AC. If Thresher targets only one creature, she can make this attack twice against that creature.
Hit: 1d6 + 7 damage. If the attack bloodies the target, Thresher can use claw against it as a free action.

⸸ Feral Pounce ✦ Encounter
Effect: Thresher shifts up to 2 squares before the attack.
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); +12 vs. AC
Hit: 3d6 + 7 damage, and Thresher shifts up to 2 squares. If Thresher has cover or concealment after shifting, she can make a Stealth check to hide as a free action.

Minor Actions

Blind Spot Advantage ✦ Encounter
Effect: Thresher gains concealment against one enemy she can see until the end of her next turn.

Skills Athletics +12, Stealth +10
Str 18 (+7) Dex 14 (+5) Wis 16 (+6)
Con 16 (+6) Int 10 (+3) Cha 8 (+2)
Alignment unaligned Languages Common, Draconic

Ultok

Although a young specimen, this umber hulk stands half again as high as a tall dwarf. It responds to Dwarven commands as attentively as a trained hound.

The juvenile umber hulk named Ultok wastes away from loneliness and hunger in the chambers of Z'kar, a dwarven mining outpost turned graveyard. Dwarves trained him to be a loyal mine laborer and a beast of burden. The tame umber hulk routed a group of orc raiders before they could raze Z'kar, but not before the orcs slaughtered the rest of the outpost's inhabitants. Now the carcasses of orcs mingle with the dwarven dead. Trained to await orders, Ultok waits stoically for a command that might never come.

Gaining Ultok

Ultok is a docile creature. The dwarves who employed him to excavate tunnels treated him well. Ultok assumes that adventurers are enemies when they first find him, and he loyally defends his master's body. His name is inscribed in Davek runes across his brass collar, which should tip off characters that Ultok is not the monster he appears to be. Obedient and eager to please, the umber hulk understands commands given in the Dwarven language, the sounds of which are comforting to him. With a little work, the characters can make Ultok a useful ally in their Underdark explorations, as long as they can keep him fed.

Ultok Level 10 Defender
Medium natural magical beast, umber hulk

HP 85; Bloodied 42; Healing Surges 12 — Initiative +7
AC 27, Fortitude 25, Reflex 22, Will 22 — Perception +12
Speed 5, burrow 1 (tunneling) — Darkvision, tremorsense 3

Standard Actions

⊕ Claw ✦ At-Will
Requirement: Ultok must not have a creature grabbed.
Attack: Melee 2 (one creature); +16 vs. AC
Hit: 1d10 + 10 damage, and the target falls prone.

⸸ Sweeping Claws ✦ Encounter
Effect: Ultok uses claw twice. If both attacks hit the same target, Ultok grabs the target (escape DC 18).

⇢ Daunting Gaze (psychic) ✦ Encounter
Attack: Close blast 5 (enemies in the blast); +14 vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + 8 psychic damage, and Ultok marks the target (save ends) and pulls it up to 3 squares.

Skills Athletics +15, Endurance +13
Str 20 (+10) Dex 14 (+7) Wis 14 (+7)
Con 16 (+8) Int 5 (+2) Cha 10 (+5)
Alignment unaligned Languages understands Dwarven

No matter where you go . . .

ERIC BELISLE

Appendix 1: Build Your Own Dungeon

Dungeon building can be one of the most enjoyable aspects of running a Dungeons & Dragons game. It can also be one of the most overlooked skills involved in being a great DM. They don't call you a Dungeon Master for nothing! You should be the consummate expert when it comes to creating fun and enjoyable dungeon adventures.

Creating an entertaining and challenging dungeon is as much an art as it is a science, and the process can be as simple or complex as you want it to be. Check out this section for important concepts designed to expand your understanding of how to approach the construction of your one-of-a-kind creation.

Linear vs. Dynamic

Before you start to draw anything up or even think too much about other basic decisions you'll need to make, decide whether you want to create a linear dungeon or a dynamic one.

The linear approach is the simplest way to create, manage, and run a dungeon adventure and its encounters. A linear dungeon involves fixed connections with limited choices and typically forces a group of players through a series of encounters from start to finish. Imagine a flowchart in which a series of linked events runs from one side of the page to the other. Limited options for variation might emerge as the group progresses through the dungeon, but you have most likely already decided what will occur and when.

As you create more dungeons, you will discover what works best for you and your players. A linear dungeon design is great for DMs who want to stick to a predefined story line, and for players who prefer a straightforward buildup leading to a climactic final encounter.

A dynamic dungeon is more complex than a linear one. An adventure in such a setting involves multiple plot paths in addition to incorporating a variety of decisions the players can make. Think of a dynamic dungeon as a decision-making engine. The players are challenged not only by the monsters, hazards, and traps they encounter, but also by the outcome of their choices as they face those challenges. A dynamic dungeon can provide a rewarding experience for your players, but it also involves more preparation on your part.

A dynamic dungeon is built around a series of decisions the players can make and the resulting outcomes of each decision. With each new outcome that occurs as the story unfolds, the path to the conclusion of the adventure can change. This means that if you were to run a different group through the same dungeon under the same initial circumstances, the experience that results might be completely different. The benefit of running a dynamic dungeon is that the players feel they have more control over the events that unfold.

Rough It Out

Now it's time to get out the basic building blocks of dungeon design—in other words, all the topics that are covered earlier in this book. Decide on an overall purpose or theme for the place and a location, then think about the kinds of creatures and environmental effects that might be part of the dungeon.

You might have started to think about these issues already—for instance, maybe you've always intended to build an underwater dungeon with natural, snaking passageways, or a "true" dungeon complex made up of traditional-style rooms and corridors. The point is that you should make a few basic decisions about your dungeon—rough it out in your mind—before you do any "actual" design.

Use the material in this book, or any other sources you have, to inspire you and help organize your thinking. Do you want to build one of the types of dungeons described in Chapter 2 (perhaps your players have a special interest in exploring a floating castle), or do you want to try creating a hybrid or a combination of more than one type? For an added dose of realism in a dungeon made up of natural caves, you can use images and details from actual locations to enhance both your design decisions and the playing experience.

Draw It Up

Next, using whatever materials you prefer, start to draft or sketch out what the map of your dungeon will look like. DMs have been getting great results for a long time by using a pencil and a pad of graph paper (and nowadays both of those implements might be electronic in nature).

With all of your basic decisions in mind, start to consider how you want the dungeon to unfold as the characters traverse it. Label each area with a name or a number that you can use as a reference. Once you have the dungeon (or at least a good-sized section of it) mapped out and labeled, you can begin the work of bringing it to life.

Create a description for each area you labeled. These descriptions can be as brief or as elaborate as you like. Some DMs are comfortable with brief descriptions that serve as memory joggers ("sleeping quarters"). Others like to note more detail ("sleeping quarters: mounds of animal hides"). If you include important sensory information such as smells and sounds in addition to what the characters can see, you can better describe the area to your players.

When your area descriptions are completed, you can start to populate your dungeon with monsters, hazards, and traps that fit your theme and are appropriate for the level of the party. For more information on constructing challenges based on level, see page 285 of the Rules Compendium.

For an extended adventure, you don't have to detail everything at once, even though you should have a good idea of what the dungeon will contain overall in terms of challenges. Leave yourself some "design room" by concentrating first on the details of the areas the characters will pass through early on, and fill in the trappings of other areas as the heroes get closer to them. This approach also enables you to adjust your final design as the plot of the adventure unfolds, which can do nothing but enhance the story.

Form and Function

It's important to note here that the design of your map isn't necessarily dictated by whether you're making a linear dungeon or a dynamic one. The difference between those kinds of dungeons is more story-based than structural. Although the layout of a linear dungeon is usually relatively straightforward and, well, linear, the same framework can work for a dynamic dungeon.

Conversely, you can draw up a dungeon that's a maze-like mix of chambers and the passages that connect them. The path the characters take to get through it might be convoluted but nonetheless still take them on a linear story . . . or the setting's complexity could lead you easily into designing a dynamic dungeon full of plot threads and story options.

Dynamic Decision-Making

In a linear dungeon, the question "What do we do next?" often has just one obvious answer. A dynamic dungeon, in contrast, requires you to create options in reaction to which the players will make decisions. These options can be as simple as a room with a choice of two exit doors, or as complex as a magical puzzle that whisks the adventurers to a dozen possible destinations based on the answers to a series of riddles.

If you want to challenge players with options that are large in number or complex in their ramifications, you could find that your dungeon has already outgrown the need for you to make a physical map of all the possibilities. You might find it easier to keep your thinking organized if you treat your complicated, dynamic dungeon as a series of events in a flowchart.

As you create the layout of your dungeon (in other words, draw the map), consider how the events of the story help to dictate the structure of the environment. For instance, you could create a branch in your story that sends the characters along one of two routes depending on their choice or on the outcome of a prior encounter. One route leads to a straightup combat encounter, and the other path takes the heroes into a puzzle that they must solve in consecutive steps. The location of the combat encounter might be a large single chamber, while the puzzle lends itself to being laid out in a network of narrow corridors. If you don't know what kinds of story choices you're going to give the players ahead of time, you can't take these facts into account on your map.

As you flesh out your dynamic dungeon, you open up more and more branches representing players' choices and possible outcomes. In some cases, different outcomes might lead to the same ultimate result. In many cases, the climactic encounter in a dynamic dungeon is the same regardless of how the adventurers arrive there. The choices that the players have made along the way, however, create a unique context for that climax, making them feel that they are the driving force behind the adventure.

Dungeon Synergy

Many dungeons, particularly those that have survived relatively unassailed by creatures from outside, have had decades or longer in which to establish interrelationships and synergy between the various inhabitants. Before you start to populate your dungeon with particular monsters, think about how much interaction the denizens of the place have with each other.

In certain kinds of dungeons, "synergy" (however you define the term) is a minor or nonexistent issue. Some of the most challenging dungeons are those made up almost entirely of encounters with traps, hazards, automatons, and nonliving monsters. In such a place, interdependence between the parts really matters only if you want it to.

On the other hand, a dungeon adventure that's driven by story elements and an over-arching plot is more likely to need this sort of attention. You can create a setting that plays off the rivalries and conflict between the creatures that live there. Doing this helps to make a dungeon a vital and diverse system, creating the impression that it is a living part of the world, not simply a passive environment for exploration.

A relationship between monsters could be as straightforward and one-directional as that between predator and prey, or master and slave. Or it can be as complex as the tensions that arise between opposing power groups or factions of equal strength. In such a situation, the characters could shift the balance of power depending on which side they support.

To flesh out these factions, ask yourself a few questions as a starting point. What creatures make up the faction? Is it a group dominated by a single kind of creature, or one that connects loose bands of different creatures? From what conflict or event did the faction originally arise? How long has the faction existed, and how has its influence grown or waned? Who runs the group? What kind of leadership structure is in place? Who are the faction's other important figures, and what resources do they have available?

Try to come up with as many details of this sort as possible, so that the players can immerse themselves in the roleplaying opportunities that arise as the adventurers cross paths with a faction's forces.

Unique Challenges

One of the greatest strengths of the D&D game, when it comes to adventure design, is the number and variety of monsters you have to choose from. After you decide what races and other kinds of creatures to feature in your dungeon, consider modifying some of them to suit the story of your adventure and help give players a distinctive experience.

We're not necessarily talking about mechanical changes here. Sure, you can differentiate monsters by adding to or altering their traits and powers—but sometimes you can make an even bigger difference, in the framework of your story, by changing the way monsters look or the way they act.

Behavior

A great way to make a monster unforgettable is to differentiate it from others of its kind by how it behaves during an encounter. Monsters that share the same statistics block can be nuanced in this way, giving the players a chance to think of their foes as more than just collections of abilities.

For example, the goblin is an iconic creature and a mainstay of low-level dungeons. Even so, the similarity between the attacks and powers that these "out of the book" creatures possess can quickly make repeated combat encounters with them feel stale. You can address this problem before it occurs by adding some individuality to one or more of those goblins.

Consider three goblin combatants that have identical statistics blocks. You could decide that goblin one is afraid of water, refusing to approach a magic pool at the center of the encounter area. Goblin two does a ridiculous-looking victory dance whenever it deals any damage to a foe. Goblin three is discovered cowering in a corner, begging for its life.

Without changing any combat statistics, you have created individuals among these commonly encountered creatures—individuals that stand out from the crowd. In all three of these cases, the characters might be faced with the question of whether to show mercy to such an unusual goblin—or they might wonder if the goblin's behavior is a ruse designed to throw them off guard. No matter what, you've given the players something unexpected to think about.

Appearance

It's commonly understood that, for all practical purposes, creatures of the same kind look and sound the same way. You and the players use this familiarity to your advantage all the time—when the characters burst into a room that holds a group of orcs, everyone at the table understands what they're looking at.

In your dungeon design, you could make one of those orcs stand out by having him wear a bright red helm. When the action begins, the other orcs form a protective circle around the special one. Are they protecting him because he truly is special, or is it the helmet they care about? What you or the players make of this situation and how it resolves might dictate how later events in the adventure unfold.

Imagine that the characters come across a band of human cultists deep inside your dungeon. You reveal that, unlike their pasty-faced compatriots, these enemies have skin seemingly bronzed by exposure to the sun. Is this evidence, perhaps, that a passage to the surface lies somewhere beyond? A simple change in the appearance of these cultists opens up a host of story possibilities for you to explore.

Mechanical Tools

Changing the game statistics of a monster is certainly a direct way to make your version of that creature stand out from the run-of-the-mill variety. If you're the sort of DM who enjoys tinkering with mechanics, the game offers tools and features to get you started. In particular, monster themes (from Dungeon Master's Guide 2, The Plane Above: Secrets of the Astral Sea, The Book of Vile Darkness, and other sources) and monster templates (n the Dungeon Master's Guide, Open Grave: Secrets of the Undead, and other sources) can be a big part of your DM's toolbox, enabling you to create distinctive variants of creatures that might otherwise become too familiar to players and characters alike.

Another way to alter monsters is by "reskinning." When you reskin a monster, you take away traits, usually having to do with the monster's race, and place another set of abilities on the monster, keeping most of its existing powers intact. For instance, you might have a special need for a drow spider master, which you could model on the hobgoblin beast master (Monster Vault, page 156). Remove its hobgoblin traits (natural origin, low-light vision) and add drow traits (fey origin, darkvision), then use "spider" in places where the hobgoblin's trait powers refer to "beast" or "magical beast." In similar fashion, you might add ice walk, cold resistance, vulnerability to fire, and the ability to burrow through ice to a bulette to create a glacial bulette. Just as with every other aspect of your dungeon creations, your imagination is the only limit to what you can do with reskinning.

WORDS FROM THE MASTER

Assume that you have assembled a group of players. Each has created a character, determined his or her race and profession, and spent some time carefully equipping these neophyte adventurers with everything that the limited funds available could purchase. Your participants are now eagerly awaiting instructions from you as to how to find the place they are to seek their fortunes in. You inform them that there is a rumor in the village that something strange and terrible lurks in the abandoned monastery not far from the place. In fact, one of the braver villagers will serve as guide if they wish to explore the ruins! (This seemingly innocent guide might be nothing more than he seems, or possibly an agent of some good or evil power, or a thief in disguise, or just about anything else. . . .) The party readily agrees, and so the adventure begins.

You inform them that after about a two mile trek along a seldom-used road, they come to the edge of a fen. A narrow causeway leads out to a low mound upon which stand the walls and buildings of the deserted monastery. One of the players inquires if the mound appears to be travelled, and you inform the party that only a very faint path is discernible—as if any traffic is light and infrequent. Somewhat reassured, another player asks if anything else is apparent. You describe the general bleakness of the bog, with little to relieve the view save a few clumps of brush and tamarack sprouting here and there (probably on bits of higher ground) and a fairly dense cluster of the same type of growth approximately a half mile beyond the abandoned place. Thus, the party has only one place to go—along the causeway—if they wish to adventure. The leading member of the group (whether appointed or self-elected, it makes no difference) orders that the party should proceed along the raised pathway to the monastery, and the real adventure begins.

—Gary Gygax, "The First Dungeon Adventure," AD&D Dungeon Masters Guide, 1979

Appendix 2: Random Dungeons

Random generation tables have been a feature of the D&D game since its earliest days. Roll the dice, let the results dictate (or at least suggest) what happens next, and see what you get!

This appendix gives you a set of tables for creating a random dungeon and filling it with details. The tables don't replace the need for you to decide how your dungeon is configured—you still get to draw a map and determine how the rooms and chambers are connected to one another. And you're still in control of the big story behind your dungeon adventure (in other words, there's no table for "Campaign Plotline"). Beyond that, you can let these tables do the work of fleshing out the environment and the story you're crafting. As you'll see from the example at the end of the appendix, the results of your rolls can send your imagination in directions you might not have anticipated.

When these tables are used in the order presented here, some of them come into play at each stage of your dungeon-building process. Many of them draw on or refer to information elsewhere in this book.

HOW TO USE THE TABLES

Short answer: Any way you want.

Slightly longer answer: Treat the results of your die rolls as either inflexible facts, sources of inspiration, or a combination of both.

If you let the tables dictate everything to you, it's possible that you'll find yourself facing a dilemma at some point when two die results don't play nice together (a kobold dungeon beneath a desert region?). You can resolve this sort of problem with a creative solution (the area wasn't a desert until after the kobolds moved in), or you can pretend the "kobolds" result or the "desert" result never happened and roll for something that seems more realistic.

By thinking of these tables as lists of options rather than exhaustive and clear-cut choices, you give yourself the freedom to pick and choose from the information and ideas the tables present. Scan through the possibilities of a list before you pick up a d20—something might jump out at you that's perfect for your needs, or you might be inspired to put your own spin on one of the choices we've provided.

Involving the Characters

To start the process, you need to make some basic decisions about how the characters will interact with your adventure story, and vice versa. If your players use the character themes presented in Chapter 1 for their adventurers, you can draw on the first section of Chapter 3 (pages 120–124) for adventure hooks that are appropriate for each of those themes. If you find that you can use one of those ideas in its entirety, great. More likely, you'll need to come up with specific plot points based on the characters' backgrounds and the existing threads of your campaign.

Revelations and twists are meant to shake up a dungeon crawl. Think of them as goodies that you can keep in your pocket until you see a way to use them to best advantage. Most are deliberately vague and can be applied to either the adventurers or the villains. If you enjoy thinking on your feet, you could wait and roll on this table while the adventure is under way, either dropping it into the game immediately or waiting till the story hits a lull before you reveal the surprise.

ADVENTURE HOOKS

Make 1 roll per player, discard one or two results. See page 120 for definitions.

| d20 | Adventure Hook |
|---|---|
| 1–7 | Announcement |
| 8–10 | Foreshadowing |
| 11–12 | Misdirection |
| 13–16 | Newcomer |
| 17–20 | Tough Choice |

REVELATIONS AND TWISTS

Make 1 to 3 rolls, combine as appropriate

| d20 | Revelation or Twist |
|---|---|
| 1 | Ambush is sprung |
| 2 | Connection between adventurers is revealed |
| 3 | Become stuck at the worst time |
| 4 | Innocent individual is put in danger |
| 5 | Old enemy reappears |
| 6 | Portal opens, chaos ensues |
| 7 | Preparation pays off |
| 8 | Previous adventure is cast in a new light |
| 9 | Rival faction arises |
| 10 | Seemingly useless talent comes in handy |
| 11 | Solved problem becomes unsolved |
| 12 | Someone dies suddenly |
| 13 | Someone returns from the dead |
| 14 | Someone seeks revenge |
| 15 | Something nasty is summoned |
| 16 | Sudden silence |
| 17 | Tool or creature turns against its master |
| 18 | Villain disappears (perhaps temporarily) |
| 19 | Villain's plan has a bigger scope |
| 20 | What everyone feared comes to pass |

Who, What, Where?

You can quickly create the building blocks of your dungeon by rolling for a dungeon maker, a dungeon type, and a general location on the following tables. See "Dungeon Makers," page 134, and "Dungeon Types," page 80, for more information.

MAKER

Make 2 rolls, choose one result

| d20 | Dungeon Maker | Page |
|---|---|---|
| 1 | Cultists | 134 |
| 2 | Drow | 134 |
| 3 | Duergar | 135 |
| 4 | Dwarves | 137 |
| 5 | Humans | 138 |
| 6 | Kobolds | 139 |
| 7 | Kuo-toas | 140 |
| 8 | Mind flayers | 142 |
| 9 | Minotaurs | 143 |
| 10 | Wizard | 143 |
| 11 | Yuan-ti | 144 |
| 12 | Other (or choose one) | |

TYPE

Make 2 rolls, choose one result

| d20 | Type | Page |
|---|---|---|
| 1-2 | Cave | 80 |
| 3-4 | Crypt | 80 |
| 5-6 | Death trap | 82 |
| 7 | Floating castle | 82 |
| 8 | Ice palace | 84 |
| 9 | Magic laboratory | 85 |
| 10 | Maze | 86 |
| 11-12 | Mine | 86 |
| 13-14 | Prison | 87 |
| 15-16 | Sewer | 88 |
| 17-18 | Volcano | 89 |
| 19-20 | Warren | 90 |

LOCATION

Make 1 roll or choose one result

| d20 | Location |
|---|---|
| 1-2 | Aquatic, or near a body of water |
| 3-4 | City |
| 5 | Desert |
| 6 | Floating earthberg |
| 7-8 | Forest |
| 9-10 | Mountain |
| 11 | Plains, hills, or valley |
| 12 | Tower |
| 13-15 | Underdark |
| 16 | Feywild |
| 17 | Shadowfell |
| 18 | Elemental Chaos |
| 19 | Astral Sea |
| 20 | Choose two compatible locations |

Why and How?

Once you know the fundamental facts about your dungeon's origin and where it is, you can use the tables in this section to dress it up.

The first table in this section speaks to the basic reason why the dungeon was built or what its predominant theme or purpose is at the present time. Knowing your dungeon's purpose allows you to give the place an over-arching theme, from the kinds of creatures that dwell there to the plot threads that play out during the adventure. From here, you can add in defenses, weaknesses, motifs, and strange effects to complete the package.

Defenses are meant to be used in addition to (not in place of) traps and monsters. Defenses such as protective wards could be incorporated during construction, though hazards such as an infestation of slime more likely appeared after the place was built.

Weaknesses are rarely created by a builder deliberately. Most either serve some purpose (such as a secret entrance), were caused by the builder's enemies (a competing faction living inside the dungeon), or came about as a result of the passage of time.

Motifs and strange effects go farther afield and add more detail. Motifs provide specific sights, smells, sounds, and so on to set the scene in your dungeon. Strange dungeons include a number of highly magical—and bizarre—features. These can be fun if you want to go outside the norm, but use these options with caution. (Of all these tables, it's probably best to use these two lists as possible choices rather than letting the dice dictate your results.)

PURPOSE

Make 2 rolls, choose one result

| d20 | Purpose |
|---|---|
| 1 | Battle |
| 2 | Courage |
| 3 | Death |
| 4 | Desperation |
| 5 | Dreams |
| 6 | Enslavement |
| 7 | Exploration |
| 8 | Fate |
| 9 | Grief |
| 10 | Honor or oaths |
| 11 | Horror |
| 12 | Illusion |
| 13 | Knowledge |
| 14 | Pain |
| 15 | Rebirth |
| 16 | Risk |
| 17 | Society |
| 18 | Talent with a specific power source |
| 19 | Transformation |
| 20 | Worship |

DEFENSES

Make 3 rolls, combine as appropriate

| d20 | Defense |
|---|---|
| 1 | Abnormal construction material |
| 2 | Animated statues |
| 3 | Creature infestation |
| 4 | Deadly environment (extreme temperature, poison gas, and so on) |
| 5 | Death traps |
| 6 | Emotion-altering aura |
| 7 | False entrances and tunnels |
| 8 | Guard posts |
| 9 | Hard-to-reach entrance |
| 10 | Illusions |
| 11 | Bound creature |
| 12 | Mazelike corridors |
| 13 | Mind-controlling traps |
| 14 | Overgrown vegetation or fungi |
| 15 | Password-locked doors |
| 16 | Scrying by villain or powerful monster |
| 17 | Sealed by authority or magic |
| 18 | Spirits of the dead |
| 19 | Underwater passages |
| 20 | Wards |

WEAKNESSES

Make 2 rolls, combine as appropriate

| d20 | Weakness |
|---|---|
| 1-2 | Aged and crumbling |
| 3 | Competing factions |
| 4 | Festival or ceremony distracts residents |
| 5 | Frequent visitors |
| 6-7 | Item or magical effect allows safe passage |
| 8 | Overconfident villain |
| 9 | Earlier intruders triggered traps/killed monsters |
| 10-11 | Secret entrance |
| 12-13 | Secret tunnels |
| 14-15 | Shoddy or hasty construction |
| 16 | Simple to navigate |
| 17 | Some areas off-limits (sacred, cursed, and so on) |
| 18 | Sprawling and difficult to defend |
| 19 | Teleportation circle with known key |
| 20 | Traitors in the villain's ranks |

MOTIFS

Roll as desired, or choose one or more

| d20 | Motif |
|---|---|
| 1 | Ancient writing appears on visitors like tattoos |
| 2 | Anything eaten tastes like a specific food |
| 3 | Black handprints |
| 4 | Diagrams of constellations |
| 5 | Doors speak in strange language when opened |
| 6 | Echoing screams of slain adventurers |
| 7 | Eyelike glowing gemstones set in walls |
| 8 | Footsteps echo too many times |
| 9 | Light sources change color in different areas |
| 10 | Metal fixtures are surprisingly cold or hot |
| 11 | Mirrors show past self |
| 12 | Persistent fragments of spells cast long ago |
| 13 | Fine art, tapestries, or mosaics |
| 14 | Scent of burning incense |
| 15 | Wall lamps light if creatures come near |
| 16 | Shrines containing coins and trinkets |
| 17 | Skulls inscribed with names hang from ceiling |
| 18 | Spectral blood dripping |
| 19 | Thin slime coats all, shrinks away from flames |
| 20 | Shroudlike sheets of fog |

STRANGE EFFECTS

Roll as desired, or choose one or more

| d20 | Effect |
|---|---|
| 1 | Creatures that enter swap race or gender |
| 2 | Constructed of dreams or ideas |
| 3 | Dead rise immediately as undead |
| 4 | Exists in a space between planes |
| 5 | Falling apart, pieces dropping into thin air |
| 6 | Flesh and bone warp and distort over time |
| 7 | Flowing energy randomly recharges one encounter power during one encounter per day |
| 8 | Gravity pulls in different directions |
| 9 | Instincts are amplified, reason diminished |
| 10 | Some or all of the dungeon is living creature |
| 11 | Built on rope bridges between titanic trees |
| 12 | Magnetic walls |
| 13 | Paths loop back on themselves |
| 14 | Reshapes to match master's emotions |
| 15 | Rooms built into sides of a single vertical shaft |
| 16 | Rooms rearrange constantly |
| 17 | Surfaces are plants or fungi |
| 18 | All text perused appears blurry, can't be read |
| 19 | Time passes strangely or subjectively |
| 20 | Ward prevents all battle and bloodshed |

Populating a Dungeon

In a dungeon, the heroes don't often run into helpful or allied characters. Instead, the adversaries and monsters set the tone of the adventure. The tables in this section include the major groups of underground dwellers, separated into three categories. A lord controls a dungeon, servants work for the lord, and monsters either prowl on their own or work for those that have enslaved them.

To add more narrative possibilities, roll on the quirks tables to put a different spin on each adversary the adventurers face.

LORD

Make 2 rolls, choose one result; go to Lord Quirks

| d20 | Master |
|---|---|
| 1-2 | Aboleth |
| 3-4 | Beholder |
| 5-6 | Mind flayer |
| 7-8 | Duergar |
| 9 | Roper |
| 10-11 | Dragon |

| | |
|---|---|
| 12-13 | Rakshasa |
| 14-15 | Archmage |
| 16-17 | Lich, vampire, or mummy |
| 18-19 | Giant or titan |
| 20 | Ascended servant (roll on Servants) |

LORD QUIRKS

Make 1 roll or choose one

| d20 | Quirk |
|---|---|
| 1-2 | Arrogant |
| 3-4 | Ascetic |
| 5-6 | Devout |
| 7-8 | Duplicitous |
| 9-10 | Greedy |
| 11-12 | Insane |
| 13-14 | Megalomaniacal |
| 15-16 | Militaristic |
| 17-18 | Obsessed |
| 19-20 | Possessed |

SERVANTS

Make 3 rolls, choose two results; go to Servant Quirks

| d20 | Servants |
|---|---|
| 1 | Constructs |
| 2 | Cultists |
| 3 | Demons or devils |
| 4 | Derro |
| 5 | Drow |
| 6 | Duergar |
| 7 | Giants |
| 8 | Gnolls |
| 9 | Goblins |
| 10 | Grimlocks |
| 11 | Kobolds |
| 12 | Kuo-toas |
| 13 | Lycanthropes |
| 14 | Minotaurs |
| 15 | Myconids |
| 16 | Orcs |
| 17 | Svirfneblin or gnomes |
| 18 | Troglodytes |
| 19 | Wizards |
| 20 | Yuan-ti |

SERVANT QUIRKS

Make 1 roll for each servant result, or choose one

| d20 | Quirk |
|---|---|
| 1 | Crafty |
| 2 | Devout |
| 3 | Diseased |
| 4 | Factionalized |
| 5 | Feral |
| 6 | Insane |
| 7 | Mutant |
| 8 | Playful |
| 9 | Rebellious |
| 10 | Makes traps |
| 11 | Undead |
| 12 | Uses magic |
| 13 | Ghostly |
| 14 | Cannibalistic |
| 15 | Psionic |
| 16 | Heretical |
| 17 | Honor-bound |
| 18 | Fascistic |
| 19 | Mind-controlled |
| 20 | Diplomatic |

MONSTERS

Make up to 3 rolls, or choose as desired

| d20 | Monster |
|---|---|
| 1-2 | Ankhegs |
| 3-4 | Carrion crawlers |
| 5 | Cave fishers |
| 6-7 | Elementals |
| 8 | Hook horrors |
| 9 | Mimics |
| 10-11 | Otyughs |
| 12-14 | Oozes or slimes |
| 15 | Purple worms |
| 16 | Rust monsters |
| 17-18 | Stirges |
| 19-20 | Umber hulks |

Random Dungeon Example

Let's say your group contains five players. You roll five times on the Adventure Hooks table and get 6, 9, 10, 14, and 19. One of the characters has the escaped thrall theme, and you think that a tough choice hook would work well. The group also contains a treasure hunter and a deep delver, who probably are more interested in just being told where the payoff is. With these ideas in mind, you decide to keep the 19 (tough choice), the 6 (announcement), and also decide on a foreshadowing hook since two of your rolls (9 and 10) gave that result.

Now that you have an idea of what sorts of hooks can draw in the characters, you decide to roll three times on the Revelations and Twists table for some inspiration, keeping any results that seem promising. You get 5 (old enemy), 2 (hidden connection), and 15 (something nasty). These can work pretty well together. For example, the summoning of an elder evil is prophesied but can be thwarted by recovering an ancient holy item, which the treasure hunter seeks. The escaped thrall turns out to have been imprisoned by servitors of that evil being, and might have experienced glimpses of where the item lies. You can use these ideas to form a general story arc.

Now that you have an idea of the adventure's main thrust, you roll to create the basics of the dungeon. You start with the Makers table, rolling 7 (kuo-toas) and 3 (duergar). The idea of raising an ancient evil works better with kuo-toas, so you go with that.

Next, you roll on the Type table, getting 7 (floating castle) and 11 (mine). A floating castle isn't right for this idea, but you could work with an abandoned mine that has delved far into the earth.

Finally, you roll on the Location table, getting 9 (mountain). Sure, that can work. Maybe some duergar dug down in search of abyssally infused ores and broke into a subterranean sea under a mountain, awakening something that drove the original miners out but attracted the mad kuo-toas.

To start the next section, you get rolls of 8 (fate) and 11 (horror) on the Purpose table. The second of those results resonates, because of its obvious connection to the idea of an unknown evil deep below.

With a story line and a basic dungeon theme, you're ready to add some details. Rolling three times on the Defenses table gives results of 20 (wards), 7 (false passages), and 12 (mazes). The haphazard tunnels of a duergar mine are well suited to mazes, dead ends, and twisty passages. Perhaps a ward was laid over the area in an attempt to keep the awakening evil from leaving its lake.

What about weaknesses? You roll twice on that table, getting 6 (item allows safe passage) and 4 (festival or ceremony). Both of these are great. The kuo-toas might be performing a ritual in preparation for breaking the wards that hold in the ancient evil. If the adventurers can find the holy relic before the ceremony is done, they might be able to travel unnoticed, perhaps through the lake itself, while the fish creatures are focused on their rite.

At this point, you've got enough to go on to start outlining your dungeon. If you want, you can randomly roll or choose motifs or strange effects for additional flavor.

Finally, it's time to establish who's in charge of this place. What is that ancient evil? You roll twice on the Lord table and get 1 (aboleth) and 7 (duergar). As it happens, both of these could work well, though you need to keep only one. An aboleth overlord might be what the duergar miners encountered—and in fact duergar might still occupy the upper reaches of the mountain's interior. You can give the lord a random quirk, choose one from the table, or give it some other characteristic of your invention.

For servants, you could keep the duergar result. Your dungeon is sure to contain kuo-toas as well. So you can round things off with three rolls on the Monsters table. You get 3 (carrion crawlers), 14 (oozes), and 17 (stirges). Both oozes and carrion crawlers make sense in the damp caverns of the kuo-toas and their abolethic master.

Is the aboleth the unknown evil that the characters must overcome—or is it just the lieutenant of something far more terrifying? That's up to you.

RALPH HORSLEY

This troglodyte makes drawings of creatures it sees outside its cave. Recognize anything . . . or anyone?

PREPARE YOURSELF FOR THE RISE OF THE UNDERDARK™

The lightless realm of the drow has long been a place of danger, deceit, and death. But now, the schemes of the Spider Queen threaten to extend her reach to the surface world like never before.

Delve into the darkness to discover: tabletop roleplaying supplements and accessories, novels and comic books, board games and video games, apparel, great play experiences at local game stores, and more.

FIND OUT MORE AT DUNGEONSANDDRAGONS.COM

All trademarks are property of Wizards of the Coast LLC ©2012 Wizards.

DUNGEONS & DRAGONS

THE DARKNESS BECKONS

Being an adventurer is a hard business. Dungeons offer adventure, treasure, and glory, but they are fraught with deadly traps, vicious monsters, and sinister puzzles. It takes more than a stout heart and a sharp mind to survive. A hero must be equipped with knowledge and tools if he or she is to face the unknown and live to tell about it.

Into the Unknown: The Dungeon Survival Handbook™ is a guide for players and Dungeon Masters who want to play in a Dungeons & Dragons® game that explores dungeons and plumbs the blackest reaches of the Underdark. Whether you're a Dungeon Master seeking to create a fantastic location populated with beholders and mind flayers, or a player looking to equip your character with the means to fight such threats, this book is for you. Players will find an assortment of new powers, equipment, feats, character themes, and player races, including the kobold and the goblin. For Dungeon Masters, the book is a trove of dungeon-building advice and details, including lore on classic dungeon monsters, some quirky companions for adventurers, a few timeless treasures, and tips for incorporating players' character themes into an adventure.

For use with these Dungeons & Dragons products:

Player's Handbook® rulebooks
Monster Manual® rulebooks
Rules Compendium™
Heroes of the Forgotten Kingdoms™
Heroes of the Fallen Lands™
Monster Vault™
Dungeon Master's Guide® rulebooks

DungeonsandDragons.com

ISBN: 978-0-7869-6032-3
52995
9 780786 960323
EAN
Sug. Retail: U.S. $29.95 CAN $35.00
Printed in the U.S.A. 398650000

AGE 12+

DUNGEONS & DRAGONS®

DELUXE DUNGEON MASTER'S SCREEN

ROLEPLAYING GAME ACCESSORY

EXPERIENCE POINT REWARDS

| Threat Level | XP Value | Threat Level | XP Value | Threat Level | XP Value |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | 100 | 11 | 600 | 21 | 3,200 |
| 2 | 125 | 12 | 700 | 22 | 4,150 |
| 3 | 150 | 13 | 800 | 23 | 5,100 |
| 4 | 175 | 14 | 1,000 | 24 | 6,050 |
| 5 | 200 | 15 | 1,200 | 25 | 7,000 |
| 6 | 250 | 16 | 1,400 | 26 | 9,000 |
| 7 | 300 | 17 | 1,600 | 27 | 11,000 |
| 8 | 350 | 18 | 2,000 | 28 | 13,000 |
| 9 | 400 | 19 | 2,400 | 29 | 15,000 |
| 10 | 500 | 20 | 2,800 | 30 | 19,000 |

To calculate the target XP for an encounter of a given level or to calculate the appropriate major quest XP reward for a given level, multiply the XP value shown on the table by the number of player characters in the party.

ATTACK ROLL MODIFIERS

| Circumstance | Modifier |
|---|---|
| Combat advantage against target | +2 |
| Attacker is prone | -2 |
| Attacker is restrained | -2 |
| Target has partial cover | -2 |
| Target has superior cover | -5 |
| Target has partial concealment (melee and ranged only) | -2 |
| Target has total concealment (melee and ranged only) | -5 |
| Long range (weapon attacks only) | -2 |
| Charge attack (melee only) | +1 |

BASE EXPLORATION SPEED

| Speed | Per Day | Per Hour | Per Minute |
|---|---|---|---|
| 5 | 25 miles | 2½ miles | 250 ft. |
| 6 | 30 miles | 3 miles | 300 ft. |
| 7 | 35 miles | 3½ miles | 350 ft. |
| 8 | 40 miles | 4 miles | 400 ft. |

TERRAIN AND TRAVEL

| Distance Multiplier | Terrain |
|---|---|
| × ½ | Mostly difficult terrain (dense forests, mountains, deep swamps, rubble-choked ruins) |
| × ¾ | Extensive difficult terrain (forests, hills, swamps, crumbling ruins, caves, city streets) |
| × 1 | Very little difficult terrain (open fields, plains, roads, clear dungeon corridors) |

DAMAGE BY LEVEL

| Character Level | Single Target | Two or More Targets |
|---|---|---|
| 1 | 1d8 + 4 | 1d6 + 3 |
| 2 | 1d8 + 5 | 1d6 + 4 |
| 3 | 1d8 + 6 | 1d6 + 5 |
| 4 | 2d6 + 5 | 1d8 + 5 |
| 5 | 2d6 + 6 | 1d8 + 6 |
| 6 | 2d6 + 7 | 1d8 + 6 |
| 7 | 2d8 + 6 | 2d6 + 4 |
| 8 | 2d8 + 7 | 2d6 + 5 |
| 9 | 2d8 + 8 | 2d6 + 6 |
| 10 | 2d8 + 9 | 2d6 + 6 |
| 11 | 3d6 + 9 | 2d6 + 7 |
| 12 | 3d6 + 10 | 2d8 + 6 |
| 13 | 3d6 + 11 | 2d8 + 7 |
| 14 | 3d6 + 12 | 2d8 + 7 |
| 15 | 3d6 + 13 | 2d8 + 8 |
| 16 | 3d8 + 11 | 3d6 + 8 |
| 17 | 3d8 + 12 | 3d6 + 9 |
| 18 | 3d8 + 13 | 3d6 + 9 |
| 19 | 3d8 + 14 | 3d6 + 10 |
| 20 | 3d8 + 15 | 3d6 + 11 |
| 21 | 4d6 + 15 | 3d8 + 9 |
| 22 | 4d6 + 16 | 3d8 + 9 |
| 23 | 4d6 + 17 | 3d8 + 10 |
| 24 | 4d6 + 18 | 3d8 + 11 |
| 25 | 4d6 + 19 | 3d8 + 12 |
| 26 | 4d8 + 16 | 4d6 + 11 |
| 27 | 4d8 + 17 | 4d6 + 12 |
| 28 | 4d8 + 18 | 4d6 + 13 |
| 29 | 4d8 + 19 | 4d6 + 14 |
| 30 | 4d8 + 20 | 4d6 + 15 |

Use this table to set damage for an effect not covered in the rules—a character stumbles into a campfire or falls into a vat of acid, for example.

FOOD, DRINK, AND LODGING

| Item | Price |
|---|---|
| Meal, common | 2 sp |
| Meal, feast | 5 gp |
| Ale, pitcher | 2 sp |
| Wine, bottle | 5 gp |
| Typical room (per day) | 5 sp |
| Luxury room (per day) | 2 gp |

LIGHT SOURCES

| Source | Radius | Brightness | Duration |
|---|---|---|---|
| Candle | 2 | Dim | 1 hour |
| Torch | 5 | Bright | 1 hour |
| Lantern | 10 | Bright | 8 hours/pint |
| Campfire | 10 | Bright | 8 hours |
| Sunrod | 20 | Bright | 4 hours |
| Phosphorescent fungi | 10 | Dim | Ongoing |

MONSTER KNOWLEDGE DCS

| Monster Knowledge | DC |
|---|---|
| Name, type, and keywords | Moderate (monster level) |
| Powers, resistances, and vulnerabilities | Hard (monster level) |

KNOWLEDGE SKILLS BY ORIGIN

| Origin or Keyword | Skill |
|---|---|
| Aberrant origin | Dungeoneering |
| Construct keyword | Arcana |
| Elemental origin | Arcana |
| Fey origin | Arcana |
| Immortal origin | Religion |
| Natural origin | Nature |
| Shadow origin | Arcana |
| Undead keyword | Religion |

DCS TO BREAK OR BURST COMMON ITEMS

| Strength Check to: | Break DC |
|---|---|
| Break down wooden door | 13 |
| Break down reinforced door | 16 |
| Break down barred door | 20 |
| Break down iron door | 23 |
| Break down adamantine door | 27 |
| Break through force portal | 30 |
| Force open wooden portcullis | 21 |
| Force open iron portcullis | 28 |
| Force open adamantine portcullis | 32 |
| Burst rope bonds | 21 |
| Burst iron chains | 28 |
| Burst adamantine chains | 35 |
| Smash wooden chest | 16 |
| Smash iron box | 23 |
| Smash adamantine box | 30 |

STANDARD ACTIONS

| Action | Description |
|---|---|
| Administer a potion | Help an unconscious creature consume a potion |
| Aid another | Improve an ally's skill check or ability check |
| Aid attack | Improve an ally's attack roll |
| Aid defense | Improve an ally's defenses |
| Basic attack | Make a basic attack |
| Bull rush | Push a target 1 square and shift into the vacated space |
| Charge | Move and then make a melee basic attack or a bull rush |
| Coup de grace | Score a critical hit against a helpless enemy on an attack |
| Equip or stow a shield | Use a shield or put it away |
| Grab | Seize and hold an enemy |
| Ready an action | Ready an action to perform when a specified trigger occurs |
| Second wind | Spend a healing surge and gain a bonus to defenses (once per encounter) |
| Total defense | Gain a +2 bonus to all defenses until next turn |

MOVE ACTIONS

| Action | Description |
|---|---|
| Crawl | While prone, move up to half speed |
| Escape | Escape a grab and shift 1 square |
| Run | Move up to speed + 2; grant combat advantage until next turn and take a -5 penalty to attack rolls |
| Stand up | Stand up from prone |
| Shift | Move 1 square without provoking opportunity attacks |
| Squeeze | Reduce size by one category, move up to half speed, and grant combat advantage |
| Walk | Move up to speed |

MINOR ACTIONS

| Action | Description |
|---|---|
| Draw or sheathe a weapon | Use or put away a weapon |
| Drink a potion | Consume a potion |
| Drop prone | Drop down to lie on the ground |
| Load a crossbow | Load a bolt into a crossbow to fire it |
| Open or close a door | Open or close a door or container that isn't locked or stuck |
| Pick up an item | Pick up an object in one's space or in an unoccupied square within reach |
| Retrieve or stow an item | Retrieve or stow an item on self |

IMMEDIATE ACTION

| Action | Description |
|---|---|
| Readied action | Take readied action when its trigger occurs |

OPPORTUNITY ACTION

| Action | Description |
|---|---|
| Opportunity attack | Make a melee basic attack against an enemy that provokes an opportunity attack |

FREE ACTIONS

| Action | Description |
|---|---|
| Delay | Put off a turn until later in the initiative order |
| Drop held items | Drop any items currently held in one's space or in an unoccupied square within reach |
| End a grab | Let go of an enemy |
| Spend an action point | Spend an action point to take an extra action (once per encounter, not in a surprise round) |
| Talk | Speak a few sentences |

SKILL CHALLENGE COMPLEXITY

| Complexity | Successes | Advantages | Typical DCs |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | 4 | – | 4 moderate |
| 2 | 6 | – | 5 moderate, 1 hard |
| 3 | 8 | 2 | 6 moderate, 2 hard |
| 4 | 10 | 4 | 7 moderate, 3 hard |
| 5 | 12 | 6 | 8 moderate, 4 hard |

Advantages

For each success beyond six required in a challenge, one of these advantages should be available.

- A success against a hard DC counts as two successes: a success against both a hard DC and a moderate DC.
- A success against a hard DC removes a failure that has already been accumulated in the challenge, instead of counting as a success.
- A success against an easy DC counts as a success against a moderate DC.
- A success against a moderate DC counts as a success even though the adventurer making the check has already used the same skill to gain a success against a moderate DC.

CHARGING

Charge a Target

Action: Standard action. When a creature takes this action, it chooses a target. Figure out how far away the creature is from the target—even counting through squares of blocking terrain—and then follow these steps.

- 1. Move: The creature moves up to its speed toward the target. Each square of movement must bring the creature closer to the target, and the creature must end the move at least 2 squares away from its starting position.
- 2. Attack: The creature either makes a melee basic attack against the target or uses bull rush against it. The creature gains a +1 bonus to the attack roll.
- 3. No Further Actions: The creature can't take any further actions during this turn, except free actions. Some free actions, such as spending an action point, can grant additional actions.

DIFFICULTY CLASS BY LEVEL

| Level | Easy DC | Moderate DC | Hard DC |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | 8 | 12 | 19 |
| 2 | 9 | 13 | 20 |
| 3 | 9 | 13 | 21 |
| 4 | 10 | 14 | 21 |
| 5 | 10 | 15 | 22 |
| 6 | 11 | 15 | 23 |
| 7 | 11 | 16 | 23 |
| 8 | 12 | 16 | 24 |
| 9 | 12 | 17 | 25 |
| 10 | 13 | 18 | 26 |
| 11 | 13 | 19 | 27 |
| 12 | 14 | 20 | 28 |
| 13 | 14 | 20 | 29 |
| 14 | 15 | 21 | 29 |
| 15 | 15 | 22 | 30 |
| 16 | 16 | 22 | 31 |
| 17 | 16 | 23 | 31 |
| 18 | 17 | 23 | 32 |
| 19 | 17 | 24 | 33 |
| 20 | 18 | 25 | 34 |
| 21 | 19 | 26 | 35 |
| 22 | 20 | 27 | 36 |
| 23 | 20 | 27 | 37 |
| 24 | 21 | 28 | 37 |
| 25 | 21 | 29 | 38 |
| 26 | 22 | 29 | 39 |
| 27 | 22 | 30 | 39 |
| 28 | 23 | 30 | 40 |
| 29 | 23 | 31 | 41 |
| 30 | 24 | 32 | 42 |

DCS FOR COMMONLY USED SKILLS

| Acrobatics | DC |
|---|---|
| Balance on narrow surface (less than 1 foot) | Moderate |
| Balance on unstable surface | Moderate |
| Balance on very narrow surface (less than 6 inches) | Hard |
| Balance on narrow and unstable surface | +5 |
| Escape from restraints | Hard |
| Hop down 10 feet and remain standing | 15 |

| Arcana | DC |
|---|---|
| Identify conjuration or zone | Moderate (effect level) |
| Identify magical phenomenon | Hard (effect level) |
| Sense the presence of magic | Hard |

| Athletics | DC |
|---|---|
| Climb a ladder | 0 |
| Climb a rope | 10 |
| Climb an uneven surface (cave wall) | 15 |
| Climb a rough surface (brick wall) | 20 |
| Climb a slippery surface | +5 |
| Climb an unusually smooth surface | +5 |
| Catch hold while falling | +5 |
| High jump (Double the check result with a running start) | 10 per foot |
| Long jump (Double the check result with a running start) | 10 per square |
| Swim in calm water | 10 |
| Swim in rough water | 15 |
| Swim in stormy water | 20 |

| Bluff | DC |
|---|---|
| Deceive a creature | Creature's passive Insight |
| Gain combat advantage by feinting | Creature's passive Insight |
| Hide from a creature | Creature's passive Insight |

| Dungeoneering or Nature | DC |
|---|---|
| Find food and water for 1 person | 15 |
| Find food and water for 5 people | 25 |

| Heal | DC |
|---|---|
| Grant second wind | 10 |
| Grant a saving throw or a +2 bonus to a saving throw | 15 |
| Stabilize the dying | 15 |

| Insight | DC |
|---|---|
| Sense motives or attitudes | Moderate (target level) |
| Sense outside influence | Hard (effect level) |

| Perception | DC |
|---|---|
| Hear the noise of a battle | 0 |
| Hear normal conversation | Easy |
| Hear whispers | Hard |
| Listen through a door | +5 |
| Listen through a wall | +10 |
| Hear a noise more than 10 squares away | +2 |
| Spot something barely obscured | Easy |
| Spot something well obscured | Hard |
| Spot something more than 10 squares away | +2 |
| Find tracks in soft ground (snow, loose dirt, mud) | Moderate |
| Find tracks in hard ground (wood or stone) | Hard |
| Rain or snow since tracks were made | +10 |
| Each day since tracks were made | +2 |
| Quarry obscured its tracks | +5 |
| Huge or larger creature | -5 |
| Group of ten or more | -5 |

| Streetwise | DC |
|---|---|
| Gather rumors and information: | |
| In a familiar settlement | Easy |
| In an unfamiliar but typical settlement | Moderate |
| In a foreign settlement | Hard |
| Information is secret or closely guarded | +10 |

| Thievery | DC |
|---|---|
| Disable trap | Hard (trap level) |
| Open lock | Hard |
| Pick pocket | Hard (target level) |
| Sleight of hand | Onlookers' passive Perception |

DUNGEONS & DRAGONS®

Dungeons & Dragons and its logo are trademarks of Wizards of the Coast LLC in the U.S.A. and other countries.
First printing February 2011 ©2011 Wizards of the Coast LLC. 60028059000001EN
Screen illustrated by Wayne Reynolds

Conditions

BLINDED
- The creature can't see, which means its targets have total concealment against it.
- The creature takes a -10 penalty to Perception checks.
- The creature grants combat advantage.
- The creature can't flank.

DAZED
- The creature doesn't get its normal complement of actions on its turn; it can take either a standard, a move, or a minor action. The creature can still take free actions.
- The creature can't take immediate actions or opportunity actions.
- The creature grants combat advantage.
- The creature can't flank.

DEAFENED
- The creature can't hear.
- The creature takes a -10 penalty to Perception checks.

DOMINATED
- The creature can't take actions voluntarily. Instead, the dominator chooses a single action for the creature to take on the creature's turn: a standard, a move, a minor, or a free action. The only powers and other game features that the dominator can make the creature use are ones that can be used at will, such as at-will powers.
- The creature grants combat advantage.
- The creature can't flank.

DYING
- The creature is unconscious.
- The creature must make death saving throws.
- This condition ends immediately on the creature when it regains hit points.

GRABBED
- The creature is immobilized.
- Maintaining this condition on the creature occupies whatever appendage, object, or effect the grabber used to initiate the grab.
- This condition ends immediately on the creature if the grabber is subjected to an effect that prevents it from taking actions, or if the creature ends up outside the range of the grabbing power or effect.

HELPLESS
- The creature grants combat advantage.

IMMOBILIZED
- The creature can't move, unless it teleports or is pulled, pushed, or slid.

MARKED
- The creature takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls for any attack that doesn't include the marking creature as a target.
- A creature can be subjected to only one mark at a time, and a new mark supersedes an old one.
- A mark ends immediately when its creator dies or falls unconscious.

PETRIFIED
- The creature is unconscious.
- The creature has resist 20 to all damage.
- The creature doesn't age.

PRONE
- The creature is lying down. However, if the creature is climbing or flying, it falls.
- The only way the creature can move is by crawling, teleporting, or being pulled, pushed, or slid.
- The creature takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls.
- The creature grants combat advantage to attackers making melee attacks against it, but it gains a +2 bonus to all defenses against ranged attacks from attackers that aren't adjacent to it.

REMOVED FROM PLAY
- The creature can't take actions.
- The creature has neither line of sight nor line of effect to anything, and nothing has line of sight or line of effect to it.

RESTRAINED
- The creature can't move, unless it teleports. It can't even be pulled, pushed, or slid.
- The creature takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls.
- The creature grants combat advantage.

SLOWED
- The creature's speed becomes 2 if it was higher than that. This speed applies to all of the creature's movement modes (walking, flying, swimming, and so on), but it does not apply to forced movement against it, teleportation, or any other movement that doesn't use the creature's speed. If a creature is subjected to this condition while it is moving using any of its speeds, it must stop if it has already moved at least 2 squares.
- The creature cannot benefit from bonuses to speed, although it can use powers and take actions, such as the run action, that allow it to move farther than its speed.

STUNNED
- The creature can't take actions.
- The creature grants combat advantage.
- The creature can't flank.
- The creature falls if it is flying, unless it can hover.

SURPRISED
- The creature can't take actions.
- The creature grants combat advantage.
- The creature can't flank.

UNCONSCIOUS
- The creature is helpless.
- The creature can't take actions.
- The creature takes a -5 penalty to all defenses.
- The creature is unaware of its surroundings.
- The creature falls prone, if possible.
- The creature can't flank.

WEAKENED
- The creature's attacks deal half damage. However, two kinds of damage that it deals are not affected: ongoing damage as well as damage that isn't delivered by an attack roll.

Healing a Dying Character

- Regain Hit Points: When a character is dying and receives healing, he or she goes to 0 hit points and then regains hit points from the healing effect. If the healing effect requires the character to spend a healing surge but he or she has none left, the character is restored to 1 hit point.
- Become Conscious: As soon as a character has a current hit point total that's higher than 0, he or she becomes conscious and is no longer dying. (The character is still prone until he or she stands up.)

Death and Dying

- Dying: When a character's hit points drop to 0 or fewer, he or she falls unconscious and is dying. Any additional damage the character takes continues to reduce his or her current hit point total.
- Death Saving Throw: When a character is dying, he or she needs to make a saving throw at the end of his or her turn each round. The result of the saving throw determines how close the character is to death.

  Lower than 10: The character slips one step closer to death. If the character gets this result three times before taking a short or an extended rest, the character dies.

  10–19: No change.

  20 or higher: The character spends a healing surge. When the character does so, he or she is considered to have 0 hit points, and then the healing surge restores hit points as normal. The character is no longer dying, and he or she is conscious but still prone. If the character rolls 20 or higher but has no healing surges, the character's condition doesn't change.
- Death: When the character takes damage that reduces his or her current hit points to the character's bloodied value expressed as a negative number, the character dies.

Dungeon Masters Deserve the Best

This Dungeons & Dragons® Roleplaying Game accessory is a beautiful addition to any game table and the ultimate aid for Dungeon Masters.

The durable, four-panel Deluxe Dungeon Master's Screen presents a lavish illustration on the outside and handy reference tables and lists on the inside. The landscape design allows Dungeon Masters to see and reach over the screen without difficulty, and DMs can keep their notes and die rolls hidden from the players while having all-important rules information at the ready.

For use with these 4th Edition Dungeons & Dragons® Essentials™ products:

Rules Compendium™
Dungeon Master's Kit™
Monster Vault™

D&D INSIDER® Become a member today. DungeonsandDragons.com

ISBN: 978-0-7869-5743-9
9 780786 957439 50995 EAN
Sug. Retail: U.S. $9.95 CAN $10.95
Printed in the China 280590000

U.S., Canada, Asia Pacific & Latin America
www.wizards.com/customerservice
Wizards of the Coast, Inc.
P.O. Box 707, Renton WA 98057-0707, U.S.A.
Tel: 1-800-324-6496 (within the U.S.)
1-206-624-0933 (outside the U.S.)

U.K., Eire & South Africa
Hasbro UK Ltd.
P.O. Box 43, Newport NP19 4YD, UK
Tel: +800 22 427276
Email: wizards@hasbro.co.uk

Please retain this package for future reference.
MADE IN CHINA
C-267A

Dungeons & Dragons®

Psionic Power™

Options for Ardents, Battleminds, Monks, and Psions

ROLEPLAYING GAME SUPPLEMENT

Robert J. Schwalb • Ari Marmell

Dungeons & Dragons®

Psionic Power™

ROLEPLAYING GAME SUPPLEMENT

Robert J. Schwalb • Ari Marmell

CREDITS

Design
Robert J. Schwalb (lead), Ari Marmell

Development
Stephen Schubert (lead), Stephen Radney-MacFarland, Peter Schaefer

Editing
Scott Fitzgerald Gray (lead), Dawn J. Geluso, Miranda Horner, M. Alexander Jurkat

Managing Editing
Torah Cottrill

D&D Creative Manager
Christopher Perkins

D&D Design Manager
James Wyatt

D&D Development and Editing Manager
Andy Collins

Director of D&D R&D and Book Publishing
Bill Slavicsek

D&D Senior Creative Art Director
Jon Schindehette

Art Director
Kate Irwin

Cover Illustration
William O'Connor

Graphic Designers
Keven Smith, Leon Cortez, Emi Tanji

Additional Graphic Design
Jino Choi

Interior Illustrations
Ralph Beisner, Eric Belisle, Steve Belledin, Kerem Beyit, Thomas Denmark, Wayne England, McLean Kendree, Roberto Marchesi, Sean Murray, Hector Ortiz, Lucio Parrillo, Mike Schley, Chris Seaman, John Stanko, Matias Tapia, Ben Wootten

Publishing Production Specialist
Erin Dorries

Prepress Manager
Jefferson Dunlap

Imaging Technician
Allison Shinkle

Production Manager
Cynda Callaway

Game rules based on the original Dungeons & Dragons® rules created by E. Gary Gygax and Dave Arneson, and the later editions by David "Zeb" Cook (2nd Edition); Jonathan Tweet, Monte Cook, Skip Williams, Richard Baker, and Peter Adkison (3rd Edition); and Rob Heinsoo, Andy Collins, and James Wyatt (4th Edition).

620-21094000-001 EN
9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1
First Printing: August 2010
ISBN: 978-0-7869-5560-2

U.S., CANADA, ASIA, PACIFIC, & LATIN AMERICA
Wizards of the Coast LLC
P.O. Box 707
Renton WA 98057-0707
+1-800-324-6496

EUROPEAN HEADQUARTERS
Hasbro UK Ltd
Caswell Way
Newport, Gwent NP9 0YH
GREAT BRITAIN
Please keep this address for your records

WIZARDS OF THE COAST, BELGIUM
Industrialaan 1
1702 Groot-Bijgaarden
Belgium
+32.070.233.277

Dungeons & Dragons, D&D, d20, d20 System, Wizards of the Coast, Dark Sun, Player's Handbook, Psionic Power, Primal Power, Divine Power, Arcane Power, Dragon, Adventurer's Vault, all other Wizards of the Coast product names, and their respective logos are trademarks of Wizards of the Coast LLC in the U.S.A. and other countries. All Wizards characters and the distinctive likenesses thereof are property of Wizards of the Coast LLC. This material is protected under the copyright laws of the United States of America. Any reproduction or unauthorized use of the material or artwork contained herein is prohibited without the express written permission of Wizards of the Coast LLC. Any similarity to actual people, organizations, places, or events included herein is purely coincidental. Printed in the U.S.A. ©2010 Wizards of the Coast LLC.

VISIT OUR WEBSITE AT WWW.DUNGEONSANDDRAGONS.COM

Introduction

A psionic character wields the power of the mind, whether honed by rigorous training or inspired by wild and uncontrollable impulse. Disciplined monk and psion, unhindered ardent and battlemind—psionic characters defend the world against dark threats with the most potent of all arms, the weapon within.

Psionic characters unlock the unexpected power of their consciousness, bringing it to bear in the fighting techniques they master or the magical effects they create. Characters who study the psionics traditions passed down through generations can transcend the body's limits, eventually apprehending the whole of creation with a single thought.

The history of psionic power in the Dungeons & Dragons® game dates back to 1976, when the Eldritch Wizardry supplement to the original Dungeons & Dragons boxed set introduced a psionics system that promised to "enliven games grown stagnant." The Advanced Dungeons & Dragons game codified and expanded psionics as a distinct and optional subsystem of the rules, but it wasn't until 2nd Edition's Complete Psionics Handbook that psionics became an integrated part of the game.

Psionics came into its own in 2nd Edition's popular Dark Sun® campaign setting, which left a lasting influence on this unique and powerful magic. In the 3rd Edition Dungeons & Dragons game, that foundation was rebuilt and expanded into a complete system of psionics use and classes.

4th Edition introduced the psionic power source and four psionic classes in Player's Handbook® 3. That book introduced you to what your psionic character can do. Psionic Power™ is your key to unlocking the mind's secrets in the Dungeons & Dragons game.

Using this Book

Like Primal Power™, Divine Power™, and Arcane Power™ before it, Psionic Power focuses on and is organized around the four psionic classes—the subtle ardent, the forthright battlemind, the focused monk, and the dedicated psion. Each chapter introduces a new class feature, new powers, and new paragon paths, and also provides a rich amount of backdrop to enhance the experience of roleplaying a psionic character. Chapter 5, "Psionic Options," contains more than 100 new feats, information on psionics philosophies and orders, details about psionic backgrounds and bloodlines, six new epic destinies, and new magic items particularly suited to psionic characters.

Psionic Power can be used in several ways. You might want to create a brand-new character using the builds and powers presented in this book, putting a different spin on the standard psionic classes. You might use new powers to customize an existing character, taking advantage of the retraining rules in the Player's Handbook. The new feats presented here are equally useful for characters using builds from Player's Handbook 3 or the new builds presented in the class chapters in this book. New paragon paths and psionic bloodlines can provide unique insights into your character's development, and new epic destinies can set the tone and goals of your character's entire adventuring career.

Contents

1: Ardent ..... 4
Playing an Ardent ..... 6
New Build ..... 10
New Powers ..... 11
New Paragon Paths ..... 22

2: Battlemind ..... 28
Playing a Battlemind ..... 30
New Build ..... 34
New Powers ..... 35
New Paragon Paths ..... 49

3: Monk ..... 54
Playing a Monk ..... 56
New Build ..... 60
New Powers ..... 61
New Paragon Paths ..... 74

4: Psion ..... 80
Playing a Psion ..... 82
New Build ..... 85
New Powers ..... 86
New Paragon Paths ..... 100

5: Psionic Options ..... 106
Psionic Power in the World ..... 108
Philosophies and Orders ..... 110
The Origin of Psionics ..... 118
Psionic Backgrounds ..... 120
Psionic Bloodlines ..... 124
Elan ..... 124
Foulborn ..... 127
New Feats ..... 130
Augment Feats ..... 130
Heroic Tier Feats ..... 130
Paragon Tier Feats ..... 135
Epic Tier Feats ..... 139
Multiclass Feats ..... 141
Bloodline Feats ..... 142
Epic Destinies ..... 145
Cosmic Soul ..... 145
Demiurge ..... 146
Eighth Seal ..... 147
Grandmaster of Flowers ..... 148
Master of Moments ..... 149
Topaz Crusader ..... 150
Equipment: Superior Ki Focuses ..... 151
Magic Items ..... 152
Ki Focuses ..... 152
Augmentable Items ..... 154

CHAPTER 1

Ardent

"My joy is your anguish. My courage is your fear. My path to victory lies within your mind."

For the ardent, emotions are more than mere sensation. Emotion is a weapon you can wield and a tool with which the world can be remade. You draw power from your experience, taking advantage of your joy, your courage, and even your fear. You call on the power of your psionics by focusing your mental state, weaving emotion into a complex web or inflaming your passions through sheer force of will. Just as you channel this power, you are also a conduit for it. Sensing the emotions of allies and enemies alike, you manipulate them to suit your purpose with a deft mental touch.

Those who stand at your side are strengthened by the power that flows from you. Your enemies find their own bravery withering, their plans confused and their hopes shattered by the strength of your mental resolve. But the psionic power you wield comes at a price. Fear and doubt, dark thoughts and anger can all cloud your concentration.

However you master the energy of emotion and the mind, this chapter contains a wealth of information to support your ardent character.

- Playing an Ardent: The ardent's place in the world, and how this information can enrich your play.
- New Build and Class Feature: The impetuous ardent rejects the traps of sorrow and fear by sheer strength of will, overcoming doubt and hesitation to seize the advantage on the battlefield. Mantle of Impulsiveness allows you to turn an enemy's wrath into renewed resolve for you and your allies.
- New Powers: You can read your enemies' fear and use it as a weapon, or impel your allies to access unseen reserves of strength. This chapter supports all ardent builds with powers that strengthen your allies and let you stand against increasingly powerful foes.
- New Paragon Paths: Six new ardent paragon paths allow you to draw power from raw chaos, to unlock the full potential of you and your allies, and to destroy your enemies in body and mind.

CHRIS SEAMAN

Fear. Fear so thick, it might as well have been perfume.

Oh, it wasn't just fear. These thugs worked as leg-breakers and enforcers for the thieves' guild. And this was their home turf. Even now, Thalvos couldn't be certain which of the various patrons in the common room were genuine drunks, and which were hunting him and his companions.

But they were here somewhere. This much he knew. He felt them. And there, beneath the light spice of exhilaration and a smattering of anger, the main dish was definitely fear. They knew that Thalvos and his companions had already slain a dozen members of their guild, and despite their confidence, they worried that they might be next. It would be a shame to disappoint them.

Thalvos coughed into his ale, spraying foam across his thick beard as he struggled to maintain control, fighting the urge to giggle uncontrollably. They made it so easy. . . .

Even as he rose from his chair, he grabbed at their fear like a child catching snowflakes. He swirled it around in his mind, tasting it, transforming it. And he wondered, as he cast that emotional energy out as easily as he'd taken it in, if the thugs would recognize their own terror coating the blades that would soon be raised against them.

Wants and desires; needs and ambitions; loves and hatreds and fears. The world is driven neither by intellect nor belief, but by emotion—and those who control emotions control the world. Perhaps you are a child of the streets who learned to read danger in the intentions of others and to harness the hunger and fear that were the only weapons you had. You might be a frustrated student whose breakthrough came only after your impulses overcame your studies. You could be the guardian of a primitive tribe, drawing on powers developed in reaction to the dangers of the wild. Perhaps you are a wanderer denied a normal life, determined to reduce the suffering in the world because you are cursed to feel the suffering of others.

You might have followed one of several paths to become what you are now. As an ardent, you are driven and empowered by emotion—and you can no more change what you are or what you do than you can cease feeling at all.

Mantles and Emotions

You are unique among the psionic classes in your manipulation of emotion as the source of your power. Although all psionics users draw strength from emotion to some degree, they do so largely for the sake of their own empowerment. You use emotions as a puppeteer uses strings, manipulating the world around you.

Your powers come from the intensity of the emotion you experience. You sense the feelings of those around you and add them to your own power. Your fear armors you against attack; your anger blasts your foes with psychic force; your love and concern soothe your allies' hurts.

Ardents draw on all feelings, but you focus on one particular emotion—your "mantle." Although your powers do not rely on this emotion only, your mantle is the emotion on which you draw most frequently, and the one that allows you to control and channel other emotions.

Emotions Beyond Combat

Ardents absorb the emotions of those around them, but this ability remains all but unnoticeable in combat. Although battle inspires potent emotions, it creates roughly the same combination of excitement, exhilaration, anger, fear, and pain in everyone. If you're already engaged in a life-or-death struggle, feeling your foe's emotions isn't likely to change your own.

Apart from battle, the ability of an ardent to absorb emotions becomes more noticeable. You likely take on at least an aspect of the feelings of those surrounding you. In the middle of a boisterous revel, you might become giddy and high-spirited. You feel grief at a funeral, even if you've never met the deceased. The elation felt by a gathering of zealots performing a ceremonial rite might overcome you even if you don't share the beliefs of those present.

Ardents are not only the recipients of outside emotion—they project their own emotions as well. People gathered around when you're in a bad mood grow irate, just as your own good cheer can spread through the dourest crowd. Neither phenomenon is so strong as to enforce an instant change in behavior. You won't turn on a friend because someone else is mad at her, nor will your own despair cause another character to abandon an ongoing endeavor. But such emotional projections can create subtle long-term effects.

History records that the Arkhosian city of Kanrhik fell to orc mercenaries employed by Bael Turath—but some historians place the blame on one of Kanrhik's psionically inclined noble families. When the patriarch's only daughter fell in battle, the entire family went into mourning. Several of them were ardents, and historians believe that their sorrow so infected Kanrhik's leaders and soldiers that they failed to react in time to an assault they should otherwise have repelled. Among those familiar with psionics, a sudden change in the behavior of a small population is often taken as evidence of an ardent's presence.

Although many ardents shun strong emotion and avoid large groups so that they aren't overwhelmed by the feelings of others, some members of this class deliberately seek out such experiences. They travel in the hope of experiencing everything the world has to offer: the greatest joys, the fiercest fury, and the darkest sorrow. By doing so, these ardents hope to learn to control such emotions, to ready themselves for accidental encounters with strong feelings, and to harness that energy to empower their disciplines.

Your Life Before

Ardents are the most seemingly mundane of the psionic classes. Psions and monks train to become what they are; battleminds discover their power in the heat of combat or under physical duress. You, on the other hand, might have been anyone. Ardents sometimes learn their abilities from other ardents, but for most, their powers arise spontaneously. It is said that no amount of study can create an ardent from someone who lacks the basic empathic and psionic capacities.

You might have been wandering the marketplace when you were suddenly overwhelmed by the feelings of those around you. Perhaps you returned from a hunt to discover that you had far greater insight into the people of your village. Or you might have had an inkling of your power before it fully manifested, perhaps discovering that your own mood influenced those around you. You might have taken advantage of your ability to manipulate moods by becoming a vendor, a performer, a grifter, or a gambler. Depending on what sort of person you were, you might have been popular, making those around you as happy as you were. Or perhaps you were hated, as your own anger or resentment was mirrored back by others.

Whatever the case, people rarely appreciate being manipulated. Many ardents first take up the path of a wandering adventurer when those around them become aware of their power, turning against them and forcing them to abandon the lives they once led.

Roleplaying an Ardent

Unsurprisingly, as an ardent, you are a highly emotional person. You react strongly to others, sometimes overreacting. If something is funny, it's hilarious; if it's fearsome, it's terrifying; if it's irritating, it's infuriating. These extremes come about partly because you feel echoes of others' emotions, and partly because your own emotions run so strongly. They must, after all, if you're to draw power from them.

You can roleplay this internal conflict to give your character a strong sense of personality. You might attempt to wear a mask of stoicism at all times, struggling to repress—or at least conceal—those emotions. You don't speak often, and you make every effort to avoid snap decisions.

You could also choose to go with the flow of the emotions surrounding you. You laugh loudly, and you fight fiercely. But if you decide to play your ardent as boisterous, don't hog the spotlight. You're a character, not a caricature, and faking tears because the tavern doesn't carry elven wine isn't dramatic—it's silly, and it can take everyone else out of the game.

Consider playing your character's emotions as appropriate to the powers you use. When imposing penalties with fear attacks, you might become vicious and intimidating, blatantly angry. Or you might become fearful instead, your manipulation of that emotion making you hesitate to approach your foes, or forcing you to visibly "talk yourself up" before taking risks. When healing your allies, allow your concern for them to show in your voice and your actions, perhaps acting briefly as a defender as you stand between them and the enemy. Your powers draw on your emotions—in a very real sense, they are your emotions—so if you behave appropriately, you help reinforce that connection in the minds of the other players, as well as in your own.

Many ardents are solicitous of others. These ardents are sympathetic and kind, always quick with a joke or a shoulder on which to lean. But some ardents grow jaded to the emotions of others over time. They wall themselves off, not caring what the people around them feel. They project their own emotions onto other characters—perhaps out of a desire to manipulate, perhaps out of spite. As an ardent, you are constantly torn between these two extremes, and only you can decide which path you ultimately take.

Ambient Emotion

In the same way that you can adjust your character's emotional state based on the power you're using, you might do so based on the people around you. If one of your companions is upset, you might become so as well, even if you have no real motivation to do so. If your party is attending a ball, you might be swept up in the joy and pageantry when you're supposed to be keeping your wits about you. Again, don't take the emotions too far—this should be a character quirk, not a means of stealing attention from the other players or ruining their plans. In moderation, however, this can provide both an interesting roleplaying challenge and an obvious hook by which to make your character memorable.

Spur of the Moment

You have little use for intricate planning. You prefer to act as the urge strikes you in any given situation, trusting your instincts and your feelings to guide you. You might grow impatient with others who try to plan for every possible contingency.

This doesn't mean you're incapable of forethought, however, nor does it make you an idiot. You don't blindly leap into obvious danger, and you don't take actions detrimental to your party or your cause simply because you're in an irritable mood. More often than not, though, you base your decisions on what feels right rather than laboriously calculating every possible outcome.

Follow the Leader

Player's Handbook 3 refers to ardents as "incidental leaders." Although you might deliberately set out to fill a leadership role, most ardents don't consciously choose to do so. Like so much else, you probably got where you are by following your instincts and impulses.

Even as a leader, you might not take an active leadership role. Instead, you use your powers to support your allies and are content to let someone else make the decisions. When people do follow you, it's more likely because you're the first to act and because you instinctively know that your decisions are the correct ones. (At least you feel that way at the time; hindsight might convince you otherwise.) You never insist that others follow your lead. But, driven as you are by your emotions, you might be surprised or put out when they don't.

You might find yourself in a position of leadership only under specific circumstances. For example, if you play your ardent as a sharp-tempered, tactically savvy character, you might find your companions happy to follow your lead in battle but hesitant to let you speak (or stand too close) during diplomatic negotiations.

Manifestation

Your disciplines visually manifest in an aura of color that swirls around you, its hues and intensity varying based on your emotions. If you're interested in individualizing your character or stretching your creative muscles a bit, consider modifying your ardent's manifestations.

If your character is grim and despondent, your corona might contain elements of swirling gray and deepest black, mixed with whatever colors represent your current feelings. Alternatively, your corona might take on recognizable shapes. If you're a zealously religious character, your corona might become a winged silhouette reminiscent of an angel. A militant, bloodthirsty ardent's corona might resemble a weapon forged of light.

Your corona might change based on the power you're using. Defensive powers might manifest in a form resembling armor or a shield. Teleportation powers could manifest as a brief image of a rearing horse or flapping wings.

Ardents in the World

In a world accustomed to all manner of magic, ardents are imperfectly understood. Because their powers arise spontaneously, and because they represent a relatively new form of psionics, less is known about ardents than about monks or psions. (Moreover, in the grim aftermath of the fall of Nerath, those who do understand ardents have difficulty disseminating that knowledge.)

Many people—including those well versed in the arcane arts—don't yet recognize ardents as possessing a fully realized, variant form of psionics, seeing them only as peculiar individuals who have an odd smattering of powers. In isolated regions, they remain subject to lingering traces of superstitious suspicion that have largely faded from more civilized lands. Because of this, ardents have left only a light footprint in the world to date.

THOMAS DENMARK

Rising Emotions

Ardents represent the youngest—or at least the most recently recorded—tradition of psionics. Although history is replete with individuals who might well have been ardents, the first confirmed ardents appeared only within the last few centuries. The Bael Turathi general Insalanda led the tiefling armies against the forces of Arkhosia for years, turning her enemy's own fears against them. Although several bloodlines of Arkhosian dragonborn also produced ardents, Insalanda is the first historical figure who contemporary sages agree was an ardent of real power.

Since Insalanda's time, the population of ardents has increased—some say faster than any other type of psionics user. But the sages cannot agree on why ardents first appeared, or why their numbers are increasing so swiftly. Supporters of various theories—such as the belief that psionic energy is a reaction to, or is caused by, aberrant incursions—point to ardents as evidence that the Far Realm's influence is growing. Those who have religious viewpoints believe the increase is the result of conflict between Ioun and Vecna, which has allowed psionic energy to grow uncontrolled. Those who cite the theory of phrenic planes (page 91) suggest that the physical and mental planes are coming into alignment. (See "The Origin of Psionics," page 118, for more on these theories.) But every argument is hypothetical at best, and no faction has offered proof. All they agree on is that the spread of ardents suggests that psionic energy is indeed growing more prevalent in the world.

Ardents and Witchcraft

A common theme during the early years of the ardents' emergence into the world was the extreme mistrust and persecution they faced. Although the great empires treated ardents as any other user of obscure energy, smaller communities often revived ancient charges of witchcraft that had otherwise been largely forgotten in an age of widespread spellcraft.

The common folk, after all, have a vague idea of what arcane and divine magic are supposed to look like. When lone individuals appeared among them, manifesting strange coronas and unfamiliar powers, a certain level of distrust and fear was unavoidable. The nature of the ardents' power amplified this initial distrust, often with horrifying results. An ardent's ability to magnify ambient emotion meant that a people's suspicion and an ardent's own fear would mix and reflect back from the ardent like a dark tide, resulting in a vicious cycle of escalating terror and rage. In many communities, ardents were persecuted or killed. In others, they used their powers to become petty tyrants.

Although it is not a widely held belief, some historians attribute the fall of Nerath in part to ardents. They maintain that the social turmoil that devastated the far-flung reaches of the empire was caused by this kind of emotional feedback, centered on a small but growing ardent population.

Many early ardents were driven into various fringe organizations and faiths, including a number of diabolic cults. Commoners who already attributed ardent energy to an evil influence quickly drove such characters into the arms of those who would accept them, even as devil worshipers sought to take advantage of the ardents' strange new powers. The fact that many early ardents arose among the Asmodeus-worshipers of Bael Turath also contributed to this association.

Ardents Today

In recent years, as the number of ardents has increased, the folk of the humanoid realms have grown more accepting of them. A few isolated communities still express distrust, but in most regions, an ardent can expect a welcome no different from any other psionics user.

That said, ardents are still the least understood of the psionic classes. Ardents rarely form groups larger than the occasional cabal, and they lack the larger guilds and colleges that make wizards and psions readily identifiable to the populace. Ardents operate freely in many regions, although not because of any growing acceptance. Rather, the average commoner has no inkling that such characters even exist.

Even other psionics users sometimes look askance at ardents—not denigrating their abilities, but questioning their level of discipline. Monks and psions, who train hard to master their powers, view the emotional and impulsive ardent as a wild card, lacking the self-control to master the power with which he or she plays. In particular, because many psions value intellect and logical process over instinct, members of the two classes often end up on opposite sides of lively philosophical debates.

Battleminds are more accepting of ardents' abilities, since they, too, operate largely on an instinctive level. But a focus on the physical leads many battleminds to shut themselves off from emotion in a way that ardents cannot understand.

Such conflict between the classes is rarely seen within adventuring parties, where a character's actions and commitment to his or her allies speaks louder than words. Moreover, as the number of ardents increases and people become ever more aware of their capabilities, these general attitudes are slowly but surely shifting toward a measure of grudging respect.

NEW BUILD

This section introduces a new ardent build for use alongside the builds presented in Player's Handbook 3. The build includes a new mantle that you can choose when you create your ardent character.

Impetuous Ardent

If fear, sorrow, and hatred invite madness and defeat, the only certain method for protecting oneself from their toxic effects is to jettison them from the mind altogether. So-called intelligent creatures are vulnerable to such emotions when they cloak themselves in intellectual loftiness and hide behind certainty and belief to shield themselves from the uncomfortable world. You reject these notions and seek out your true nature.

Sifting through the layers of experience and learning imposed upon you by your people and culture, you uncover the iron core at the heart of your being. By retreating behind its stiff walls, you silence all doubts and misgivings, acting without hesitation or fear. Even if the results are not immediately beneficial, you do not second-guess yourself. Some might call you reckless, but you follow your true nature—a hardened warrior who offers no apology for your aggressive ways.

The battlefield is your home, and you destroy those who would seed the world with darkness. When so engaged, your eyes grow dark, and your face becomes impassive as you become a true instrument of destruction. The fear you might once have felt now manifests in your foes, shattering their resolve as you cut them down like wheat before the scythe.

SEAN MURRAY

New Class Feature

When you choose your Ardent Mantle, you can choose Mantle of Impulsiveness instead of another option, such as the ones in Player's Handbook 3.

Mantle of Impulsiveness: When an ally within 5 squares of you is targeted by an opportunity attack, that ally gains a power bonus to damage rolls equal to your Constitution modifier until the end of his or her turn.

In addition, each ally within 5 squares of you gains a +2 bonus to Endurance checks and Intimidate checks.

You also gain the ardent eruption power.

Ardent Eruption — Ardent Feature

Your pain bleeds from you in a wave, touching your allies and lending new ferocity to their attacks.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
No Action Close burst 5
Trigger: You are bloodied by an attack
Target: Each ally in burst
Effect: The target gains a +2 bonus to his or her damage rolls until the start of your next turn.
Level 11: +4 bonus.
Level 21: +6 bonus.

Ardent Surge: When you use your ardent surge power, the target also gains a +2 bonus to speed until the end of your next turn.

Suggested Options

Impetuous ardents have little use for caution or careful planning, and they allow their natural talent and fate to guide their actions. As an impetuous ardent, your secondary role is striker. Choose powers that deliver punishing damage, improve your allies' attacks, or strip away your enemies' ability to protect themselves. Any power that can help to quickly remove an enemy's threat reinforces your preferred tactics. This said, wading through enemies places you at great risk. To mitigate the dangers arrayed against you, be sure to invest in feats and powers that help you last in combat.

Charisma should be your highest ability score. Look to your Dexterity score next to let you act sooner in the round and to keep your Reflex high. Round out your defenses and hit points by making Constitution your third highest ability score.

Suggested Class Feature: Mantle of Impulsiveness*
Suggested Feat: Deft Eruption*
Suggested Skills: Athletics, Endurance, Heal, Intimidate
Suggested At-Will Powers: *impetuous ruin, *part the fog
Suggested Daily Power: *battle flow
*New option presented in this book

NEW POWERS

The new powers presented in this chapter add to the range of powers already available to ardents. Many of these new powers are tailored to the Impetuous Ardent build, but ardents of any kind can find useful options here.

Level 1 At-Will Disciplines

Impetuous Ruin — Ardent Attack 1

Your strike hobbles your enemy's impulsiveness, preventing it from reacting in the heat of combat.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Charm, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target cannot make opportunity attacks against any creature other than you until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target cannot make opportunity attacks until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Karmic Bond — Ardent Attack 1

Your strike ensures the enemy reaps what it sows by forming a bond between it and the creature it attacks next.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the start of your next turn, when the target deals damage with an attack, it takes extra damage equal to your Constitution modifier on the next attack that hits it before the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and until the start of your next turn, if the target saves on its turn, one ally within 5 squares of you can make a saving throw with a power bonus equal to your Constitution modifier.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. If the target hits with an attack before the start of your next turn, it takes extra damage equal to your Constitution modifier from each attack that hits it before the end of your next turn.

Corona's Glow

Optional Rule: At your Dungeon Master's discretion, the corona that manifests when you use your powers casts a visible light. Whenever you use an ardent encounter or daily power, you also shed dim light to a range of 4 squares until the start of your next turn. During this time, anyone in the area can see normally, but you take a −5 penalty to Stealth checks.

Part the Fog — Ardent Attack 1

Your attack clears the way for an ally to unleash fury against your foe.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. One ally adjacent to you or the target gains a +2 power bonus to attack rolls against the target until the start of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and the target cannot benefit from concealment or invisibility until the start of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. The next ally within 5 squares of you to miss the target with an attack before the start of your next turn can reroll the attack roll.

Wave of Fatigue — Ardent Attack 1

A wave of lethargy follows your strike, hampering your foe's ability to effectively counterattack.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. The target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and the target takes a −2 penalty to opportunity attack rolls and damage rolls until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Close burst 1
Target: Each creature you can see in burst
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, enemies take a penalty to damage rolls equal to your Constitution modifier while adjacent to you, and any creature that starts its turn adjacent to you is slowed until the end of its turn.

Level 1 Daily Disciplines

Battle Flow — Ardent Attack 1

Your attack draws strength from a foe to fuel the movement of you and your allies.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and one ally you can see shifts 2 squares as a free action. In addition, whenever the target takes a move action, you or one ally you can see shifts 2 squares as an immediate reaction (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and one ally you can see shifts 2 squares as a free action.

Foretaste of Death — Ardent Attack 1

Your attack causes a foe to be overcome with a vision of its own death, hindering its effectiveness in combat.

Daily ✦ Illusion, Psychic, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: The target has visions of death (save ends). While under this effect, the target cannot gain combat advantage, cannot flank with its allies, and grants combat advantage.
Aftereffect: The target takes 10 psychic damage.

Lingering Fury — Ardent Attack 1

You smash your enemy aside, leaving it shrouded in a lingering fury that grants power to your allies.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and you push the target 1 square.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target is affected by a lingering fury (save ends). While the target is affected by this lingering fury, allies gain a +1 power bonus to attack rolls and a +2 power bonus to damage rolls while adjacent to the target.

Recursive Emotions — Ardent Attack 1

Your foe's attempt to shake off the emotional onslaught of your attack harms other enemies while it restores vigor to your allies.

Daily ✦ Psychic, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier psychic damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target takes ongoing 5 psychic damage (save ends). Whenever the target makes a saving throw against this effect, one enemy you can see takes psychic damage equal to your Wisdom or Constitution modifier, and one ally you can see regains the same number of hit points.

Level 2 Utility Disciplines

Close Wounds — Ardent Utility 2

Flesh knits, wounds stanch, and strength returns for a time.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: One bloodied ally
Effect: The target gains temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier.

Dull Pain — Ardent Utility 2

You respond to an enemy's attack by dampening your ally's ability to feel pain.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 5
Trigger: An ally within 5 squares of you takes damage from an attack
Target: The triggering ally
Effect: Reduce the damage the target would take by your Wisdom modifier. The target also gains a +2 power bonus to saving throws until the end of his or her next turn.

Healing Bond — Ardent Utility 2

You strengthen the bond between two allies, so that when one prospers, they both benefit.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic
Immediate Reaction Ranged 5
Trigger: An ally within 5 squares of you spends a healing surge
Target: One ally other than the triggering ally
Effect: The target regains hit points as if he or she had spent a healing surge.

Psionic Charge — Ardent Utility 2

When your ally springs into motion, you channel psionic power to lend him or her additional strength and speed.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Ranged 10
Target: One ally
Effect: When the target charges before the end of its next turn, it gains a +2 power bonus to speed and a power bonus to damage rolls equal to your Wisdom or Constitution modifier on the charge attack.

The Role of Emotion

If you've chosen to roleplay your ardent as an emotionally driven or impulsive character, you might consider altering the way you behave in combat to match. For instance, when you are surprised, when you feel particularly threatened, or when you're first bloodied, you might react with a daily power, the use of an action point, or both—even when these options are less than tactically sound.

If you're interested in trying something different, consider this: What's it like to literally feel someone die? Adventuring is a violent way of life. Creatures such as aberrants and demons are alien and innately evil enough that their deaths don't bother you, and constructs and most undead don't project much in the way of feelings. But what about a dragon? An orc? For that matter, what about a human or dwarf mercenary? What does it do to you to feel their emotions at the moment of death? Do you spend a few moments, or hours, in a despondent state after combat? Do you throw yourself headlong into the next adventure, hoping it'll make you forget the last?

Because the rules of the game make it relatively easy to defeat a foe without slaying it, you might refuse to kill your enemies—again, making exceptions for particularly vile creatures—regardless of the difficulties that might result. You should first make sure that other players around the table are okay with this. Not everyone enjoys regular "What do we do with the prisoners?" discussions.

Level 3 At-Will Disciplines

Cloud Mind — Ardent Attack 3

Your attack clouds a foe's mind to let an ally slip past without fear of reprisal.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and one ally adjacent to you or the target can shift as a free action.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. One ally within 5 squares of you gains combat advantage against the target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, any ally more than 1 square away from the target has concealment against it.

Guarded Prison — Ardent Attack 3

You constrain the target's mind, making it imagine walls on all sides each time it tries to move.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and on its next turn the target cannot use move actions to walk or run.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and if the target shifts before the start of your next turn, each ally adjacent to you gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. If the target willingly moves or shifts before the start of your next turn, one ally adjacent to you or the target can make a basic attack against the target as an immediate interrupt.

Unsteadying Rebuke — Ardent Attack 3

Your enemy's attack inspires a savage psionic rebuke, letting you shift the battlefield's perspective in your favor.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Immediate Reaction Melee weapon
Trigger: An enemy targets you with a melee attack
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and you slide the target 1 square to a square adjacent to you.
Effect: You lose your standard action on your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and one ally adjacent to you can shift to any unoccupied square adjacent to the target's new position as a free action.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and you slide the target a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier. You then slide each enemy now adjacent to the target 1 square.
Effect: You do not lose your standard action on your next turn.

Withered Technique — Ardent Attack 3

Your attack scours your enemy's mind and instincts, hobbling its most potent attacks.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls for any attack that is not a basic attack.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. If the target makes an attack that is not a basic attack before the start of your next turn, you can slide the target a number of squares equal to your Constitution modifier as an immediate reaction.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target deals half damage with any attack that is not a basic attack.

Level 5 Daily Disciplines

Decelerating Slash — Ardent Attack 5

When your strike lands, light flashes from you to drain away your enemy's momentum.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).
First Failed Saving Throw: The target is immobilized instead of slowed (save ends).
Miss: The target is slowed (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: One ally you can see shifts as a free action.

Invitation to Defeat — Ardent Attack 5

You raise your weapon and force your enemies to approach you, inviting them to certain defeat.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 5
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Will
Hit: You pull the target 5 squares. Any target pulled to a square adjacent to you is weakened (save ends).
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, enemies are weakened while they are adjacent to you. In addition, until the end of your next turn, any enemy that takes damage while adjacent to you also takes psychic damage equal to your Charisma modifier.
Sustain Minor: The effect persists.

Meteoric Charge — Ardent Attack 5

Your attack provides allies with an emotional surge, setting up a series of furious charges against your foes.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, any ally who starts his or her turn within 5 squares of you gains a +2 power bonus to charge attack rolls and a power bonus to charge damage rolls equal to your Charisma modifier.
Special: When charging, you can use this power in place of a melee basic attack. If you do so, you gain a +1 power bonus to the attack roll.

Specter of Doubt — Ardent Attack 5

Your attack plants a seed of doubt in your enemy's subconscious. As it grows, it infects other foes, robbing them of their will to fight.

Daily ✦ Fear, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Charisma vs. Will
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier psychic damage. Whenever the primary target makes an attack, it takes 10 psychic damage (save ends).
Miss: Whenever the primary target makes an attack, it takes 5 psychic damage (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: You can make the following secondary attack as a free action.
Secondary Target: One creature within 3 squares of the primary target
Secondary Attack: Charisma vs. Will
Hit: The secondary target is dazed (save ends).

Level 6 Utility Disciplines

Escalating Fury — Ardent Utility 6

Your pain girds allies against the threats looming on all sides.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
No Action Close burst 5
Trigger: You take damage from an attack
Target: Each ally in burst
Effect: The target gains temporary hit points equal to 3 + your Charisma modifier.

Opportunity Seized — Ardent Utility 6

When a foe slips past you or your ally, it opens up new opportunities to attack.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
No Action Close burst 3
Trigger: You or one ally in burst misses with an opportunity attack
Target: The triggering creature
Effect: The triggering creature repeats the opportunity attack against the same target or a different one.

Rapid Calculation — Ardent Utility 6

You quickly assess the threat before you and help your allies to properly prepare for the fight.

Daily ✦ Psionic
No Action Close burst 5
Trigger: You roll initiative
Target: Each ally in burst
Effect: You slide the target 3 squares, and the target gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses until it takes its first action during the encounter.

Shared Momentum — Ardent Utility 6

You link two allies with psionic energy, letting them match each other's movements in battle.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Reaction Ranged 5
Trigger: An ally within 5 squares of you moves or shifts
Target: One ally other than the triggering ally
Effect: The target shifts a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Level 7 At-Will Disciplines

Accelerated Maneuvers — Ardent Attack 7

You open your mind to your enemies' intentions, using that knowledge to maneuver your allies into position.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: Before the attack, one ally adjacent to you can shift 1 square as a free action.
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Augment 1
Effect: Before the attack, one ally adjacent to you can shift a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, each ally who starts his or her turn within 5 squares of you gains a +2 power bonus to speed and can shift 2 squares as a move action.

Fatal Attraction — Ardent Attack 7

Your attack prevents an enemy from ignoring your presence on the battlefield.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1 (Psychic)
Hit: As above, and the first time the target hits any of your allies, the target takes psychic damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn. Until the end of your next turn, the target grants combat advantage to allies adjacent to you.

Stolen Strength — Ardent Attack 7

Your attack leaves a foe reeling, sapping its strength as it tries to fight back.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] damage. Until the start of your next turn, the target rolls twice when it makes a damage roll and must use the lower roll.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. The target's basic attacks deal half damage until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target takes a penalty to damage rolls equal to your Constitution modifier.

Trailblazing Assault — Ardent Attack 7

Your attack opens up the battlefield, letting an ally surge forward to attack.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. One ally within 5 squares of you gains a +2 power bonus to speed until the end of your next turn.
Special: When charging, you can use this power in place of a melee basic attack.
Augment 1 (Healing)
Hit: As above, and the ally regains hit points equal to your Constitution modifier if he or she hits with a charge attack before the end of your next turn.
Augment 2 (Healing)
Hit: 1[W] modifier damage. One ally you can see charges with a power bonus to the attack roll equal to your Constitution modifier. If the ally hits with this attack, he or she gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn and can spend a healing surge.

Level 9 Daily Disciplines

Cerebral Worm — Ardent Attack 9

Your attack lodges in your foe's mind like a parasite, hindering its ability to attack.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target is affected by your cerebral worm (save ends). While the target is affected by the worm, the first time the target makes an attack roll on each of its turns, it must either take 10 psychic damage or make the attack roll twice and use the lower roll.
Miss: Half damage, and the target takes 10 damage the next time it makes an attack roll before the end of your next turn.

Emotional Wellspring — Ardent Attack 9

Your attack drains a foe of its resilience, and allows allies to claim that resilience for themselves.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. Will
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target takes ongoing 5 psychic damage (save ends). In addition, each ally who hits the target can choose to gain temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier or make a saving throw with a +4 power bonus. This effect lasts until the end of your next turn, or until the target is no longer taking ongoing damage from this power.

Spatial Anomaly — Ardent Attack 9

Your focused thought punches a hole in reality, drawing your enemy into position for your allies' attacks.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One enemy
Effect: You teleport the target 5 squares. One or two allies adjacent to the target at the end of the teleport can each make a melee basic attack against the target as a free action. Each ally who hits the target also gains temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier.

The Court of Sorrows

The most infamous of the small number of ardent enclaves scattered across the world is the so-called Court of Sorrows. This company of a dozen ardents dwells in a communal home in the isolated wilderness, but its members spend their time traveling throughout the region's major communities. The court offers its services to any who can pay, and specializes in manipulating the leaders and governments of communities.

Rather than using overt, short-term, and easily detected methods such as domination powers, the ardents of the Court of Sorrows instead covertly gather in large numbers near government buildings and emote in unison. With so many ardents gathered together, the feelings that they project can have a subtle yet substantial impact on the mind set and emotional state of all people nearby. The effect is not capable of forcing a local duke, baron, or mayor to make any given decision. But it does render such characters susceptible to negotiation, intimidation, or deception, and makes it more difficult for them to make tactically wise decisions.

Although the ardents of the Court of Sorrows are paid well for their services, they have no obvious use for the funds they gain. As a result, the order's true goals remain unknown.

Spur the Battle — Ardent Attack 9

As you attack, mystical light shrouds your nearby allies, speeding them into battle.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: Before the attack, you shift 1 square.
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: After the attack, each ally adjacent to you can shift 1 square or move his or her speed as a free action.

Level 10 Utility Disciplines

Force of Will — Ardent Utility 10

You throw off an affliction with such force that nearby allies are protected by your power.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
No Action Close burst 3
Trigger: You succeed on a saving throw
Target: You and each ally in burst
Effect: The target gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Fostered Talent — Ardent Utility 10

You draw strength from an ally's accomplishment, then share that strength with other allies.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Free Action Close burst 10
Trigger: An ally you can see succeeds on a skill check
Target: You and each ally in burst other than the triggering ally
Effect: The target gains a +2 power bonus to the next skill check he or she makes before the end of your next turn.

Psychic Boon — Ardent Utility 10

When an ally's attack hits, you channel the rush of victory and return it as increased resilience.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Free Action Close burst 5
Trigger: An ally within 5 squares of you hits with a melee attack
Target: The triggering ally in burst
Effect: The target gains temporary hit points equal to 5 + your Charisma modifier.

Vital Summons — Ardent Utility 10

When an ally is in trouble, you speed help to his or her side.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Immediate Reaction Ranged 5
Trigger: An ally within 5 squares of you becomes bloodied or drops to 0 hit points or fewer
Target: One ally other than the triggering ally
Effect: You teleport the target to a square adjacent to the triggering ally.

Level 13 At-Will Disciplines

Conflicted Emotions — Ardent Attack 13

Your attack leaves your enemy unable to tell friend from foe, wracking it with pain if it comes too close to another creature.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. The target takes psychic damage equal to your Wisdom modifier if it ends its next turn adjacent to one of its allies.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, but the target takes the psychic damage if it ends its next turn adjacent to any creature.
Augment 4
Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in burst
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: Until the start of your next turn, any enemy that ends its turn adjacent to you takes 5 psychic damage and grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.

Essence Conduit — Ardent Attack 13

In pressing the attack, you steal a foe's resolve and bestow it on an ally.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and one ally you can see gains temporary hit points equal to 5 + your Constitution modifier.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and the ally can use his or her second wind as a free action.
Augment 4 (Healing, Psychic)
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage plus 1d8 psychic damage. One ally within 5 squares of you can spend a healing surge and regain additional hit points equal to your Constitution modifier.

Invert Defeat — Ardent Attack 13

The psychic energy you steal from a triumphant foe bolsters your allies as their own strength fades.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Healing, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. If the target bloodies an ally or hits a bloodied ally with an attack before the end of your next turn, that ally regains hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. One bloodied ally adjacent to the target gains temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier + your Wisdom modifier.
Augment 4
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the start of your next turn, when an enemy you can see deals damage with an attack, one ally within 5 squares of you gains temporary hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Stack the Odds — Ardent Attack 13

Your quick strike grants your allies added strength.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Each ally adjacent to you gains a +2 power bonus to attack rolls until the start of your next turn.
Augment 1 (Psychic)
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the start of your next turn, allies deal extra psychic damage equal to your Constitution modifier with melee attacks while adjacent to you.
Augment 4
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, allies gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls while adjacent to you, and enemies take a −2 penalty to attack rolls while adjacent to you.

Level 15 Daily Disciplines

Aggressive Accompaniment — Ardent Attack 15

You flash across the battlefield to unleash a devastating attack in concert with an ally, then grant that ally increased fury against your common foe.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Teleport, Weapon
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 10
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you makes a melee attack
Effect: Before the attack, you teleport to an unoccupied square adjacent to the triggering ally.
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The triggering ally gains combat advantage against the target for its triggering attack, and deals 2d6 extra psychic damage with that attack.

Bloody Resurgence — Ardent Attack 15

When you lash out with your weapon, an ally feels its strength replenished.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One enemy, or two enemies if you are bloodied
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: When you make this attack, one ally who can see you can spend a healing surge. If you are bloodied, the ally regains additional hit points equal to your Charisma modifier.

Coordinated Effort — Ardent Attack 15

You link minds with your allies, granting all of you the chance to act in concert before your foes can react.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic
Minor Action Close burst 5
Target: You and each ally you can see in burst, to a maximum of five targets
Effect: You apply one of the following effects to each target. Each effect can be used only once.
- ✦ The target flies a number of squares equal to your Charisma modifier as a free action. The target must land at the end of this movement.
- ✦ The target shifts its speed as a free action.
- ✦ The target spends a healing surge.
- ✦ The target can make a basic attack as a free action.
- ✦ The target can charge as a free action.

Treachery's Seed — Ardent Attack 15

Your mind touches an enemy's, planting a seed of treachery that lets you control it through its own attacks.

Daily ✦ Charm, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, whenever the target hits with a melee attack, you can use an immediate reaction to force the target to make a melee basic attack against a target you choose.

Level 16 Utility Disciplines

Common Cause — Ardent Utility 16

An ally's recovery lets you channel a temporary burst of resilience to other allies.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Immediate Reaction Area burst 5 within 10 squares
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you spends a healing surge
Target: Each ally in burst
Effect: The target gains temporary hit points equal to 10 + your Charisma modifier.

Detach Mind — Ardent Utility 16

You reach into your subject's mind to provide a temporary respite from a debilitating condition.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: You or one ally
Effect: Choose one effect on the target that a save can end. The target is not affected by that effect until the end of its next turn, but it cannot make a saving throw against that effect at the end of that turn. The target gains a +2 power bonus to his or her next saving throw to end that effect.

Disbelieve Danger — Ardent Utility 16

With a thought, you cause an ally under attack to take on a spectral form that protects against additional harm.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 10
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you is hit by an attack
Target: The triggering ally
Effect: The target is insubstantial until the end of his or her next turn.

Resilient Bond — Ardent Utility 16

The bond you forge with an ally ensures that you both make it to the battle's end.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: You and one ally
Effect: Each target gains regeneration 5 until the end of the encounter. If a target starts its turn more than 5 squares away from the other target, this regeneration does not function for the target during that turn.

Level 17 At-Will Disciplines

Blinding Clarity — Ardent Attack 17

Your attack overwhelms your foe, hindering its ability to take advantage of opportunities in combat.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target cannot make opportunity attacks until the start of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target cannot make opportunity attacks and takes a penalty equal to your Wisdom modifier to any attack roll made as an immediate action.
Augment 4
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is blinded until the end of your next turn.

Emotional Flood — Ardent Attack 17

Your attack releases emotion that grants vigor to your allies.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier force damage, and you push the target 1 square. One ally adjacent to you gains temporary hit points equal to 5 + your Constitution modifier.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier force damage, and you push the target 2 squares. Each ally adjacent to you gains temporary hit points equal to 5 + your Constitution modifier.
Augment 4
Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier force damage.
Effect: Each ally adjacent to you gains temporary hit points equal to your Constitution modifier + 5 for each enemy you hit with this attack.

Probability Flux — Ardent Attack 17

Your strike alters the laws of chance, denying good fortune to the enemy.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and any critical hit the target scores until the end of your next turn is treated as a normal hit.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, any enemy that scores a critical hit against an ally within 5 squares of you must reroll that attack roll.
Augment 4
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Critical hits scored against any ally within 5 squares of you before the end of your next turn is treated as a normal hit. In addition, when an enemy within 5 squares of you succeeds on a saving throw, each ally within 5 squares of you can make a saving throw with a bonus equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Violent Upsurge — Ardent Attack 17

You smash your enemy with such force that it is left vulnerable to follow-up attacks.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the start of your next turn, whenever the target takes damage from a melee attack, it takes extra damage equal to your Constitution modifier.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the start of your next turn, whenever the target is hit by an attack, you gain a +4 bonus to the damage roll for the first attack you make against the target during your next turn. This bonus is cumulative.
Augment 4
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target gains vulnerable 2 to all damage until the end of your next turn. This vulnerability increases by 2 whenever an attack hits or misses the target.

Level 19 Daily Disciplines

Clarified Pain — Ardent Attack 19

The pain your enemy feels from your assault lets you strengthen your allies' attacks.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends).
Miss: Ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends).
Effect: Whenever the target makes a saving throw to end the ongoing psychic damage from this attack, one ally within 5 squares of you gains a +2 power bonus to attack rolls until the end of his or her next turn.

Corridor of Pain — Ardent Attack 19

The power of your devastating strike resonates within a foe, letting you continually fling it into optimal position for your allies to attack.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. You slide the target 5 squares, and it is restrained (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, whenever the target takes damage from an attack, you teleport the target 5 squares to a destination adjacent to at least one of your allies.

Mind Rend — Ardent Attack 19

Your attack generates a field of psionic energy that tears away your enemies' will to act.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Zone
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy that ends its turn within the zone is dazed until the end of its next turn.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists.

Reactive Jaunt Strike — Ardent Attack 19

When you strike your foe, your expanded awareness lets you leap to the side of an ally in danger.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You enter the reactive jaunt stance. Until the stance ends, whenever an ally within 5 squares of you becomes bloodied by an attack or drops to 0 hit points or fewer, you teleport to an unoccupied square adjacent to that ally and can make a melee basic attack as an immediate reaction.

Level 22 Utility Disciplines

Awakened Id — Ardent Utility 22

You call forth your ally's innate combat instincts to turn the tide of battle.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic
Minor Action Ranged 10
Target: One ally
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, while the target is bloodied, he or she gains a +1 bonus to speed, a +5 power bonus to Athletics checks and Endurance checks, and deals 5 extra psychic damage with melee attacks.

Empathic Recovery — Ardent Utility 22

Your ally's disappointment helps you recover your expended energy.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you misses with an encounter attack power
Effect: You regain 2 power points.

Expedite Healing — Ardent Utility 22

Your psionic connection to an ally who falls in combat allows him or her to get back in the fight quickly.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic
Immediate Reaction Ranged 10
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you drops to 0 hit points or fewer
Target: The triggering ally
Effect: The target regains hit points as if he or she had spent a healing surge, and can stand up and shift a number of squares equal to your Charisma modifier as a free action.

Sudden Reinforcements — Ardent Utility 22

You see an ally in danger and dispatch a waiting ally to help.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Immediate Reaction Ranged 10
Trigger: An enemy within 10 squares of you hits an ally with a melee attack
Target: One ally
Effect: The target teleports to an unoccupied square adjacent to the triggering enemy and gains combat advantage against that enemy until the end of the target's next turn.

Level 23 At-Will Disciplines

Concerted Strike — Ardent Attack 23

Your straightforward weapon attack inspires your allies to follow your lead.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Each ally adjacent to you gains a power bonus to basic attack rolls equal to your Constitution modifier until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: As above, and each ally also gains the power bonus to attack rolls for unaugmented at-will powers.
Augment 6
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. One or two allies within 5 squares of you can each make a basic attack as a free action, with a power bonus to the attack roll equal to your Constitution modifier. Each ally makes its attack against a different target that is not the target of this power.

Restorative Smash — Ardent Attack 23

The elation you feel from a successful attack fills a nearby ally with renewed vigor.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Healing, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. One bloodied ally adjacent to you regains hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. One bloodied ally adjacent to you can spend a healing surge and regain additional hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Augment 6
Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in burst
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, any ally who hits an enemy with an attack while adjacent to you can spend a healing surge and regain additional hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Ruinous Scream — Ardent Attack 23

Your weapon attack unleashes a thunderous psionic scream that rattles your foes.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Thunder, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier thunder damage, and you push the target 1 square. The target is deafened until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier thunder damage, and you slide the target 1 square. Each enemy adjacent to the target at the end of the slide takes thunder damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Augment 6
Melee 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier thunder damage, and you slide the target 5 squares. At the end of the slide, each enemy adjacent to the target takes 10 thunder damage, and each ally adjacent to you or the target gains temporary hit points equal to 5 + your Wisdom modifier.

Level 25 Daily Disciplines

Bountiful Portent — Ardent Attack 25

When a chosen foe falls, you and your allies can restore yourselves with its strength.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: When the target drops to 0 hit points, you and each ally within 5 squares of it regain hit points as if each of you had spent a healing surge.

Inverted Emotions — Ardent Attack 25

Your attack corrupts the target's emotions, bestowing pain from its triumphs and increasing the scope of its failure.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target is affected by inverted emotions (save ends). While the target is affected by inverted emotions, the first time on each of its turns that it hits with a melee or a ranged attack, one enemy you choose adjacent to it takes 10 psychic damage. When the target misses with an attack, it grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Aftereffect: The target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Outpouring of Grief — Ardent Attack 25

You channel psionic power through your foe, letting you turn one ally's pain into another's healing.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 5[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: Until the target drops to 0 hit points, when an ally becomes bloodied by an attack while you are within 5 squares of the target, another ally adjacent to you or the target can spend a healing surge.

Victorious Vision — Ardent Attack 25

You channel the emotion of victory to your allies, a confidence that lets them lash out at your foes.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Close burst 3
Target: One or two allies in burst
Effect: The target can make a basic attack against an enemy as a free action. If the attack hits, the enemy takes 5 extra psychic damage and is also dazed (save ends). If the attack misses, the enemy takes 15 psychic damage and the target slides the enemy 1 square.

Level 27 At-Will Disciplines

Falling Sky — Ardent Attack 27

Your attack fills an enemy with a momentary sensation of vertigo that leaves it reeling.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. The next time the target takes damage before the start of your next turn, it falls prone.
Augment 6
Hit: 4[W] + Charisma modifier damage. The target chooses either to be immobilized until the end of your next turn or to grant combat advantage until the end of your next turn.

Tactical Failure — Ardent Attack 27

When you strike, you prevent your foe from responding with its most potent attacks.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target takes psychic damage equal to your Wisdom modifier when it makes an attack that is not a basic attack.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target provokes opportunity attacks when it makes any attack that is not a basic attack.
Augment 6
Hit: 4[W] + Charisma modifier damage. The target is dazed until the end of your next turn or until it takes damage from an attack.

Unconscious Assault — Ardent Attack 27

You take control of a foe's unconscious impulses, forcing it to attack at your whim.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Charm, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Effect: The target makes a melee basic attack as a free action against a creature you choose, with a +2 power bonus to the attack roll. If the target's attack hits, it deals extra psychic damage equal to your Constitution modifier, and the target takes 10 psychic damage.
Augment 2
Effect: As above, and you slide the target 2 squares before it makes its attack.
Augment 6 (Weapon)
Melee weapon
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: The target charges an enemy you choose as a free action. If this attack hits, the target takes 10 psychic damage and the creature it charged take 10 extra psychic damage.

Level 29 Daily Disciplines

Explosive Summons — Ardent Attack 29

You are drawn to the side of an ally under attack, unleashing a potent blast of psychic energy against your foes.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Teleportation, Weapon
Immediate Reaction Close blast 5
Trigger: An ally you can see is hit by an attack
Effect: Before the attack, you teleport to an unoccupied square adjacent to the triggering ally.
Target: Each enemy in blast
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and you push the target 5 squares.
Miss: Half damage, and you push the target 1 square.

Lethal Delusion — Ardent Attack 29

Your vicious attack leaves a foe convinced of its own imminent failure, crippling it in combat.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Reliable, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is affected by a lethal delusion (save ends). While the target is affected by the delusion, it takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls, defenses, and saving throws. In addition, the first time the target misses with an attack during each of its turns, it takes 10 psychic damage.

Vulnerability Revealed — Ardent Attack 29

A red corona flares around you, highlighting the vulnerability of nearby foes even as it grants power to your allies.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 5[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, bloodied enemies grant combat advantage to your allies while adjacent to you, and allies gain a power bonus to damage rolls equal to your Charisma modifier for attacks against enemies adjacent to you.

For the Dungeon Master: Sinister Intent

Although it makes up a huge thematic aspect of the ardent class, the ability to sense and project emotions doesn't have much of a mechanical impact. Many of the ardent's powers play off it, but it remains primarily a flavor and roleplaying tool.

You can use this connection to emotion as a story tool or an adventure hook, as well. This chapter already offers examples of how the long-term presence of a population of ardents can affect a community. On a smaller scale, you can use an ardent character as a means of introducing plot points to the party. Suppose the adventurers are in the middle of a well-attended banquet in the castle of the local duchy, enjoying the atmosphere, when suddenly the ardent experiences a sharp spike of murderous rage. What does it mean? Are murderous plots afoot? Is the duke in danger? And perhaps most importantly, who among the hundreds of guests was the source of this sensation?

If you go this route, make sure that your player understands that this is not something over which the character has control or that can be consistently relied on. An ardent is not a walking lie detector, and the character cannot wander past each person in hopes of sensing the emotion for which he or she is looking. If a player wants his or her ardent character to sense emotions deliberately, use the Insight skill and augment it with feat and background choices.

Anarchic Adept

"I see the order within uncertainty; I touch the chaos within law. I stand in both worlds as master of order and disorder."

Prerequisite: Ardent

As your psionic talent matures, you find yourself focusing on the disparate nature of the disciplines you master. Focusing your thought on the edge of unpredictability in your training, you discover the latent chaos flowing through your magic. Through trial and error, you learned to master the chaos latent within your powers and unleash it against your enemies. Drawing on the power of chaos can be dangerous, but you are up to any risk you might face.

Anarchic Adept Path Features

Anarchic Surge (11th level): When you use ardent surge, roll a d6. If you roll an even number, the target of ardent surge can also teleport 2 squares as a free action. If you roll an odd number, add the die result to the hit points the target regains.

Chaotic Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make an attack, you can choose to bestow the power of chaos onto one ally adjacent to you or adjacent to any target of the attack. Roll a d6 to determine the effect.

| d6 | Chaotic Action Effect |
|---|---|
| 1 | No effect. |
| 2 | The ally shifts as a free action. |
| 3 | The ally gains a +1 power bonus to attack rolls until the end of your next turn. |
| 4 | The ally gains temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier. |
| 5 | The ally gains a bonus to damage rolls on his or her next attack equal to your Charisma modifier. |
| 6 | The ally can make a basic attack as a free action. |

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Clarity in Confusion (16th level): You do not grant combat advantage for being dazed or stunned. In addition, whenever you are dazed, you can take a minor action in addition to the single action allowed by that condition.

Anarchic Adept Disciplines

Anarchic Strike — Anarchic Adept Attack 11

Raw chaos flows into your weapon as you strike, inflicting your foe with a temporary battle madness.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Charm, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. You slide the target 1 square, and it makes a melee basic attack as a free action against an enemy you choose. The attack gains a +2 power bonus to the attack roll.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage. You slide the target 3 squares, and it makes a melee basic attack as a free action against an enemy you choose. The attack gains a +2 power bonus to the attack roll and the damage roll.

Chaos Unbound — Anarchic Adept Utility 12

As you are pressed in combat, you channel chaos to infect all those around you.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Zone
Immediate Reaction Close burst 2
Trigger: You are bloodied by an attack
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone moves with you, remaining centered on you. When any creature within the zone makes an attack roll, a skill check, an ability check, or a saving throw, roll a d4. If you roll an odd number, subtract the result from the triggering die roll. If you roll an even number, add the result.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists.

Chaos Breach — Anarchic Adept Attack 20

You fling a creature through a chaos breach in the aftermath of your attack, temporarily shunting it off the battlefield, then controlling its movement once it returns.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You choose one creature hit by the attack, then fling that creature through a chaos breach. That creature is removed from play. At the start of your next turn, it reappears in an unoccupied space within 5 squares of you that isn't hindering terrain. In addition, the target is subjected to a chaos distortion (save ends). Until the distortion ends, when the target ends its turn within 5 squares of you, you can teleport it 5 squares to another square within 5 squares of you as a free action.

Awakened Visionary

"Many roads lead into the future, but by following the one I walk, you can find the victory you seek."

Prerequisite: Ardent

Incursions from the Far Realm have left scars across the world throughout the ages, so that the material fabric of the mortal realm is riddled with holes and fault lines. Your psionic power has made you sensitive to the damage caused by the aberrant invasion, and it has given you a talent for using that damage to your own advantage.

The memories come to you in dreams and waking visions, instructing you in forgotten fighting techniques to better combat the invasion from the Outside. These revelations also grant you a unique perspective on the world, allowing you to seek hidden pathways through time and space. Through these unseen scars of ancient battles, you move from place to place in a flash and can open portals through which you scatter your enemies across the battlefield. The more destruction caused by the threat of the Far Realm, the more powerful you become. Most importantly, this knowledge also tells you that the aberrant menace will one day be defeated.

Awakened Visionary Path Features

Dimensional Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make an attack, you can teleport a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier before or after the attack.

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Unnerving Vision (11th level): Whenever you hit an enemy with an unaugmented ardent at-will power, you mark that enemy until the end of your next turn.

Instant Adjustment (16th level): Whenever an enemy marked by you ends its turn in a square adjacent to you, you can teleport the enemy to any other unoccupied square adjacent to you as a free action.

THOMAS DENMARK

Awakened Visionary Disciplines

Yawning Portals — Awakened Visionary Attack 11

Your attack binds your enemy to myriad doorways only you can see. If it seeks to escape, you alter its path to control its destination.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn. If the target moves on its next turn, you can teleport the target 2 squares as a free action at the end of that turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 3[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn. If the target moves on its next turn, you can teleport the target a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier as a free action at the end of that turn.

Clear Horizon — Awakened Visionary Utility 12

You and an ally swap places through hidden portals to confuse your enemies.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Move Action Ranged 10
Target: One ally
Effect: You teleport yourself and the target, swapping positions. Each enemy adjacent to you at the end of the teleport grants combat advantage to your allies until the end of your next turn.

Warping Landscape — Awakened Visionary Attack 20

You warp reality to flip yourself, your allies, and your foe across the battlefield.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: Before the attack, you teleport yourself and one ally within 5 squares of you, swapping positions.
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and you mark the target (save ends).
Aftereffect: You teleport the target and one ally within 5 squares of you, swapping their positions.
Miss: Half damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.

Catalyst

"I am the key to unlocking your forgotten potential."

Prerequisite: Ardent

Although knowledge and training are great virtues, sometimes such expertise acts as a barrier. Knowledge can breed complacency, blinding an individual to a better path. As an individual specializes, time spent gaining a deeper understanding of the chosen specialty is time not used to expand his or her knowledge in other areas. Too much focus can narrow the vision.

Rather than bind yourself to one pursuit and one belief, you expand your mind and reject your assumptions. In doing so, you find new possibilities to explore. The lessons you learn help you overcome different challenges and hardships, and they allow you to adapt to whatever situation you face.

The liberation you enjoy can also extend to your companions. Reaching into their minds, you stir their true selves, shaking them free from the expectations that bind them. No doubts or fears hold them back. They are free to strive harder and to push past limitations their expertise places on them. You are their catalyst, and with a mere mental touch, you effect a transformation to help them become what they were meant to be.

ROBERTO MARCHESI

Catalyst Path Features

Adaptive Expertise (11th level): After each extended rest, choose one skill in which you do not have training. Until the start of your next extended rest, you are treated as if you had training in that skill.

Goading Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make an attack and hit with your first attack roll, one ally adjacent to you can shift as a free action and a different ally within 5 squares of you can make a basic attack as a free action.

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Erupting Critical (16th level): When you score a critical hit using an ardent power, each ally within 5 squares of you gains a +5 bonus to damage rolls until the start of your next turn.

Catalyst Disciplines

Violent Impulse — Catalyst Attack 11

You temporarily dismiss the limitations within your allies' minds, allowing them to undertake a coordinated violent assault.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Close burst 5
Target: One, two, or three allies in burst
Effect: Each target can make a basic attack as a free action, each against a different creature. If only one target hits, his or her attack deals 2d6 extra psychic damage. If only two targets hit, each of their attacks deals 1d6 extra psychic damage.
Augment 2
Effect: As above, and each target deals 3 extra psychic damage with his or her basic attack.

Serene Mind — Catalyst Utility 12

You clear away an ally's doubts so that nothing can deter him or her from finding success.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One ally
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, the target has resist 10 psychic, gains a +2 power bonus to untrained skill checks, and gains a +2 power bonus to opportunity attack rolls. As a minor action, the target can end this effect and regain hit points as if he or she had spent a healing surge.

Unleash the Power Within — Catalyst Attack 20

Your chosen ally's form flares brightly, then settles into a coruscating pattern of light that boosts his or her prowess in combat.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One ally
Effect: The target assumes the form of unleashed power until the end of the encounter. While in this form, the target gains a +2 power bonus to speed, opportunity attack rolls, and all defenses.

When the target hits with an unaugmented at-will attack power, he or she can choose to end this effect as a free action. By doing so, the attack deals 3d8 extra damage, and the target of the attack is dazed (save ends).

Incandescent Champion

"Not even the gods can control the perfect beauty and boundless power contained in the mortal soul."

Prerequisite: Any psionic class

Mortals might be flawed creations, given to error and misjudgment. But all mortals are blessed with a singular gift: the soul. Psionic energy revealed your soul's power, and through long study and introspection, you learned to navigate the labyrinthine pathways of your being.

This energy suffuses you and surrounds you in a radiant glow. Although you can dampen your inner light, you and others around you find its presence comforting. In time, the light responds to your commands, burning your enemies while bolstering your allies, or even allowing your soul to eclipse your body.

The more you access your soul's power, the more you understand that this essence must be guarded. Those who would exploit souls, twisting them for dark ends, and those who would hoard souls on their journey beyond the body must be destroyed and their prisoners freed. To this end, you commit yourself against the myriad villains who use or abuse souls.

Incandescent Champion Path Features

Brilliant Overload (11th level): Whenever you hit an enemy with an augmented psionic at-will attack power, you can spend 1 power point to have the power deal 1d6 extra radiant damage.

Luminous Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you emit bright light out to 10 squares until the end of your next turn. Enemies adjacent to you while you emit this light gain vulnerability to radiant damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

RALPH BEISNER

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Incandescent Presence (16th level): You emit bright light out to 3 squares. As a free action, you can reduce the bright light to dim light or dismiss it altogether. You can resume the light as a free action.

When you score a critical hit while you shed bright light with this path feature, allies within the light gain temporary hit points equal to your Constitution modifier, and each enemy within the light takes radiant damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Incandescent Champion Disciplines

Incandescent Strike Incandescent Champion Attack 11

When you strike, intense light pours from your weapon, leaching all color from the area and blinding your foe.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is blinded until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is blinded until the end of your next turn.
Effect: Each enemy within 3 squares of you takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Unbearable Countenance Incandescent Champion Utility 12

The perfection of your soul burns so brightly that your terrified enemies cannot bear to look upon you.

Daily ✦ Fear, Polymorph, Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, any enemy that makes an attack that includes you as a target takes a −2 penalty to its attack rolls for that attack.

Perfect Incandescence Incandescent Champion Attack 20

As you attack, your soul's perfection spills forth, transforming you into a being of pure radiance.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Psionic, Radiant, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier radiant damage, and the target is blinded (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends).
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you are insubstantial and gain fly 8 (hover). You emit light from your Incandescent Presence feature out to a number of squares equal to your Charisma modifier (minimum 3).

Phrenic Invader

"Your secrets are mine to use as I see fit."

Prerequisite: Ardent

You hear everything. Every thought, every idea, and every internal conversation reaches receptors in your mind in a confusing din. You have learned to reduce the cacophony to a muted rumble to maintain your sanity. You know these thoughts have their uses, however, and so you focus your concentration, sifting through the noise to seize the most powerful voices to aid you.

You are a phrenic invader—a thought warrior who can slip into any conscious mind and plunder it for its secrets. It takes only a moment to sift through the confusing jumble to find what you need, especially on the battlefield. An enemy's mind reveals its intent, helping you anticipate its strikes. You can sense when another enemy might close on you, shifting your position to best receive the attack. The thoughts you steal help guide your attacks and keep you from harm, letting you endure in combat to destroy the enemies standing against you.

Phrenic Invader Path Features

Opened Mind (11th level): You gain telepathy 5. If you already have telepathy, you increase its range by 5.

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Reflexive Action (11th level): Whenever you are damaged by a melee attack, you can spend an action point to use an unaugmented ardent at-will power as an immediate reaction.

Shared Senses (11th level): You cannot be deafened or blinded as long as you are adjacent to at least one creature that is not deafened or blinded.

Wary Mind (16th level): You gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls for opportunity attacks and immediate action attacks.

Phrenic Invader Disciplines

Phrenic Strike — Phrenic Invader Attack 11

You fight past your enemy's attack to deliver a punishing blow to its body and mind.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Immediate Reaction Melee weapon
Trigger: An enemy hits you with a melee attack
Effect: Before the attack, you shift 1 square.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

MIKE SCHILEY

Mind's Bitter Betrayal — Phrenic Invader Utility 12

Your focused concentration lets you bolster your allies with energy drawn from your enemies' uncertainty.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Zone
Minor Action Close burst 3
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter or until you end the effect as a free action during your turn. The zone moves with you, remaining centered on you. While within the zone, enemies grant combat advantage to you, and allies gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses. Until the zone ends, you are slowed.

Thought Interloper — Phrenic Invader Attack 20

You lay open your opponent's mental barriers, ravaging its mind and reading its every move in combat.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: The target is affected by your thought interloper (save ends). While the target is affected by the interloper, it takes ongoing 5 psychic damage and its attacks provoke opportunity attacks from you.
Each Failed Saving Throw: One ally adjacent to the target can make a melee basic attack against the target as a free action.

Siphon

"Your fears, hates, hopes, and dreams are mine to devour. My feast will end when only your husk remains."

Prerequisite: Ardent

Not all vampires are undead, drinking the blood of the living or draining souls with a touch. Some feast on intense feelings such as fear and love, anger and happiness. They are insidious creatures—parasites that gorge without drawing attention to themselves. Some might not even realize what they're doing. Regardless of whether a siphon is cognizant of his or her abilities, the effect of such a character's power is palpable, as a victim falls into the clutches of lethargy, becoming torpid and drained.

As a siphon, you use psionics to absorb thought energy from your victims, drinking deep from their emotions and feelings to increase your power. Your mind is a vortex, catching others' thoughts and using them to replenish your resources and overcome your injuries. Once you establish a link with another creature, you can draw its energy until your prey is drained and unable to act. You might keep this energy for yourself or transfer it to your allies so that they can share its benefits.

Siphon Path Features

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Psychic Vampire (11th level): When you use an unaugmented ardent at-will power to hit an enemy that is slowed, dazed, stunned, or taking ongoing psychic damage, you gain temporary hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.

BEN WOOTTEN

Torpid Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make an attack and the attack hits, each enemy within 3 squares of you is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Draining Surge (16th level): When an enemy within 5 squares of you drops to 0 hit points or becomes dazed, stunned, or weakened, if you use ardent surge before the end of your next turn, the target of the power regains additional hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Siphon Disciplines

Insidious Distraction — Siphon Attack 11

Your weapon attack lets you sink psychic fangs into your foe's mind, crippling its ability to think and act.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target is dazed and slowed until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target is dazed and immobilized until the end of your next turn.

Feast of Death — Siphon Utility 12

You draw on the psychic energy of a dying creature to grant yourself and your allies a surge of vigor.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: A creature within 10 squares of you that you can see drops to 0 hit points or fewer
Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier. Each ally adjacent to you gains temporary hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Emotion Leech — Siphon Attack 20

Your weapon slips through an opponent's defenses and opens a conduit to its mind. As long as the conduit remains open, you can feast on your foe's misfortune.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. Will
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier psychic damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target is affected by your emotion leech (save ends). While the target is affected by the leech, the target is slowed and weakened. In addition, at the start of its turn if you have line of sight to the target, you and each ally adjacent to you regain hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.

CHAPTER 2

Battlemind

"Magic and steel are a fool's weapons, for no attack will ever breach the armor of my mind."

You are the invincible warrior, turning aside an enemy's attack using only a single thought. You are the tireless champion, standing fast in the thick of battle as your foes fall to the power of your mind. You are the wild berserker, channeling your pain into a counterstrike that leaves the strongest enemy reeling. You are the battlemind—a warrior of thought and action, whose physical and mental fortitude are the equal of any foe.

Your combat prowess alone would make you a formidable opponent. But it is your mastery of psionics that grants you your edge in combat. You call on the power within to tear into an opponent's mind, unearthing its secrets. You anticipate and avoid your foes' attacks, then deliver a punishing response that batters both body and mind. Psionic power is not merely an accessory to your armament—it is the foundation of your combat skill.

Each individual battlemind's training and outlook are unique. Rejecting formal study, most battleminds borrow fighting forms from enemies and allies alike, combining several disparate styles into a single devastating technique. Whatever path your battlemind character takes, this chapter offers new options to let you sow discord and destruction among your foes.

- Playing a Battlemind: An overview of the battlemind's place at the table and in the world of the game.
- New Build and Class Feature: The harrier battlemind shapes time and space in the thick of combat. Your persistent harrier class feature lets you cross the field in the blink of an eye, evading attacks and redirecting the fight against vulnerable foes.
- New Powers: A host of new battlemind disciplines let you draw on psionic power to shape your attacks and the state of the battlefield itself.
- New Paragon Paths: The five new paragon paths introduced in this chapter give battlemind characters the option of honing the speed of their assault, assuming the strength of ageless stone, or using the mind to harness the power of the storm.

MCLEAN KENDREE

McLean Kendree
2010

Half a dozen lightly armored figures lay scattered across the sun-baked grass, groaning as they cradled bruised limbs and ringing heads. Beneath the watchful gaze of Captain Halmont, half a dozen more battled back and forth across the field. Five of them gave thanks to Kord and Erathis that they were fighting with wooden practice blades. The sixth tried to smother her disappointment.

Imarra swept through her foes like a subversive thought, her feet scarcely seeming to touch the ground. Her wooden longsword cracked into one warrior's ribs as she spun, but it was far more than the force of the blow that drove him backward. Imarra felt the power flowing through her limbs, riding the wake of her own elation. A feeling of ecstasy.

One of the guards raised his blade, but even before he could begin to bring it down, Imarra had stepped around him, her own sword grazing the small of his back. He shuddered at the touch—not of her blade, but of her mind. As he collapsed in a gibbering heap, two of the others lunged at her, but Imarra was already gone, seeming to vanish for an instant before she reappeared behind them. Two more quick spins, a leap that should have required wings, a thrust swifter than sight, and she stood alone on the field.

Casually dropping her battered blade atop the last fallen guard, she sauntered over to the table at the edge of the field, stopping to meet Captain Halmont's dark stare.

"My best soldier couldn't have done that," he murmured.

Imarra stooped to retrieve her scabbard where it lay beside him. She grinned as she turned for the barracks. "Actually, your best soldier just did."

Other warriors train themselves to enter combat believing that death is the ultimate glory. They have no fear because they have nothing to lose. Not you. As a battlemind, you leap headfirst into battle without fear because you believe—because you know—that you've already won. All you need to do now is make the enemy understand it.

Combat flows in your soul with the pounding strength of the blood in your veins and the boldness at the center of your thought. You might be a professional soldier who discovered an untapped well of inner power, a brigand who learned you were destined for something greater, or a city guard whose oaths allowed you to tap into a force stronger than mere muscle when you heft your blade. Yet no matter the differences in your origins and goals, you recognize other battleminds as kindred spirits. For they, like you, literally live for battle—all of you recognizing that the only true strength comes from within.

Hearts and Minds

Battleminds have a reputation for an air of superiority. For many, it is a reputation that is well deserved. Battleminds carry themselves with a confidence earned from many victories, their skill and cunning winning the day over enemies of every stripe. But their fighting prowess is only part of the story.

Willpower is the core of every battlemind's strength, but this willpower manifests in different ways. Some battleminds carry themselves with a distinct arrogance. Others center themselves in the quiet conviction that they are up to any challenge. The most reckless battleminds evince an inability to acknowledge defeat that borders on madness. Battleminds are hardened warriors, without a doubt. At the point at which a fighter or a barbarian's endurance would begin to ebb, a battlemind's psionic energy sees the fight through to the bitter end.

In thinking about your character's personality, consider how your resolve manifests in your behavior and outlook. Are you an ego-driven warrior, gleefully testing your blade against any foe willing to stand against you? Are you a shining crusader, embracing any cause that feels right? And what happens when you realize that your cause is less just than you had first thought, or when you take on more foes than you can handle? Do you learn from your errors? Or do you mask your failure with greater bravado?

As important as your drive is to your character, you should never overlook your physical might. Many battleminds see their strength and durability as the channels through which their psionic energy flows. A battlemind's body is a vessel for psionic power. All battleminds devote time and training to maintaining their physical edge, to ensure their bodies are up to the challenges they face.

The Art of War

A dedication to perfection is an integral part of your personality, and it carries over into all other aspects of your life. Although battleminds might see themselves as the pinnacle of the warrior's art, however, few are self-centered enough to think of themselves as masters of every endeavor they attempt. Most battleminds are unlikely to claim expertise at architecture, lore, music, or similar pursuits—although some have no doubt that they could master any of these with enough time and attention.

It is typically only in combat that a battlemind's drive and dedication manifest fully. Battleminds have a complete conviction of their martial superiority, trusting in their talents and tactics to defeat any challenge. If a battlemind suffers failure, it is never more than a momentary setback, easily overcome with renewed focus and more training.

What is it about combat that inspires nascent battleminds to develop their unique abilities? Why does your boldness not grant you the power to excel in other areas with as much ease? For the most part, few circumstances apart from combat inspire the rush of mental intensity that unlocks a battlemind's latent psionic ability. Once that ability has been honed in the forge of battle, there is no turning back. The fury of combat becomes inextricably linked with your psionic powers, and so your mind continually shapes and hones those powers for the battlefield.

Your Life Before

A battlemind's life is steeped in conflict. Even before their psionic talent manifests, most battleminds live a warrior's life. You might have been a soldier or a guard in service to a noble or a temple. You might have been a gladiator or a common brawler. Your psionic power stayed hidden just beneath your conscious mind so that you could not exploit its strength.

Your potential need not have revealed itself in battle. Any physical exertion might have triggered your awakening, from the thrill of the hunt to exploring some unknown realm or ruin. Even simple burglary or a feat of athletics might have been the trigger that unlocked your power.

Some battleminds learn to harness their potential by thinking about or yearning for combat. You might have been a brilliant tactician or an advisor to a noble or a king, never picking up a sword until your power manifested and filled you with the hunger for glory. Alternatively, you might come from a background disconnected from the arts of war, even as you spent your life idolizing the legendary heroes of your people. A yearning to follow in the footsteps of a champion of your faith or country inspired you for many years, then finally showed you what you were capable of.

Roleplaying a Battlemind

With boldness as the driving force behind many of your powers, you might consider how that boldness defines your character's state of mind. Between the extremes of simple self-confidence and towering arrogance lies the wider range of personalities that battleminds can adopt. Even if your skill and power do not manifest as ego, you are consistently first into battle, making sure that your enemies know what is about to befall them. You take on any challenge, never worrying about the outcome. Every victory is earned and deserved; every defeat is but a temporary setback.

In the end, however, even the most arrogant battlemind knows when to back down—particularly if doing so helps keep the party united. Your sense that you are destined for greater things means that you can be forceful without causing trouble, confident without bruising the feelings of your companions.

Although battleminds have a reputation for recklessness, few are suicidally overconfident. Your belief in yourself and your abilities is the foundation of your strength, but you recognize that you fight with a purpose that cannot be served by your meaningless demise. Some foes have had longer to hone their abilities than you have. Some monsters are too powerful to be faced without the proper resources. Although you never abandon a fight, you acknowledge that some conflicts require a tactically sound retreat.

Many of even the least egocentric battleminds are attention seekers. They place themselves in a leadership role, steering their companions toward situations in which their own abilities can prove useful. Be careful, though, not to steal attention from the other players around the table.

Portraying a glory-hog without actually becoming one takes a bit of effort. When you are pushing for something purely in character, make it clear to other players that this is the case. Keep a close eye on the line between in-character and out-of-character reactions. Make sure the other players know that you won't take it personally when their characters don't go along with your battlemind's desires, and make it obvious that any objections you offer are solely on your character's behalf.

In the end, the foundation of your battlemind's leadership lies not only in demonstrating self-assurance in what you can do—it lies in fostering the same confidence in your allies. Take responsibility for your actions and attitudes, and use your power and insight to shepherd your companions to similar success. Boldness turns to rude, haughty, or arrogant behavior easily enough. Just reserve those traits for the creatures and characters you fight, not the people who fight beside you.

Discovering Your Power

If you're starting a campaign at 1st level, or if you're recasting an existing character by multiclassing into battlemind, think about playing through the discovery of your abilities, with the Dungeon Master's permission. Many battleminds do not initially recognize that their newly discovered potential is psionic in nature. When these amazing powers first manifest, you might attribute their effects to physical prowess, divine intervention, or dumb luck.

Only gradually do you realize that these abilities are innate, recognizing the connection between your powers and your own strength of will. But a full understanding of the change being wrought within you takes time and self-reflection. By playing through this process, you can experience your character's initial surprise and lack of understanding, followed by growing comprehension and a swelling of confidence as you accept the psionic power forged within your own mind.

Instinct and Intention

Your abilities developed more or less spontaneously, as has your fighting style. You might have had formal combat training before developing your psionic powers, but as a battlemind, your continued advancement is based more on instinct and experience than on discipline.

You are a great believer in natural talent. Formal instruction might improve the prowess of a great warrior, but it cannot create natural ability in one who lacks it. A character drawn instinctively to battle will always prove superior to one who takes up the sword by circumstance, not by choice.

This attitude sometimes puts you at odds with certain martial traditions—most notably with monks. The mind set of many monks is built around strict discipline and ordered instruction. You believe in an intuitive development that comes only by reacting to real combat as your instincts demand. Such differences of philosophy rarely extend to members of your own party, however. When battleminds and monks fight side by side, each focuses on demonstrating the virtue of his or her chosen path.

The Front Lines

As a battlemind, you are a defender first and foremost. You stand in the thick of the fight, absorbing punishment and dishing it out in equal measure. For some battleminds, this approach to combat is a deliberate choice. Such characters feel an obligation to protect their less robust (or, in the minds of the arrogant, less effective) companions. In contrast, many battleminds fall into the defender role almost by accident, by following their instincts and impulses.

As a battlemind, you feel the burning need to be in the center of the action. You might charge ahead and draw enemy fire not from any sense of tactics, but because the enemy needs to know that you have no fear. By immersing yourself in the battle you crave, you show your superiority to a hated foe—and give your companions a chance to fight with increased effectiveness behind you.

Aspects

Within the full range of powers available to battleminds, few are more indicative of your approach to combat than the aspects. When you assume an aspect, you fix an idealized state in your mind, using psionic energy to reshape your form to match that vision. The result is sometimes subtle, with only slight alterations to your physical or mental state. Other aspects are profound transformations into monstrous creatures that send your foes scurrying in terror.

Although any battlemind with the right mind set can adopt one or more aspects, not all do. Among those battleminds who use aspect powers, most focus on one or two aspects, allocating their additional resources to other areas that can strengthen their presence on the battlefield. Some battleminds reject aspects altogether, taking the fight to the enemy without falling back on "shapechanging trickery."

These diverse attitudes toward aspect disciplines stem from a battlemind's core identity. Like all battlemind powers, an aspect transformation results from a particular state of mind. As a result, the battlemind's sense of self is critical to honing the psionic power needed to allow an aspect to transform body and mind.

Battleminds who adopt aspects choose aspect powers that speak to their own sense of who they are. A haughty battlemind who sees herself above her enemies might assume the aspect of elevated harmony, her idealized form made manifest by her mind. A silent brute of a battlemind might assume the aspect of living stone to reflect his hard personality and unwavering dedication. A battlemind who strives for perfection might find it easy to adopt a range of different forms, always seeking an ideal but never finding it.

These considerations have little mechanical effect on your power choices. Aspect powers are a useful touchstone for roleplaying, however. When picking aspect powers, think about what each says about your character and what insights it reveals into his or her personality.

Battleminds in the World

No members of any of the character classes are common in the world, but battleminds are particularly rare—or at least they seem to be. The trouble with identifying battleminds is that they are hard to distinguish from fighters and members of the other combat-focused classes. With the right set of disciplines, a battlemind might fight in a manner and style visually indistinguishable from that of a fighter or a paladin. Only those who become close to a battlemind learn to recognize the subtle signs of the character's power.

Moreover, the number of battleminds—indeed the number of all characters with an aptitude for psionics—rises and falls in proportion to the severity of the Far Realm's threat to the world. An imminent aberrant invasion might suddenly trigger the battlemind's power and potential in knights of the realm, common thugs, and everyone in between. If the threat of the Far Realm ever ends, battleminds might even disappear from the world, vanishing into myth and legend.

Lore of the Mind-Fighters

Tales inscribed in ancient temples or on the oldest parchments tell of the first battleminds. These brave warriors harnessed their powerful will and psionic gifts to combat the horrors that spilled through breaches between this world and the Far Realm beyond. Fighting alone, these ancient guardians stood as a bulwark against the shadow cast across the mortal realm. In conjunction with the gods and their servants, they helped staunch the aberrant tide in those long-forgotten wars.

Through the ages, battleminds have come and gone. Each generation, some arise to combat a new threat, helping to contain the aberrant menace and safeguard the world from harm. The lack of common cause and custom between battleminds means that each such generation of new heroes knows little of the sacrifices or legends of those who came before them. What little information can be found is often apocryphal or misleading, mythologizing the deeds of only the brashest heroes. As a result, battleminds are forced to find their own way in the world, only occasionally discovering others who share their gift and the boldness that is their birthright.

Battleminds Today

Because of their individualistic nature and spontaneous development, battleminds are seldom organized into formal schools or open alliances. On occasion, small numbers of battleminds gather into mercenary companies or knightly orders. For the most part, though, a battlemind fights as an individual champion.

A battlemind might believe that his or her combat prowess is markedly superior to the skill or training of others. But even though battleminds forge their combat skills in their own unique fashion, they are quick to show their respect for the talents of other warriors. Fighters and paladins, rangers and wardens, barbarians and monks all fight with unique styles that a battlemind can learn from. As a result, most battleminds pay respectful attention to those who fight alongside them, watching their techniques to ferret out new maneuvers that might augment or perfect their own tactics.

To those battleminds who wholly embrace the internal discipline of their power, the formal approach to training favored by monks, psions, and other classes can be unsettling. In particular, the carefully honed maneuvers and otherworldly state of mind of the psion seem alien to many battleminds, who cannot dream of constraining their own power in such a formal fashion.

Only the most arrogant battleminds dismiss their more disciplined counterparts in the psionic arts without taking what they can from them. In the same way that battleminds can learn from other warriors' fighting techniques, they also look to other psionic characters for the feats and other common ground they share. Although a battlemind's disciplines are markedly different from those of a psion, the raw power of each is born of the same source.

A battlemind's relationship with his or her companions depends in part on the characters' cultural and historical background, but all battleminds recognize their place and purpose within a larger group. A battlemind might be outspoken, brash, and supremely confident, but that confidence is backed up with unmatched bravery. Like their forebears, battleminds are the first into the breach, working to contain the enemy before it can wreak havoc in the world around them. A stalwart and driven warrior, a battlemind makes a powerful addition to any adventuring group.

CHRIS SEAMAN

NEW BUILD

This section adds a new option to the battlemind builds presented in Player's Handbook 3 and the Dark Sun® Campaign Setting. This build also includes a new power choice for the battlemind's Psionic Study class feature.

Harrier Battlemind

Time and space are inconstant. The world around you is mutable and fully within your power to alter as you need. Even a minor adjustment to the fabric of reality creates spectacular changes in the heat of combat, allowing you to move in the blink of an eye or to slow an enemy's attempt to raise its weapon and block your incoming attack. You wield psionic energy to alter fate and circumstance, darting into the near future or stepping into the past to shape the outcome of the moment before you.

As a harrier battlemind, you are unfettered in combat. You might streak across the field to crash into your enemies, then dart away before they can mount a counterstrike. You harry your foes with such speed that they quickly lose track of you. As your mastery grows, you can even shape time during battle, striking, disappearing, then striking again. Your desperate enemies can only guess where you might attack from next.

Although many battleminds focus their efforts against a single enemy at a time, you prefer to strike multiple foes at once, thwarting their tactics and sowing frustration to give you and your allies an edge.

New Class Feature

When you choose your Psionic Study, you can choose Persistent Harrier instead of another option such as those in Player's Handbook 3.

Persistent Harrier: You gain the persistent harrier power, which reflects the ease with which you can outmaneuver your opponents.

Persistent Harrier — Battlemind Feature

You slip the bonds of space to strike back at even a distant opponent.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Immediate Reaction Melee weapon
Trigger: An enemy hits or misses you with an attack for the first time during an encounter
Target: The triggering enemy
Special: You can attack the target with this melee attack even if the target is outside your melee reach.
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport to a square adjacent to the enemy.

SEAN MURRAY

Suggested Options

As a harrier battlemind, you move with ease across the battlefield, whether taking the fight to your enemies or falling back to draw them closer to you. Choose powers that facilitate movement, with teleportation powers being the most important. Your secondary role is controller, which can be strengthened by area powers that manipulate or hamper your opponents. Your feat selection should improve your defenses and mobility.

Make Constitution your highest ability score. Dexterity should be your second-highest score, getting you into the fight quickly and letting you avoid heavy armor to keep moving at full speed in combat. A high Wisdom allows you to improve your battlefield awareness, and Charisma remains important for the many battlemind disciplines that rely on that skill.

Suggested Class Feature: Persistent Harrier
Suggested Feat: Harrying Step*
Suggested Skills: Athletics, Endurance, Insight
Suggested At-Will Powers: *renewed focus, *world-slipping advance
Suggested Daily Power: *accelerating strike
*New option presented in this book.

NEW POWERS

The new powers presented in this chapter expand the available options for battlemind characters. Many reinforce themes expressed in the Harrier Battlemind build, but these powers are equally suitable for other battleminds.

Level 1 At-Will Disciplines

Conductive Defense — Battlemind Attack 1

Your attack surrounds a foe with a shroud of crackling lightning, threatening retribution for strikes against your allies.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Lightning, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee 1
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Reflex
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier lightning damage. Until the start of your next turn, the target takes lightning damage equal to your Constitution modifier whenever it hits one of your allies.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and, until the start of your next turn, the target also takes the lightning damage whenever it shifts to a square adjacent to one of your allies.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier lightning damage. Until the start of your next turn, the target takes lightning damage equal to your Constitution modifier whenever it hits one of your allies.

Renewed Focus — Battlemind Attack 1

By the power of your mind, you shrug off effects that would keep you away from your foes.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage. You are no longer marked or slowed, and you cannot be marked or slowed until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage. You and allies within 5 squares of you are no longer marked or slowed, and cannot be marked or slowed until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage. You are no longer immobilized, marked, or slowed, and you cannot be immobilized, marked, or slowed until the end of your next turn.

Vicious Cobra Strike — Battlemind Attack 1

In your foe's mind, your weapon takes the form of a hissing serpent, its strike hindering that enemy's attacks against you.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One or two creatures
Attack: Constitution vs. AC.
Hit: Constitution modifier psychic damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn. If you target only one creature with this power, the attack deals 1[W] extra damage.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and you also mark one enemy adjacent to the target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier psychic damage, and the target is marked and takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

World-Slipping Advance — Battlemind Attack 1

You slip unfettered across the battlefield to gain an advantageous position.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you shift 1 square to a square adjacent to the target.
Augment 1 (Teleportation)
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport 1 square to a square adjacent to the target.
Augment 2 (Teleportation)
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport to a square adjacent to the target.

BATTLEMINDS AND THE ABERRANT MENACE

As detailed in Player's Handbook 3, the prevalence of psionics in the world corresponds to the intensity of the Far Realm's threat. Where breaches in reality allow the Far Realm's alien nature to spill into the world, this nature corrupts and reforms mortal life in its own image. The natural world recoils from this contact, imbuing sentient beings with the ability to wield psionic energy. The way in which the role this history plays in your own character's backstory is for you to decide.

In consultation with the Dungeon Master, you might see it as your character's destiny to seek and destroy the aberrant threat, providing a thread that might run through the entire campaign. Alternatively, you might go your entire career without ever facing an aberrant creature in battle. Even a battlemind fully aware of the aberrant threat can choose to avoid the front lines of that conflict, focusing his or her achievements on weeding out corruption or shoring up the strength of a threatened world. After all, saving civilization from the aberrant menace does little good if the crumbling foundations of that civilization have already fallen.

Level 1 Daily Disciplines

Accelerating Strike — Battlemind Attack 1

When you surge toward a foe, the momentum of your attack carries you through the rest of combat.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: Before the attack, you shift your speed. You can move through enemies' spaces during this movement.
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC. You have combat advantage for this attack.
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage. Your movement does not provoke opportunity attacks from the target until the end of the encounter.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you gain a +2 power bonus to speed. In addition, when you shift, you shift 1 extra square.

Aspect of Bitter Ice — Battlemind Attack 1

Your weapon is rimed with ice as you strike. In the aftermath, you are imbued with a bitter cold that protects you and slows your enemies.

Daily ✦ Augmentable, Cold, Polymorph, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Attack: Constitution vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier cold damage, you push the target 1 square, and the target is immobilized (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).
Effect: You assume the aspect of bitter ice until the end of the encounter. While in this aspect, you gain resist 5 cold and you can use the following augmentation with your battlemind at-will attack powers that are augmentable. This augmentation is in addition to the effects that an at-will power might have; this augmentation doesn't supersede them.
Augment 1
Effect: Until the start of your next turn, any enemy that starts its turn adjacent to you is slowed until the end of its turn.

Living Fortress — Battlemind Attack 1

As you lash out at your foe, a shroud of rock and scree rises from the ground to protect you.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you and allies adjacent to you have cover. As a minor action, you can end this effect to gain resist 5 to all damage until the start of your next turn.

Stolen Grace — Battlemind Attack 1

Your foe's movement wracks it with psychic pain in the aftermath of your attack, even as your own mobility is heightened.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Stance, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Reflex
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target takes 5 psychic damage if it moves more than half its speed when it moves (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You assume the stolen grace stance. Until the stance ends, you gain a +4 power bonus to AC and Reflex against opportunity attacks and a +2 power bonus to opportunity attack rolls.

Level 2 Utility Disciplines

Dimension Slide — Battlemind Utility 2

You bend the space around you to better position yourself and an ally on the battlefield.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Move Action Ranged 5
Target: You and one ally
Effect: You slide one target 1 square and teleport the other target 3 squares.

Methods of Defense

A battlemind wades steadily into the thick of the fray, turning aside attacks with heavy armor and shield while hacking through his foes with powerful weapon attacks. Another battlemind fights like the wind in combat, moving so fast that no enemy can track her movements. Yet another unleashes wild fury as he blinks in and out of existence, taunting his foes to attack if they can.

Each battlemind approaches combat from a different perspective. But all members of this class are united by their primary role as a defender—and by the three powers on which that role is based.

Battlemind's demand allows you to mark enemies within 3 squares of you. Because it is a minor action, this power can be used in conjunction with a standard-action attack. Moreover, your mark is hard for the foe to shed, lasting as it does until the end of the encounter or until you choose to mark a different enemy. Even if you become dazed or stunned, your chosen opponent is hampered in its attempts to attack your allies.

Blurred step lets you keep the pressure on a marked foe by hindering its attempts to shift away from you. A marked enemy that shifts away from you in order to target one of your allies will find itself unable to escape you.

While you keep a marked enemy close with blurred step, mind spike becomes a potent power, compelling the foe to attack you or suffer a backlash from its own attack. This power is most effective against brutes, lurkers, and other creatures with high-damage single-target attacks.

Evade Explosion — Battlemind Utility 2

A prescient vision of destruction allows you to sidestep the worst effects of an attack.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: A close or an area attack hits you and deals damage
Effect: You shift 1 square. If the shift places you outside the area of the triggering attack, you take half damage from the attack.

Oaken Resilience — Battlemind Utility 2

As your mind envisions the strength of the oak, your body acquires that tree's ancient resilience.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain resist 3 to all damage until the end of the encounter.

Wild Savagery — Battlemind Utility 2

You summon the beast within, gaining the power to send unwary foes sprawling.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: You must be bloodied.
Effect: Until the stance ends, any creature you hit with an opportunity attack is also knocked prone.

Once during the encounter, you can take the following action while in this stance.

Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: An enemy marked by you deals damage to an ally with an attack that doesn't include you as a target.
Effect: Make a melee basic attack or a charge attack against the triggering enemy. On a hit, the enemy is also knocked prone.

The Deathless Champion

Some battleminds believe that the psionic power from which their potent combat disciplines are derived is more than just an inanimate source of energy and strength. Legends tell that during the Dawn War, a powerful champion of the gods managed through sheer force of will to survive his own death. This champion, whose name has been lost to time, scattered his essence across the mortal world, where its shards nested in the souls of those potentially worthy of pursuing his example of bravery and greatness. By this act of immortal sacrifice, the first battleminds were granted their power.

Battleminds who subscribe to this legend believe that all members of the class carry within them a spark of this ancient champion. Such characters strive for personal perfection and glory in the name of a higher purpose, hoping that they might one day prove sufficiently worthy to serve as their lost progenitor's true vessel. On this day, the Deathless Champion will manifest once more, reborn in the mind and body of his new host.

Level 3 At-Will Disciplines

Cast the Net — Battlemind Attack 3

Your attack bends the fabric of space, drawing your enemy to a more advantageous position.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport the target to a square adjacent to you.
Augment 1
Melee weapon + 1 reach
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport the target to a square adjacent to you. If the target moves more than 2 squares on its next turn, you can teleport it to a square adjacent to you as an immediate reaction.

Harrier's Dance — Battlemind Attack 3

Your successful attack empowers you, letting you slip the bonds of space in response to a foe's assault.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] damage. Before the start of your next turn, if you take damage from any enemy that is not adjacent to you, you can teleport 2 squares as an immediate reaction.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage. Before the start of your next turn, if you take damage from any enemy that is not adjacent to you, you can teleport 2 squares as an immediate reaction.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Effect: Whenever you take damage before the start of your next turn, you can teleport 3 squares as a free action.

Lodestone Lure — Battlemind Attack 3

As you raise your weapon, a foe lurches toward you against its will.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee 2
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Will
Hit: Constitution modifier damage, and you pull the target 1 square. Until the end of your next turn, the target can move only to squares that are adjacent to you.
Augment 1
Melee 5
Hit: As above, but you pull the target 4 squares.
Augment 2
Melee 5
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you pull the target 4 squares and knock it prone. Until the end of your next turn, the target can move only to squares that are adjacent to you.

Momentum Swing — Battlemind Attack 3

Your vicious attack lets you swing away from the target, ready to strike the next foe.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Effect: You shift 2 squares to a square adjacent to any enemy other than the target.
Augment 1
Effect: You shift your speed to a square adjacent to any enemy other than the target.
Augment 2
Effect: Make a charge attack against a creature other than the target. Movement made as part of the charge does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Level 5 Daily Disciplines

Aspect of Unspeakable Horror — Battlemind Attack 5

Your attack heralds your transformation into a nightmare creature whose appearance cripples your enemies with fear.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Will
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage plus 1d12 psychic damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You assume the aspect of the unspeakable horror until the end of the encounter. While in this aspect, you gain a +5 power bonus to Intimidate checks and you can use the following augmentation with your battlemind at-will attack powers that are augmentable. This augmentation is in addition to the effects that an at-will power might have; this augmentation doesn't supersede them.
Augment 1 (Fear)
Effect: Each target of the at-will attack takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

The Hidden Mind

Those versed in psionics lore sometimes speak of the Other, the Sleeper, or the Hidden Mind—a consciousness that dwells beneath all other sentient minds. Some scholarly psions believe the Hidden Mind is a collective consciousness—the amalgamation of all sentience in the world somehow developing an awareness of its own. In their view, the Hidden Mind is the source of all psionic power in the world. When a character wields that power, he or she draws directly from the Sleeper's unseen knowledge. Given the wide range of ways that psionics can be employed, this notion is often dismissed as fancy. Still, more than a few battleminds and monks claim to experience memories that are not their own—memories of events they have never lived. If not originating within the Hidden Mind, then from where do such memories come?

Empathic Feedback — Battlemind Attack 5

Your counterattack sends foes reeling away from you while your vigor is temporarily replenished.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Immediate Reaction Close burst 3
Trigger: You take damage from an attack
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Constitution vs. Will
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier psychic damage, and you push the target 3 squares.
Miss: Half damage, and you push the target 1 square.
Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to one-half your level + your Constitution modifier.

Fated Confrontation — Battlemind Attack 5

You warp fate to take the place of another creature on the battlefield, deliver a brutal attack against an unsuspecting enemy, and then return to your original position.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Standard Action Ranged 5
Primary Target: One creature
Effect: You teleport yourself and the primary target, swapping positions. Make a secondary attack that is a melee weapon attack.
Secondary Target: One creature
Secondary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the secondary target until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Half damage, and you mark the secondary target until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You teleport yourself and the primary target, swapping positions.

Inconstant Location — Battlemind Attack 5

Your attack opens up ripples in space, letting you slip from place to place to stay one step ahead of your foes.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You assume the inconstant location stance. Until the stance ends, you can teleport 2 squares as a free action.
Special: You can take this free action only as the first or the last action of your turn.

Level 6 Utility Disciplines

Energy Transformation — Battlemind Utility 6

The force of an opponent's attack is shunted through you as brilliant white light.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You take damage from an attack.
Effect: You take half damage from the triggering attack. Until the end of the encounter, you radiate bright light that fills your space and all squares within 5 squares of you.

Mental Triumph — Battlemind Utility 6

By the power of your mind, you shrug off the most potent physical effects.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You cannot be slowed, immobilized, or restrained until the end of the encounter.

Relentless Hostility — Battlemind Utility 6

Even before your foe drops, you slip away in search of another victim.

At-Will ✦ Psionic
Free Action (Special) Personal
Trigger: You reduce an enemy to 0 hit points during your turn
Effect: You shift 1 square.
Special: You can use this power once during each of your turns.

Warning Premonition — Battlemind Utility 6

A premonition of danger flashes through your mind, letting you take the fight to a foe that thought it had the drop on you.

Daily ✦ Psionic
No Action Personal
Trigger: You are surprised
Effect: You are no longer surprised. In addition, you shift half your speed and mark one creature adjacent to you at the end of the shift until the end of your next turn.

Level 7 At-Will Disciplines

Body Double — Battlemind Attack 7

You bend space to temporarily stand in two places at once, becoming a double threat to your enemies.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] damage, and choose a square adjacent to the target. You occupy that square in addition to your normal square until the start of your next turn. While you occupy multiple squares through this power, you can attack from either square. You can flank from either square and can flank with yourself. You can be targeted in either square, but close and area attacks that affect both squares target you only once.

Augment 1
Hit: As above, and when the effect ends, you choose whether to occupy your original square or your double's square.

Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] damage, and choose any square within 5 squares of you. You occupy that square in addition to your normal square until the start of your next turn. While you occupy multiple squares through this power, you can attack from either square. You can flank from either square and can flank with yourself. You can be targeted in either square, but close and area attacks that affect both squares target you only once. When the effect ends, you choose whether to occupy your original square or your double's square.

For the Dungeon Master: The Iron Brigade

In the contemporary era, the wilderness between civilization's last bastions is wild and dangerous. Only the greatest organizations and groups develop reputations that spread beyond their local environs. One such group is the Iron Brigade—a combat school and mercenary company known far and wide for the martial skill and tactical prowess of its members and students.

The instructors of the Iron Brigade travel throughout the former realms of Nerath, seeking out young warriors who show the potential for greatness. Would-be students must risk the dangers of the wilds, following the trail of rumor and reputation that leads to the Brigade's Iron Hall in the city of Kaddastrei. There, they hope to be found worthy of admittance, and of learning the secrets of combat from the world's greatest teachers.

Unknown to all except its leaders, the Iron Brigade has a secret and sinister agenda. Each of the masters and founders of the Brigade is secretly a battlemind, and all the organization's efforts are geared toward locating other battleminds scattered across the world. The school's reputation attracts warriors from all races and cultures, and its intense training and mercenary endeavors are designed to spark the appearance of battlemind powers within those who possess the latent talent.

The Iron Brigade's leaders hope to one day control a force of battleminds larger than any previous conclave of these warriors by an order of magnitude. With this psionic army behind them, the masters of the Brigade will then send their full forces to rout lesser armies as they forge a psionics military dictatorship—a new empire to stand where Nerath fell.

The current high commander of the Iron Brigade is Mavthos Dorrn, a human battlemind of high paragon level. He is the grandson of the Brigade's founder, but neither he nor his inner circle understands that the real power in the organization belongs to the hybrid warlock/battlemind deva Parnyelle. Believing that her role in the base schemes of the Brigade threatens to corrupt her into a rakshasa in her next life, Parnyelle uses her arcane and psionic power to wield subtle influence over Dorrn and reshape the Brigade for her own purposes.

Established battlemind characters are unlikely to train with the Iron Brigade, since the order's rank-and-file instructors remain unaware of its secret purpose. A new battlemind character roleplayed as being unaware of his or her psionic ability might, however, come to the attention of the order's higher-level masters. Alternatively, rumors of the Brigade's secret purpose could be the starting point for a series of adventures or an entire campaign.

Flowing Weapon — Battlemind Attack 7

As you swing your weapon, it ripples and flows to reach a distant foe.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon + 1 reach
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Augment 1
Melee weapon + 3 reach
Augment 2
Melee weapon + 3 reach
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you pull the target 4 squares.

Give Chase — Battlemind Attack 7

Your attack keeps an enemy's attention on you as you stay in motion around it.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn. If the target triggers your blurred step power before the end of your next turn, you shift 1 extra square with that power.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Effect: If the target triggers your blurred step power before the end of your next turn, you shift a number of extra squares equal to your Wisdom modifier with that power.
Augment 2 (Teleportation)
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Effect: If the target triggers your blurred step power before the end of your next turn, you can teleport 5 squares with that power instead of shifting.

Psionics? What Psionics?

You might find it compelling to play your battlemind character as if you have no idea what you can do or how this power has come to you. In fact, battleminds who acquire their techniques through trial and error might not even realize they are using psionic power, at least initially. In many cases, you might be convinced that your disciplines are simply advanced martial exploits—the result of substantial training or latent skill. You might consider yourself a fighter, scoffing at the notion that you've somehow developed psionic powers. You might even take offense at the suggestion, with its implication that you got where you are by unexplained accident rather than raw talent and endless training.

No battlemind can maintain this point of view indefinitely, however. By the time you're teleporting yourself or tossing foes around the battlefield when your allies hit them, it's pretty clear that your disciplines are no longer obeying the laws of nature. But until then, this approach can give you an interesting hook on which to hang your roleplaying.

Violent Ubiquity — Battlemind Attack 7

Your attack keeps the target off balance, as either it or one of your allies swap positions in a violent wrenching of reality.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage. You teleport yourself and either the target or one ally adjacent to you, swapping positions.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn. You then teleport yourself and one ally within 3 squares of you, swapping positions.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn. You then teleport yourself and one ally within 5 squares of you, swapping positions.

Level 9 Daily Disciplines

Baleful Teleport — Battlemind Attack 9

A crippling strike shunts your foe across the battlefield, then leaves it dazed.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport the target 5 squares. The target is then dazed (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Adaptable Discipline

Battleminds watch warriors of other classes, studying their techniques to hone new methods of taking the fight to their enemies. Although some battleminds consider their own techniques superior to those of other nonpsionic classes, few are so close-minded as to believe that they have nothing to learn from the example of others. Using the game's multiclassing or hybrid rules is the most common means for a battlemind to directly adopt the tactics and techniques of another class. But with the Dungeon Master's approval, a character can take a more story-based approach.

Any class's powers can be fine-tuned by adjusting their descriptive elements to mirror similar powers from other classes. As a battlemind, you might witness the success a fighter has using tide of iron. The battlemind power world-slipping advance has a similar feel. As a result, you might retrain for this power and incorporate some of the elements found in the fighter power—such as using a shield and pushing the target as part of the attack. You and the Dungeon Master can refine the power's effects for when you use power points to augment the attack.

Lion's Charge — Battlemind Attack 9

You make springing charge attacks against two foes, even as you set your sights on a third.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Requirement: You must charge and use this power in place of a melee basic attack.
Target: One or two creatures
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + 1d6 + Constitution modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: If either attack hits, you can repeat the attack against a third creature, with a +2 bonus to the attack roll.

Shattered Time — Battlemind Attack 9

Your weapon attack disrupts the flow of time around you, allowing you to harry your foes' attempts to attack your allies.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon, Zone
Standard Action Melee weapon
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You create a zone in a close burst 2 that lasts until the end of your next turn. While you are within the zone, you can make the following secondary attack.
Opportunity Action Melee weapon
Trigger: An enemy within the zone makes an attack that does not include you as a target
Effect: Before the attack, you shift to any unoccupied square adjacent to the triggering enemy that is within the zone.
Secondary Target: The triggering enemy
Secondary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the secondary target until the end of your next turn.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists.

Strength of My Enemy — Battlemind Attack 9

When your attack weakens a foe, its fleeting strength drives your fury in battle.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Fortitude
Hit: Constitution modifier damage, and the target is weakened (save ends).
Miss: The target is weakened until the end of your next turn.
Effect: While the target is weakened from this attack, your melee attacks deal 2d6 extra damage.

Level 10 Utility Disciplines

Hone Weapon — Battlemind Utility 10

You channel psionic power through your weapon, granting it a brutal advantage in battle.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Melee touch
Target: One weapon
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, the weapon gains the brutal 1 property. In addition, critical hits with the weapon deal 1d10 extra damage.

Subjective Gravity — Battlemind Utility 10

By altering reality, you ignore the effects of gravity as you move.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you can move across any horizontal or vertical surface without having to climb. You can walk on walls and ceilings as if they were floors. You fall if you end the stance while on a surface on which you could not normally stand.

Ubiquitous Vision — Battlemind Utility 10

Your entire body becomes an extension of your eyes.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, enemies cannot gain combat advantage by flanking you, and you gain a +5 power bonus to Perception checks.

Uncanny Senses — Battlemind Utility 10

Foes try in vain to hide from your heightened senses.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you can see invisible creatures and objects, and you gain a +5 power bonus to Insight checks and Perception checks.

Level 13 At-Will Disciplines

Intellect Snap — Battlemind Attack 13

Your weapon channels your psychic fury to distract and hinder your foe.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Will
Hit: Constitution modifier psychic damage, and the target is dazed until the start of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and you are no longer dazed or marked.
Augment 4
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier psychic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn. In addition, you or one ally within 5 squares of you can make a saving throw against an effect that dazes or stuns.

At the Vanguard

When advancing as a battlemind, consider choosing feats and items that enhance your ability to plant yourself in the center of combat—not because you're a defender, but because that's the way you like it. Feats that improve mobility, such as Powerful Charge or Fast Runner, have more of a battlemind flavor than feats such as Weapon Focus. Similarly, magic items that increase your speed or prevent you from being pinned down in combat are more thematically appropriate than items that boost your defenses. Battleminds are eager to hurl themselves into the thick of the fight, and your feat choices and magic item wish list can reflect this.

Kinetic Shield — Battlemind Attack 13

Your attack summons up a psionic shield that protects nearby allies.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Psionic, Weapon
Immediate Interrupt Melee weapon
Trigger: An enemy hits you or an ally with an attack
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Constitution vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier force damage, and each ally adjacent to you gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.
Effect: You don't have your normal standard action on your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, but the power bonus is +4.
Augment 4
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier force damage, and each ally adjacent to you gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You have your normal standard action on your next turn.

Parting Shot — Battlemind Attack 13

You move through your enemies like a shadow, striking hard with your weapon as you slip away.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: You shift 2 squares and make the following attack against one enemy adjacent to you at any point during this movement.
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Augment 1
Close burst 1
Target: One or two creatures
Hit: 1[W] damage.
Augment 4
Effect: You shift your speed and can move through enemies' spaces during this movement. Make the following attack against one enemy adjacent to you at any point during this movement.
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.

Unwavering Concentration — Battlemind Attack 13

Your attack focuses your mind and body to shield you from counterattacks.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage. You gain a +2 power bonus to a defense of your choice until the start of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage. You gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
Augment 4
Close burst 1
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage. You gain a power bonus to all defenses equal to your Wisdom modifier until the end of your next turn.

Level 15 Daily Disciplines

Aspect of the Raging Tempest — Battlemind Attack 15

Lightning flares around the creature you strike, feeding back to grant you the power of the raging tempest.

Daily ✦ Lightning, Polymorph, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and ongoing 5 lightning damage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You assume the aspect of the raging tempest until the end of the encounter. While in this aspect, you can use the following augmentation with your battlemind at-will attack powers that are augmentable. This augmentation is in addition to the effects that an at-will power might have; this augmentation doesn't supersede them.
Augment 1 (Thunder)
Effect: When you hit with the at-will attack, you slide one enemy marked by you 1 square. That enemy then takes thunder damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.

The Power of the Mind

Most types of damage have an obvious effect. Fire damage burns, cold damage freezes, and force damage bludgeons a foe into submission. But what exactly is psychic damage? Many powers that deal this damage type also target a foe's mind with other effects, but what does the damage itself represent in the game world?

Psychic damage can be thought of as encompassing a range of damaging effects. Illusions that deal psychic damage work on the power of suggestion. By forcing the mind to believe that the body has been hurt, such powers make that damage real. This type of psychic damage can blister skin or break bones with ease.

For physical-style attacks (particularly powers that target a foe's AC), psychic damage takes the form of pure pain—a suffering that has no physical cause but is no less real than the worst effect of any weapon attack. The stress of this agony wracks a foe's body and mind, and can kill as effectively as any other damage type.

For many powers, psychic damage represents the wounding of the target's sense of self. Memories grow blurred and untrustworthy, thoughts become jumbled, and the body stops responding properly to the will of the mind. Even its identity can be stripped away as its mind is temporarily but horrifically undone.

Crushing Wave Strike — Battlemind Attack 15

Your weapon attack is followed up by a blast of psionic power that knocks creatures to the ground.

Daily ✦ Force, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Make a secondary attack that is a close blast 5, and that must include the primary target as a target.
Secondary Target: Each creature in blast
Secondary Attack: Constitution vs. Fortitude
Hit: 10 + Constitution modifier force damage, and you push the secondary target 2 squares and knock it prone.

Precognitive Eye — Battlemind Attack 15

Your attack inspires an enemy to focus on you in combat, and lets you use flashes of the future to distance yourself from your foes.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution + 4 vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of the encounter. No other mark can supersede this mark unless you permit it.
Miss: Half damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You assume the precognitive eye stance. Until the stance ends, whenever any enemy marked by you moves, you can shift 1 square as a free action. In addition, you gain a +1 power bonus to attack rolls against enemies marked by you.

Sonic Burst — Battlemind Attack 15

You move with the speed of thunder, blasting your foes as you pass.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Thunder, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Effect: You shift twice your speed and make the following attack at any point during this movement.
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Constitution vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier thunder damage, you push the target 3 squares, and the target is deafened (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and you push the target 1 square.

Level 16 Utility Disciplines

Inertial Barrier — Battlemind Utility 16

An attack against you triggers a psionic barrier that shields you and your allies from harm.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Zone
Immediate Interrupt Close burst 3
Trigger: You or an ally adjacent to you is hit by an attack
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. You and your allies gain resist 5 to all damage while within the zone. Any enemy that starts or ends its turn within the zone is pushed 1 square from the center of the zone. The zone is difficult terrain for enemies.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists.

Instant Move — Battlemind Utility 16

You blur across the battlefield to move into position for an attack, or to flee an enemy's retribution.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Free Action (Special) Personal
Effect: You shift your speed.
Special: You can use this power only as the first or the last action of your turn.

Resolute Recovery — Battlemind Utility 16

You shrug off a debilitating effect as you revitalize yourself in the midst of combat.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to your Constitution modifier + one-half your level and remove one effect that a save can end. You then shift 1 square.

Teleport Trigger — Battlemind Utility 16

You warp space around you, creating a means of quick escape for you and your allies.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Psionic, Teleportation
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You conjure four shimmering teleport triggers in unoccupied squares within range. Each teleport trigger lasts until the end of the encounter or until expended. When you or an ally enters a square containing a teleport trigger, that character can expend the trigger as a free action to teleport 5 squares.

FINDING EXCUSES

The innate confidence—some would say arrogance—central to a battlemind's powers can make for memorable roleplaying. If your party is forced to retreat from a losing battle, or if you fall in combat and must be rescued by your allies, consider looking for excuses as to why the setback couldn't possibly have been your fault. Point out circumstances in which the enemy clearly got lucky, when the terrain and the environment worked against you, or when your own allies dropped the ball with bad rolls or poor tactical choices.

This type of characterization is a fine line to walk. You want to make it clear that this is your character shoring up his or her own ego by making excuses to the other characters—not you criticizing your friends and fellow players for their luck or tactics. Likewise, make sure that you don't take this approach too often or too severely. But when done well (especially in games that incorporate a certain amount of humor), this defensiveness can add to your roleplaying.

Level 17 At-Will Disciplines

Cloud of Dancing Blades — Battlemind Attack 17

A field of spectral blades fills the air around you, increasing your retribution against a foe that harms your allies.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and your mind spike power deals extra damage equal to your Constitution modifier until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Effect: Before the attack, you mark each enemy adjacent to you until the start of your next turn.
Augment 4 (Zone)
Close burst 2
Primary Target: Each enemy in burst
Primary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the start of your next turn. While you are within the zone, you can make the following secondary attack.
Immediate Interrupt Melee weapon
Trigger: An enemy willingly leaves the zone
Effect: Before the attack, you shift 4 squares to an unoccupied square adjacent to the triggering enemy.
Secondary Target: The triggering enemy
Secondary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: The secondary target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.

Dancing Strike — Battlemind Attack 17

In the aftermath of your attack, you deftly stay ahead of your foes' attempts to move around you.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage. When you use your blurred step power before the end of your next turn, you can shift a number of squares equal to your Charisma modifier instead of shifting 1 square.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 4 (Force, Psychic)
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage. When you use your blurred step power before the end of your next turn, you can shift a number of squares equal to your Charisma modifier instead of shifting 1 square, and the creature that triggers your blurred step takes 5 force and psychic damage.

Gravity Well — Battlemind Attack 17

Your attack constrains a foe to its current location, hindering its ability to flee from you.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] damage, and the target cannot move or be pulled, pushed, or slid more than 2 squares from its current space until the end of your next turn.
Augment 4
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target cannot move or be pulled, pushed, or slid more than 2 squares from its current space until the end of your next turn.

Open the Way — Battlemind Attack 17

Space ripples around you, letting you attack a foe beyond your reach, then drawing you to that enemy's side.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon + 2 reach
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] damage, and you teleport to a square adjacent to the target.
Augment 1
Hit: 1[W] damage, and you teleport one ally adjacent to you to a square adjacent to the target.
Augment 4
Effect: Before the attack, you teleport 5 squares.
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport to a square adjacent to the target.

Level 19 Daily Disciplines

Aspect of Squamous Horror — Battlemind Attack 19

Your attack pushes your enemies back, wracking them with fear as you take on the form of a hideous scaled beast.

Daily ✦ Fear, Polymorph, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you push the target 3 squares.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Each target takes 6 psychic damage. You then assume the aspect of squamous horror until the end of the encounter. While in this aspect, you can use the following augmentation with your battlemind at-will attack powers that are augmentable. This augmentation is in addition to the effects that an at-will power might have; this augmentation doesn't supersede them.
Augment 2
Effect: Choose one creature hit by the at-will attack. That creature moves its speed away from you by the safest route possible as a free action.

Dimensional Ambush — Battlemind Attack 19

Your power bends the space around you, letting you strike a distant foe, then forcing that foe back as you appear at its side to strike again.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon + 3 reach
Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Constitution vs. Reflex
Hit: 5 + Constitution modifier psychic damage, and you slide the target 1 square.
Miss: Half damage, and you slide the target 1 square.
Effect: You teleport to a square adjacent to the space the target occupied before the slide. Make a secondary attack against the target.
Secondary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Half damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You teleport 5 squares.

Focus Bind — Battlemind Attack 19

You tempt an enemy's wrath as you focus your rage on it, setting up a confrontation that only one of you will survive.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage plus 3d10 psychic damage, and you mark the target until the end of the encounter. No other mark can supersede this mark unless you permit it.
Miss: Half damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Effect: Until the mark imposed by this power ends, you are treated as if you are marked by the target, and whenever you or the target moves, the other can move the same number of squares as a free action or shift 1 square as a free action.

Temporal Regression — Battlemind Attack 19

You slip back through time to escape the fight around you, choosing a more advantageous position when you reappear.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC. Make the attack twice.
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: At the start of your next turn, you are removed from play. At the start of your following turn, you reappear in an unoccupied space within 5 squares of the space you last occupied.

Level 22 Utility Disciplines

Deaden Blow — Battlemind Utility 22

You sense the attack coming even before you see it, transforming your body to protect it from harm.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: You take damage from an attack
Effect: You are insubstantial until the end of your next turn.

Fearless Mind set — Battlemind Utility 22

Your strength of mind lets you shrug off fear and your foes' attempts to draw you into combat.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You are no longer marked, and you assume the fearless mind set stance. Until the stance ends, you gain a +4 power bonus to Will, a +5 power bonus to saving throws against fear effects, and you cannot be marked.

Mental Haven — Battlemind Utility 22

By opening a portal into your own mind, you are temporarily shunted out of the world, then invigorated on your return.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You are removed from play. At the end of your next turn, you regain hit points equal to your bloodied value or you regain the use of an encounter power you have already used in this encounter. You then reappear in any unoccupied space within 5 squares of the space you last occupied.

Wings of Elevated Thought — Battlemind Utility 22

Your power of thought lifts you free of the battlefield.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you gain fly 6 (altitude limit 3). If you end your turn flying, you descend to the ground without taking falling damage.

Constitution for Attacks?

Battlemind attacks are based on Constitution for the same reasons that a paladin uses Charisma to smite his foes—both classes are built on a foundation of inner strength. When a battlemind attacks, he or she uses psionic energy to translate strength of body into aggressive force. The healthier and tougher your battlemind character, the more powerful your attacks. A battlemind shatters enemies through brute force guided by the power of the mind. In game terms, this strength of self has the added bonus of allowing you to heal more quickly, maintain greater reserves of physical endurance, and soldier through nearly any ailment that might afflict you.

Level 23 At-Will Disciplines

Crushing Vortex — Battlemind Attack 23

The power of your attack manifests as a force vortex that lashes out against another foe.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and one enemy adjacent to the target takes force damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and one enemy marked by you takes force damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Augment 6 (Zone)
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Effect: Your space and each square adjacent to you becomes a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. When a creature within the zone takes damage from an attack, each enemy within the zone takes force damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Double Vision — Battlemind Attack 23

Your attack leaves a foe reeling, and lets you channel psionic power to fling yourself or the enemy across the battlefield.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target grants combat advantage while within 5 squares of you.

Augment 2 (Teleportation)
Hit: As above, and when an ally hits the target, you can teleport 3 squares as a free action.

Augment 6 (Teleportation)
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn. Also until the end of your next turn, when you or any ally hits the target, you can teleport yourself or the target 3 squares as a free action.

An Undisciplined Reputation

Battleminds and ardents are often lumped together as warriors driven by emotion and instinct. But every rule has its memorable exceptions. For every battlemind who epitomizes the brazen warrior, another is an enlightened combatant who takes on foes with reason and cunning. In some corner of the campaign world, battleminds might train in special schools in much the same way as other combat-focused classes. Likewise, holy orders of battleminds might follow a path reflecting that of the paladin or the avenger.

Iron Presence — Battlemind Attack 23

A vicious strike magnifies your presence in your enemy's mind, compelling it to focus on your threat.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, your battlemind's demand power targets two creatures in the burst.

Augment 2
Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.

Augment 6
Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of the encounter, until you use this power again, or until you use your battlemind's demand power.

Reality Shuffle — Battlemind Attack 23

The force of your attack warps reality, leaving you and your enemy in different positions in the blink of an eye.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon + 1 reach
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage. You teleport yourself and the target, swapping positions.

Augment 2
Melee weapon + 3 reach

Augment 6
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage. You teleport the target 3 squares and then teleport 3 squares.

Level 25 Daily Disciplines

Blazing Offensive — Battlemind Attack 25

You become a streak of flame that blurs across the battlefield, devastating your foes with psionic fire.

Daily ✦ Fire, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: You shift three times your speed and make the following attack against one, two, or three creatures during this movement.
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Reflex
Hit: Ongoing 40 fire damage (save ends). Each time you hit the same target with this attack, the ongoing damage increases by 5.
Miss: Ongoing 20 fire damage (save ends).

Stolen Vigor — Battlemind Attack 25

Your weapon attack leaves a foe weakened, its stolen strength replenishing your own vigor.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4[W] + Constitution modifier damage. In addition, the target is weakened, and you regain 10 hit points at the start of each of the target's turns (save ends both). While the target is adjacent to you, it takes a 2 penalty to saving throws against this effect.
Miss: Half damage, and the target is weakened until the end of your next turn. At the start of the target's next turn, you regain 10 hit points.

Sublime Fury — Battlemind Attack 25

Your attack incites a frenzy for battle that lets you lay waste to your foes.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 6[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You assume the sublime fury stance. Until the stance ends, you take a −2 penalty to attack rolls and your unaugmented battlemind at-will melee attacks deal 2d6 extra damage. In addition, whenever you reduce a nonminion creature to 0 hit points, you make a melee basic attack as a free action.

Temporal Reiteration — Battlemind Attack 25

Your strike pulls an enemy toward you, then forces it back to its previous location to relive your attack.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport the target to a square adjacent to you.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: As a free action at either the start or the end of the target's next turn, you teleport the target to the space it occupied when you targeted it with this power. Make a secondary attack against the target, even if you are no longer within melee reach.
Secondary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage.

Level 27 At-Will Disciplines

Brandished Promise — Battlemind Attack 27

You lash out at foes close by, hoping to draw their ire and their attacks to you.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Attack: Constitution vs. Will
Hit: Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target and one other enemy within 2 squares of the target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 6
Close burst 2
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.

Elusive Ghost — Battlemind Attack 27

You strike, then teleport away to deny your enemies an easy counterattack.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport 1 square.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you teleport 2 squares.
Augment 6
Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Effect: You teleport 5 squares.

Imprisoned Mind — Battlemind Attack 27

Your attack binds your enemy's thoughts, limiting its tactical movement.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target cannot shift until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target is marked and cannot shift until the end of your next turn.
Augment 6
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target cannot shift until the end of your next turn. In addition, you gain a +3 power bonus to opportunity attack rolls against the target until the end of your next turn.

Obsidian Shield — Battlemind Attack 27

A shadowy shield presses your foes and can hinder their movement.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Necrotic, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each enemy in blast
Attack: Constitution vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1[W] necrotic and psychic damage.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier necrotic and psychic damage, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 6
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier necrotic and psychic damage. In addition, if the target moves more than 2 squares away from you on its next turn, it takes 10 necrotic and psychic damage.

Level 29 Daily Disciplines

Darting Grace Strike — Battlemind Attack 29

You flit across the battlefield, avoiding your enemies as your attacks grant you a lethal grace.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One, two, or three creatures
Attack: Constitution vs. Reflex
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target is dazed (save ends). If the target is already dazed, the attack deals 5 extra damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You shift 3 squares after each attack. After making the last attack, you assume the stance of darting grace. Until the stance ends, you gain a +2 power bonus to AC and Reflex, and you can take the following action.
Free Action Personal
Trigger: An enemy misses you with an attack
Effect: You shift 4 squares, and the triggering enemy grants combat advantage to you until the end of your next turn.

Lost Masters

To one degree or another, all psionic characters meld the intellectual and the physical on the battlefield. Although they are rare, certain individuals are said to be able to channel their will into noncombat endeavors through psionics, as well. Tales tell of legendary crafters who once forged weapons and armor of unsurpassed quality. Others are said to have created magic items without the use of rituals—or even without the intention of doing so. Works of art and performances by lost masters are said to have had a supernatural ability to move the viewer. Powers and abilities much like those of the psionic classes might well have played a part in the singular talents of such artisans. But in these dark and troubled times, art and craft have largely become secondary concerns next to the struggle for survival.

Killing Wind Assault — Battlemind Attack 29

You vanish before your enemies' eyes, becoming the unseen wind that unleashes death on the battlefield.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: Before the attack, you become invisible and then shift a number of squares equal to your speed. You remain invisible until the start of your next turn.
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. Reflex
Hit: 5[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you knock the target prone.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you gain a +4 power bonus to speed, and you are invisible while moving.

Many Doors Curse — Battlemind Attack 29

Your attack binds the target to you, wracking it with pain as you fling it across the battlefield.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target is subject to your many doors curse (save ends). While the target is affected by your many doors curse, whenever the target takes damage from an attack, you can teleport it to a square adjacent to you or an ally you can see as a free action. When you teleport the target this way, it takes 10 psychic damage.

Omniscient Strike — Battlemind Attack 29

As your chosen foe prepares to strike, you sabotage its attack by making a vicious attack of your own.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Weapon
Immediate Interrupt Melee weapon
Trigger: An enemy marked by you targets you with a melee attack
Effect: Before the attack, you shift 4 squares.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Constitution vs. AC. You have combat advantage for this attack.
Hit: 4[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target is stunned (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).
Effect: If you have no power points remaining, you regain 2 power points.

NEW PARAGON PATHS

Blackstone Guardian

"I have peered into the darkness clouding my soul, and it has found me worthy."

Prerequisite: Battlemind

Strange dreams are common among those who wield psionics. Your dreams, however, are different. You dream of a black monolith set within a cavern rimed with ice. This vision has haunted you for as long as you can remember, but until now, you have struggled in vain to discover its meaning.

The blackstone monolith has chosen you as its champion. In another age, noble champions of a distant land fought to contain a breach to the Far Realm. They sealed the rift with powerful psionic wards, behind elemental stone imbued with their own consciousness. Each generation, the wards they forged must be resealed by new champions. You are bound to the fate of the guardians you follow.

Blackstone Guardian Path Features

Blackstone Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to use an attack power, you gain resistance to all damage equal to 3 + your Wisdom modifier until the end of your next turn.

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Monolithic Vision (11th level): Whenever you use your mind spike power, you also pull the target of that power 3 squares. The target is then slowed until the end of its next turn.

Blackstone Chains (16th level): Whenever you reduce an enemy to 0 hit points, each enemy marked by you is immobilized until the end of your next turn.

Blackstone Guardian Disciplines

Blackstone Curse — Blackstone Guardian Attack 11

Your weapon attack inflicts a vicious curse on your foe, which appears to turn to cracked black stone as it is held fast.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target is petrified until the end of your next turn.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Monolithic Blessing — Blackstone Guardian Utility 12

The monolith's power grants you the resilience of ageless stone.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you have tremorsense 5 and resist 10 to all damage.
Sustain Minor: The effect persists.

Aspect of the Blackstone Gaoler — Blackstone Guardian Attack 20

Your attack wracks an enemy's mind and binds its body in stone as you channel the blackstone monolith's forbidding power.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends).
First Failed Saving Throw: The target is restrained until it saves against the ongoing damage.
Second Failed Saving Throw: The target is petrified instead of restrained and takes a −2 penalty to saving throws against the ongoing damage. The ongoing damage from this power ignores the resistance granted by the petrified condition.
Miss: Half damage, and ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends).
Effect: You push each creature adjacent to you 1 square. You then assume the aspect of the blackstone gaoler until the end of the encounter. While in this aspect, you can use the following augmentation with your battlemind at-will attack powers that are augmentable. This augmentation is in addition to the effects that an at-will power might have; this augmentation doesn't supersede them.
Augment 2
Effect: You gain resistance to all damage equal to your Constitution modifier until the end of your next turn. In addition, one creature you hit with the at-will power is restrained until the end of your next turn.

Quicksilver Demon

"Catch me if you dare!"

Prerequisite: Battlemind

Your mind rejects all notions of what is possible and impossible on the battlefield. Psionic energy flows through you, imbuing you with an irrepressible need to move. You flow around your enemies, blurring past them before they can land a blow. As you move, your attacks slip through your enemies' defenses with deadly effect. You goad a foe into following you, then wrack its mind and body as it gives futile chase.

You are quicksilver in living form, moving with such speed and grace that your enemies have no hope of pinning you down. Whether you fight alone or in the company of others who also race through the heat of battle, your enemies name you the quicksilver demon, never knowing where you will strike next.

Quicksilver Demon Path Features

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Quicksilver Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you can shift a number of squares equal to your Charisma modifier before or after the extra action.

Quicksilver Dance (11th level): You gain a +4 bonus to all defenses against opportunity attacks. In addition, whenever an enemy misses you with an opportunity attack, you gain combat advantage against that enemy until the end of your next turn.

Unfettered Movement (16th level): You can shift 3 squares as a move action. When you do, you are no longer slowed.

CHRIS SEAMAN

Quicksilver Demon Disciplines

Rebounding Dance — Quicksilver Demon Attack 11

You become a silver blur as you speed through your foes, striking so fast that they cannot retaliate.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: You have concealment until the end of your next turn, and you shift a number of squares equal to your speed + your Charisma modifier. You make the following attack against one or two creatures during this movement.
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier damage.
Augment 2
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Absorb Momentum — Quicksilver Demon Utility 12

An enemy's attempt to force you across the battlefield only increases your mobility.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: An enemy's attack pulls, pushes, or slides you
Effect: You negate the forced movement and gain a +4 power bonus to speed until the end of the encounter.

Aspect of Quicksilver Strides — Quicksilver Demon Attack 20

Your foe suffers with each failed attack it makes against you, even as you attain maximum mobility in battle.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Psionic, Psychic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: Before the attack, you shift your speed.
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 5[W] + Constitution modifier damage. In addition, the target is marked and takes 5 psychic damage whenever it misses you with an attack (save ends both).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: After the attack, you shift your speed. You then assume the aspect of quicksilver strides until the end of the encounter. While in this aspect, you gain a +2 power bonus to speed and you can use the following augmentation with your battlemind at-will attack powers that are augmentable. This augmentation is in addition to the effects that an at-will power might have; this augmentation doesn't supersede them.
Augment 1
Effect: After the at-will attack, you shift half your speed. In addition, one creature hit by the attack takes extra damage equal to your Charisma modifier.

Storm Disciple

"I am the power of the never-ending tempest that crosses all planes. Do you think you can stop me?"

Prerequisite: Battlemind

Your philosophy of life and battle is shaped by your belief in the infinite storm. In every corner of the world and every part of the planes, order and chaos contend for domination. Violent storms of elemental fury are the most potent sign of this struggle. At no time is all the cosmos ever at peace. Through study and diligence, you draw power from these infinite and endless storms, channeling their destructive fury. You represent the infinite storm in your travels, welcoming the violence that is a constant part of life. Like the power of the storm, you are everywhere.

Storm Disciple Path Features

Lightning's Path Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you teleport 5 squares. After the teleport, each enemy adjacent to you or marked by you takes lightning damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Storm Scion (11th level): You gain lightning resistance and thunder resistance equal to your Constitution modifier.

Rouse the Storm (16th level): While bloodied, you can use the following augmentation with your battlemind at-will attack powers that are augmentable. This augmentation is in addition to the effects that an at-will power might have; this augmentation doesn't supersede them.

THOMAS DENMARK

Augment 1 (Lightning)
Effect: After the attack, you teleport 3 squares. Until the end of your next turn, any enemy that hits you with a melee attack takes lightning damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Storm Disciple Disciplines

Lightning Strikes Twice — Storm Disciple Attack 11

Living lightning wraps your body, letting you surge from one target to the next.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Lightning, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier lightning damage.
Effect: You teleport 5 squares and make a secondary attack.
Secondary Target: One creature other than the primary target
Secondary Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier lightning damage.
Augment 2
Effect: You teleport 5 squares and make a secondary attack as above, then teleport 5 squares and make the secondary attack again against a different creature.

Stormwalker — Storm Disciple Utility 12

The winds of the immortal storm carry you into battle.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain a fly speed equal to your speed and can hover. This effect lasts until an attack hits you or until the end of the encounter. When the effect ends, you descend to the ground without taking falling damage.

Aspect of the Infinite Storm — Storm Disciple Attack 20

When you strike, you summon the transformative power of the infinite storm.

Daily ✦ Lightning, Polymorph, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Constitution modifier lightning damage, and ongoing 10 lightning damage (save ends).
Effect: You assume the aspect of the infinite storm until the end of the encounter. While in this aspect, you can use the following augmentation with your battlemind at-will attack powers that are augmentable. This augmentation is in addition to the effects that an at-will power might have; this augmentation doesn't supersede them.
Augment 2
Effect: After the attack, you become the tempestuous storm, occupying a 7-square by 7-square area centered on your space. While in this form, you are insubstantial, you can occupy other creatures' spaces, and you cannot attack. When any creature starts its turn in your new space, you slide that creature 2 squares. In addition, one creature hit by the at-will attack takes 5 extra lightning damage and is dazed until the end of your next turn. At the start of your next turn, you return to your normal form in any unoccupied space in the area of the tempestuous storm.

Talaric Ironjack

"My mind is awakened to a purpose greater than my own life."

Prerequisite: Battlemind

Since the Talaric Codex was first compiled to record the fighting techniques used against the horrors of the Far Realm, fragments from that lost tome have been scattered far and wide. Although the warrior society that conceived the codex is no more, their workings live on in the champions who have stumbled across these ancient writings and mastered their secrets.

During your travels, you have come across fragments of the lost codex. The full meaning of these scraps of lore escaped you at first. In time, however, you put the pieces together to master the lessons they contained. Although others might draw different conclusions, you have learned that life is an essential struggle between the natural world and the Far Realm. Whenever the madness of the Outside pushes into ordered reality, the natural world responds with violence. With your unique talents, you have come to embody the world's wrath.

From the teachings of the Talaric Codex, you turn your mind's eye inward to search out flaws and vulnerabilities. When you discover a gap in your defenses, you allocate your psionic resources to reinforce it against attack. Your extensive study also rewards you with increased clarity and focus in combat, allowing you to devastate your foes. By neutralizing opponents when they strike, you endure past the point when other warriors would fall.

CHRIS SEAMAN

Talaric Ironjack Path Features

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Defensive Aura (11th level): Whenever you hit with an unaugmented at-will psionic attack power while you have at least 1 power point, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.

Superior Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make an attack, you gain a +4 power bonus to the attack roll and you regain hit points equal to twice your Constitution modifier.

Ironjack's Command (16th level): Whenever you spend a healing surge and regain hit points, each ally within 2 squares of you can shift 1 square as a free action.

Talaric Ironjack Disciplines

Iron-Hewed Smash — Talaric Ironjack Attack 11

You imbue your weapon with your own fury, striking hard to send your foes flying.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and you push the target 5 squares.
Augment 2
Close blast 3
Target: Each enemy you can see in blast

Enduring Body — Talaric Ironjack Utility 12

As combat takes its toll on you, the power of your mind protects your body from additional harm.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: You must be bloodied.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, while you are bloodied you have regeneration 5 and resist 5 to all damage.

Overwhelming Force — Talaric Ironjack Attack 20

You channel the inherent violence of the world into a blow that freezes a foe in its tracks.

Daily ✦ Force, Psionic, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Constitution modifier force damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: The target takes 10 force damage.
Miss: Half damage.

Unbound Nomad

"I sail the seas of possibility, bound for a fate I choose."

Prerequisite: Battlemind

Hidden pathways and secret portals riddle the world and the planes. You possess the keen eye and open mind that let you pick out these shortcuts and exploit them. Your understanding of planar mechanics might be instinctive, originating in an unusual knack for sensing and locating such anomalies. It might be the result of extensive training, in which you learned from a master unbound nomad how to circumvent the bounds of reality. However you came by your knowledge, you can travel unseen byways with ease.

As an unbound nomad, you are rarely in one place for long. You use your talent to slip through the cracks in the world around you, then reappear wherever you want. You can dodge through new gateways to escape a persistent enemy, or force your foes into the unseen spaces between the planes. Your unpredictability leaves your enemies confused, chasing after phantoms as you take charge of the battlefield around them.

Unbound Nomad Path Features

Banishing Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make an attack, you teleport one target hit by the attack 5 squares.

Nomad's Prerogative (11th level): Whenever an enemy pushes you, you can ignore the push and teleport 3 squares.

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Nomad's Journey (16th level): Whenever you use your blurred step power, you can teleport a number of squares equal to your Dexterity modifier instead of shifting. You must teleport to a square adjacent to the enemy that triggered that power.

Unbound Nomad Disciplines

Cunning Abduction — Unbound Nomad Attack 11

You appear next to your enemy to deliver a blow that whisks you both to your ally's side.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Teleportation, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: Before the attack, you teleport 5 squares.
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Constitution modifier damage. Choose one ally within 10 squares of you that you can see. You teleport yourself and the target to squares adjacent to that ally.
Augment 2
Hit: As above, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

THOMAS DENMARK

One Hundred Doors — Unbound Nomad Utility 12

An enemy's missed attack lets you escape through a temporary portal, which remains open for a time.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Psionic, Teleportation
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: An enemy misses you with an attack
Effect: You teleport 5 squares and conjure a hole in reality in the square you last occupied. Any creature in the conjuration's space on its turn can teleport 5 squares as a free action, and the conjuration is pushed 1d6 squares away from the creature's destination square. The conjuration lasts until the end of the encounter or until it is pushed into a solid object.

Unstable Nexus — Unbound Nomad Attack 20

Your sweeping attack draws your enemies into a dimensional void, then spits them out, leaving an unstable vortex behind.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic, Weapon, Zone
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Attack: Constitution vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Constitution modifier damage, and the target is removed from play. At the start of your next turn, the target reappears in the space it last occupied or in the nearest unoccupied space. Roll a d4 to determine an effect imposed on the target.
1. The target is removed from play again until the start of your next turn, reappearing in the last space it occupied, or the nearest unoccupied space.
2. The target takes 10 psychic damage.
3. The target is dazed (save ends).
4. The target falls prone.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that starts its turn within the zone teleports 1d8 squares in a random direction.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists.

CHAPTER 3

Monk

"An existence unburdened by limitation demands harmony among body, spirit, and mind."

You stand between the material world of the body and the enlightened realm of the mind, and within you, both these worlds meet. You are a monk, trained in unique fighting methods passed down through generations. You might have spent your life refining your prowess in a secluded monastery, far from worldly distractions. Or you might have learned your unique fighting style on the darkest city streets, testing your endurance and cunning in a desperate fight for survival. You might have tapped into your power from ancient manuscripts, a mysterious master, or the memory of a lost tradition hidden within your mind.

Although any well-trained warrior can drop a foe with the power of a fist, you invest psionic power in your attacks—the inner energy you call your ki. This energy allows you to deliver attacks as punishing as any spell or armed martial exploit, even as it expands your physical capabilities with swift movement, amazing leaps, and even flight. This chapter offers new options to expand your power and your presence on the battlefield and beyond.

- Playing a Monk: A discussion of how monks fit into the world and at the game table, with tips on bringing your character to life.
- New Build and Class Feature: The Iron Soul tradition allows you to channel the power of your ki through a weapon, making it an extension of your body and mind. In your hands, even a meager dagger can equal the power of a fighter's greatsword, and a simple quarterstaff becomes a whirring implement of destruction.
- New Powers: You rely on psionic power to guide your attacks and shatter the defenses of your enemies. The new disciplines in this chapter allow Iron Soul monks to advance their weapon training, but give all monk characters new options to keep their opponents on edge.
- New Paragon Paths: Six new paragon paths offer monk characters options for advancement and a range of esoteric—and deadly—fighting styles.

KEREM BEYIT

"Find what you need, strangers?"

The figure approached the two nondescript travelers in the all but deserted library. A bear of a man, he sported a thick black beard and a gapped-tooth grin. They had been warned about the local sheriff, but had hoped to complete their research before running into him.

"Indeed," Lenaris said carefully. "Ioun's temple is a veritable font of knowledge."

"Ain't a free font," the sheriff quipped. "There's a tax for outsiders."

"We were told of no such tax," Inelda protested.

"I'm telling you now." The sheriff pushed his cloak aside to show the sword at his belt, glancing down as if to say he'd already noted that both traveling companions were unarmed. Lenaris reached into his pouch for a handful of silver. The grizzled warrior sneered as he sauntered away.

Inelda glared, but Lenaris only shrugged. "A fight here might destroy irreplaceable texts. I've told you, Inelda, your temper undermines you. A bit of discipline—"

He was interrupted by the angry voice of the sheriff a short way off, berating the old priest who served as the temple's librarian. The burly warrior had a fragile tome in his hand, raised as if he was ready to throw it.

Lenaris was suddenly gone from his seat, vanishing as quickly as the book subsequently vanished from the sheriff's fingers. The grizzled face had time for a puzzled look before Lenaris's leg came up, striking with the force of a battering ram.

Inelda was smiling by the time the sound of the beating faded away. "You were proclaiming the virtue of discipline . . ." he said as Lenaris returned to the table.

"I showed substantial discipline," Lenaris said quietly. "I stopped hitting him the instant he struck the floor."

Each day is a step on a lifelong journey toward a spiritual awakening—the ultimate melding of body, mind, and soul. If pursued with discipline and dedication, the odyssey brings success, contentment, and greater understanding. Perceptive allies gain insights about themselves as you follow your path. For your enemies, each day brings the vital, life-altering revelation that standing against you is extremely unwise.

As a monk, you seek mastery of your entire being. Others think of body, mind, and soul as separate, but you understand that self, absent division, is the highest truth. Mortal weakness and misunderstanding separate the aspects of a person. Only through iron discipline can you shatter false barriers and attain true unity.

Your final goal is not at issue. How far along you are and whether you are advancing or regressing are less certain. How you pursue your spiritual passage toward enlightenment also varies. Did you seek out a monastic order to gain the control that you previously lacked, or were you already disciplined and looking only for purpose? Are styles of combat tools by which you achieve unity, an end in themselves, or just a few of many steps on the path to wholeness?

Body, Mind, Soul

Discipline is central to the life of a monk. You cannot obtain self-mastery if you lack self-control. Through total understanding—mental, physical, spiritual—you break down the false demarcation between the different aspects of your being. You understand that your powers originate from your will, from the muscles and blood of your body, and from the spark of your soul. You strive to integrate all that you are into one seamless whole.

The physical prowess achieved by many monastic orders is legendary. Not as well known is the profound spiritual nature of being a monk. Although not all monks are religious, they are all keenly attuned to the vital essence of their being.

The mental aspects of the monastic lifestyle manifest psionically. Your power comes from within, not from any outside source. In no small part, it is a function of supreme willpower. Monastic schools might be zealously religious, located in or near pious communities. Alternatively, they could minimize ceremony, proclaiming that their teachings are derived entirely from ancient martial styles. Whether presented as rigorous exercise, unparalleled focus, or divine calling, monastic art and practice are ultimately psionic powers.

Your Life Before

Many individuals who eventually train as monks have long felt that something is missing in their lives. You might have lacked discipline, regularly acting from anger or on whim. You might have suffered a spiritual hollowness that traditional religious practices failed to fill. Your life might have been directionless, lacking meaning or purpose. You might have experimented with numerous professions, but discovered that excellence or fulfillment in them was unattainable. Any of these frustrations might prove sufficient motivation to drive you to the doors of a monastery.

Some monks show an inkling of psionic power before they ever make their way to a monastic order. You might have experienced visions, sporadic heightened awareness, or a capacity for extraordinary physicality if sufficiently impassioned. You might have displayed the rudimentary powers of one of the less focused psionic classes, such as an ardent or a battlemind. Whatever your initial response to these developments, you found comfort in discipline. You discovered that your talent responded best to focus and regimen. Whether you instinctually arrived on the monk's path or happened on it only after attempting other approaches, you discovered control as you trained. Your studies gave your life meaning, sated that unfulfilled need, and defined your existence in a way that gave you a measure of peace.

Your gravitation toward discipline can be motivated by any number of factors. You might be seeking the corporeal power that monastic training provides—whether for vengeance against an enemy, to battle evil, or as a challenge to perceived limitations. You understand that spiritual and philosophical integration is necessary, but your passion lies with the combat styles and physical exertion of your training.

For some monks, faith and intellect are the initial inspiration. You might have sought the peace of your soul through discipline, or been compelled to challenge your mind in order to overcome the rigors and temptations of the flesh. On the other hand, you might well have stumbled into monastic training by accident. Many monasteries stand in dangerous regions in which they are the only shelter for explorers and adventurers. You might have staggered into such a place wounded or seeking shelter, only to become caught up in the traditions you found there.

Some monasteries, schools, and orders are particularly famous. If you were lucky enough to have dwelled near one of these notable bastions, you might have sought admittance our of a desire to serve and expand their legacy. Otherwise, you might have spent substantial effort seeking out a mentor or a sensei. Research in historical and religious texts would have pointed you to a particular tradition. Rumors of individuals showing preternatural fighting abilities might have drawn you to a school hidden in a city's back alleys. Whether your monastic training came through quick acceptance, painstaking endeavor, or something in between, it has become a core part of who you are.

Roleplaying a Monk

Discipline, discipline, discipline. Your training, your powers, your spirituality, your life—all are centered on and enriched by discipline. You've strengthened your willpower to the point where once you've chosen a course, little can cause you to deviate from it. More than anything else, this dedication to discipline epitomizes the core aspect of the monk.

Discipline does not mean lack of passion, however. Your focus does not require you to be an emotionless automaton, without loves or fears or ambitions. Monks are creatures of the world, and nothing in their training alters that. You lose your temper. You make mistakes. You have desires beyond enlightenment.

In the end, complete control is more an aspiration than a reality. You strive for mastery of self, accepting that you will not always succeed. You prefer to plan and foresee rather than simply react. You try to avoid extraneous temptations. You're not necessarily a slave to tradition, but you respect it.

Because you believe that body, mind, and soul should be one, no endeavor is outside your interest. You seek to improve yourself in a variety of ways. You enjoy learning new skills, experiencing new sensations, studying new topics and cultures, and practicing new forms of art. You will never be an expert in all things, for such goals are not in keeping with your focus. Still, each personal advancement or improvement is a step toward enlightenment.

Regardless of how far you've yet to go, you have identified your path and begun your journey along it. At the very least, you are content with your direction. That self-understanding sets you apart from lost and drifting souls. You might offer to share the measure of enlightenment you have achieved, aiding your friends in discovering their own potential. Rather than proclaiming the lessons of virtue, you teach by example.

Some monks see it as their duty to protect those unable to stand against the hazards of the world. Others feel justified in leaving the morass of mortal society to its own devices as they focus exclusively on their own goals. Some decide that by virtue of their skill and discipline, wealth and power are rightfully theirs for the taking. Whatever path you choose, your abilities and determination mark you as a force that the world must reckon with.

Spirituality and Religion

True enlightenment encompasses aspects of being such as heart, essence, and spirit that are neither mental nor physical. For this reason, many monastic traditions embrace a spiritual element. They focus on the soul as an integral part of the whole individual. With the Dungeon Master's assistance, you can determine whether your spirituality is derived from an organized religion, separate from the trappings of a particular deity or pantheon, or incorporates both.

Some monasteries consider themselves religious sects. If you are a member of one of these orders, you include prayer sessions and sacred ceremonies as part of your training and daily rituals. You attribute your powers to the gods—either indirectly, claiming that psionics aptitude is a gift from above, or through a belief that your abilities are divine, not psionic, in origin.

Spirituality does not require piousness, however. Even if you are a religious monk, your faith can be as loosely defined as that of any other nondivine class. You might revere one or more gods on a personal level, but that worship need not be integral to your practices. Your faith might play little part in your discipline. In that case, you view your abilities as personal gifts whose ultimate expression depends only on you.

School Spirit

Unless something abnormal undermined your relationship, you profoundly respect and support your school, monastery, or monastic tradition. You quickly recognize students trained in the same styles, considering them brothers and sisters until they prove unworthy.

Your loyalty might show itself as a quiet strength—a belief that your tradition is superior only because your practice makes it so. In this case, your allegiance would be a matter of modest pride that comes out only under select circumstances. Alternatively, you might feel that the preeminence of your school should be manifest to all—particularly monks of competing schools. You might be determined to spread the word of enlightenment as you see it. You might encourage rational debate, strongly arguing your position. You might be arrogant or expressive, boasting about your tradition constantly. You might even engage in all three approaches—modesty, discussion, and bluster—at different times. But no matter what your approach, your school spirit is always present.

Your monastic tradition and the lessons imparted by your masters represent not only a body of knowledge but a spiritual pathway—a way of life and a road to enlightenment. Your dedication to this tradition is as fundamental as faith or culture is to others. Only something dramatic and profoundly disturbing can shake that devotion.

Full Disciplines and Fighting Styles

Many monk disciplines are full disciplines—powers that integrate movement and attack. They define your fighting style, training, and approach to combat. Each full discipline power represents a combat technique passed down by the masters of your order. It carries the weight of tradition and embodies profound lessons that you must internalize before reaching enlightenment. These disciplines underpin the physical and mental exercises that you practice repeatedly to maintain your edge.

No single full discipline encompasses an entire monastic fighting style. The particular combination of techniques taught by a given school constitutes the spine of that group's traditions. By watching another monk in combat and noting the combination of techniques displayed, you might identify his or her tradition.

Consider making cosmetic changes to your full disciplines to give them a unifying feel and highlight the cohesive tradition that brings these techniques together. For instance, one order featuring crane's wings might teach its students to spin during the leap granted by that power, attacking with a spinning back-kick. Another style could use the power to perform a flying kick. If monks from these two orders were to learn furious bull, the student of the former might move in tight circles around foes when passing through their spaces; the latter practitioner might shove them aside. Giving your full discipline powers an element of description in common enriches your combat style and brings it to life.

Monks in the World

Although scholars, sages, and religious leaders understand the holistic nature of a monk's training, many common folk view monks primarily as religious figures. They consider the monk's ascetic lifestyle and spiritual philosophy as a product of strict religious fervor. This opinion is reinforced by the overtly religious nature of many monastic traditions.

Such folk expect you to be part of a formal ecclesiastical hierarchy, and to display holy symbols or other religious trappings. If your tradition does not include those features, you could be viewed with suspicion. Locals might wonder if your lack of religious accoutrements hides an allegiance to an unholy or a disfavored deity.

If your tradition emphasizes teaching enlightenment or correcting misapprehensions, you might find that your explanations concerning the trinity of body, mind, and soul only confuse or annoy people. Monks whose spirituality does not include a religious dimension avoid these social difficulties by adopting a quiet presence. They act rather than talk, speaking only when a situation calls to mind a parable or a homily that might provide instruction. This approach leads many folk to view nonreligious monks as inscrutable.

Although they don't entirely understand monks, commoners grant monks and their monasteries a measure of respect. Monks are recognized as the embodiment of discipline—highly learned and physically exceptional. Moreover, most folk have heard of (or seen firsthand) a monk's prowess in combat, and so are eager not to make enemies of those who follow that path. Exceptions do exist, particularly among religious or militant organizations that view the monastic traditions as a challenge to their own power. Monasteries and schools have their own rivals and enemies, but even the foes of a particular monastic tradition acknowledge the capabilities of that tradition's members.

Most commoners assume that all monks are members of a larger sect—a monastery, an order, a school, or a temple. This impression might be accurate in many cases, but any given monk might live, train, and travel alone. He or she might have abandoned an order or been trained by a lone master. People who encounter such loners often refuse to believe they do not belong to a larger faction.

The Oldest Tradition

Legends and the myth-histories of ancient scholars suggest that monastic traditions first appeared in the late years of the Dawn War. Such traditions began as sects within larger faiths, beholden to the oldest deities. Warriors horrified by the destruction wrought by primordial soldiers and aberrant creatures created schools in which new techniques were developed to fight such opponents. Dedicated martial arts styles, defined by specific fighting techniques, were not a new concept. But these practitioners buttressed their physical prowess with the mental and spiritual focus that would grant them an edge against their otherworldly foes.

For generations, monastic traditions remained a part of the faiths that spawned them. These religious orders, and new ones founded on similar principles, continue to this day. Some of these holy monks, however, began to question whether the path to enlightenment necessarily led through the domain of any specific deity. They grew to believe that their duties to the priesthoods distracted them from personal studies. These monks considered a religious approach unbalanced toward spirit and not sufficiently respectful of body and mind.

Some temples attempted to stop their monks from leaving, denouncing them as heretics and traitors. Other faiths shook their heads at the foolishness and hubris of these ascetics. A few denominations blessed their endeavors, offering reintegration should the monks desire it at a later time. Whatever the response of their hierarchies, these independently minded monks set off on their own, forming new traditions based on purely spiritual—not religious—paths. The custom of building monasteries in remote locales arose at this time, as the new orders sought to escape the influence—whether hostile or well-intentioned—of their former faiths.

Monastic traditions spread across the world with surprising speed. Although the training was too demanding to become widely popular, candidates who sought purpose, discipline, and personal empowerment could be found everywhere. Some of these seekers proved receptive to the idea that power could be cultivated internally, rather than obtained from the gods or obscure mystical formulas. Just as important to the spread of monastic schools was their ease of formation. An order could be started with one or two masters and a handful of students. With little more than the ability to feed, clothe, and shelter themselves, monks could prosper while practicing their arts. Over time, many orders adopted the virtues of austerity and endurance as a reflection of the dedication needed to pursue a monastic life.

Few of the oldest of the monastic traditions exist today in anything close to their original form, but legends claim that deep in the Cloudroot Mountains, in a valley made inaccessible by weather and ambient magic ten months out of the year, a monastery stands whose inhabitants practice the Fist of the Weeping Earth. Some sages believe this style to be one of the oldest of all monastic traditions—second only to the Breath of the Sun and Moon (page 66), a style known solely from the contemporary orders that have borrowed from it.

Monks Today

Since their initial expansion, the spread of monastic traditions has waxed and waned. During epochs of relative peace and stability, new orders arise and old orders expand. Monks are found wandering through all lands, spreading the example of enlightenment. Candidates interested in monastic training can travel freely to the schools of their choice.

During dark times such as the contemporary era, monks hole up in their strongholds, as hard-pressed to survive as all other folk. Adventuring monks still make sojourns across the dangerous wilds between the isolated enclaves of civilization, but these travelers can sometimes go for months or even years without seeing others of their kind.

Whatever their individual traditions, monks remain widespread but go largely unseen throughout the world. Orders exist across all civilized lands, but individual schools typically boast a mere handful of members—at most a few dozen. Travel is difficult in these troubled times, and communication even between significant outposts of the same tradition is infrequent.

In the first years after the fall of Nerath, the influx of new acolytes to the monasteries was slow. But the number of such petitioners has increased in recent years as psionics aptitude has become more widespread. The total number of monks in the world remains low, but it does not seem likely to stay so for long.

The current state of their membership does not minimize the sway of individual monasteries. Although most monastic orders and schools are not large communities, they often have influence over their immediate surroundings as places of learning, stability, and safety. Refugees and others gather in monastic environs in the hope of improving themselves and escaping the increasingly dangerous lands where civilization once held sway.

NEW BUILD

The school of the Iron Soul is a new monastic tradition that stands alongside the traditions introduced in Player's Handbook 3. Iron soul monks are no less deadly than their kin in unarmed combat, but they have learned to incorporate weapon use into their powers with devastating effect.

Iron Soul

The use of simple weapons is the cornerstone of the Iron Soul tradition, founded long ago by oppressed peasants denied access to military weapons by the tyrants who ruled them. Adherents of the Iron Soul master common tools, transforming them into potent implements of war. Over time, monastic warriors have refined these primitive techniques and incorporated them into a range of powerful psionics disciplines.

Devotees of the Iron Soul often come from common stock, taught to defend themselves with whatever weapons they have on hand. Iron soul schools are found within established communities, typically alongside temples dedicated to peaceful gods and philosophical concepts.

New Class Feature

When you choose your Monastic Tradition, you can choose the Iron Soul tradition instead of another option, such as the ones in Player's Handbook 3.

Flurry of Blows: You gain the iron soul flurry of blows power.

Iron Soul Flurry of Blows — Monk Feature

You follow up an initial assault with a quick strike that disorients your enemy, curtailing its combat options.

At-Will ✦ Psionic
Free Action (Special) Melee 1
Trigger: You hit with an attack during your turn
Target: One creature
Level 11: One or two creatures
Level 21: Each enemy adjacent to you
Effect: The target takes damage equal to 2 + your Constitution modifier, and it cannot shift until the start of your next turn. If the target was not a target of the triggering attack, it also can't make opportunity attacks until the end of your turn.
Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Mental Arsenal: While wielding a weapon other than one in the unarmed weapon group, you gain a +1 shield bonus to AC.

Suggested Options

You are a cunning warrior, adapting your combat style to meet whatever threat you face. You leap into battle, ripping through your opponents with blindingly fast attacks designed to distract and confuse.

ROBERTO MARCHESI

Before your foes can react, you settle into a ready posture, deflecting counterstrikes with your weapons.

You are a monk, trained in fighting techniques that transform your hands and feet into deadly weapons. You differ from your kin in the Centered Breath and Stone Fist schools by virtue of the dedication you put into weapon training. You choose the weapons of the common folk, including the mace, staff, spear, and dagger. Your unique training then allows you to treat those weapons as extensions of your body, making them far more deadly than they would be in the hands of any other warrior. Your psionic power infuses your strikes with speed and accuracy.

Like other monks, you should put your highest score in Dexterity because you depend on it for your attacks. Its origin among the common folk means that the Iron Soul tradition focuses on toughness, so make Constitution your second highest score. Aside from the specific full disciplines that rely on Constitution, additional hit points and healing surges are useful for keeping you in the fight. Consider making Wisdom your third highest ability score to increase your battlefield awareness and your Will.

Suggested Class Feature: Iron Soul*
Suggested Feat: Still Water*
Suggested Skills: Acrobatics, Endurance, Insight, Perception
Suggested At-Will Powers: *lion's den, *steel wind
Suggested Encounter Power: *stinging nettles
Suggested Daily Power: *steel avalanche
*New option presented in this book.

NEW POWERS

Some of the new powers presented in this section have an Iron Soul entry, which provides additional options for monks of the Iron Soul tradition. But these and the other powers presented here provide useful options for any monk character.

Level 1 At-Will Disciplines

Lion's Den — Monk Attack 1

You jab, step to the side, then assume an offensive posture from which you can sting any foe that draws near.

At-Will ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d6 + Dexterity modifier damage. Until the start of your next turn, as a free action, you can deal damage equal to your Constitution modifier to any enemy that enters a square adjacent to you.
Level 21: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift 1 square and gain a +1 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.

Steel Wind — Monk Attack 1

You streak across the battlefield, then channel a multiple assault against foes that thought themselves out of your reach.

At-Will ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Close blast 2
Target: Each enemy you can see in blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Level 21: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You are no longer marked. You move your speed + 2.

Level 1 Encounter Disciplines

Eagle Claw Strike — Monk Attack 1

Your leap is so graceful that you seem to hang in the air for a short period. When you land, you deliver a shattering strike.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature or unattended object
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target takes a penalty to AC equal to your Strength modifier until the end of your next turn. Against an unattended object, this attack deals 2d8 extra damage.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly your speed. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall.

Laughing Wind — Monk Attack 1

Your attack summons a laughing wind that drags your foes across the battlefield.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage. Until the start of your next turn, as a free action, you slide any enemy that ends its turn in a square adjacent to you a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: Until the start of your next turn, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses against opportunity attacks. You then move your speed.

Scattering of Leaves — Monk Attack 1

You drive two enemies back with quick strikes, then use the momentum of your attacks to scatter other foes.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the primary target 1 square. You then shift 1 square and make a secondary attack.
Secondary Target: One creature other than the primary target
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you slide the secondary target 1 square. You then push each enemy adjacent to the secondary target 1 square from the secondary target.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You make an Athletics check to jump with a +5 power bonus. You are considered to have a running start, and the distance of the jump isn't limited by your speed.

THE ONE WHO WALKS

Legends from the oldest monastic traditions speak of the One Who Walks. This monk of superhuman discipline and power stands at the edge of enlightenment. The One Who Walks follows teachings that have passed from the Breath of the Sun and Moon and other ancient traditions. These practices, the legend says, grant the One Who Walks near-immortality. This monk wanders the world, looking for a single student to whom he or she can pass this wisdom. The student then assumes the mantle of the One Who Walks, who can finally achieve true enlightenment and leave the mortal realm behind.

More than one unscrupulous monk has claimed to be the One Who Walks, gaining money or influence over adherents eager for their teachings. Even if the legend has any basis in truth, the identity of the One Who Walks remains a subject of much speculation and few hard facts.

Stinging Nettles — Monk Attack 1

Your attack sets you into an optimal defensive position, allowing you to punish any foe with the temerity to strike at you.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage. Until the start of your next turn, as a free action, you deal damage equal to your Constitution modifier to any enemy adjacent to you that hits you with a melee attack.
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a light blade or a spear, the target also cannot make opportunity attacks until the end of your next turn.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You swap places with one creature adjacent to you.

Swift River Floods — Monk Attack 1

Your crashing attack throws your foe off balance to hinder its movement, letting you slip away like fast-flowing water.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a mace or a staff, the target takes extra damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift 2 squares.

Daily Ritual

Monks strive not to perform any act accidentally or carelessly. Their efforts are methodical and precise, requiring complete attention. Such concentration is most obvious during training or studying, but it is not limited to those activities. A monk gardening, cooking a meal, painting a picture, building a wagon, or tabulating a monastery's yearly income is just as focused. The maxim that anything worth doing is worth doing properly is part of a monk's creed. For a monk, everything in life, from the mundane to the magnificent, takes on an aspect of ritual.

In some instances, the focus on mundane acts facilitates meditation and the clearing of the mind (page 70). For the most part, however, monks view complete engagement as a way of life. Concentration is a means of achieving perfect discipline. True control over the self cannot be obtained through a divided focus. Working toward perfect understanding of any task, even everyday routines, brings one closer to enlightenment. With this approach, any activity required by day-to-day living becomes a spiritual accomplishment.

Level 1 Daily Disciplines

Cacophonous Shout — Monk Attack 1

You summon a wall of sound that slams into your foes like a battering ram.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Thunder
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier thunder damage, and you push the target to the nearest unoccupied square outside the blast. The target is deafened until the end of the encounter.
Miss: Half damage, and you push the target 1 square.

Lashing Rain — Monk Attack 1

Your savage strike draws an enemy close, leaving you in an aggressive stance that lets you punish any foe that approaches you.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Stance
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you slide the target 2 squares to a square adjacent to you.
Effect: You assume the lashing rain stance. Whenever an enemy you can see enters a square adjacent to you while you are able to make opportunity attacks, you deal 5 damage to that enemy and slide it 2 squares to any unoccupied square adjacent to you. You are slowed while you are in this stance. You can end the stance as a free action.

Steel Avalanche — Monk Attack 1

You unleash a wave of psionic power that cuts through your foes like steel.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each enemy in blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You shift 4 squares to any square adjacent to the blast.

Stunning Palm — Monk Attack 1

Your psionic energy keeps you focused in combat, and can be released in a stunning blow that knocks a foe senseless.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you cannot be dazed or stunned, and you can make the following attack.
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is stunned (save ends).
Miss: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Effect: The stance ends.

Level 2 Utility Disciplines

Fall of Wind — Monk Utility 2

You have meditated on the nature of the air around you and can control it to cushion your fall.

At-Will ✦ Psionic
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You fall
Effect: You reduce the damage you take from falling by 5 + one-half your level.

Fighting Fury — Monk Utility 2

Your discipline and control let you channel your anger into each blow.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, your unarmed melee attacks deal extra damage equal to your Strength modifier.

Swift Flight — Monk Utility 2

Channeling psionic energy through palms pointed at the ground, your simple leap becomes a smooth glide across the battlefield.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly a number of squares equal to your speed + your Wisdom modifier. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall.

Level 3 Encounter Disciplines

Inner Eye Opened — Monk Attack 3

By blocking out the impermanence of the visual world, you shunt the psychic energy of your inner eye into a lethal attack.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Effect: You are blinded and gain blindsight 5 until the start of your next turn.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage plus 1d8 psychic damage.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You swap places with one creature adjacent to you.

Resounding Strike — Monk Attack 3

Your strike sets up subtle vibrations in a foe, so that a subsequent blow triggers a disruptive burst of thunder.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic, Thunder
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage. The next time the target takes damage before the start of your next turn, it takes extra thunder damage equal to 3 + your Strength modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 2.

Springing Drake Assault — Monk Attack 3

You can leap over a foe with no fear of reprisal, then deliver an attack whose momentum drives an enemy wherever you want it to go.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you slide the target 2 squares.
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a light blade or a spear, you slide the target a number of squares equal to your Constitution modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Target: One creature adjacent to you
Effect: You jump to any square adjacent to the target. This movement does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Undeniable Incitement — Monk Attack 3

Your psionic summons pulls an enemy to you, then the immovable force of your presence sends it hard to the ground.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee 2
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: You pull the target 1 square. If the target ends that movement adjacent to you, it takes 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage and falls prone. You gain a +2 power bonus to AC until the end of your next turn.
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a mace or a staff, the power bonus to AC equals your Constitution modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed. You do not provoke opportunity attacks when moving away from enemies adjacent to you at the start of this movement.

Level 5 Daily Disciplines

Disrupting Fist — Monk Attack 5

You channel psionic energy to empower your attacks, and you can discharge this energy through a blow that disorients your foe.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you gain a +2 power bonus to melee damage rolls, and you can make the following attack.
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: The stance ends.

Freeze the Life Blood — Monk Attack 5

Ice rimes your hands and feet, so that your next attack binds the foe in a freezing embrace.

Daily ✦ Cold, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier cold damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).
Effect: While the target is immobilized or slowed by this power, any enemy that ends its turn adjacent to the target takes cold damage equal to your Dexterity modifier.

Resonating Fist — Monk Attack 5

Your strike reverberates through the enemy, so that each time it faces a new attack, it recalls the pain you wrought.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target gains vulnerability to all damage equal to your Strength modifier (save ends). Whenever you hit the target with an attack, it takes a −2 penalty to its next saving throw against this power's effect.
Miss: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage.

Thunderbolt Surge — Monk Attack 5

You hurl a ball of roiling thunder into the thick of combat, blasting one foe and knocking nearby creatures to the ground.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Thunder
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier thunder damage, and each creature adjacent to the target falls prone.
Miss: Half damage.

Level 6 Utility Disciplines

Abundant Step — Monk Utility 6

Tapping into the momentum of an enemy's errant strike, you slip through space to appear where your foe least expects.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: An adjacent enemy misses you with an attack
Target: The triggering enemy
Effect: You teleport to any square adjacent to the target. The target grants combat advantage to you for your next attack roll made before the end of your next turn.

Airborne Form — Monk Utility 6

You meditate on the wind, assuming a measure of its free-flowing formlessness.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you gain a +2 power bonus to speed, you are insubstantial while moving, and you can move through enemies' spaces.

Iron Heart Endurance — Monk Utility 6

The pain of your injuries lets you clear your mind of all distractions, fortifying your fighting spirit.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: You must be bloodied.
Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to twice your Constitution modifier.

Quicksilver Motion — Monk Utility 6

You surge through combat in the blink of an eye.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Free Action (Special) Personal
Effect: You move your speed.
Special: You can use this power only as the first or the last action of your turn.

Traditions and Taboos

Monastic teachings can include restrictions that seem nonsensical to outsiders. These requirements might be designed to help adherents mentally prepare for enlightenment, to aid in the maintenance of discipline, or to show reverence for a particular faith, creed, or deity.

To determine what, if any, teachings and taboos your tradition includes, you can select from the following examples or use them as models in designing your own.

- ✦ You must not partake of certain foods, or you must ingest certain foods at certain times.
- ✦ You must not retain more wealth than you can carry.
- ✦ You must practice certain chants, katas (martial exercises), or ceremonies at certain times of the day or on certain days of the year.
- ✦ You must never (or always) wear garments of a certain color, style, or fabric.
- ✦ You must never strike a blow against a certain sort of creature. Some traditions create an exception to this rule for self-defense.
- ✦ You must teach the basics tenets of your tradition to anyone who expresses honest interest.
- ✦ You must observe all the religious ceremonies of a particular god as thoroughly as if you were a priest.
- ✦ You must never strike the first blow in battle.
- ✦ You must practice, or avoid practicing, certain forms of fine art (such as playing music, painting, or calligraphy).
- ✦ You must not speak at certain times of the day, unless keeping silent would result in harm to others.
- ✦ You must render aid upon request to any member of your tradition, even at the expense of your immediate goals.

Level 7 Encounter Disciplines

Arc of the Flashing Storm — Monk Attack 7

You can flash across the battlefield, lightning wrapping around you as you slam your foe back and disrupt its counterattacks.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Lightning, Psionic, Teleportation
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier lightning damage, you push the target 2 squares, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a mace or a staff, the target's penalty to attack rolls against you instead equals your Constitution modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You teleport your speed.

Feeding the Doves — Monk Attack 7

You can race into combat unhindered before using a series of quick strikes to punish and scatter your foes like a flock of birds.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Close burst 1
Primary Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Effect: Make a secondary attack that is a close burst 2.
Secondary Target: Each enemy you can see in burst other than the primary target
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the secondary target 2 squares.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 2. During this movement, you ignore difficult terrain.

The Nature of Ki

Although monks are not the only masters of the psionic energy known as ki, the common understanding of this energy originates in the oldest monastic traditions. The term "ki" is believed to come from early devas, who were attempting to develop a Common word for a concept that, at the time, existed only in the Supernal language. The term draws together two related notions.

- ✦ The separation of self into body, mind, and soul is artificial, and disrupts the proper flow of spiritual energy.
- ✦ Assimilating the unity of body, mind, and soul taps into a profound source of internal power.

All monastic traditions teach that body, mind, and soul are one. Monks must attempt to set aside their concept of the separate aspects of the self and envision a point at which body, mind, and soul are anchored to one another. By considering and nurturing that metaphysical node, monks hope to increase their understanding of the nature of ki.

Mountainfall Stomp — Monk Attack 7

The earth buckles around you as you drive into your enemy, a vicious kick sending it to the ground and keeping it there.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you knock the target prone. If the target stands up before the end of your next turn, that action provokes an opportunity attack from you.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift 1 square. Squares adjacent to you then become difficult terrain until the start of your next turn.

Unity of Steel — Monk Attack 7

Allies who press in against a foe grant you some of their strength, increasing the effectiveness of your own attack.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a light blade or a spear, you gain a +2 power bonus to the attack roll.
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage plus 2 damage for each ally adjacent to the target.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You swap places with one ally adjacent to you.

Level 9 Daily Disciplines

Finishing Move — Monk Attack 9

Your crippling attack can drop a badly injured foe with the devastating finishing move. If the foe falls, other enemies lose their resolve.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is slowed and takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends both). If the target has 10 hit points or fewer after this attack is resolved, you reduce it to 0 hit points.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: If this attack reduces the target to 0 hit points, each enemy within 5 squares of you takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls against you (save ends).

Flying Tiger Assault — Monk Attack 9

Your flying kick batters your enemy, driving it back as the recoil of your strike lets you dance away.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Effect: Before the attack, you fly your speed. You must land at the end of this movement.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the target 5 squares.
Miss: Half damage, and you push the target 2 squares.
Effect: You shift 1 square.

Immolating Fist — Monk Attack 9

Fire blazes within your clenched fists to burn those you strike, culminating in an explosive attack that wraps your foes in a shroud of flames.

Daily ✦ Fire, Implement, Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you gain resist 5 fire. In addition, whenever you hit an enemy with a melee attack, it takes 5 extra fire damage. You can also make the following attack.
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage plus 1d12 fire damage, and each enemy adjacent to the target takes 5 fire damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The stance ends.

Uncommon Clarity — Monk Attack 9

You attune yourself to your foe's thoughts, granting you increased accuracy with your attack.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity + 2 vs. Reflex. You can score a critical hit with this attack on a roll of 19–20.
Hit: 2d12 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Miss: Repeat the attack using Dexterity – 2 instead of Dexterity + 2. You are then dazed until the start of your next turn. Do not repeat the attack again if it misses.

Level 10 Utility Disciplines

Adamant Soul — Monk Utility 10

You coordinate body, mind, and soul to protect you from the energy of your foes' attacks.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: An attack that deals at least one specific damage type hits you
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you gain resistance equal to 3 + your Wisdom modifier to all damage types dealt by the triggering attack.

Adamantine Bones — Monk Utility 10

Your ki energy strengthens you from the inside out, reducing the effectiveness of your enemies' attacks.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain resist 5 to all damage until the end of your next turn.

Confirmation of Spirit — Monk Utility 10

The aftermath of a successful attack confirms your discipline and focus, granting you the strength to fight on.

Encounter ✦ Healing, Psionic
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee attack
Effect: You regain hit points equal to 5 + your Wisdom modifier.

Iron Heart Resilience — Monk Utility 10

You visualize the essence of determination, anchoring yourself against the worst of what your enemies impose upon you.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you make saving throws at the start of your turn in addition to the end of your turn. You take a –3 penalty to the saving throws granted by this power.

Breath of the Sun and Moon

Little recorded history remains from the days following the Dawn War. Still, some sages claim that the Breath of the Sun and Moon is the earliest known formal monastic tradition. The specifics of this tradition's teachings are lost to history, but it retains a place of great honor and veneration among monks.

The influence of the Breath of the Sun and Moon can be found in all contemporary orders. Followers of this tradition are said to be the first practitioners to gather disparate techniques into a set of consistent thematic disciplines. They first enunciated the ideal of unity between body, mind, and soul. They began the discussion of ki, although they used Supernal terms to do so. Finally, they established the completely immersive, monastic way of life and first practiced it in isolated communities. Disciplines developed by the monks of the Breath of the Sun and Moon are still taught today in one form or another.

Numerous contemporary monastic traditions claim direct descent from this ancient order, though no clear evidence for such claims exists. Many monasteries use the rank titles that the Breath adopted in ancient times. Titles such as "Master of the North Wind," "Master of Autumn," and "Grand Master of Flowers" reveal the influence of the Breath of the Sun and Moon.

Level 13 Encounter Disciplines

As the Arrow Flies — Monk Attack 13

You can fly like an arrow over other combatants, ready to deliver an attack that pins an enemy where it stands.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a light blade or a spear, whenever the target takes damage before the end of your next turn, you can slide the target 1 square to a square adjacent to you as a free action.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly your speed. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall.

Resounding Fist — Monk Attack 13

Resounding energy from your powerful strike disrupts your foe and grants your allies an opening.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Force, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature or unattended object
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier force damage, and any ally's attack made against the target deals extra damage equal to 2 + your Strength modifier until the end of your next turn. Against an unattended object, this attack deals 2d10 extra force damage.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift 2 squares and gain resist 3 to all damage until the start of your next turn.

Storm's Wake — Monk Attack 13

You read the flow of combat to better anticipate attacks as you move, then buttress your own strike with a ki shout that jolts your enemies back.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the target and each enemy adjacent to you a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 2. During this movement, you gain a bonus to all defenses equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Thundering Waterfall — Monk Attack 13

You undertake a devastating rush through the thick of combat that makes you harder to hit.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the primary target 3 squares.
Effect: You shift 3 squares and make a secondary attack that is a close burst 1.
Secondary Target: Each enemy in burst
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: The secondary target is dazed until the start of your next turn.
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a mace or a staff, the secondary target also takes damage equal to your Constitution modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed. Each time any enemy misses you with an opportunity attack provoked by this movement, you gain a cumulative +1 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.

Level 15 Daily Disciplines

Booming Shout — Monk Attack 15

Amplified by psionic power, your voice booms across the battlefield, scattering and disorienting creatures before you.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Thunder
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 thunder damage and is deafened (save ends both). In addition, you push the target to the nearest unoccupied square outside the blast.
Aftereffect: The target is dazed until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Half damage, you push the target 1 square, and the target takes ongoing 5 thunder damage (save ends).

Falcon's Rent — Monk Attack 15

You lash out with a psionic strike at foes around you, leaving those enemies reeling and unable to properly defend themselves.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 damage and a −2 penalty to all defenses (save ends both).
Miss: Half damage, and ongoing 5 damage (save ends).
Effect: Before or after the attack, you fly your speed. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall.

Mithral Tornado — Monk Attack 15

Twinned attacks send you hurtling across the battlefield, your enemies reeling from a whirlwind of blows.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close burst 1
Effect: You gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
Primary Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the primary target is dazed (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the primary target is dazed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You move your speed. Any enemy that misses you with an opportunity attack provoked by this movement takes 5 damage. When you end this movement, you make a secondary attack that is a close burst 1.
Secondary Target: Each enemy you can see in burst other than the primary target
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the secondary target is dazed (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.

Quickening Assault — Monk Attack 15

With careful aim and precise movement, you use one devastating attack to set up another.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The next monk at-will attack power you use before the end of your next turn deals 1d10 extra damage and deals half damage to one creature it misses.

Still Waters Strike — Monk Attack 15

The physical and mental pain of your strike knocks a foe back, then places you into a waiting posture that invites enemies to attack you at their peril.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage plus 2d10 psychic damage, and you push the target 2 squares.
Miss: Half damage, and you push the target 2 squares.
Effect: You grant combat advantage to the target until the start of your next turn. While you grant combat advantage to the target from this power, you can make the following attack.
Immediate Interrupt Melee touch
Trigger: An adjacent enemy hits you with a melee attack
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Dexterity + 2 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you knock the target prone.

Level 16 Utility Disciplines

Altered Awareness — Monk Utility 16

Your successful attack lets you touch a foe's mind, then fade from its sight.

Encounter ✦ Illusion, Psionic
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee attack
Target: The enemy you hit
Effect: You are invisible to the target until the end of your next turn.

Pearl of Black Doubt — Monk Utility 16

As the enemy's attack goes wide, you plant doubt's bitter seed in its mind to hamper its fight against you.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: An adjacent enemy misses you with an attack
Effect: Until the stance ends, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses against the triggering enemy's attacks. In addition, whenever the triggering enemy misses you with an attack, you gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls for any attack that includes the triggering enemy made before the end of your next turn.

Sundered Chains — Monk Utility 16

With the power of your mind, you free your body from constraint.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
No Action Personal
Trigger: You start your turn immobilized, restrained, or slowed
Effect: The triggering condition ends.

Unfailing Resolve — Monk Utility 16

Your focus and discipline lets you stay on your feet even though you are at death's door.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
No Action Personal
Trigger: You drop to 0 hit points or fewer
Effect: Until the stance ends, while you are dying but not dead, dying causes you to be slowed and weakened instead of unconscious.

Level 17 Encounter Disciplines

A Feather's Weight — Monk Attack 17

A powerful strike leaves your enemy off balance, so that any attack will send it to the ground.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d12 + Dexterity modifier damage, you slide the target 2 squares, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn. The next time the target takes damage before the start of your next turn, the target takes extra damage equal to your Strength modifier and falls prone.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 2. You can use the attack technique at any point during this movement.

Feigned Opening — Monk Attack 17

You give your enemy a false opening to lure it close, then lash out with brutal force that leaves it reeling.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee 3
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: You pull the target 2 squares. If you pull the target to a square adjacent to you, it takes 3d6 + Dexterity modifier damage and grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a mace or a staff, the target takes extra damage equal to your Constitution modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 2. You do not provoke opportunity attacks when moving away from enemies adjacent to you at the start of this movement.

Glare of the Inner Eye — Monk Attack 17

Your senses expand beyond sight as the power of your inner eye lets you project a mental assault against a distant foe.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee 5
Effect: You are blinded and gain blindsight 10 until the start of your next turn.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier psychic damage.
Movement Technique
Move Action Melee 1
Target: One creature
Effect: You shift 1 square and swap places with the target, or swap places with the target and shift 1 square.

FINDING THE PATH

Monastic acolytes might face significant challenges seeking out a desirable order or school before they arrive at the monastery's gate. Although some schools and their locations are famous, at least locally, other traditions are secretive or geographically isolated. Some regions hold no monastic orders at all. In these cases, a candidate must search far and wide, both by traveling and in terms of introspection. In the end, such effort might be wasted if the potential master finds the petitioner unsuitable.

Despite these barriers, locating a monastery or a school is sometimes easier than might be expected. Candidates who have sufficient discipline can feel drawn to a particular locale or building, stumbling upon the monastery with an accuracy that cannot be dismissed as coincidence. Many scholars theorize that characters destined to become monks unconsciously tap into a psionic or a spiritual connection that subtly guides them toward a suitable tradition and a willing master.

BEN WOOTTEN

Leaping Dragon Strike — Monk Attack 17

You leap into the air to jump over your enemy. When you land, you follow up with a vicious strike that drives the foe back.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a light blade or a spear, you gain a +2 power bonus to the attack roll.
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you can use your movement technique as a free action. You then push the target 2 squares.
Movement Technique
Move Action Melee 1
Target: One creature
Effect: You jump to any square adjacent to the target. This movement does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Level 19 Daily Disciplines

Crushing Reprisal — Monk Attack 19

Your enemy's failed attack lets you slip in quickly to deliver a crushing counterstrike.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Immediate Reaction Melee touch
Trigger: An enemy misses you with a melee attack
Effect: Before the attack, you shift 2 squares.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is stunned (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.

Hare's Panicked Retreat — Monk Attack 19

The power of your forceful strike fills your foe with dread, causing it to knock down other enemies as you control its feeble attempts to escape from you.

Daily ✦ Fear, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is slowed (save ends). Until this effect ends, whenever the target starts its turn, you can push it 2 squares as a free action. Each enemy adjacent to the target at the end of the push falls prone.
Miss: Half damage, and you push the target its speed.

Loud Fist Strike — Monk Attack 19

Your fast attack sends a foe careening into other enemies, which are blasted back by an explosive clap of thunder.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Thunder
Standard Action Melee touch
Effect: Before the attack, you shift your speed.
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the target 5 squares and knock it prone.
Miss: Half damage, and you push the target 5 squares.
Effect: Make a secondary attack that is an area burst 2 centered on the primary target.
Secondary Target: Each enemy in burst other than the primary target
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier thunder damage, and you push the secondary target 3 squares from the primary target.
Miss: Half damage.

Twin Fountain Strike — Monk Attack 19

As you tumble past your enemies, your attack draws forth a blood-red mist that shrouds them and fills other foes with fear.

Daily ✦ Fear, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Effect: You shift your speed + 2 and make the following attack against one or two creatures during this movement.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and ongoing 10 damage (save ends). Until this ongoing damage ends, the target's space and each square adjacent to it are lightly obscured. Any enemy not immune to fear takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls while it can see squares lightly obscured by this power.

Level 22 Utility Disciplines

Empty Body — Monk Utility 22

You exchange the limits of the body for the embrace of pure spirit. In this form, nothing can contain you.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: You must be bloodied.
Effect: Until the stance ends, you are insubstantial and phasing.

Meditative Vanishing — Monk Utility 22

You extend your will to overpower the senses of your enemies, excising your presence from their minds.

Daily ✦ Illusion, Psionic
Minor Action Close burst 5
Target: Each enemy in burst
Effect: You are invisible to the target until you make an attack against it.

Meditation

Monks and psions meditate in a variety of ways to maintain discipline and to reinvigorate their bodies and minds. For roleplaying purposes, you might decide exactly what those practices entail and describe your character performing them during periods of rest or downtime. You can adopt one of these suggestions or devise your own.

Art: Some psionics users engage in various forms of performance or fine art—such as painting, sewing, calligraphy, or music—as a means of focusing the mind and calming the emotions.

Chants and Litanies: Specific phrases, repeated over and over, form the basis for many forms of meditation. For example, the following is the litany of the Winding Soul tradition:

There is no pain; there is only warning.
There is no fear; there is only caution.
There is no retreat; there is only delay.
There is no defeat; there is only death.
There is no me; there is only what I do.

Focus on the Mundane: Monks and psions often devote the entirety of their attention to mundane stimuli, allowing their thoughts to drift. Examples include concentrating on the flickering of a candle flame, the feel of a knotted leather strap, or the rhythm of one's breathing or heartbeat.

Katas: By repeatedly performing katas (carefully arranged sequences of martial movements), a psionics user clears his or her mind and reinforces the links between mind, body, and spirit.

Supreme Parry — Monk Utility 22

Your weapon blurs as you spin it around you in an impenetrable barrier.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you add the proficiency bonus of any melee weapon you wield to your AC and Reflex.

Thousand World Stride — Monk Utility 22

By elevating your consciousness over your physical limitations, you are able to reach the far side of the battle in a single step.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance, Teleportation
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you can teleport your speed as a free action.
Special: You can take this free action only as the first action of your turn.

Level 23 Encounter Disciplines

Iron Cascade — Monk Attack 23

You capture your allies' spiritual strength, focusing it into an attack whose iron fury crushes your enemy.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a light blade or a spear, you gain a +2 power bonus to the attack roll.
Hit: 4d8 + Dexterity modifier damage plus 4 damage for each ally adjacent to the target.
Movement Technique
Move Action Melee 1
Target: One creature
Effect: You swap places with the target, then shift a number of squares equal to your Constitution modifier. If the target is an ally, he or she can shift the same number of squares as a free action.

Lightning Throw — Monk Attack 23

You can flash through the air to land with explosive force, your melee attack summoning the power of lightning that you hurl at a distant foe.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Lightning, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you make a secondary attack that is a ranged 10 attack. This attack does not provoke opportunity attacks.
Secondary Target: One creature other than the primary target
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d12 + Wisdom modifier lightning damage, and the secondary target is blinded until the end of your next turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly your speed + 2. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall. Enemies adjacent to you when you land take lightning damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Shattered Earth Fall — Monk Attack 23

Your vicious strike can knock a foe down, and grants you the power to sweep other nearby enemies to the ground.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you knock the primary target prone.
Effect: Make a secondary attack that is a close burst 1.
Secondary Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: You knock the secondary target prone.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift 3 squares. You can ignore forced movement until the end of your next turn.

Level 25 Daily Disciplines

Dragon Fist Strike — Monk Attack 25

You end your prodigious leap with a blow that smashes your enemy to the ground, all other opponents recoiling before you.

Daily ✦ Fear, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Effect: Before the attack, you fly your speed + 2. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d12 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target falls prone and cannot stand up (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: The target is dazed until the end of its next turn.
Miss: Half damage, and the target falls prone.
Effect: Until the start of your next turn, any creature that can see you takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls for any attack that includes you as a target.

Fate's Judgment — Monk Attack 25

An enemy strikes and you make a savage counterattack. If your opponent attacks again, it is punished by the lingering resonance of your fury.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Immediate Reaction Melee touch
Trigger: An adjacent enemy hits you with an attack
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target takes 10 damage the first time each turn it makes an attack (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target takes 5 damage the first time each turn it makes an attack (save ends).

Four Hidden Sounds — Monk Attack 25

You center your mind on the four hidden sounds of the natural world. When you speak each sound, you release a potent blast of elemental energy.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Stance; Varies
Standard Action Personal
Effect: Until the stance ends, you can make the following attack.
Minor Action (1/round) Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d10 + Wisdom modifier damage. Choose a damage type: acid, cold, fire, or lightning. The attack deals damage of this type to each target. You can choose each damage type only once in an encounter.
Effect: The fourth time you use this attack in an encounter, the stance ends.

Glacier's Mantle — Monk Attack 25

Frost flares around you as an icy mist, adding lethal cold to your attacks and chilling any foe that comes too close.

Daily ✦ Cold, Implement, Psionic, Stance
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier damage plus 2d12 cold damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You can enter the glacier's mantle stance. Until the stance ends, your melee attacks deal 5 extra cold damage. In addition, any enemy that enters a square adjacent to you takes cold damage equal to 5 + your Strength modifier.

Strike of Perfect Clarity — Monk Attack 25

Your attack is delivered with such masterful balance and form that your foe's mind turns on itself for daring to challenge you.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: 4d8 + Dexterity modifier damage plus 2d12 psychic damage.
Miss: Repeat the attack against the same target or a different one. Do not repeat the attack again if it misses.

Level 27 Encounter Disciplines

From Earth to Heaven — Monk Attack 27

Your grace and focus flow through your attacks, driving back your enemies and lifting you to safety above the fray.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the target 1 square. The target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly your speed + 2. You gain a power bonus to all defenses equal to your Wisdom modifier during this movement. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall.

Part the Seas — Monk Attack 27

Foes that try to stop you are knocked aside as you surge through combat, ready to unleash a blow that stuns an enemy in its tracks.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d12 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is stunned until the end of your next turn.
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a mace or a staff, the target also falls prone.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 6. Any enemy that misses you with an opportunity attack provoked by this movement takes damage equal to your Constitution modifier and falls prone.

Shatter the Mountain — Monk Attack 27

An unshakeable concentration girds your body as your rock-shattering strike overwhelms a foe.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature or unattended object
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d12 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the target a number of squares equal to 3 + your Strength modifier. If this attack bloodies the target, it takes 1d12 extra damage. If the target is an unattended object, this attack deals 2d12 extra damage.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift 4 squares and gain resist 5 to all damage until the end of your next turn.

Weight of the Anchor — Monk Attack 27

Your attack hits with the force of iron, pinning an enemy in place as you race across the battlefield.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Iron Soul: If you make the attack using a light blade or a spear, you gain a +2 power bonus to the attack roll.
Hit: 4d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 6.

Level 29 Daily Disciplines

Adamantine Hurricane — Monk Attack 29

You are a blur as you move and attack, laying into foes around you with a destructive force equal to that of the mightiest weapons.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close burst 1
Effect: You gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
Primary Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the primary target takes ongoing 10 damage (save ends). If the primary target is already taking ongoing damage, that ongoing damage increases by 10.
Effect: You move your speed + 2. Any enemy that misses you with an opportunity attack provoked by this movement takes 10 damage and falls prone. Make a secondary attack that is a close burst 1.
Secondary Target: Each enemy you can see in burst other than the primary targets
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the secondary target takes ongoing 10 damage (save ends). If the secondary target is already taking ongoing damage, that ongoing damage increases by 10.

Falling Star Strike — Monk Attack 29

You streak into the air, trailing fire and light. When you land, the impact staggers, blinds, and burns your foes.

Daily ✦ Fire, Implement, Psionic, Radiant, Teleportation, Thunder, Zone
Standard Action Close burst 2
Effect: Before the attack, you teleport your speed, appearing up to 50 feet in the air above your destination space. You then fall without taking damage.
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier fire, radiant, and thunder damage, and the target is blinded (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that ends its turn within the zone takes fire damage equal to your Dexterity modifier.

Titan's Mighty Grasp — Monk Attack 29

You rock your enemy with a devastating attack, then wrap it in a steely, unbreakable embrace.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 5d12 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you grab the target. The target takes a penalty to checks to escape the grab equal to your Strength modifier.
Miss: Half damage, and you grab the target
Effect: Until the grab ends, you can make the following secondary attack against the target.
Standard Action Melee touch
Secondary Attack: Dexterity + 2 vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d10 + Strength modifier damage. The target cannot attempt to escape the grab until the start of your next turn.

Taxes, Tithes, and Thievery

Many isolated monasteries exist completely apart from the bounds of civilization, independent from any supervisory, affiliated, or beholden group. On occasion, a small settlement grows up near an otherwise remote monastery, eager for the protection the monks offer from the hazards of the wild. Over time, a formal relationship might develop between the order and the community. The monks might become landlords, collecting taxes or tithes. They might become overlords, passing laws and serving as both religious and secular leaders for the local population. Many arrangements bear equal measures of benefit and responsibility, but some dependencies are more extreme.

A school dedicated wholly to discipline might subordinate itself to a local settlement, perhaps as a means of achieving enlightenment through service. Another order might exert a cruel dominion, inflicting crippling taxes and growing wealthy off the labor of its subjects. Such an evil-aligned monastery might also send students roaming beyond their own environs to engage in banditry, waylaying travelers and raiding neighboring communities.

Basilisk's Fury Adept

"Look into these eyes and see the doom awaiting you."

Prerequisite: Monk

The basilisk is renowned for its hunting prowess, and its pitiless gaze. Inspired by both the basilisk's sinuous movements and the immobilizing effect of its gaze, a group of monks have developed disciplines that mirror this creature's fearsome reputation.

Your study of the basilisk's fury has opened your mind to the emotions around and in you. Achieving this state empties your body of thought and draws the sensations of others through your eyes. Foes that peer into your obsidian gaze are drained of hope. All that remains for your enemy are apathy, stasis, and death.

Basilisk's Fury Adept Path Features

Baleful Action (11th level): You can spend an action point to slow each enemy within 5 squares of you that can see you until the start of your next turn. Any enemy that takes damage while slowed in this way becomes slowed (save ends).

Basilisk's Boon (11th level): You gain a +2 bonus to saving throws against effects that immobilize, restrain, or slow. When you are subjected to an effect that petrifies you, you can make a saving throw against that effect. If you save, the effect ends on you.

Basilisk's Fury (16th level): When you score a critical hit against an enemy using a monk or basilisk's fury adept attack power, that enemy is petrified (save ends).

Basilisk's Fury Adept Disciplines

Eyes of the Basilisk — Basilisk's Fury Adept Attack 11

You drive your enemy back, then bind it in place with a gaze.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d12 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the target 3 squares. The target is then marked and immobilized until the end of your next turn. If the target is already slowed or immobilized, it is restrained until the end of your next turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 2, ignoring difficult terrain. Any enemy that misses you with an opportunity attack provoked by this movement is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Basilisk Nature Defense — Basilisk's Fury Adept Utility 12

The power of your mind transforms your body into stone.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: An attack makes you unconscious or stuns you
Effect: You are instead petrified for as long as you would be unconscious or stunned by the triggering attack. You can spend a healing surge. If you do so, you gain a +2 power bonus to saving throws until you are no longer petrified.

Stone-Shatter Strike — Basilisk's Fury Adept Attack 20

Your attack freezes a foe, rendering it vulnerable to your follow-up strike and threatening to transform it to living stone.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier psychic damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends).
First Failed Saving Throw: The target is instead petrified (save ends). The target takes a −2 penalty to saving throws against this effect.
Miss: Half damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Effect: Once during the encounter while the target is immobilized or petrified by this power, you can make the following attack against the target.
Standard Action Melee 1
Secondary Attack: Dexterity + 2 vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target falls prone and cannot stand up (save ends). If the target is petrified, this attack ignores the resistance granted by that condition and deals 4d8 extra damage.
Special: When charging, you can use this power in place of a melee basic attack.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Four Winds Master

"I am as powerful as the winds and as constant as the seasons."

Prerequisite: Monk

Devotees of the four winds strive for peace and tranquility in all that they do. They recognize, however, that violence is sometimes necessary to achieve greater harmony. Just as destructive winds can carry away anything that stands against them, a monk of the four winds is an overwhelming force.

Four Winds Master Path Features

Mystery of the Four Winds (11th level): After each extended rest, choose one of the following mysteries. The benefit of that mystery lasts until you choose another mystery.

Mystery of the East Wind: You gain lightning resistance equal to one-half your level. In addition, whenever you shift, you can move 2 squares before or after the shift.

Mystery of the North Wind: You gain cold resistance equal to one-half your level and a +5 bonus to saving throws against charm effects and fear effects.

Mystery of the South Wind: You gain force resistance equal to one-half your level and a +4 bonus to initiative checks.

Mystery of the West Wind: You gain thunder resistance equal to one-half your level. In addition, whenever you spend a healing surge, you can shift 2 squares as a free action.

Four Winds Master Disciplines

Four Winds Assault — Four Winds Master Attack 11

Psychic winds can carry you to your opponents, gusting hard when you strike to scatter your foes.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage. You lift the target 10 feet into the air, where it is immobilized until the end of your next turn. At the end of your next turn, the target drops safely to the ground in the space it last occupied or in the nearest unoccupied space.
Aftereffect: You slide each creature within 5 squares of the target 5 squares.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly your speed + 2. If you do not land at the end of this movement, you hover until the start of your next turn, at which point you land safely in the space below you or in the nearest unoccupied space.

Gusting Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make an attack and the attack hits, you shift your speed after resolving the attack.

Mysteries Revealed (16th level): After each extended or short rest, you can choose two mysteries and benefit from both at the same time. The benefit of the mysteries lasts until you choose another two mysteries.

In addition, whenever you shift, you can instead fly the same distance. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall.

Breath of the Four Winds — Four Winds Master Utility 12

You anticipate imminent danger and call the four winds to whisk you to safety.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: You are hit by an attack
Effect: You are insubstantial until the start of your next turn. After the triggering attack is resolved, you fly your speed + 2. If you do not land at the end of this movement, you hover until the start of your next turn, at which point you land safely in the space below you or in the nearest unoccupied space.

Four Winds Tempest — Four Winds Master Attack 20

You take to the air to lash out with a vicious attack, then call on the four winds that hold you aloft to batter your foe.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic; Varies
Standard Action Melee touch
Effect: Before the attack, you fly a number of squares equal to your speed + 2. If you do not land at the end of this movement, you hover until the start of your next turn, at which point you land safely in the space below you or in the nearest unoccupied space.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d10 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target is affected by the four winds tempest (save ends). While the target is affected by the tempest, whenever the target starts its turn, roll a d4 to determine the effect.
1. The target takes 10 lightning damage, and you push it 4 squares.
2. The target takes 10 cold damage and is slowed until the end of its turn.
3. The target takes 10 force damage, and you pull it 4 squares.
4. The target takes 10 thunder damage, and you slide it 4 squares.

Soaring Blade

"My sword is more than a weapon—it is my spirit."

Prerequisite: Monk, trained in Acrobatics

Battle is not just a physical contest—it is a spectacle, a dance of parries and thrusts, of slashes and ripostes. True mastery of the blade adds soaring form and motion, transporting the struggle into aerial art.

What sets you apart from earthbound combatants is your melding of discipline and precise swordplay. Your training and your psionic power grant you incredible mobility; your focus hones your edge.

Soaring Blade Path Features

Focused Parry Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make an attack and the attack hits, you gain a bonus to all defenses equal to your Constitution modifier until you make an attack or until the end of the encounter.

Soaring Blade Style (11th level): You gain a +3 bonus to Acrobatics checks. In addition, when you would make an Athletics check to climb or jump, you can make an Acrobatics check instead.

Soaring Blade Training (11th level): You gain proficiency with all simple and military heavy blades. You can utilize a heavy blade for any monk power usable with a light blade.

Ki Blade (16th level): You channel psionic energy through your heavy blade. After each extended rest, choose a damage type: cold, fire, or lightning. Your melee attacks using a heavy blade deal extra damage of that type equal to your Constitution modifier. In addition, when you score a critical hit using a heavy blade, the attack deals 2d10 extra damage of that type.

Soaring Blade Disciplines

Sword Fall Leap — Soaring Blade Attack 11

You leap across the field of combat. When you attack, your blade work cuts one enemy deeply and slashes all foes nearby.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Requirement: You must make this attack using a heavy blade.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and each enemy adjacent to you takes damage equal to your Constitution modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You make an Acrobatics check to jump with a +10 power bonus. You are considered to have a running start, and the distance of the jump isn't limited by your speed.
Level 21: You make the Acrobatics check with a +20 power bonus.

HECTOR ORTIZ

Charge the Clouds — Soaring Blade Utility 12

You soar above the fight, avoiding your foes' attacks as you pass.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly your speed. This movement does not provoke opportunity attacks. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall.

Storm of Raining Blades — Soaring Blade Attack 20

You are carried aloft by your psionic power, touching down three times to hack through and scatter your foes.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Requirement: You must make this attack using a heavy blade.
Effect: Until the end of your turn, your movement does not provoke opportunity attacks. Before the attack, you fly 3 squares. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall.
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Effect: You fly 3 squares. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall. You then make a secondary attack that is a melee touch attack.
Secondary Target: One creature other than the primary target
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Effect: You fly 3 squares. If you don't land at the end of this movement, you fall. You then make a tertiary attack that is a close burst 1.
Tertiary Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Tertiary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 15 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you slide the tertiary target 2 squares.
Miss: Half damage, and you slide the target 1 square.

Tiger Claw Master

"I am the hunter. You are my prey."

Prerequisite: Monk

The tiger claw style is an ancient, honored path. Its practitioners have incorporated techniques from different traditions, but the style retains a central feature: the tiger claw. A practitioner curls his or her fingers toward the palm to make a claw. Through iron discipline, the monk transforms each digit into a rigid talon capable of raking and rending.

Mastering tiger claw maneuvers builds your strength and hardiness, and your strikes shred enemies. You spring at your foes with astounding speed. With true mastery, you take on the characteristics of the celestial tiger. Coarse orange and white striped fur covers your body. Your hands become clawed paws and a tiger's visage replaces your features. With great green orbs for eyes and a mouth filled with sharp teeth, you embody the tiger claw style.

Tiger Claw Master Path Features

Tiger Claw Style (11th level): When you make an attack roll, you can take a -2 penalty to the roll. If the attack hits and you trigger your Flurry of Blows power, that power deals 4 extra damage.

Pouncing Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make a charge attack, you move your speed + 2 as part of the charge, your movement for the charge doesn't provoke opportunity attacks, and you can reroll one attack roll made as part of the charge.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Tiger's Endurance (16th level): When you use your second wind, you regain additional hit points equal to your Strength modifier. In addition, the bonus to all defenses granted by your second wind equals 2 + your Strength modifier.

Tiger Claw Master Disciplines

Tiger Claw Rake — Tiger Claw Master Attack 11

You sprint across the battlefield, and your tiger claw tears your foe and leaves it in debilitating agony.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn. If the target moves more than 2 squares on its next turn, it takes 5 damage.
Special: When charging, you can use this power in place of a melee basic attack.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 2, ignoring difficult terrain. Any enemy that hits you with an opportunity attack provoked by this movement takes damage equal to your Strength modifier, and you mark the enemy until the start of your next turn.

Tiger Frenzy — Tiger Claw Master Utility 12

Pain clarifies your mind, letting you strike with ease at foes that come too close.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: You are bloodied by an attack
Effect: Until the stance ends, any enemy that ends its turn adjacent to you takes damage equal to your Strength modifier.

Awaken the Celestial Tiger — Tiger Claw Master Attack 20

As you spring at your enemy, your body transforms into the celestial tiger—a relentless force of unearthly fury.

Daily ✦ Implement, Polymorph, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Requirement: You must charge and use this power in place of a melee basic attack.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex. Make the attack twice.
Hit: 4d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you knock the target prone. If you hit with both attacks, the target takes 2d10 extra damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You assume the form of the celestial tiger until the end of the encounter. While in this form, you are immune to fear effects, your Flurry of Blows power deals extra damage equal to your Strength modifier, and you gain a +2 power bonus to speed.

Transcendent Perfection

"I am more than this flawed vessel."

Prerequisite: Monk

The mystics of transcendent perfection believe the mortal body is a faulty receptacle that prevents them from attaining a higher form. They strive to overcome the body's limitations and attain their true potential. Just as importantly, they believe that they must foster reason and enlightenment, and help others transcend the body to embrace a state of harmonious existence.

By following the transcendent path, you learn to overcome your physical limitations by solving the riddles of past masters. Each conundrum you unravel opens your mind to greater possibilities. You first learn to shape your words to encourage behavior and alter impressions, to move without interference, or to deny movement to those who oppose you. You learn to close wounds and vanquish ailments with a touch. Upon mastering the techniques of transcendent perfection, you can deny your enemies' attacks by elevating your consciousness above pain and despair.

Transcendent Perfection Path Features

Enlightened Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you shift your speed and are insubstantial until the end of your next turn. You ignore difficult terrain, and you can move across water and other liquid surfaces. You sink if you end your turn on such a surface.

Riddle of Conversation (11th level): You gain a +2 bonus to Bluff, Diplomacy, Insight, and Intimidate checks. You also gain training in one of those skills. In addition, whenever you use your Flurry of Blows power, one ally adjacent to you or to a target of that power can shift as a free action.

Riddle of Awareness (16th level): You see invisible creatures and objects within 1 square of you. In addition, enemies do not gain combat advantage for flanking you unless you are adjacent to three or more enemies.

MIKE SCHLEY

Transcendent Perfection Disciplines

Riddle of Motion — Transcendent Perfection Attack 11

Solving the riddle of motion lets you control your foe's movement and keeps your enemies from doing the same to you.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: 3d6 + Dexterity modifier psychic damage, and the target is either immobilized until the end of your next turn or you slide the target a number of squares equal to its speed.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: Choose one of the following effects. You move twice your speed and gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses against opportunity attacks provoked by this movement; or you can ignore forced movement until the end of your next turn.

Riddle of Health — Transcendent Perfection Utility 12

Your knowledge lets you cleanse the body of injury and incapacitation.

Encounter ✦ Healing, Psionic
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: You or one ally
Effect: The target spends a healing surge and makes a saving throw. If the saving throw is against a poison effect, it gains a +5 power bonus.

Riddle of Invulnerability — Transcendent Perfection Attack 20

A pulse of psychic power tears at your enemies, exploiting the weakness of their flesh and enhancing your resilience.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Stance
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: 3d10 + Dexterity modifier psychic damage, and the target gains vulnerable 5 to all damage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You can enter the riddle of invulnerability stance. Until the stance ends, you gain resist 5 to all damage.

Unseen Hand

"I am the unseen blade, the killer in shadow, the final reckoning."

Prerequisite: Monk, trained in Stealth

A covert clan of enigmatic monks engage in assassination, espionage, and sabotage. They are mercenaries, taking commissions from the powerful or the vengeful. Members of the Unseen Hand are bound to the order for life—the clan's mysteries are too sensitive to allow any member to withdraw or resign.

Secrecy and subtlety lie at the heart of your training. As long as your enemies cannot identify your purpose, you have them at a disadvantage. You might achieve this subterfuge through cunning disguises, skulking through shadows, or misdirection. Mastering the higher mysteries helps you manipulate darkness, leap across vast distances, and penetrate your enemies' minds.

Being a trained killer is not so different from being any other kind of warrior, but you must ensure that your tactics and techniques do not alarm your companions. At the same time, you must maintain friendly relations with the Unseen Hand clan or face ostracism, retribution—or worse.

Unseen Hand Path Features

Arms of the Unseen Way (11th level): You gain proficiency with the hand crossbow. When you use your Flurry of Blows power, you can target an additional creature within 10 squares of you with that power by firing a loaded hand crossbow that you are holding. This does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Unseen Action (11th level): When you spend an action point, you become invisible until the end of your next turn.

Flit Through Shadows (16th level): Whenever you shift while you have concealment, you shift 2 extra squares.

ROBERTO MARCHESI

Unseen Hand Disciplines

Unseen Hunter's Pounce — Unseen Hand Attack 11

Darting from the shadows, you strike your foe hard as your power twists its mind and clouds its senses.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you are invisible to the target until the end of your next turn. If you use a weapon other than your monk unarmed strike to make this attack, the attack deals extra damage equal to your Constitution modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You have concealment until the end of your next turn, and you shift your speed. At the end of this movement, you can make a Stealth check to hide.

Unseen Scrutiny — Unseen Hand Utility 12

You erase yourself from a foe's mind, invisibly shadowing its movements.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Ranged sight
Target: One creature you are hidden from
Effect: You are invisible to the target until you attack it or until the end of the encounter. While this invisibility lasts, whenever the target moves, you can shift a number of squares equal to your Dexterity modifier as an immediate reaction.

Unseen Ambush — Unseen Hand Attack 20

You slip through space to cut down a foe with a crippling attack, then step away to vanish in the shadows.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Teleportation
Standard Action Melee touch
Effect: Before the attack, you teleport your speed.
Target: One creature you are hidden from
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex. If you use a weapon other than your monk unarmed strike to make this attack, you gain combat advantage for the attack.
Hit: 3d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is stunned and gains vulnerable 10 to your attacks (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: After the attack, you teleport your speed. If you teleport to a square that grants you concealment or cover, you can make a Stealth check to hide.

CHAPTER 4

Psion

"Your nightmares serve at my command, and nothing can save you now."

The power of the mind is yours to do with what you will. You can assume control of another creature, move objects and monsters with the merest thought, or reshape the matter of the material world into more useful forms. Although you recognize that psionic power can be focused and honed in many ways, your specialized training and your respect for the magic of the mind give you insights that few other psionic characters can match.

Your power is a perfect combination of natural talent and disciplined training. You might have always had a knack for piercing the veil of the material world with your mind. As a child, perhaps you caught faint fragments of the thoughts of those around you, or learned to nudge small objects by concentration alone. But it is only with the dedicated training that is your life's work that you discover the full extent of your gifts.

Regardless of which path your psion character follows, this chapter presents numerous useful options.

- Playing a Psion: The psion's relationship to psionic power and place in the world of the game, with all the information you need to bring a psion character to life.
- New Build and Class Feature: Shaper psions use their psionic power to alter and transmute the material world. The Shaper Focus class feature allows you to project your consciousness and create mundane objects using only the power of your mind.
- New Powers: With the new powers presented in this chapter, a psion can tear reality asunder, summon creatures from nightmare, pry open a foe's mind, or assail enemies with thoughts of pure destruction.
- New Paragon Paths: Five new paragon paths provide psion characters with a host of options for expanding their power, from the firestarter's roiling flame to the thrallherd's ability to control another creature's body and mind.

MCLEAN KENDREE

McLean Kendree
2010

Sweat on his brow, hands tight on his sword, Gorna watched the shambling mass of creatures slouch forth from the darkness. Gaping mouths shrieked in eyeless faces, insectoid legs scuttling across unyielding rock. A dozen, a score, and still they kept coming.

At the head of the throng stood the creature they had come to find, the creature they had foolishly thought they could kill. Its writhing tentacles lashed the air as it raised its clawed hands, and in their minds, the illithid laughed. Its first assault had taken out Rathelle, their best hope of countering the mind flayer's power. She lay at its feet now in a crumpled heap, no sign of life in her eyes—but even if Gorna had wanted to leave her behind, they were surrounded. There was nowhere to run.

As the aberrant horrors surged forward, Gorna and the others cast silent prayers to any gods they knew. They hoped at least that death might come cleanly, quickly.

Then, swift as thought, the mind flayer's arms fell. Its servants stopped, their inhuman eyes staring questioningly at their master. The creature turned as if in thought, the air rippling around it. And then the power of the illithid's mind blasted outward, sweeping over its own allies and rendering them senseless. The mind flayer stood rigid, its back to its foes.

"Hurry," Rathelle whispered from the ground where she lay, face set in concentration as she struggled to speak. "I can't control it for long. . . ."

Nothing is more potent than the mind. Arcane magic, primal spirits, even the divine power of the gods themselves—the potential of sentient thought is greater than all these things. It is a simple truth, but one that few have grasped. You are one of those few. You are a psion, devoting yourself to utter mastery of your thoughts and dreams, hopes and fears, identity and potential. Through the mastery of your mind, you master the world.

Although the rigorous path of the psion most commonly appeals to those who seek order and answers in their lives, your motivations are entirely your own. Did you start down this path for the knowledge and power it would bring? Did you have a natural talent that you could never fully master until you stumbled on the legends and teachings of the psions who came before you? Were you training your mind for some other purpose, only to discover that your efforts tapped a wellspring of power you never knew you possessed?

Intellectual Exercise

As a psion, your thoughts control your environment—but only as well as you control your thoughts. Your life is centered on intellect and understanding, logic and experimentation. The stronger your mind, the more controlled your thoughts. The broader your imagination and the narrower your focus, the greater the power you can project. Academic psions devote themselves to research and study; adventuring psions engage in various forms of meditation as a means of maintaining their intellectual edge.

Strict, methodical process is your preferred way of reaching your decisions and accomplishing your goals. You are likely drawn to rigid studies such as mathematics or alchemy. It is important for you to understand and master every step of any given task—be it translating an ancient codex, brewing a potion, developing a new discipline, or cooking a stew. For a psion, the process is just as important as the result.

Schools and Studies

The methodical attitudes at the heart of a psion's technique lend themselves to formal study. Psions were the first psionic class to form scholastic traditions, and the first to develop unifying theories of psionic energy. A psionics college is not necessarily a specific location. It's a combination of philosophy and methods of study, a means of teaching more than a place of teaching.

The various psion builds and focuses are an extension of these scholarly traditions. Are you a telepath, a telekinetic, or a shaper? Do you prefer orbs and crystals, or would you rather wield a staff? Do you practice ritual magic or alchemy? Which of the various psionics origin theories do you support? These traits were likely shaped by the psionics college that instructed you.

The Life of the Mind

You recognize that the mind, composed in equal part of thought, memory, and emotion, is the most vital aspect of the self. The body is a vessel, a tool. Some psions discount the existence of the soul, seeing it as an aggregate of memories and personality viewed through the lens of worship. Most psions believe that the soul represents the catalyst that allows the intellect to burn bright. It is the mind that ultimately provides awareness, memory, and personality.

Your Life Before

Some individuals are drawn to the art of the psion because it fits their personality, aptitudes, and ambitions. You might have heard tales of the psion colleges while engaged in other scholarly pursuits and become intrigued by this mysterious path. You might have been actively learning the techniques of wizardry or some other class, discovering in the process that you carried the rare psionics potential within you.

You might have recognized that potential early on, seeking psion instruction to help you deal with it rather than following the largely self-taught path of the ardent. If you hail from a community in which psionics is viewed with suspicion or superstition, you might have thought you were learning arcane magic—only to discover that your master was preparing you in secret for another path.

Regardless of your background, the one thing you almost certainly had in common with other psions even before you began your instruction is a strong sense of order and logic. Without such a mind set, few can master the rigid disciplines of the psion class.

Roleplaying a Psion

You see the world through a lens of order, but this does not imply any particular personality or alignment. Rather, you look for patterns in all things, the connections between events.

Whether it's the study of psion disciplines or alchemy, rural economics or astrology, mathematics or the progression of history and culture, you need to comprehend how each step leads to the step that follows. You work constantly to expand your knowledge of a wide variety of subjects, using what you've learned to anticipate what comes next.

MIKE SCHLEY

You believe that all problems can be solved through the proper application of logical reasoning and the knowledge of what's come before. You view people who act wholly on impulse to be irrational. Instinct, however, is another type of knowledge to you, and you respect those who properly respond to it.

If you are like most psions, you work hard not to act on emotion. Though you have no need to suppress or conceal your emotional side, you make every effort not to let emotions influence your choices and decisions. Even when emotion does overtake you, you remain logical and methodical about how you pursue its goals. You are just as likely as any other character to seek vengeance against a foe that threatens or harms your loved ones, but you are far more brutally thorough in planning out and executing that retribution.

The best psions use their powers to protect others. They share their knowledge, believing that with their power comes an obligation to use it wisely. Darker psions lose themselves in that power. They begin to see other sentients as puppets to be manipulated. To such psions, the strong are entitled—even obligated—to dominate the weak. Such a path is an easy one to follow without meaning to, and underlying all your training is the knowledge that you must tread carefully as your power grows.

Manifestation

The corona of power marks an ardent, just as a monk is identifiable by his or her unique combat tactics. But no single sign accompanies the manifestation of a psion's disciplines. When manifesting a discipline, a psion's eyes might blaze with silver or violet light. A discipline might be accompanied by a faint chiming or unintelligible whispers heard only in the minds of its target. In some cases, a psion's power manifests as sensation fed directly into the mind.

Decide what form your own manifestations might take, and whether they are consistent or vary from power to power. For example, you might decide that powers dealing the most potent damage are accompanied by a flare of light in your eyes, and that a charm is felt in its target's mind as a wave of hazy memories.

Psions in the World

The average commoner sees no functional difference between a psion and a wizard. Those who do recognize the obvious difference in traditions and trappings between the two classes also typically know of the psion's proficiency at controlling the minds of others. As a result, among the common folk who do distinguish between the two classes, psions are often viewed with more suspicion.

Among scholars and adventurers, psions are well known and treated with an equal mix of respect and wariness. As a psion, you wield some of the most overtly impressive psionic powers, even if not necessarily the most powerful. You are highly knowledgeable, possessing methods of research and discovery that even other spellcasters lack. And most importantly for some, your numbers are growing.

The Birth of Understanding

Psions cannot claim the earliest formal psionics organizations, a distinction that belongs to the oldest monastic traditions. But those early traditions tended to be religious or spiritual in nature, leaving psions to form the first specifically psionics-focused orders.

Psionic power was poorly understood in the first generations following the Dawn War, and only rarely recognized as a form of power unto itself. The formal studies that would eventually grow into the psion class and its colleges are thought to have originated with a priestess of Ioun named Pharaelis.

Although she was not the first to study the peculiar energy that empowered the earliest psionic characters, Pharaelis was one of the first to undertake a significant and methodical analysis of it. Even though they recognized that psionic energy was distinct from divine magic, Pharaelis and her students took it on faith that these powers had their origins with Ioun and other gods of knowledge and the mind. Over the course of her studies, Pharaelis developed psionic ability of her own, though clerical magic remained her life's work and focus. After her death, the acolytes who carried on her studies founded the earliest of the formal psion colleges.

Mind Over Magic

The spread of psions was rapid at first, as those who demonstrated a natural talent for psionics found a formal means of channeling that power. But with that rise came unrest. The widespread clerical temples and established schools of wizardry did not care for this new challenge to their power. In many cases, those organizations sought to maintain the study of psionic power as a subset of the arcane or the divine. On the fringes of civilization, psions often failed to gain a foothold, or had to teach and learn their disciplines in secret.

In the dark ages between the earliest empires, psions had greater success. The common folk gave fealty to anyone who could protect them from the horrors of those terrible times, or who could teach them to protect themselves. When later empires formed, established psion colleges and cabals were already in place, distinct from the divine and arcane factions that had fallen and risen again alongside them.

A significant development in the psion tradition came in the tiefling empire of Bael Turath. Seeking advantage in its war against Arkhosia's dragonborn, the empire encouraged psionics study among its people. Arkhosia, in turn, countered with new psionics traditions of its own. Psions never became a major factor in that war, since both sides already fielded potent magic, but the open acceptance of psionics survived and flourished after both empires' fall.

Psions Today

Just as in previous ages of darkness, the number of psions has increased since the fall of Nerath. As the influence of the Far Realm presses more heavily against the threshold of reality, psionics grows more pervasive throughout the world. Even in areas pressed by less sinister threats, the common folk typically welcome wanderers possessed of strange powers—and hope desperately that those powers can protect them.

The spread of the adventuring psion is a relatively recent phenomenon. For most of the class's history, psions have remained largely devoted to study, research, and experimentation. They worked alone or gathered in colleges and cabals, and if they engaged in battle, it was in defense of their communities. Although scholarly psions still outnumber adventurers, a growing number choose the explorer's life, braving the hazards of the wild alongside members of other heroic classes.

Some adventuring psions seek to counter the growing aberrant threat, or to push back against the more general darkness that threatens to overwhelm the scattered motes of civilization. Others hold the purely personal goals of fortune, glory, and power. Still others adventure as scholars, taking to the field in order to test and research their theories regarding the origin, nature, and purpose of psionics.

Psions get along well with other studious characters, including wizards, clerics, warlocks, and bards. Indeed, though a small number of wizard schools and psionics colleges still view one another as rivals, many work together, pooling their substantial knowledge for the benefit of both.

The most academic of psions sometimes take a less than reverential view of other psionic characters. In the eyes of such elitists, the members of the other psionic classes are mere dabblers in psionic power, forever squandering their true potential. Adventuring psions see things differently. Although only monks share a dedication and a focus with which psions can easily identify, ardents and battleminds are equally well respected for their results. Some psions even maintain a secret envy of battlemind and ardent characters, recognizing that their emotional and instinctive approaches to psionics represent aspects of that power outside a psion's control.

The shaper psion joins the psion build options presented in Player's Handbook 3. This section also includes a new discipline focus geared toward shaper characters.

Shaper Psion

Psionic energy is a boundless sea of potential, limited only by the imagination. Objects that exist nowhere but in your mind can be made real with enough creativity and focus—whether born of fanciful dreams or mind-blasting nightmares.

You see the world as a canvas awaiting your mental brush, ready to be painted with the beauty and the terror of the mind. These creations live only as long as you bend your mind to keeping them real. The world is your canvas, and you are the artist of reality itself.

New Class Feature

When you choose your Discipline Focus, you can choose Shaper Focus instead of another option, such as the ones in Player's Handbook 3.

Shaper Focus: You gain the powers shaped consciousness and minor creation.

Shaped Consciousness Psion Feature

You shape a fragment of your consciousness, bringing it into existence to extend your scope on the battlefield.

Encounter ✦ Conjuration, Psionic
Minor Action Close burst 10

Effect: You conjure a fragment of your consciousness in an unoccupied square in the burst. The fragment lasts until the end of the encounter or until you dismiss it as a minor action. The fragment occupies its square, and you and your allies can move through it. When you take a move action, you can also move your fragment a number of squares equal to your speed. You can see, hear, and use psion powers as if you were in your fragment's space.

Your fragment can be attacked. If it takes any damage, it disappears. It is immune to your attacks.

Minor Creation Psion Feature

You create something from nothing.

Encounter ✦ Conjuration, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 5

Effect: You conjure a nonliving, nonmagical object that appears within range, either in an unoccupied square, in your hand, or in an ally's hand. The object lasts until the end of the encounter or until you dismiss it as a free action. The object you conjure is a single weapon or an item listed under "Adventuring Gear," page 222 of the Player's Handbook. At the Dungeon Master's discretion, you can create some other nonmagical object no larger than one that a Medium creature can carry.

RALPH BEISNER

Suggested Options

The world is yours to shape as you desire. You channel the latent psionic energy in your environment, molding it to serve your needs. You shape psionic power to unleash lethal attacks or conjure useful objects from your own mind. With the right focus and power, you can even create creatures that do your bidding.

Summoned creatures are the foundation of your shaper psion tactics. Such creatures are created only through your daily disciplines. Call on them sparingly, and choose at-will and encounter disciplines that support this theme.

As it does for all psions, Intelligence powers your attacks, so it should be your highest ability score. Charisma is an important secondary ability for a shaper, since it helps you control or empower your creations. Since summoned creatures depend on your hit points, you should also keep your Constitution high. Conjuration and summoning powers allow you to make the most of your secondary role as leader.

Suggested Class Feature: Shaper Focus*

Suggested Feat: Bulwarked Construction*

Suggested Skills: Arcana, Bluff, Dungeoneering, Perception

Suggested At-Will Powers: *force shard, *static mote

Suggested Daily Power: *summon thought servant

*New option presented in this book.

NEW POWERS

The powers presented in this section offer new options for psion characters. Many of these new powers are particularly useful for shapers, though psions of any build can benefit from them.

Level 1 At-Will Disciplines

Dimensional Scramble — Psion Attack 1

Your attack causes space to jumble and fragment, scattering creatures into different positions.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Teleportation
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier damage, and you teleport the target to a square adjacent to the burst.
Augment 1
Target: Each enemy in burst
Augment 2
Target: Each enemy in burst
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier damage, and you teleport the target to another square in or adjacent to the burst.

Force Shard — Psion Attack 1

A shard of pure force appears in the air at your mental command, creating a hazard for your foes.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Conjuration, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 5
Effect: You conjure a force shard in an unoccupied square within range. The shard lasts until the end of your next turn or until expended. Any enemy that enters the shard's space or ends its turn there takes force damage equal to your Charisma modifier. In addition, you can make the following attack using the shard.
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage.
Effect: The force shard is expended.
Augment 1
Effect: You conjure a force shard as above, and you can also move the force shard 5 squares as a move action.
Augment 2
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage.

Mind Lock — Psion Attack 1

Your attack locks down an enemy's ability to focus, hindering its movement.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and the target also cannot shift until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst

Static Mote — Psion Attack 1

A mote of roiling lightning hinders your foes before exploding in a devastating burst.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Conjuration, Implement, Lightning, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Effect: You conjure a static mote in an unoccupied square within range. The mote lasts until the start of your next turn. Any creature that starts its turn adjacent to the mote is slowed until the end of its turn. After the mote ends, you make the following attack.
No Action (Special) Close burst 3 centered on the square the mote occupied
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier lightning damage.
Special: You can take this free action only as the first action of your turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and one target is pulled 1 square toward the center of the burst.
Augment 2
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier lightning damage.

Level 1 Daily Disciplines

Living Missile — Psion Attack 1

You bind an enemy with a thought, then hurl it into another foe.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: The target is immobilized (save ends).
Miss: The target is slowed (save ends).
Effect: While the target is immobilized or slowed by this power, you can make the following secondary attack.
Minor Action (1/round) Ranged 10
Effect: Before the secondary attack, you slide the primary target 10 squares.
Secondary Target: One creature adjacent to the primary target at any point during the slide
Secondary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the secondary target falls prone. The primary target takes half damage and falls prone.
Miss: Half damage, and the primary target falls prone.

Psychic Dissolution — Psion Attack 1

A psychic wind scours your foe, shredding it to a dark haze.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and ongoing 5 damage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and ongoing 5 damage (save ends).
Effect: When the target takes ongoing damage from this power, each square adjacent to the target becomes lightly obscured until the end of your next turn.

Summon Thought Servant — Psion Attack 1

The power of your mind summons an obedient servant that can fight with you or come to an ally's aid.

Daily ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon a Small thought servant in an unoccupied square within range. The servant has speed 8. You can give the servant the following special commands.
Standard Action: Melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. AC; 1d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.
Opportunity Attack: Melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. AC; 1d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.
Augment 1
Effect: As above, and you can give the thought servant the following additional command.
Opportunity Action: Triggered when a dying ally adjacent to the servant starts its turn; targets the triggering ally; the servant makes a Heal check to stabilize the target or to allow the target to use his or her second wind.

Telepathic Projection — Psion Attack 1

You force your own will into an enemy's mind, manipulating the foe like a puppet under your control.

Daily ✦ Charm, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is subject to your telepathic projection (save ends). While the target is affected by your telepathic projection, when you start your turn, the target makes a melee basic attack as a free action against a target you choose.
Miss: Half damage, and the target makes a melee basic attack against a random creature. If this attack targets one of your allies, the target takes a -2 penalty to the attack roll.

Level 2 Utility Disciplines

Borrow Training — Psion Utility 2

You reach into an ally's mind to borrow the knowledge you need.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Ranged 10
Target: One ally
Effect: Choose one skill in which the target is trained and you are not. Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +5 power bonus to skill checks with the chosen skill.

Buoyancy of Thought — Psion Utility 2

Your mind catches you whenever you might fall.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: You take falling damage or an attack knocks you prone
Effect: You reduce any falling damage by a number of points equal to your level, and you are not knocked prone by the triggering attack or the triggering fall.

Dimensional Stowaway — Psion Utility 2

You establish a psychic connection to an ally, bringing it with you when you teleport.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Free Action Melee 1
Trigger: You teleport or a creature teleports you
Target: One ally adjacent to you before the teleport
Effect: You teleport the target to a square adjacent to your destination.

Mind Shroud — Psion Utility 2

You slow your movement to shroud yourself in a shimmering haze, clouding all creatures' minds against your presence.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you have superior cover and you are slowed.

Level 3 At-Will Disciplines

Crushing Turmoil — Psion Attack 3

Your attack crushes your enemy's confidence and resolve, hindering its ability to shrug off debilitating effects.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to the next saving throw it makes before the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and the target also takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls and saving throws until the end of your next turn.

Fuse Form — Psion Attack 3

The energy of your mind scours your foe to hinder its movement, and it can bind multiple enemies together with unbreakable psychic bonds.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and if the target moves more than 2 squares on its next turn, it takes 5 damage.
Augment 1 (Fear)
Hit: As above, and enemies take a -2 penalty to attack rolls while adjacent to the target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and if the primary target moves more than 2 squares on its next turn, it takes 5 damage. You make a secondary attack that is an area burst 1 centered on the primary target.
Secondary Target: Each enemy in burst
Secondary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 5 + Intelligence modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the secondary target cannot move to a square that is not adjacent to the primary target, and the primary target cannot move to a square that is not adjacent to one or more secondary targets.

Kinetic Trip — Psion Attack 3

Your attack constrains your enemy, bowling it over unless it stands its ground.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage. On its next turn, if the target moves more than half its speed, it falls prone.
Augment 1
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage. On its next turn, if the target makes a move other than a shift, it falls prone.
Augment 2
Target: One, two, or three creatures

Psychic Anomaly — Psion Attack 3

You conjure a shimmering anomaly of pure psionic energy, which disrupts the minds of nearby foes.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Conjuration, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Effect: You conjure a psychic anomaly in an unoccupied square within range. The anomaly lasts until the end of your next turn. You can make the following attack using the anomaly.
Opportunity Action Melee 1
Trigger: An enemy starts its turn in a square adjacent to the anomaly
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and you slide the target 3 squares to a square adjacent to the anomaly.
Augment 1
Effect: As above, and your allies can flank with the psychic anomaly.
Augment 2
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Level 5 Daily Disciplines

Force Spheres — Psion Attack 5

Your power focuses into protective spheres of shimmering force that can be hurled at your enemies with a thought.

Daily ✦ Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Personal
Effect: You set four force spheres spinning around you in your space until the end of the encounter or until you expend them. While you have at least one force sphere, you gain a +2 bonus to all defenses, and you can make the following attack.
Minor Action (1/round) Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and the target falls prone.
Effect: You expend one force sphere.

Inflicted Mindscape — Psion Attack 5

As you reach into your enemies' minds, the ground beneath their feet becomes a clutching mire of madness.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy that ends its turn within the zone is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists.

Summon Ebony Stinger — Psion Attack 5

Wisps of black shadow coalesce to form a, monstrous scorpion under your control.

Daily ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Poison, Psionic, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon a Medium ebony stinger in an unoccupied square within range. The stinger has speed 7 and climb 3. The stinger has a +4 bonus to AC and a +2 bonus to Reflex. You can give the stinger the following special commands.
Standard Action: Melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. Reflex; 1d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the stinger grabs the target.
Opportunity Attack: Melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. Reflex; 1d6 + Intelligence modifier damage, and ongoing 5 poison damage (save ends).
Augment 1
Effect: As above, and any creature grabbed by the ebony stinger takes a -4 penalty to checks to escape the stinger's grab.

Thunderous Exit — Psion Attack 5

A blast of thunder rocks your enemies, allowing you to escape in its booming wake.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Teleportation, Thunder
Standard Action Close burst 3
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier thunder damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You teleport 5 squares.

Level 6 Utility Disciplines

Explosive Force — Psion Utility 6

Your force attack releases a pulse of energy that leaves nearby creatures vulnerable to follow-up attacks.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You hit an enemy within 10 squares of you with an unaugmented psion at-will force attack power
Target: Each creature adjacent to the enemy you hit
Effect: The target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.

Intellect Prism — Psion Utility 6

Motes of light swirl to form a crystalline prism in the air, sharpening your senses and extending your presence on the battlefield.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Psionic
Minor Action Ranged 5
Effect: You conjure an intellect prism in an unoccupied square within range. The prism lasts until the end of the encounter or until you dismiss it as a minor action. You can use your attack powers as if you were in the prism's space. As a move action, you can move the prism a number of squares equal to your Intelligence modifier. While the prism is adjacent to you, you gain a +3 bonus to Perception checks.

The prism can be targeted by melee and ranged attacks. It has a +4 bonus to all defenses and hit points equal to your healing surge value. If the prism drops to 0 hit points, it is destroyed and you are dazed until the end of your next turn.

Mental Void — Psion Utility 6

When an enemy strikes at your mind, the attack only boosts your resilience.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: An enemy attack targets your Will
Effect: You gain a +4 bonus to Will until the end of your next turn. If the triggering attack misses, the attacker grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.

Shared Recovery — Psion Utility 6

You tap into the mind of an ally, letting his or her recovery grant a temporary boost to your own vitality.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Free Action Personal
Trigger: An ally within 5 squares of you regains hit points or succeeds on a saving throw
Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to twice your Intelligence modifier.

Level 7 At-Will Disciplines

Ectoplasmic Servant — Psion Attack 7

A conjured shower of glistening slime takes humanoid shape at your command, spraying your foes with caustic acid.

At-Will ✦ Acid, Augmentable, Conjuration, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Effect: You conjure an ectoplasmic servant in an unoccupied square within range. The servant lasts until the end of your next turn or until expended. Any enemy that enters the servant's space or ends its turn there takes acid damage equal to your Charisma modifier. In addition, you can make the following attack using the servant.
Minor Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier acid damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: The ectoplasmic servant is expended.
Augment 1
Effect: You conjure an ectoplasmic servant as above, and any enemy that starts its turn in or adjacent to the servant's space is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier acid damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Ego Whip — Psion Attack 7

Your psychic attack hits like the crack of a whip, flooding your foe with feelings of crushing worthlessness.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Fear, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls and a −2 penalty to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and the target also takes a -2 penalty to saving throws until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls, all defenses, and saving throws until the end of your next turn.

Kinetic Buffer — Psion Attack 7

A burst of force protects you even as it slams into your enemies and knocks them back.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and you push the target 1 square. In addition, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.
Augment 1
Target: Each enemy in burst
Augment 2
Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in burst
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and you push the target a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier. In addition, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Matter Dissipation — Psion Attack 7

Your attack leaves an area of ghostly translucence that tears at creatures lingering within it.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that ends its turn within the zone takes damage equal to your Charisma modifier.
Augment 1
Effect: As above, but any enemy that ends its turn within the zone takes the damage.
Augment 2
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage.

Level 9 Daily Disciplines

Echoing Boom — Psion Attack 9

You unleash a burst of devastating thunder whose booming echo lets you scatter foes across the battlefield.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Thunder
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Primary Target: Each creature in burst
Primary Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier thunder damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you can make the following secondary attack.
Immediate Reaction Ranged 10
Trigger: An enemy within 10 squares of you is hit by an attack
Secondary Target: The triggering enemy
Effect: The secondary target takes 5 thunder damage, and you slide the secondary target 1 square.
Sustain Minor: The effect persists.

Inflict Pain — Psion Attack 9

Your thoughts work their way into a foe's mind like razor-sharp needles, crippling it with excruciating pain.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is slowed and takes ongoing 5 psychic damage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Malicious Lightning — Psion Attack 9

A burst of lightning lingers as four sizzling motes, each of which erupts at your command.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Implement, Lightning, Psionic
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Primary Target: Each enemy in burst
Primary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier lightning damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You conjure four lightning motes in unoccupied squares in the burst. Each mote lasts until the end of the encounter or until expended. Any creature that starts its turn in a square adjacent to a lightning mote takes lightning damage equal to your Intelligence modifier. Starting on your next turn, you can make the following attack using a lightning mote.
Minor Action (1/round) Close burst 1
Secondary Target: Each creature in burst
Secondary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier lightning damage, and the lightning mote pushes the secondary target 1 square.
Effect: The mote is expended.

Summon Phantasmal Killer — Psion Attack 9

Your foe's worst fears are manifested as a nightmarish monster that it cannot shake off.

Daily ✦ Augmentable, Illusion, Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10

Effect: You summon a Medium phantasmal killer in an unoccupied square within range. Choose one enemy adjacent to the killer to become its prey until the end of the encounter. The killer has speed 8, phasing, and gains a +4 bonus to AC and Reflex against opportunity attacks. The killer is insubstantial to all attacks from creatures other than its prey. When its prey drops to 0 hit points or at the end of the encounter, the killer disappears. You can give the killer the following special commands.

Standard Action: Melee 1; targets one creature that is the killer's prey; Intelligence vs. Will; 2d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends).

Opportunity Attack: Melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. Will; 1d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the phantasmal killer pushes the target 1 square. If the target is the killer's prey, it takes 2d6 extra damage and is not pushed.

Augment 1

Effect: As above, but you choose two enemies adjacent to the phantasmal killer as its prey. When both creatures chosen as the killer's prey drop to 0 hit points, the killer disappears.

Level 10 Utility Disciplines

Dimensional Shortcut — Psion Utility 10

Your psionic power connects two points in space, allowing you and your allies to slip from one location to the other.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Move Action Close burst 3
Target: You and each ally in burst

Effect: Choose a square within 20 squares of you. Each target can teleport to a square within 3 squares of the square you choose as a free action.

Energy Mitigation — Psion Utility 10

You summon all your mental strength to diminish the effect of a foe's attack.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: You are hit by a close or an area attack

Effect: You take half damage from the triggering attack.

Force Barricade — Psion Utility 10

A shimmering wall of force blocks attacks and movement.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Force, Psionic
Standard Action Area wall 5 within 10 squares

Effect: You conjure a solid, transparent wall of psionic force that lasts until the end of your next turn. The wall can be up to 3 squares high. The wall blocks line of effect and movement. No creature can enter a wall square, and phasing creatures cannot move through it.

The wall can be attacked, and attacks against it hit automatically. The wall has 50 hit points, and an attack on any square deals damage to the entire wall. If the wall drops to 0 hit points, the effect ends and each creature within 2 squares of the wall takes 10 force damage and falls prone.

Sustain Minor: The wall persists.

The Phrenic Planes

Many psionics scholars believe that psionic energy comes from other planes—most commonly the Far Realm or the Plane of Dreams. Such scholars identify these as the phrenic planes (or planes of pure thought), just as the Feywild, the Shadowfell, and the world are the planes of matter.

Like all knowledgeable sages, psionics scholars understand that the Plane of Dreams is born of the minds of sentient creatures in the mortal realm—a kind of fantastic counterpart to the world. Phrenic scholars, however, break with tradition by naming the Far Realm as a place not outside the cosmos but within it—a twisted reflection of the Plane of Dreams, as the Shadowfell is a dark reflection of the natural world. As denizens of a plane of madness, the aberrant creatures of the Far Realm are nightmares given physical form.

Philosophers who take this view believe that just as there exist two echo planes of the mortal world in the form of the Shadowfell and the Feywild, there must be two echo planes of the Plane of Dreams. Thus, if the Far Realm represents madness and uncontrolled emotion distilled to its purest and most exaggerated form, there must be another source of more orderly thought in contrast to that madness. This would be a realm of pure reason—of intellect and logic and understanding utterly unmarred by the confusion of emotions. It is from this realm that the gifts of reason and judgment come, mixing with the influence of the Far Realm in the Plane of Dreams, and in turn producing the sentient mind as it is known in the mortal world.

A small number of psions and scholars even claim to have communed with creatures from this plane of perfect reason. Because such creatures are entities of pure thought, according to these claims, the mortal mind is incapable of comprehending or observing their true form. As a result, these alien entities are said to interact with mortals in the form of hovering crystals of perfect geometric shapes (cubes, tetrahedrons, spheres, and so forth). Obscure legends speak of an order of psions dedicated to conjuring creatures of pure reason within construct bodies. These hybrids were said to appear as clockwork geometric figures of bizarre countenance—pure logic and order given physical form.

Trace Teleport — Psion Utility 10

You teleport by stealing the residual traces of another creature's power.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Teleportation
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: A creature within 10 squares of you teleports
Effect: You teleport the same number of squares as the triggering creature.

Level 13 At-Will Disciplines

Brilliant Thought — Psion Attack 13

The power of your mind flares brilliant white, blasting an enemy and clouding its vision.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Radiant
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier radiant damage. Until the end of your next turn, creatures more than 2 squares away from the target have concealment against the target.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, but creatures also have concealment against any enemy adjacent to the target.
Augment 4
Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude. Make the attack twice.
Hit: 1d12 + Intelligence modifier radiant damage. If both attacks hit, the target is also blinded until the end of your next turn.

Inexplicable Attraction — Psion Attack 13

Against its will, an enemy is drawn close to another creature in the aftermath of your attack.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and you slide the target 3 squares to a square adjacent to any creature.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, but you slide the target and one creature adjacent to the target.
Augment 4
Target: One or two creatures
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and you slide the target 5 squares to a square adjacent to any creature. If the target doesn't end its next turn adjacent to that creature, it takes damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Kinetic Wave — Psion Attack 13

A wave of psionic force pulses out to drive nearby creatures away from you.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and you push the target 4 squares.
Augment 1 (Zone)
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the start of your next turn. The zone is difficult terrain.
Augment 4 (Zone)
Close blast 5
Hit: 3d6 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and you push the target a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the start of your next turn. The zone is difficult terrain, and any creature that ends its turn within the zone takes damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Faith and Reason, Mind and Soul

The dividing line between the mind and the soul is a source of vigorous debate within different cabals, colleges, and psionics orders. Among most folk, the soul is thought of as the source of what makes a person an individual. Although certain aspects of personality are modified by memory and experience, according to this belief, the soul stands at every sentient creature's core. The essential nature of all individuals—good or evil, kind or cruel—resides in the spark of divinity that grants them life. When a mortal dies, the soul retains this essence as it travels to the domain of the Raven Queen, and on to whatever lies beyond.

An opposing belief maintains that the soul is the energy that powers life, and that all personality comes from the mind—each person's unique combination of thoughts, memories, and emotions. Psionics users who adhere to this philosophy believe that the soul that remains after death is nothing but divine energy, lacking any part of a creature's personality or memories. For them, ghosts and other incorporeal undead consist of not only the soul, but of fragments of the mind as well.

A radical few psionics users (most of whom are dedicated academic psions) deny the existence of the soul entirely. They maintain that the mind is the center of mortality and an entity unto itself, pointing to phenomena such as the Speak with Dead ritual as proof that memory and sensation endure within a body even after the so-called spirit has supposedly fled. Such psionics users consider the traditional beliefs of the mortal races to be superstitious nonsense—the fears of folk incapable of understanding the mind. Some even blame the gods themselves for such beliefs, accusing the deities of inventing the mythology of souls as a means of keeping mortals beholden to them.

Void Shard — Psion Attack 13

A shard of nothingness holds fast any creature that slips too close.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Conjuration, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Effect: You conjure a void shard in an unoccupied square within range. The shard lasts until the start of your next turn. Any creature that ends its turn in or adjacent to the void shard's space is immobilized until the end of its next turn. After the shard ends, you make the following attack.
No Action (Special) Close burst 3 centered on the square the shard occupied
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and the target falls prone.
Special: You can take this free action only as the first action of your turn.
Augment 1
Effect: As above, and when the void shard is conjured, it makes the following attack.
Free Action Close burst 3
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: The void shard pulls the target 3 squares.
Augment 4
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and the target is both dazed and slowed until the end of your next turn.

Level 15 Daily Disciplines

Forced Serenity — Psion Attack 15

Your attack imbues your foe with lingering psychic energy, crippling it with pain at any sign of aggression.

Daily ✦ Charm, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target takes 10 psychic damage whenever it hits with an attack (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the target takes 5 psychic damage whenever it hits with an attack (save ends).

Living Barrage — Psion Attack 15

You ensnare your enemies with a thought, then hurl them about like living weapons.

Daily ✦ Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Primary Target: Each enemy in burst
Primary Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and the primary target is immobilized (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and the primary target is slowed (save ends).
Effect: While at least one primary target is immobilized by this power, you can make the following secondary attack.
Minor Action (1/round) Ranged 10
Secondary Target: One or two primary targets immobilized or slowed by the attack
Effect: You slide the secondary target 5 squares and make the following tertiary attack against one creature adjacent to the secondary target during the shift. You cannot attack the same tertiary target more than once per round with this power.
Tertiary Target: One creature
Tertiary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the secondary target and tertiary target fall prone. The secondary target takes 5 damage.

Summon Thought Warrior — Psion Attack 15

An idealized warrior formed of thought energy fights alongside you.

Daily ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon a Medium thought warrior in an unoccupied square within range. The warrior has speed 7. It has a +4 bonus to AC and a +2 bonus to Reflex. The thought warrior lasts until the end of the encounter. You can give the warrior the following special commands.
Standard Action: Before the attack, the warrior shifts 1 square; melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence + 2 vs. AC; 1d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, the target is slowed until the end of your next turn, and the warrior marks the target until the end of your next turn.
Immediate Interrupt: Triggered when a target marked by the warrior moves or shifts; melee 1; targets the triggering creature; Intelligence + 2 vs. AC; 1d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the warrior shifts 1 square.
Opportunity Attack: Melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence + 2 vs. AC; 1d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.
Augment 1
Effect: As above, and the warrior also has a +2 power bonus to opportunity attack rolls.
Standard Action: As above, and the warrior marks the target (save ends).

Thought of Unmaking — Psion Attack 15

You reach deep into an enemy's mind and past to undo its existence.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: Ongoing 25 damage (save ends). If the target is bloodied or becomes bloodied while taking this ongoing damage, the ongoing damage increases by 10.
Aftereffect: The target is dazed until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Ongoing 15 damage (save ends).

Level 16 Utility Disciplines

Dream Traveler — Psion Utility 16

By taking on the form of a creature of dreams, you bypass the barriers of the material world.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the form of the dream traveler until the end of the encounter or until you resume your normal form as a minor action. While you are in this form, you are insubstantial and phasing, you gain a +5 power bonus to Stealth checks, and you are weakened.

Kinetic Grasp — Psion Utility 16

You quickly create a psychic connection to another creature that allows it to hold fast where it stands.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 10
Trigger: A creature within 10 squares of you is pulled, pushed, slid, or knocked prone
Target: The triggering creature
Effect: The target is unaffected by the forced movement or is not knocked prone.

Mind Blank — Psion Utility 16

Swirling psychic energy surrounds you and your allies, wiping your presence from your enemies' minds.

Daily ✦ Illusion, Psionic, Zone
Standard Action Close burst 3
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone moves with you, remaining centered on you. While within the zone, you and your allies are invisible to enemies within the zone.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists.

Subjective Reality — Psion Utility 16

You reshape the reality around you as you move freely through it.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You ignore the effects of difficult terrain, challenging terrain, hindering terrain, obscured terrain, and cover until the end of your next turn.

Level 17 At-Will Disciplines

Cerulean Cage — Psion Attack 17

Ghostly shards of glowing blue surround your foe, threatening it if it attempts to move.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier force damage. If the target leaves its space before the end of your next turn, it takes force damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Augment 1
Target: One or two creatures adjacent to one of your allies in range
Augment 4 (Zone)
Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that leaves the zone takes force damage equal to your Intelligence modifier.

Manifested Horror — Psion Attack 17

Your enemy looks on you and sees its own worst nightmare, compelling it to flee or be crippled by fear.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Fear, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage. If the target ends its next turn within 3 squares of you, it takes psychic damage equal to your Intelligence modifier.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and choose one ally. The target takes the psychic damage if it ends its next turn within 3 squares of you or that ally.
Augment 4
Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in burst
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage. If the target ends its next turn within 3 squares of you, it takes psychic damage equal to 5 + your Intelligence modifier and you slide the target 3 squares.

Telekinetic Haze — Psion Attack 17

A haze of psionic energy shrouds you from your enemies' sight.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier damage.
Effect: You have concealment until the start of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and you slide the target 1 square.
Augment 4
Hit: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier damage, and you are invisible to the target until the end of your next turn.

Thought Guardian — Psion Attack 17

You scour your enemies' thoughts to hinder their tactics, and can conjure a guardian in their midst to threaten them.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target takes a −4 penalty to attack rolls against you until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1
Hit: As above, and whenever the target attacks you before the end of your next turn, it takes psychic damage equal to your Charisma modifier.
Augment 4 (Conjuration)
Effect: You conjure a thought guardian in an unoccupied square in the burst. The guardian lasts until the end of your next turn. You can make the following secondary attack using the guardian.
Opportunity Action Melee 3
Trigger: Any creature within 3 squares of the guardian attacks you or willingly moves away from the guardian
Secondary Target: The triggering creature
Secondary Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 5 + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Level 19 Daily Disciplines

Cerebral Phantasm — Psion Attack 19

A horrid apparition fills your enemy's mind, letting you follow up on your allies' attacks against that foe with a psychic barrage.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 4d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.
Effect: The target is affected by your cerebral phantasm (save ends). While the target is affected by the phantasm, you can make the following secondary attack against the target.
Immediate Reaction Ranged 10
Trigger: The target takes damage from an ally's attack while within 10 squares of you
Secondary Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and each enemy adjacent to the target takes 5 psychic damage. You then slide the target a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Flowing Terrain — Psion Attack 19

The surface beneath your feet flows at your command, crashing into your foes like a lethal wave.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each enemy in blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and you knock the target prone. The target is then restrained (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and you push the target to the nearest unoccupied square outside the blast.

Force Cube — Psion Attack 19

You trap your foe within six impenetrable walls, then hurl this force cube across the battlefield as a weapon.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier force damage.
Effect: You conjure a cube of force that surrounds and constrains the primary target in its space until the end of your next turn. The primary target and any other creature in its space cannot leave that space by any means, including teleportation or phasing. Other creatures cannot enter the primary target's space. The cube blocks line of effect.
The cube can be attacked, and attacks against it hit automatically. The cube has 50 hit points. If the cube drops to 0 hit points, it explodes and is destroyed, dealing 15 force damage to any creature inside or adjacent to the cube. Once before the cube ends, you can make the following secondary attack using the cube.
Standard Action Ranged 5
Requirement: The cube must be within 10 squares of you.
Effect: You slide the cube and all creatures trapped in the cube 5 squares. Any creature in the cube takes 5 damage and falls prone. The cube takes 10 damage.
Secondary Target: Each creature adjacent to the cube at the end of the slide
Secondary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and the target falls prone.

Evils Most Ancient

As recounted in the oldest legends, the Far Realm first breached the cosmos in the dark days of the Dawn War. Pelor, Ioun, and a god whose name is now lost were responsible for first finding, then sundering, the Living Gate that once barred the Far Realm from the Astral Sea. Since that time, the influence of the Far Realm has steadily increased, rising and falling in long cycles that have begun to peak again during the current age.

The more that is known of the Far Realm's relationship to the world, the more complex its ancient history becomes. Adventurers who have delved deep into the Underdark and explored the shores of its black and sunless seas claim to have found evidence that the aboleths were established in that realm since long before the Dawn War's end. A small number of radical sages maintain that these horrors might actually have dwelled within the world from the moment of creation.

Such scholars question the widely held view that the world was shaped from raw nothingness, speculating that something must already have existed within the unformed stuff that was pushed aside to make room for the creations of the gods and primordials. For these scholars, the Far Realm's pressure on the mortal world might not be a case of an alien madness seeking to invade and destroy a new realm. Rather, the creatures of the Far Realm might be seeking to take their old world back.

Summon Mind Weirds — Psion Attack 19

You call forth shadowy creatures that attack your foes with their own worst fears.

Daily ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10

Effect: You summon three Medium mind weirds in unoccupied squares within range. Choose one enemy adjacent to each weird to become the weird's prey until the end of the encounter. Each weird must have a different creature as its prey. A weird has speed 8 and phasing, and is insubstantial to creatures other than its prey. Until all the weirds summoned by this power are reduced to 0 hit points, you do not lose the healing surge lost when a creature you summon drops to 0 hit points. When a weird's prey drops to 0 hit points, the weird disappears. When you use a standard action or a minor action to issue a command to a weird, all summoned weirds can take that action. You can give a weird the following special commands.

Standard Action: Melee 1; targets the weird's prey; Intelligence vs. Will; 3d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends).

Opportunity Attack: Melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. Will; 1d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the weird pushes the target 1 square. If the target is the weird's prey, it takes 2d6 extra damage and is not pushed.

Augment 1 (Teleportation)

Effect: As above, and you can teleport any two weirds, swapping their positions, as a minor action. In addition, you can teleport yourself and one weird as a move action, swapping positions.

Level 22 Utility Disciplines

Forceful Repositioning — Psion Utility 22

Shimmering bands of force surround you and your allies, moving you into better positions on the battlefield.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Move Action Close burst 5
Target: You and each ally in burst

Effect: You slide the target a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Interdicting Thoughts — Psion Utility 22

The power of your mind forms a shield protecting you and your allies from attack, even as it slows your foes.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Zone
Minor Action Close burst 3

Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone moves with you, remaining centered on you. While within the zone, allies gain a +3 power bonus to all defenses. The zone is difficult terrain for your enemies.

Summon Fleeting Thoughts — Psion Utility 22

Your quick thinking summons birdlike guardians that let you and your allies soar across the battlefield.

Daily ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Summoning
Minor Action Close burst 1

Effect: You summon three Tiny fleeting thoughts in unoccupied squares in the burst. Each thought has speed 2 and fly 8 (hover). Until all the thoughts summoned by this power are reduced to 0 hit points, you do not lose the healing surge lost when a creature you summon drops to 0 hit points. When you use a minor action to issue a command to a thought, all thoughts can take that action. You can give a thought the following special commands.

Move Action: Melee 1; targets you or one ally; the thought and the target both fly 4 squares to adjacent squares.

Immediate Interrupt: Triggered when an ally adjacent to the fleeting thought is hit by a melee or a ranged attack; the attack hits the fleeting thought instead.

Augment 1

Effect: When a fleeting thought drops to 0 hit points, one ally within 2 squares of the thought can fly 4 squares as a free action.

The Fey Perspective

Among the fey that dwell in the mortal world, psionics is most often treated as just another form of spellcasting. The degree to which psionic power overlaps with traditional fey abilities such as charms and illusions is seen as simple happenstance. Elves, eladrin, and other worldly creatures that have connections to the Feywild are no more or less likely to take up the psionic arts than creatures of any other race.

Creatures that dwell deep in the Feywild, however, often view psionics with a combination of resentment and suspicion. Although they have no objection to mortals gaining mastery of fey magic by way of warlock pacts and similar traditions, many fey see the growth of psionics in the world as an attempt by the nonfey races to steal their power.

Some mortal scholars view the overlap from the other direction. Psionic energy is said by some to have existed in potential in the mortal realm since the beginning of time, even though it did not fully manifest until the threat of the Far Realm provided the necessary catalyst. Such sages believe that planar echoes of that potential were what first granted the creatures of the Feywild their abilities. Since all elements of the natural world are exaggerated in the Feywild, the fey were able to tap into this potential power earlier and more innately than were the mortal races.

Some fey take severe umbrage at the notion that their innate inabilities were somehow handed down from the mortal world. Such creatures have been known to attack scholars and psionic characters who espouse this belief too vocally.

Level 23 At-Will Disciplines

Mind Trap — Psion Attack 23

You ensnare your foe's mind and instincts, hindering its ability to react in combat.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage. If the target makes an opportunity attack or takes an immediate action before the end of your next turn, it takes psychic damage equal to your Charisma modifier.
Augment 2
Target: One or two creatures
Hit: As above, and until the end of your next turn, the target takes a -4 penalty to attack rolls whenever it makes an attack not on its turn.
Augment 6
Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in burst
Hit: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage. Until the end of the target's next turn, it cannot shift, make opportunity attacks, or take immediate actions.

Mindfire Explosion — Psion Attack 23

An explosion of psionic fire scours your enemies and shrouds their sight.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Fire, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and creatures more than 5 squares away from the target are invisible to it until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and creatures more than 3 squares away from the target are invisible to it until the end of your next turn.
Augment 6
Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and the target is blinded until the end of your next turn.

Phantom Burden — Psion Attack 23

You crush your enemies under the weight of their own uncertainty, hindering their movement.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2 (Zone)
Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone is difficult terrain for your enemies.
Augment 6
Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Hit: 4d6 + Intelligence modifier force damage. If the target moves more than 1 square on its next turn, it falls prone at the end of the move and takes 5 damage.

Prismatic Swarms — Psion Attack 23

You leave your foe surrounded by swirling motes of psionic energy that hinder its attacks.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.
Augment 2
Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Hit: As above, and you also slide the target 1 square.
Augment 6
Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and you slide the target 3 squares or knock it prone. The target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Level 25 Daily Disciplines

Far Realm's Embrace — Psion Attack 25

You tear aside the veil to the Far Realm, calling forth phantasmal tentacles that attack and ensnare all creatures in their reach.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 3 within 10 squares
Primary Target: Each creature in burst
Primary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the primary target is restrained and takes ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends both).
Miss: Half damage, and the primary target is slowed and takes ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends both).
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Until the zone ends, you can make the following secondary attack using the zone.
Opportunity Action Melee 1
Trigger: A creature starts its turn in a square adjacent to or within the zone
Secondary Target: The triggering creature
Secondary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 10 + Intelligence modifier damage, the zone pulls the secondary target 1 square toward the zone's origin, and the secondary target is immobilized (save ends).
Sustain Minor: You take 5 psychic damage and the zone persists.

Recall Agony — Psion Attack 25

An enemy's suffering allows you to twist its mind to an even greater state of agony.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Immediate Reaction Ranged 10
Trigger: An enemy within 10 squares of you takes damage from an attack
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 6d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage. If this attack deals less damage than the triggering attack, the target takes ongoing psychic damage equal to the difference (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.

Summon Emerald Terror — Psion Attack 25

Your foes' greatest fears come to life as a hulking emerald terror, its glistening skin reflecting the nightmares of its victims.

Daily ✦ Augmentable, Fear, Implement, Psionic, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon a Large emerald terror in unoccupied squares within range. The terror has speed 8. It has a +4 bonus to AC and Fortitude. Enemies take a -2 penalty to attack rolls while adjacent to the terror. You can give the terror the following special commands.
Standard Action: Melee 2; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. Reflex; 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the terror slides the target 4 squares to a square adjacent to the terror.
Standard Action: Close burst 2; targets each enemy in burst; Intelligence vs. Reflex; 1d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the terror pushes the target 3 squares and knocks it prone.
Opportunity Attack: Melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. AC; 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the terror slides the target 4 squares to a square adjacent to the terror.
Augment 2
Effect: As above, and the terror also has a +2 power bonus to damage rolls. In addition, any creature the terror hits with a melee attack takes a -2 penalty to its next saving throw made before the end of its next turn.

Thought Hammer — Psion Attack 25

Your thoughts become a wave of force that hammers foes to the ground.

Daily ✦ Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One, two, or three creatures
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d12 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and you knock the target prone.
Miss: Half damage.

Level 27 At-Will Disciplines

Decerebrate — Psion Attack 27

Your attack burns out your enemy's mind and can leave it reeling in pain.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.
Special: You can use this power unaugmented as a ranged basic attack.
Augment 2
Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: One creature in burst
Hit: 1d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target cannot take move actions on its next turn.
Augment 6
Target: One, two, or three creatures
Hit: 3d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Hail of Crystals — Psion Attack 27

Your psionic power manifests as a cloud of crystal shards, obscuring the senses and slashing at creatures that move within it.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone is lightly obscured. Any creature that enters or moves within the zone on its turn without shifting takes damage equal to your Charisma modifier. When the zone ends, each creature within the zone takes 5 damage.
Augment 2
Effect: As above, and you can move the zone a number of squares equal to your Charisma modifier as a move action.
Augment 6
Effect: As above, and you can move the zone a number of squares equal to your Intelligence modifier as a move action. When the zone ends, each creature within the zone takes 15 damage.

Kinetic Detonation — Psion Attack 27

A pulse of force explodes in the midst of combat, scattering victims in all directions.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Force, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: Intelligence modifier force damage, and you push the target 2 squares from the center of the burst.
Augment 2
Hit: 1d10 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and you push the target 2 squares from the center of the burst.
Augment 6
Area burst 3 within 10 squares
Hit: 2d12 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and you push the target a number of squares from the center of the burst equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Reality Meltdown — Psion Attack 27

A shimmering orb of molten psionic essence sears foes that linger too close.

At-Will ✦ Augmentable, Conjuration, Fire, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Effect: You conjure a molten orb in an unoccupied square within range. The orb lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that enters the orb's space or starts its turn there takes fire damage equal to your Intelligence modifier. In addition, you can make the following attack using the orb.
Opportunity Action Melee 3
Trigger: An enemy starts its turn within 3 squares of the molten orb
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: Intelligence modifier fire damage, and you move the orb 3 squares to a square adjacent to the target.
Augment 2
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and you move the orb 3 squares to a square adjacent to the target. If the target doesn't end its next turn at least 3 squares away from the orb, the target takes 5 fire damage.
Augment 6
Trigger: An enemy starts its turn within 5 squares of the molten orb
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and you move the orb 5 squares to a square adjacent to the target.

Level 29 Daily Disciplines

Consuming Psychosis — Psion Attack 29

A burst of psychic energy inflicts a pain so potent that your foes lash out blindly in their madness.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage, and ongoing 5 psychic damage (save ends).
Effect: When the target takes ongoing psychic damage from this attack, it makes a melee basic attack against a random creature as a free action. If it cannot make a melee attack against any creature, it targets itself with a melee basic attack.

Hurl into Heaven — Psion Attack 29

You cast your enemies into the air, then drop them with lethal results.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: You lift the target 5 to 50 feet into the air, where it is restrained until the start of your next turn. At the start of your next turn, the target drops to the ground in the space it last occupied, taking 3d10 + Intelligence modifier damage and dealing 20 damage to any creature on the ground beneath it.
Miss: You lift the target 5 feet into the air, where it is restrained until the start of your next turn. At the start of your next turn, the target drops to the ground, taking 1d10 + Intelligence modifier damage and dealing 10 damage to any creature on the ground beneath it.

Ravenous Singularity — Psion Attack 29

A dark vortex appears on the battlefield at your command, hindering movement as it draws all creatures toward it.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Area burst 5 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: The target is immobilized (save ends).
Miss: The target is slowed (save ends).
Effect: You conjure a ravenous singularity in the burst's origin square. The singularity lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that ends its turn within 5 squares of the singularity is pulled 2 squares toward the singularity. Until the singularity ends, when a creature fails a saving throw against the immobilized or slowed condition imposed by this power, that creature is pulled into the singularity, takes 20 damage, and is removed from play (save ends). When the target saves, it reappears in any unoccupied space of its choice within 3 squares of the singularity.
Sustain Minor: The singularity persists, and it pulls you 1 square.

Summon Thought Champion — Psion Attack 29

You call forth an ideal champion from your allies' minds, granting it access to their powers.

Daily ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon a Large thought champion in unoccupied squares within range. The champion has speed 8. It has a +4 bonus to AC and Fortitude. You can give the champion the following special commands.
Standard Action: The thought champion uses an at-will attack power of one conscious ally you can see. It uses the ally's ability modifiers for the attack.
Opportunity Attack: Melee 1; targets one creature; Intelligence + 2 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage.
Augment 2
Effect: As above, and the champion also has a +3 power bonus to damage rolls. Its standard action special command can use at-will attack powers from any conscious or unconscious ally within 20 squares of the champion.

Alienist

"The power the Far Realm offers is worth any risk to my sanity."

Prerequisite: Psion

Some describe you as reckless. Others call you corrupted, claiming that your work puts all the world at risk. The Far Realm is a dangerous place, to be sure, filled with horrors beyond imagining. But the power to be found there is too tempting to ignore.

Alienist Path Features

Alien Perspective (11th level): You gain a +1 bonus to Will, and you gain psychic resistance equal to one-half your level.

Insane Action (11th level): At the end of any of your turns in which you spend an action point, roll a d4 to invoke one of the effects below.

| d4 | Insane Action Effect |
|---|---|
| 1 | You are dazed until the end of your next turn. |
| 2 | The last creature you attacked can teleport 5 squares as a free action. |
| 3 | If you are conscious, you teleport 5 squares. When you do, you gain a +4 bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn. |
| 4 | You gain 20 temporary hit points. |

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Alien Summoning (16th level): Creatures you summon are tainted by the Far Realm and gain a +2 bonus to all defenses and deal 5 extra psychic damage with their attacks. They grant combat advantage to enemies that are immune to fear.

BEN WOOTTEN

Alienist Disciplines

Far Realm's Gift — Alienist Attack 11

You bestow the horror of the Far Realm on your foe, transforming it into a creature of nightmare.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Polymorph, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d12 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target assumes the form of a Far Realm horror until the end of your next turn. While in this form, the target is slowed, takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls, and cannot make opportunity attacks. Any enemy that enters a square adjacent to the horror or ends its turn there takes 5 psychic damage.
Augment 2
Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in burst

Mad Certainty — Alienist Utility 12

Your vision of the Far Realm fuels your psionic power, at a price.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You regain 2 power points. Until the end of the encounter, you take a -2 penalty to all defenses.

Summon Far Realm Abomination — Alienist Attack 20

Your power tears the fabric of reality, summoning a tentacled horror from the Far Realm that lays waste to your foes.

Daily ✦ Fear, Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon a Large Far Realm abomination in unoccupied squares within range. The abomination has speed 5. Any enemy not immune to fear that starts its turn within 3 squares of the abomination takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls until the start of the enemy's next turn. You can give the abomination the following special commands.
Standard Action: Melee 2; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. Reflex; 2d10 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the abomination grabs the target. The abomination can grab up to two creatures at once.
Standard Action: Melee 2; targets a creature grabbed by the abomination; Intelligence vs. Fortitude; 5d6 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the target is knocked prone.
Instinctive Effect: If you haven't given the abomination any commands by the end of your turn, it makes the following attack: Close burst 3; targets each creature in burst; Intelligence vs. Will; 1d12 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Anathema

"Why create when destruction is so much more entertaining?"

Prerequisite: Psion

Others of your kind shape reality as a potter works clay, but creating and reforming your environment has little appeal to you. Instead, your knowledge of the underlying patterns in the structure of the objects and creatures that make up the world around you that allows you to test and sunder that structure.

The raw stuff of life and matter are yours to toy with. Your power comes at a price, however. With each bond you break, the structure of reality is weakened to some small degree. Your work is minor compared to the ravages of time and the power of gods, immortals, and the Far Realm. But all things are connected, and your power might be the catalyst that unleashes destruction on the world.

Anathema Path Features

Entropic Recovery (11th level): Whenever you spend a healing surge and regain hit points, each enemy adjacent to you takes psychic and necrotic damage equal to your Charisma modifier.

Eroding Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to make an attack, any target hit by that attack gains vulnerable necrotic and vulnerable psychic equal to 3 + your Charisma modifier (save ends both).

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Anathema Disciplines

Scattered Discorporation — Anathema Attack 11

Your foe's form is rendered incoherent and unstable, dealing pain to other creatures as you force it across the battlefield.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d12 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the target is insubstantial until the start of your next turn. In addition, you slide the target 4 squares. If you slide the target into another creature's space, that creature takes psychic damage equal to your Intelligence modifier. A creature can take this damage only once per round.
Augment 2
Hit: As above, but the attack deals 3d12 + Intelligence modifier damage and you slide the target 8 squares.

Abhorrent Devotee (16th level): While you have no power points remaining, your unaugmented psion at-will attack powers gain an additional effect when they hit an enemy. If the attack roll is an odd number, the enemy takes extra necrotic damage equal to your Charisma modifier. If the attack roll is an even number, you pull the enemy 1 square.

Magical Disruption — Anathema Utility 12

Your will to destroy means that even magic crumbles away to nothing at your command.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Minor Action Ranged 10
Target: One conjuration or zone
Attack: Intelligence + 4 vs. the Will of the target's creator
Hit: The target is destroyed. All its effects end, including those that a save can end. Until the end of your next turn, whenever the target's creator attacks, it can use only basic attacks.

Oblivion Sphere — Anathema Attack 20

A shimmering sphere of energy encloses your foe, whose ongoing agony is felt by creatures nearby.

Daily ✦ Implement, Necrotic, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: You lift the target 15 feet into the air, where it is restrained and takes ongoing 15 necrotic damage (save ends both). If the target is bloodied or becomes bloodied while under this effect, the ongoing damage increases to 30. When the target takes ongoing damage from this power, each creature or unattended object within 3 squares of the target takes the same amount of damage. When this effect ends, the target falls to the ground.
Miss: Ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends). If the target is bloodied or becomes bloodied while under this effect, the ongoing damage increases to 20. When the target takes ongoing damage from this power, each enemy within 3 squares of the target takes the same amount of damage.

MATIAS TAPIA

Firestarter

"By the power of my mind, you will burn . . ."

Prerequisite: Psion

The elemental flame and arcane fire can be devastating on the battlefield, but the power of the psionic fire you wield is more deadly by far. You can scorch your enemies or scour them from the inside out. You cloak yourself in flames to protect yourself from foes as you lash them with your fiery touch.

Firestarter Path Features

Wildfire Action (11th level): Whenever you spend an action point to take an extra action, each enemy adjacent to you takes fire damage equal to your Wisdom modifier. If you spend this action point to use a psion attack power, choose one target you hit with that attack. Each creature adjacent to that target takes fire damage equal to your Intelligence modifier.

Fear No Fire (11th level): You gain fire resistance equal to one-half your level.

Force and Flame (11th level): Whenever you use a psionic force attack power, you can choose to have the power deal fire damage instead of force damage.

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Fiery Nimbus (16th level): When you score a critical hit using a psionic attack power, each enemy within 2 squares of you takes fire damage equal to your Wisdom modifier, and you acquire a fiery nimbus until the end of the encounter. While the nimbus lasts, you gain the fiery lash power, and any creature that starts its turn adjacent to you takes fire damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.

ERIC BELISLE

Fiery Lash — Firestarter Feature

A whip of fire lashes a foe and surrounds it with a burning halo.

At-Will ✦ Fire, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee 2
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d12 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and each enemy adjacent to the target takes fire damage equal to your Intelligence modifier.
Level 21: 2d12 + Intelligence modifier fire damage.

Firestarter Disciplines

Hungry Flames — Firestarter Attack 11

Motes of living flame manifest in the midst of your foes.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Fire, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Effect: You conjure two hungry flames in unoccupied squares within range. The hungry flames last until the end of your next turn. You can make the following attack using the flames.
Opportunity Action Melee 1
Trigger: An enemy starts its turn in a square adjacent to a hungry flame
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d10 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and you move the flame 2 squares.
Augment 2
Effect: As above, except you conjure four hungry flames in unoccupied squares within range.

Fire Walk — Firestarter Utility 12

Fire follows in your footsteps, creating an inferno as you pass.

Encounter ✦ Fire, Psionic, Zone
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move your speed + 4. Each square you leave during that movement becomes a zone that lasts until the start of your next turn. Any creature that enters the zone takes 5 fire damage.

Spontaneous Combustion — Firestarter Attack 20

Your psychic spark burns a foe from the inside, then detonates.

Daily ✦ Fire, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Effect: You place a psychic spark inside the target. The spark lasts until the end of the encounter or until expended. Until the spark ends, the target has vulnerable 10 fire and you can make the following attack. If you drop to 0 hit points or fewer before the spark ends, you make this attack as an immediate interrupt.
Minor Action Ranged 10
Target: The creature with your psychic spark
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d10 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, the spark is expended, and the target takes ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: The ongoing fire damage increases by 5, and each enemy adjacent to the target takes fire damage equal to your Intelligence modifier.
Miss: The target takes fire damage equal to your Intelligence modifier.

Master Summoner

"The power of my servants is limited only by my imagination."

Prerequisite: Psion

Without form and order, all life reverts to its natural state of chaos. Without thought, there can be no life, and you prove this maxim by creating life from the power of thought. You are the master of summoning, shaping the raw possibility of your psionic power into whatever form you desire. The servants you fashion are granted a semblance of life, which they sacrifice willingly to fight on your behalf. Your creations are many and varied. Your focus allows you to bestow a consistent range of traits that mark them all as your children, and that grant unequalled usefulness on the battlefield.

Master Summoner Path Features

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Resilient Creation (11th level): When you summon a creature using a psion power, the summoned creature gains temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier.

In addition, whenever you spend a healing surge, one summoned creature you control regains hit points equal to your Intelligence modifier.

Driven Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to give a special command that allows a summoned creature to make an attack, that attack gains a power bonus to the attack roll equal to your Charisma modifier, and each enemy hit by the attack takes 5 extra damage.

Evolved Form (16th level): When you summon a creature using a psion power, you can grant the summoned creature one of the following traits.

Agile Loper: The summoned creature gains a +4 power bonus to speed.

Alabaster Wings: The summoned creature gains fly 6 (hover).

Aquatic Menace: The summoned creature gains the aquatic keyword and swim 8.

Hooked Stinger: The summoned creature's opportunity attacks deal 2d6 extra poison damage.

Unstable Corpus: When the summoned creature drops to 0 hit points, it explodes, dealing 15 damage to each creature in a burst 3.

Master Summoner Disciplines

Sustaining Harvest — Master Summoner Attack 11

Your attack hinders nearby foes as it lets you steal an enemy's life force for your own needs.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Implement, Necrotic, Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier necrotic damage, and each enemy adjacent to the target takes a −2 penalty to all defenses until the end of your next turn. In addition, you or one summoned creature you control gains temporary hit points equal to your Intelligence modifier.
Augment 2
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier necrotic damage, and each enemy adjacent to the target takes a −2 penalty to all defenses until the end of your next turn. In addition, you or one summoned creature you control gains temporary hit points equal to twice your Intelligence modifier.

Warded Summons — Master Summoner Utility 12

Your connection to a creature you've summoned allows it to turn back even the deadliest attack.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 10
Trigger: A summoned creature you control within 10 squares of you takes damage from an attack
Target: The triggering creature
Effect: The target takes no damage from the triggering attack.

Ideal Champion — Master Summoner Attack 20

You summon the ideal champion to fight at your side.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Summoning
Standard Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon a Huge ideal champion in unoccupied squares within range. The champion has speed 5 and threatening reach. It has a +2 bonus to all defenses and gains one extra trait from your Evolved Form feature. You can give the champion the following special commands.
Standard Action: Melee 3; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. AC; 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the champion pushes the target 5 squares.
Standard Action (1/encounter): Close burst 3; targets each enemy in burst; Intelligence vs. AC; 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the champion pushes the target 5 squares and knocks it prone.
Opportunity Attack: Melee 3; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. AC; 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage.

Thrallherd

"Have you met my companion? I prize him for his obedience and absolute loyalty."

Prerequisite: Psion

With the power of your mind, you compel service from another creature, subverting the subject's will in favor of your own. Whether a beast from the wild or a sentient creature beholden to you by some dark bargain or threat, your thrall lives its life as your most devoted servant—a powerful puppet of flesh and bone.

Thrallherd Path Features

Obedient Thrall (11th level): You gain the service of a thrall—a Medium natural beast or humanoid that is incapable of independent action and under your complete control. The thrall is an ally to you and your allies.

OBEDIENT THRALL STATISTICS

The thrall's statistics are based on your level and your abilities.

Speed: 5 squares

Defenses: AC 14 + level, Fortitude 13 + level, Reflex 12 + level, Will 11 + level

Hit Points: 14 + 4 per level

Initiative: The thrall acts during each of your turns.

Attacks: If the thrall makes an attack, you make the attack through the thrall. If the thrall wields a melee weapon, it uses the weapon's proficiency bonus and damage for its attack. If it does not wield a weapon, its natural attack uses either a +3 proficiency bonus and a d10 weapon damage die, or a +2 proficiency bonus and a d12 weapon damage die. You choose one option or the other when you take a short rest. The thrall's attack can benefit from the magical effect of either an implement you wield or a weapon the thrall wields, but not both.

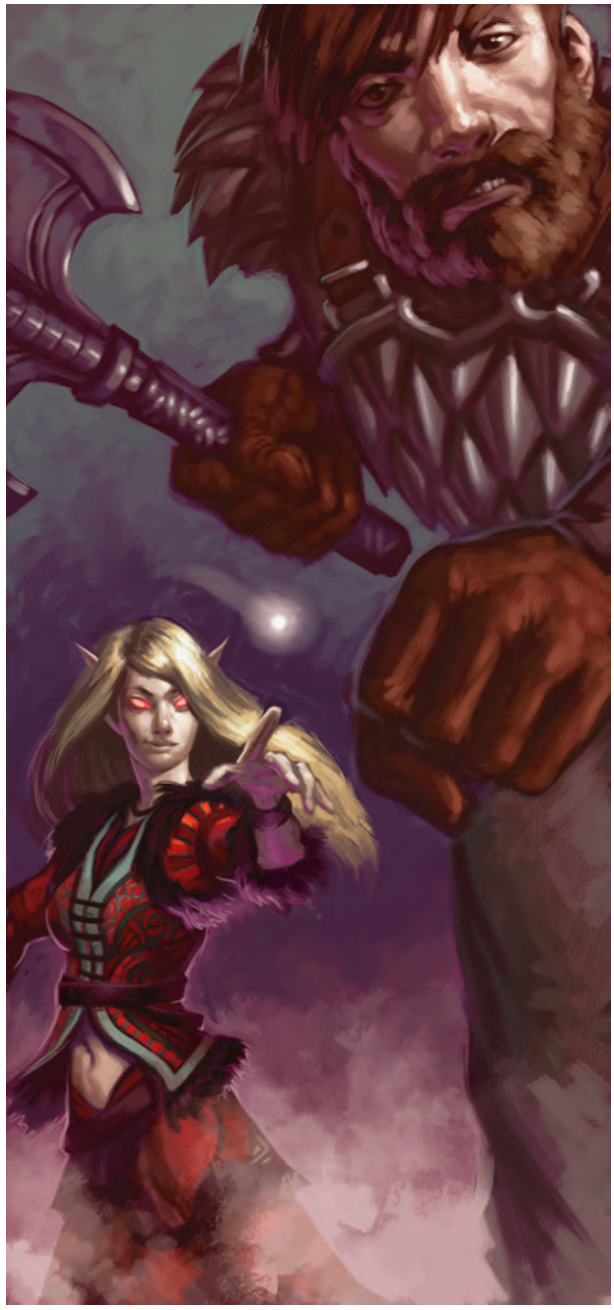
Checks: If the thrall can make a skill check or an ability check, you make the check.

Temporary Modifiers: Attacks and checks you make through the thrall do not include temporary bonuses or penalties to your statistics.

Magic Items: The thrall can employ a single magic item. If the item has any powers, you use those powers using your own actions.

When you use your second wind, your thrall regains hit points equal to your healing surge value. Your thrall regains all its hit points when you take a short rest.

If your thrall dies, you can restore it to life by using the Raise Dead ritual. The component cost is 500 gp, or 5,000 gp at epic tier.



The thrall has no actions of its own; you spend actions to command it mentally. You can command the thrall only if you have line of effect to it. When you command the thrall, the two of you share knowledge but not senses.

As a minor action, you can command the thrall to take one of the following actions, if it is physically capable of taking that action: crawl, escape, fly, open or close a door or a container, pick up or drop an item, run, stand up, shift, squeeze, or walk.

Whenever you take a move action, your thrall can crawl, escape, fly, run, stand up, shift, squeeze, or walk as a free action.

In addition, you can issue the following special commands to your thrall.

MCLEAN KENDREE

Standard Action: Melee weapon; targets one creature; Intelligence + 2 vs. AC; 1[W] + Intelligence modifier damage.

Opportunity Attack: Melee weapon; targets one creature; Intelligence vs. AC; 1[W] + Intelligence modifier damage. If the target enters a square adjacent to you in the course of provoking the opportunity attack, the thrall gains a +4 bonus to the attack roll.

Compelling Action (11th level): Whenever you spend an action point to take an extra action, your thrall can make its standard action attack as a free action.

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Building and Playing a Puppet Master

The thrallherd paragon path builds on the concept of a psion who charms and compels his or her foes, controlling their every action. As a thrallherd, you truly earn the title "mastermind," because you are the master of everyone else's mind.

When choosing powers for your character, along with powers that allow you to dominate your foes, also consider powers that cause your enemies to attack one another. Heroic-tier powers such as betrayal and crisis of identity (both found in Player's Handbook 3) allow you to control the actions of your enemies, even if only for a single attack, which further demonstrates your ability to treat all creatures as your puppets. You can roleplay powers that grant your allies attacks, such as forced opportunity, in such a way that suggests that you are controlling your ally for that attack.

Your thrall is a manifestation of your ability to dominate other beings. Since you are mentally controlling your thrall's actions, the thrall's attack rolls and damage rolls are based on your statistics. Other statistics, such as defenses and hit points, are based on your level and do not rely on the game statistics of the base creature. Therefore, the thrall can be any creature that fits your character and campaign. Is your thrall a former enemy? A tamed beast? A random stranger you met at the last tavern? The story of where your thrall comes from helps add more detail to your character's place in the campaign world.

As a thrallherd, you compel others to fight for you, and you avoid being directly involved in violence. You can play this up by encouraging your companions to attack at your behest. After all, even though the other characters are acting of their own volition, there's no reason to let them think they are. You can present your thrallherd character as controlling, domineering, and perhaps even a bit maniacal. Don't overdo it with your fellow players, but help them understand that it's only a matter of time before all the world is under your control.

Devoted Servant (16th level): While you are adjacent to your thrall, you gain a +2 bonus to all defenses.

Thrallherd Disciplines

Serve Me Well — Thrallherd Attack 11

You drive your thrall into battle to unleash a vicious attack.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Fear, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee 1
Requirement: Your thrall must be within 10 squares of you.
Effect: The thrall moves its speed, then you make an attack through the thrall.
Target: One creature adjacent to the thrall
Attack: Intelligence vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Intelligence modifier damage, and the target takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls against the thrall until the start of your next turn.
Augment 2
Target: Each enemy adjacent to the thrall

Restore Thrall — Thrallherd Utility 12

Your psionic power alleviates your thrall's injuries, readying it to fight again.

Encounter ✦ Healing, Psionic
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: Your obedient thrall in range
Effect: Your thrall regains hit points equal to your healing surge value.

Loosen the Chain — Thrallherd Attack 20

You loosen your hold on your thrall, letting it fight independently alongside you.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: Your obedient thrall in range
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your thrall gains a standard action and a move action during each of your turns. You can use your standard action to give the thrall an extra action over and above its own standard action.

CHAPTER 5

Psionic Options

RALPH BEISNER

This chapter presents psionic characters with a wealth of new techniques and tools to expand their understanding of the psionic power source and to improve its use on and off the battlefield. It also explores the place of psionic power in the worlds of the Dungeons & Dragons game, and introduces different philosophies and orders that can help you shape your character's outlook and personality. You might choose a background from this chapter to explain aspects of your character's past, or set your sights on an epic destiny that will shape his or her future.

- Psionic Power in the World: This section looks at the history of psionic power in the world of Dungeons & Dragons, and explores the place of psionics in the Forgotten Realms®, Eberron®, and Dark Sun® campaign settings.
- Philosophies and Orders: The mind set of psionic characters can be shaped by the attitudes and organizations with which they are associated.
- The Origin of Psionics: The most commonly held theories on the origin of psionic power, and how those theories relate to the psionic classes.
- Psionic Backgrounds: Character backgrounds, first introduced in Player's Handbook® 2, can enhance the connection between a character and his or her psionic energy.
- Psionic Bloodlines: Characters of any race can select one of two bloodlines—the elan and the foulborn—that offer a host of feat-based options for accessing psionic power.
- New Feats: Organized by tier, more than 100 new feats provide useful options for every psionic class.
- Epic Destinies: Six new epic destinies set the final stage of a psionic character's adventuring career.
- Equipment and Magic Items: New superior ki focuses, magic ki focuses, and augmentable items supplement the psionics equipment introduced in Player's Handbook 3.

As discussed in Player's Handbook 3, psionics users first appeared among the mortal races in the latter years of the Dawn War. According to legend, when a god cracked open the Living Gate, defiling energy and monstrous Far Realm terrors entered the Astral Sea and spread into the natural world.

Ioun and Pelor are credited with sealing shut that fell gateway to the Far Realm, but not before reality had been corrupted. Psionic power is thought to be a response to this corruption. Vague histories speak of monks dedicated to Ioun tapping this new power even before fully understanding its meaning. The first ardents and battleminds likely had even less sense of the changes that psionic power wrought in them, inspiring them to greatness through emotion and the fury of combat.

Psionic Power in Athas

In the Dark Sun campaign setting, psionic energy is an ingrained and integral part of life. For folk in the world of Athas, speculating on the origins of psionics is as senseless an exercise as asking why people have fingers or where sand comes from. Fingers, sand, and psionics simply are.

Many individuals have access to minor psionic ability—flashes of abnormal insight, physical enhancements, and minor talents. Every community boasts a few psionics users. Ardents, battleminds, and those who have useful wild abilities are welcomed wherever they go. Merchant houses employ psionics users as guards, advisors, spies, and assassins. Among the desert tribes, capable psions are highly respected and revered, often serving as chiefs or advisors to chiefs. Given the risks associated with arcane magic and the sorcerer-kings' distrust of primal spirits and evocations, psionics is by far the most prevalent and accepted form of supernatural power in Athas.

Although minor talents are common, only a few individuals have the means and the opportunity to become powerful psionics users. Nobles pay exorbitant fees to have their children tutored or enrolled in psionics schools. As a result, many members of the Athasian upper class are capable of protecting themselves and directing their guards and servants with mental powers.

Those not born to wealth receive their training informally. In cultures such as the desert tribes, older, experienced psionics users tutor apprentices who show talent. Some city-states (Nibenay being the most prominent) have monastic traditions that accept psionically inclined novices for the sake of furthering the art and spreading their teachings. In more martial city-states such as Draj or Urik, the sorcerer-kings direct their templars to find children who show notable psionic potential. These young talents are schooled in rigorous academies; indoctrination in loyalty and service to the state are the price of their education.

The Psionics Ecology

Psionic talent in the world of the crimson sun is not limited to humankind and other sentient races. A robust psionics ecology has developed in the deserts, wastes, and barrens of Athas. Many animal species (and even some plants) have evolved innate psionic abilities, ranging from the innocuous to the lethal. A few are psionivores, subsisting on the mental energy of their prey.

Travelers and adventurers who spend time in the Athasian wilderness quickly learn how creatures use psionics to survive. Small herbivores—Athas's equivalents of hares, mice, or gophers—can react to premonitions by briefly turning invisible, phasing, or teleporting away from danger. Larger prey animals might repel attacks with blasts of fear or confusion, or raise telekinetic storms of gravel and dust to cover their escape. Predators have developed various counters to these defenses. Carnivores such as the id fiend and the gaj use psionic attacks in place of physical ones to make their kills.

Psionic Enchantments

As far as templar scholars and noble savants can determine, people have studied the power of the mind for thousands of years. Still, only a handful of individuals have ever mastered the art of psionic enchantment—a fusion of arcane skill and psionic knowledge that unlocks the potential for rituals and spells of almost godlike power. Each of the sorcerer-kings of Athas is both an arcanist of fearsome power and a psionics user of tremendous strength. Some sages claim that the secret of the sorcerer-kings' immortality can be found in the combination of these powers. Believing that each sorcerer-king long ago embarked on a slow process of magical apotheosis to master psionic enchantments, they whisper that these great rulers are no longer human.

The greatest psionics user and defiler in Athas—the Dragon—does not bother to hide its inhuman nature. No being has ever engaged the Dragon in mental or magical combat and lived to tell the tale. Stories—most likely untrue—tell of doomed desert tribes or cities marked for death who have fought back against their destroyer. Scores of powerful psions acting in concert were unable to best the scourge of Athas or check its advance. This example serves as a grim testament to the Dragon's command of psionic enchantment and the limitless potential of these combined powers.

Psionic Power in Eberron

In a world as rich in magic as Eberron, psionic energy is no more remarkable than any other supernatural phenomenon. The people of Khorvaire recognize that psionics is practiced differently than the far more common divine, arcane, or primal magic, but these differences are purely a matter of curiosity.

In Sarlona, the birthplace of humanity and home of the Path of Inspiration and Path of Light faiths, psionic power is ubiquitous. Both the sprawling settlements of Riedra and the mountain strongholds of Adar boast advanced psionics practitioners. The oldest monastic traditions and psionics colleges and cabals are located in that distant land.

The extent and use of psionic power in other areas of Eberron is unknown. No doubt, Aerenal, Xen'drik, Argonnessen, and less populated areas have their share of psionics users and psionic creatures. As with so many other features of those locales, however, definitive knowledge is elusive.

Dreams and Destruction

Eberron's myths and history are too extensive and conflicting for definitive statements to be made regarding the origin of psionics. Still, certain inferences can be draw. The few records of the world's first mortal civilization, that of the giants of Xen'drik, mention nothing that resembles psionics until after the arrival of the quori. Hailing from Dal Quor, Eberron's Plane of Dreams, the quori possessed powerful mental abilities. Even after the giants succeeded at separating Dal Quor from Eberron, psionics remained. Among humanoids, the earliest evidence of psionics practice appears in Sarlona.

Thousands of years later, psionics first arose in Khorvaire among orcs and goblins during the invasion of the daelkyr. These flesh-warpers are the lords of Xoriat, the Far Realm of Eberron's cosmology. Although psionics practice did not become as widespread on Khorvaire as it did on Sarlona, psionics remains an established source of power, practiced by reputable organizations and monasteries. Still, a number of scholars are troubled by the notion that both Dal Quor's and Xoriat's influence inspired the rise of mental powers—and they wonder what an increasing prevalence of psionic characters in the world might portend.

Across Khorvaire

Almost a lost art among its native races, psionics was reinvigorated in Khorvaire when the first humans crossed the seas from Sarlona. It was reinforced by more powerful and more formal traditions when the kalashtar followed later. Slowly but steadily, the practice of psionics is spreading in the Five Nations and beyond.

Some Gatekeeper druids, who guard against new incursions from Xoriat, are investigating the possible use of psionics to augment their traditional primal powers—a "fight fire with fire" mind set frowned upon by many within their order. Previously mundane monastic traditions from Breland to the Talenta Plains have begun incorporating psionics teachings. The Universities of Wynarn and Morgrave hire psionic explorers and professors. The intelligence arms of Aundair and Breland are starting to make use of psionic spies, perhaps inspired by the realization that the gnomes of Zilargo and several of the Feyspires already do so.

The governments of Aundair, Breland, Karrnath, and Thrane—the four surviving nations of the Last War—are keenly aware of the growing practice of psionics. Since the war's end, these nations have developed a precarious balance of power, each dominating in one area beyond the capacity of the others. Aundair has the greatest arcane forces; Karrnath the largest traditional military; Thrane the most access to divine magic; and Breland the greatest quantity of natural resources. If any nation manages to gain an edge in the advancement of psionics—or appears to be doing so—the threat could reignite hostilities and once again plunge the continent into war.

Psionic Power in Toril

The world of the Forgotten Realms campaign setting is both knowledgeable about and rich in magic. Across the world of Toril, wizards, warlocks, sorcerers, clerics, and other spellcasters are steeped in the deepest secrets of arcane and divine magic. Characters who wield magic benefit from widespread acceptance throughout Faerûn. Against this backdrop, psionic power does not possess the pedigree, prevalence, or general awareness that arcane and divine magic do.

Ancient Ways

Psionic power has existed throughout Toril's history, but psionics users rarely appear in numbers capable of forming schools or cabals. Only once did psionic power manage to make a substantial mark on the world—in the empire of Jhaamdath.

Ancient Jhaamdath, the Twelve Cities of Swords, was ruled by a psiocracy thousands of years ago. Jhaamdath's people were renowned for both their mental magic and martial skills. Much of their psionics craft was lost when the expansionistic empire fell before a tsunami created by elven high magic originating in Chondalwood. Today, the partly drowned Vilhon Wilds is littered with the rubble of Jhaamdath's twelve cities. Psionic energy leaks from dozens of items and artifacts that now lie beneath stones, sand, and the accumulated detritus of more than one disaster. So diffuse are these psionic traces, however, that few of the relics have been located. More prominent are the bits and pieces of psionics lore that have been passed down through the ages.

Jhaamdath-era fragments have lead to the development of the oldest psionics traditions on Toril. Other sects have arisen gradually as a result of psionics breakthroughs or insightful practitioners. Even so, psionics remains rare. Among Toril's numerous monastic traditions devoted to spiritual enlightenment and unarmed combat, only a few bring psionic energy into their practices.

The Spellplague and Returned Abeir

When the goddess Mystra was murdered and the Spellplague ravaged Toril, the fabric of reality was torn asunder. During this period, a portion of vanished Abeir returned, creating new lands and regions—and often violently occluding older lands in the process. The Spellplague also wrought substantial changes in the practice and manifestations of magic. Portions of the world, called plaguelands, remain dangerous and unpredictable. In them, magic functions poorly and the laws of nature are erratic at best.

Few people realize how quickly the number of psionics users has increased in the nine decades that have passed since the Spellplague. Psions, ardents, and battleminds appear throughout the population in ever-growing numbers. That growth has lead to the establishment of a number of small psionics cabals and traditions.

Some sages attribute the expansion of psionic ability to the Spellplague, believing that the twisting of magical energy has somehow permitted psionic power to flourish. Other scholars believe that the influx of psionic energy originates with Abeir's return. This claim is hotly debated, however, because Abeir—a land dominated by the primordials and their elemental magic—does not seem any more conducive to the practice of psionics than Toril was before its twin world returned.

Within the many libraries and hermit towers of Faerûn, a few savants posit that the growing incidence of psionic ability among the population is the world's collective, unconscious response to the impingment of the Far Realm. Evidence supporting this theory is difficult to gather, however, and the view is mostly unknown among the general population.

Given their recent emergence and the unusual nature of their powers, groups and gatherings of psionics users tend toward secrecy. Members prefer meeting in hidden halls and revealing their existence to other proven psionics practitioners only. They do not want to draw undue attention to their unfamiliar abilities, fearing distrust and persecution. Many members of these cabals believe that such secrecy is unwarranted and unnecessary, pointing out that psionics will never be embraced by the larger world if its practitioners appear to have something to hide. Still, traditions and reservations are hard to overcome.

Other psionics sects have good reason to remain hidden. Certain psionics cabals cannot escape the psychic presence of the floating city of aboleths, Xxiphu, however far they might be from the Sea of Fallen Stars. Whether consciously or instinctively, these practitioners understand that they could be used in some future cosmic conflict. Psionics users hide their presence from potential enemies as mind flayers spread their tendrils throughout the Underdark, aboleth cities rise from sunken tombs, and stars flicker with ominous portent.

The seeds of psionic power continue to germinate in the minds of Toril's people, counterbalancing the threat that the Far Realm might one day present. This menace, once unveiled, could make the Spellplague seem like a minor disaster—or perhaps merely a precursor to the true end of days.

Philosophies and Orders

Because a psionics mind set shapes attitudes, beliefs, and perceptions, most psionics users see the world through a prism of sorts. They often embrace organizations and belief systems that stray from mainstream thinking.

A psionics philosophy is a set of beliefs regarding the origin, nature, and purpose of psionic energy. Philosophies are not taught in formal schools or practiced in large groups. Rather, these beliefs are passed from individual to individual or from a single believer to a small cabal. Although certain beliefs sometimes take root in a particular region, a philosophy is seldom espoused from a central headquarters, nor do its followers have formal titles or hierarchies. Instinctive psionics users such as ardents and battleminds are attracted to this less-structured exploration of psionic power.

A psionics order, on the other hand, is a much more formal system of belief. Like a philosophy, it embraces particular views regarding the origin and nature of psionics. An order also focuses on methods of instruction, specific practices, and, in some instances, formal interactions with society and religious ideologies. Some psionics orders are set up like schools or religious institutions, and others marry their philosophies to local cultural traditions. Disciplined psionic power users such as psions and monks are drawn to such groups.

Cerulean Adepts

Claiming descent from the earliest warriors who fought against the Far Realm beneath the symbol of the Cerulean Sign, the Cerulean Adepts seeks to understand the energy that the plane produces. The order prepares for the day when the pressure of the Far Realm results in the birth of a long-prophesied psionic champion.

Primary Class: Psion

Primary Alignment: Unaligned, though the order accepts members of all alignments

Beliefs and Traditions

The Cerulean Adepts believes that the influence of the Far Realm drives the rise of psionic power, and that psionics is the only hope the world has against the Outside's aberrant influence.

Over many centuries, dozens of psionics groups, from full-fledged orders to tiny cabals, have been dedicated to standing against the spread of the Far Realm. One of the first and most notorious of these was the Keepers of the Cerulean Sign, which is credited with having thwarted a Far Realm invasion force centuries ago (see Player's Handbook 3, page 94). Over time, nearly all these groups have been destroyed or corrupted from within. Mortal minds, no matter how formidable, have proven too weak to withstand the Far Realm's power and madness.

The Cerulean Adepts believes its tradition descends from all those organizations, but primarily from the keepers. The order's founders are psions who once hailed from disparate orders and traditions. All supposedly received a psychic vision of a psionic champion who will one day lead a powerful faction of psionics users against the most potent entities of the Far Realm. That battle will decide the world's fate. Either the Far Realm will be permanently isolated, or madness will shred reality.

The adepts believe it is their responsibility to cultivate that champion and his or her mental warriors. Thus, they send psionic individuals into danger to fortify them for the coming conflict, and they watch and wait for signs of greatness.

The Cerulean Adepts believes the Far Realm is responsible for the existence of psionic energy, though its members debate the merits of the various theories attempting to define the scope of the Far Realm's influence.

Goals and Objectives

Adepts are masters of subtlety, laboring to quietly plant spies and cultivate informants in every community they can reach. The Cerulean Adepts works to discover up-and-coming psionics users. Such characters are encouraged (or skillfully maneuvered) into participating in adventures and explorations—preferably where the influence of the Far Realm is strong. As subjects gain in power and experience, agents of the Cerulean Adepts carefully approach them to explain the danger the Far Realm presents, and the order's belief that all psionic characters are instrumental in the world's defense. Any such individual who reaches high epic levels is given special attention, and told of the adepts' belief that he or she might be their foretold champion.

Once a psionics user is aware of the Cerulean Adepts and has joined the order's cause, the order makes its resources available. The organization has vast libraries, and many of its members are scholars. Although willing to share their knowledge, members do not assist subjects in battle. It is believed that the promised champion must evolve without assistance in order to prove his or her worth.

When not focused on a potential champion, the Cerulean Adepts defends innocents from aberrant creatures and other threats. The order hopes to stem the tide of the Far Realm until the champion arises.

Organization

The Cerulean Adepts is a relatively small order. Its numbers are more substantial in regions where the Far Realm's touch is heavy, but it is largely unknown elsewhere. The order is anxious to recruit more members so it can cover more ground. The Cerulean Adepts is partial to psions, but it accepts individuals of any class.

Leader: Taul Kirn, a human once thought to be a potential champion until an illithid elder brain temporarily enslaved him, is the group's master adept. Psychic scans show he has shaken the illithid's influence, and the group trusts him completely, but Kirn is unwilling to stand as champion in case some dormant effect remains. Kirn is a monk, though most of the adepts he leads are psions.

Headquarters: The Cerulean Adepts enjoys the cooperation of the primary temple in the ancient city of Pravarum. There, amid shrines to Erathis, Ioun, Bahamut, and Pelor, the order has its own meeting hall.

Hierarchy: Members who have any degree of seniority and experience are known as adepts, and those below them are novices. Other than the master adept, no formal positions exist. The master adept decides, usually based on seniority, who holds authority over specific areas of the order's operations.

BACKGROUND BENEFIT

You have received your training with an eye toward understanding the importance of the foretold champion. You vigilantly listen for rumors of the champion's appearance and watch for Far Realm incursions.

Associated Skills: Arcana, Streetwise

Associated Language: Deep Speech

Fists of Zuoken

A human follower of the Breath of the Sun and Moon monastic tradition, Zuoken was supposedly the first mortal to reach enlightenment–the perfect harmony of mind, body, and soul. As a reward for his efforts, Ioun made him one of her greatest exarchs. Now among the most revered of the monastic tradition, the Fists of Zuoken follows his example. The order's disciples are paragons of enlightenment, working constantly toward personal perfection.

Primary Class: Monk

Primary Alignment: Good, though lawful good and unaligned disciples make up a significant minority

Beliefs and Traditions

All living beings have an innate link to psionic energy. Only creatures who have the potential for enlightenment can access this energy, and only those who obtain a measure of enlightenment can master it. It is a disciple's responsibility to nurture his or her psionic ability, because psionics users are the only ones capable of attaining true enlightenment and reaching a greater existence after death.

Even though ardents and battleminds have an instinctive connection to psionic energy, their natural talent isn't enough. They need strict monastic training to achieve enlightenment. Thus, members of the Fists of Zuoken are charged with encouraging ardents and battleminds in their psionic pursuits while also coaxing them toward a more disciplined path of study.

Although most disciples are good aligned, the Fists of Zuoken believes that psionics is inherently a self-centered power. Mastering it requires the psionics user to master body, mind, and soul. The order believes that helping others can aid a psionics user on this journey toward self-awareness and enlightenment, but taking that path must be a personal choice.

Most members of the Fists of Zuoken embrace the "gift of the gods" or "more than human" psionics origin theories.

Goals and Objectives

The Fists of Zuoken work to locate and guide potential psionics users. Each disciple of the Fists of Zuoken seeks personal perfection, or enlightenment, through the unity of mind, body, and soul. The order's exercises, practices, and rituals are designed to strengthen each aspect of self until the boundaries between the three melt away, revealing the unified self.

Even though the order does not require it, many members choose the adventuring lifestyle as a means of pursuing enlightenment. Adventuring disciples typically believe that no amount of study or exercise can hone their abilities as keenly as true combat, exploration, investigation, and survival. Traveling also allows practitioners to aid those in need, helping to uphold the order's image even as it provides another step on the path toward enlightenment.

Organization

Although a famous order, the Fists of Zuoken is no larger than most other monastic traditions. It is not secretive, but it is relatively isolated. Locating and reaching the order is considered the first test of an aspirant's persistence and ability.

Leader: The peer-selected disciple considered nearest to enlightenment and who most embodies the qualities of Zuoken leads the order. This is usually the Fists of Zuoken's eldest member. This leader is called the scion of Zuoken. Ammineth, an elf so venerable that her face is a map of wrinkles and her hair resembles cobwebs, is the current scion.

Headquarters: The Fists of Zuoken operates several small monasteries, but the order is based in a large monastery the size of a modest village. It is located atop a frigid plateau near the mountains that house the legendary city of Argent, created by the gods themselves.

Hierarchy: Eight elder monks assist the scion of Zuoken in managing the order and developing its curriculum. The four masters of the wind are responsible for focusing on the monks' physical studies; the four masters of the seasons are responsible for teaching mental exercises and scholastic studies. The master of winter or the master of the north wind typically becomes the next scion of Zuoken. Monks qualified to teach are known as masters. Students are granted no title.

BACKGROUND BENEFIT

Fists of Zuoken disciples either raised you or trained you. From an early age, you've worked to balance the needs of mind and body. You have also studied the enemies of gods and mortals against whom Zuoken battled, and possibly battles still as Ioun's exarch.

Associated Skills: Acrobatics, Religion

Associated Language: Primordial

Keepers of the Internal Sun

Born of two disparate traditions, the Keepers of the Internal Sun is an order devoted to the acquisition and safekeeping of knowledge. Its original members gathered information in the hope of saving threatened cultures from destruction. Lately, however, those lofty ambitions have been set aside in favor of purely academic goals.

Primary Class: Psion

Primary Alignment: Unaligned

Beliefs and Traditions

The original members of the Keepers of the Internal Sun were psions who believed themselves to be the world's greatest and most disciplined minds. They saw it as their solemn duty to gather the humanoid races' most important knowledge. The order would serve as a living repository of information and accumulated wisdom, ensuring that the world's wealth of knowledge would survive the rise and fall of empires. If necessary, keepers would be able to provide devastated races with the information needed to rebuild civilization. They believed that knowledge stored within living minds is the only beacon against the darkness—a so-called Internal Sun.

At roughly the same time, another school of thought took root among many psions. The philosophy known only as the Body taught that psionics users are the conscious embodiment of living creatures' thoughts. Such characters thus had a responsibility to become a group mind for the universal unconscious. The Body believed that if psionics users collected and collated all knowledge, the collective unconscious would awaken and sentient beings would evolve.

When the Body's scholars learned of the Keepers of the Internal Sun, they set out to join the organization and assist in gathering lore. These new keepers introduced the order to the notion of the group mind, which soon became a part of its philosophy.

Today, both beliefs still exist among the keepers, but neither truly drives the order. Instead, most of its members engage in the study and accumulation of lore for its own sake. They take pride in scholarship, but don't believe that the order has a grand purpose. To them, the Keepers of the Internal Sun is no different from any other guild of psions or wizards.

Keepers who follow either of the order's original philosophies are drawn to the "collective sentience" and "defenders of reality" psionics origin theories. The beliefs of members who treat the order as a guild or a scholarly resource run the gamut.

Goals and Objectives

A new keeper's reasons for joining the order range from the esoteric to the everyday, but all members share a common desire to gather as much information as possible. Some keepers mine recently discovered secrets for personal gain; others are content to ensure that the order has continuous access to new information. From conventional knowledge to recently unearthed lore, keepers' discoveries are meticulously recorded and stored in the order's numerous vaultlike libraries.

A number of the order's younger members turn to adventuring or espionage as a way to sniff out lost or hidden information. Presenting the Keepers of the Internal Sun with new knowledge is one of only two advancement methods; the other is through years of painstaking research, cataloging, and cross-referencing. Access to the most esoteric and powerful portions of the order's archives is reserved for its own sages.

Organization

In spite of—or possibly because of—its dearth of goals, the Keepers of the Internal Sun is one of the largest contemporary psionics orders. It possesses a labyrinthine system of internal ranks and positions.

Leader: The dwarf Kala Firstdawn is the order's current leader, or grand sage. She is a devout believer in the keepers' initial mission of storing knowledge to ensure that civilization can be rebuilt after a dark age, and she personally commissions adventurous members of the order to seek out lost lore.

Headquarters: The Library of the Internal Sun is located in the town of Fallcrest, near the Wizard's Gate. The folk of that settlement think of it as a private library and social club, where members occasionally gather to debate academic matters. Only members know that cathedral-sized vaults housing tens of thousands of tomes gathered over the decades have been dug into the rock below the compound.

Hierarchy: The keepers maintain a rigid hierarchy. The grand sage leads the order. The master sages, all elder members or experts in given fields, are next in line. Below them are erudite sages, master keepers, keepers, and novice keepers. Some individuals boast titles as well as rank, including chief archivist, master librarian, head researcher, and dozens of others.

BACKGROUND BENEFIT

Nothing is more important than the acquisition and safekeeping of knowledge. If we don't understand what has come before, how can society possibly move forward?

Associated Skills: History, Perception
Associated Language: Draconic

School of Unmatched Excellence

The School of Unmatched Excellence was originally an order devoted to using its power to guide the mortal races toward a better future. Today, the organization is focused largely on espousing the superiority of psionics users—a position its members believe grants them the right to rule over lesser folk.

Primary Class: Psion and monk in roughly equal measure

Primary Alignment: Evil, though the order has a significant minority of unaligned individuals (and even a few good ones) who still work to benevolently guide the folk around them

Beliefs and Traditions

The unmatched, as members of the school are known, believe that the advent of psionics is the first of many groundbreaking changes in store for the mortal realm. The world is changing under the influence of other planes and the power of a multitude of sentient minds. Those gifted with the mental strength to master psionic power can guide that transformation, literally shaping the world of tomorrow.

The unmatched believe that psionics users—and the members of their own order in particular—are the only ones capable of ensuring that the mortal races enter a better age. The order works to place psionic characters in positions of authority. Psionics users, it believes, must dominate the world before the end of the current age or that world will be doomed to madness and chaos.

Psionics users of the School of Unmatched Excellence are attracted to the "defenders of reality," "collective sentience," and "more than human" psionics origin theories.

Goals and Objectives

The unmatched seek to gather as many psionics users as possible under their aegis. The school portrays itself as a psionics users group that promises to aid its members in obtaining the power and training they need to gain society's respect. Once involved with the school, members are taught the group's philosophies and are expected to help the order work toward worldwide psionics rule. The school's leadership remains cautious of the less-structured power of ardents and battleminds, and actively encourages such characters to instead choose the psion or monk path. The headmasters make clear that only the most disciplined psionics users can fully control, understand, and shape their abilities to claim the power that is their birthright.

Currently content to spread their influence through smaller communities and a few larger cities, the unmatched never lose sight of the school's end goal—a psionically ruled empire. The order's original members believed that guiding the cultural growth and thoughts of the populace would ensure a positive transformation of the world. Today's members, secure in their superiority and flaunting their power, pay only lip service to the order's founding philosophy. A select few campuses still honor the school's original purpose, teaching that psionics users are responsible for guiding and shaping the future of the mortal races. Most of the order's good and unaligned members join these colleges.

Despite spending so much time in pursuit of power, the unmatched still fight aberrant creatures. Such horrors spread the Far Realm's influence, which runs counter to the school's objectives. In the face of dire threats, the unmatched sometimes work alongside groups that would normally oppose them.

Organization

The School of Unmatched Excellence is one of the largest psionics orders. Its campuses are spread across wide swaths of the world, resulting in pockets of influence networked across dozens of communities and a few major cities. Psionics users in the field maintain mystical contact with their headmasters.

Leader: Each of the school's colleges and monasteries has its own leader, or headmaster. The leader of the entire order wins the position through a psionic power contest. The current leader is Headmaster Typhirriss, a male tiefling psion.

Headquarters: The initial headquarters of the School of Unmatched Excellence, then only a single psionics college, was founded in the trade city of Four Winds. Today, the current leader's school, college, or monastery is considered the order's main campus. Headmaster Typhirriss's college is located in the large town of Gryphon's Roost, three days southeast of the Nentir Vale.

Hierarchy: Headmasters assume control of a college or a monastery through force of will and psionic power. The hierarchy of each campus under the headmaster is determined in the same way. Duels to the death to determine rank are frowned upon but do occasionally occur.

BACKGROUND BENEFIT

As a psionics user, it is your right and responsibility to govern mortals who lack psionic abilities—even if they do not want it.

Associated Skills: Diplomacy, Intimidate

Associated Language: The language of the mind (see below)

The Language of the Mind

Some psions believe that there exists a language of the mind—an array of thoughts, visualizations, and sensations that are common to all thinking creatures across the cosmos. Those who study it believe that this universal mental language is the foundation on which all forms of telepathy are built.

Optional Rule: With the Dungeon Master's permission, psionic characters can learn this language, which does not exist in spoken form, but only as a script. Players cannot choose the language of the mind as one of their characters' starting languages; leaning it requires the Linguist feat or the proper background. Only psionic characters and creatures who have innate telepathy can learn to read and write this language, since part of its meaning is conveyed directly into the observer's mind. It can be translated with magic (such as the Comprehend Languages ritual), but is otherwise a form of communication that only telepathic creatures can share.

Eternal Seekers

The hunger for knowledge and the gnawing hollow of unanswered questions propels followers of the Eternal Seeker philosophy along their paths of study. For them, the struggle to understand the nature of their psionic power is a lifelong task.

Primary Class: Ardent, though battleminds are only slightly less common

Primary Alignment: Unaligned, though every alignment is represented

Beliefs and Traditions

It can be said that eternal seekers have existed since the first ardents wondered about the origins of their power. The Eternal Seekers is a network of strangers, connected by their conviction in the rightness of their shared philosophy. Their web of common purpose trumps their radically different races, backgrounds, cultures, and agendas. Specifically, every seeker believes the following tenets.

- Psionic power has a great purpose. It is not just a form of magic, but a unique power that exists for an as-yet unknown reason.
- Every wielder of psionics was specifically chosen as a conduit for that power.
- When made aware of the psionic power source, psionics users instinctively recognize it.
- None of the current theories regarding the origin or purpose of psionic power is accurate.

The notion that all the commonly argued theories explaining psionics are ultimately false is the core value of the Eternal Seeker philosophy. A burning need to unravel the mystery of psionic power drives the Eternal Seekers, all of whom share each newly discovered clue with their fellow seekers.

Debating the partial truths of existing theories is a common pastime when seekers gather. But all seekers know that if any theory was to prove correct, every seeker would intuitively recognize its truth. When they understand the origin of psionics and why they were chosen to manifest psionic abilities, seekers will finally learn their purpose in the world.

Seekers do not subscribe to any of the various psionics origin theories, though they seek to draw slivers of the truth from all of them.

Goals and Objectives

Seekers are wholly focused on discovering the true nature and purpose of psionic power. Many become adventurers, hoping to uncover ancient tomes or to speak with elder beings that can reveal forgotten knowledge. Others become students, poring over musty scrolls. A few become academics, conducting experiments on psionic creatures. On occasion, seekers in a particular region feel an emotional tug to gather and share their knowledge. The mechanism by which these irregular meetings are called is another mystery for the seekers to pick at as they debate new findings.

Seekers who take up a nomadic lifestyle are a communication network for the philosophy's adherents. They pass along information and messages of interest to fellow psionics users, even when those reports do not directly relate to the great secrets for which they quest. The desire to communicate and share information encourages even the most reticent and aloof seekers to remain in contact with a few of their comrades.

Organization

The Eternal Seekers does not have permanent covens or cabals to support its philosophy. Although seekers come together with like-minded characters or with adventurers of other stripes, each seeker hunts for the truth in his or her own way.

BACKGROUND BENEFIT

You've been seeking something your entire life, even if you didn't initially realize what. Now that you know about your psionic abilities, you are ready to explore every trail that could lead to discovering the ultimate secret—the one that will reveal why you exist.

Associated Skills: Arcana, Insight

WAYNE ENGLAND

Guiding Hand

One of the most altruistic of psionics philosophies and orders, the Guiding Hand philosophy attracts individuals dedicated to the well-being of less powerful creatures.

Primary Class: Ardent and battlemind
Primary Alignment: Good and lawful good

Beliefs and Traditions

Psionics groups devoted to good works—battling aberrant creatures or demons, protecting civilization from the monsters of the wild, hunting criminals in civilized territories—have existed since psionics was first recognized for what it is. Many of the earliest psionics users were warriors who fought to save the world from the threat of the primordials or the Far Realm. No concrete ties trace those early factions to followers of today's Guiding Hand philosophy, but hand practitioners consider those early psionic warriors to be their spiritual forebears.

The Guiding Hand sees psionics as a gift. After all, no other types of power bloom without effort on the user's part. Whether psionic power comes from the gods, from other planes, or from the collective minds of the mortal realm is meaningless. All that matters is the power's purpose. Psionics users must recognize that their power exists to protect the mortal races. Being gifted with this unique power doesn't speak to the stature of the psionic classes. Rather, it shouts of their obligation and duty.

When they give it any thought, followers of the Guiding Hand respect the "defenders of reality" and "gift of the gods" psionics origin theories.

Goals and Objectives

At its broadest, the Guiding Hand's goal is simple: Protect innocents, individual communities, civilization, and the world from enslavement, domination, and destruction. It's a pretty tall order, but most hands don't plan their daily activities with the philosophy's goal in mind. Rather, they feel compelled to give aid when they can.

A hand might stand at the forefront of a local militia to defend a town against raiders, or he or she might help adventurers track down a vampire lord or a mind flayer. Followers don't offer aid out of a compulsion to save the world; they help because it feels like the right action to take. They can't stomach the idea of squandering their gifts when they can do what so many cannot.

As natural protectors, hands reserve their greatest enmity for evil psionics users. These villains harm when they should protect, and they defile what was meant to be a gift to the mortal races. Hands are most zealous and bloodthirsty when they take on psionic foes. Some practitioners deliberately hunt their dark kin.

Organization

Followers of the Guiding Hand who dwell in the same or neighboring regions regularly encounter one another. Some manner of empathic link or inexplicable urge draws them to a common threat—sometimes a dozen or more to the same location. Although the Guiding Hand is not a formal order, its followers pursue their shared objectives together.

Eyes of Witchcross: The communities of Elsir Vale are still recovering from the recent depredations of humanoid hordes and the agents of Tiamat. The area is also the site of a scattered collection of planar portals. Drawn together by recent events, a small cabal of psionics users has chosen to guard Elsir Vale. Its members battle everything from bandits taking advantage of the recent chaos to horrors creeping through those portals that are still open. Based in the small town of Witchcross, these guiding hands are only too happy to accept aid from other adventurers.

Reaching Hand: Many hands believe that evil psionics users pose the greatest threat to the natural world. For them, each use of psionic power for immoral ends feels like a personal betrayal. Based in the trade city of Four Winds, the group known as the Reaching Hand consists of a dozen psionics users and twice as many nonpsionic allies. The Reaching Hand targets any psionic threats, including aberrant creatures and evil-aligned psionics users, making every effort to destroy them permanently.

BACKGROUND BENEFIT

Innocents and the natural world must be protected. As a recipient of the great gift of psionic power, you are obligated to shield the weak and strike down evil. A sense of duty has always called to you. Once you followed your instincts, your place in the world became clear to you.

Associated Skills: Diplomacy, Perception

The Path of Thirty-Seven Obstacles

Even though psionic power is a sign of superior potential, the onus of reaching that potential falls to the individual. The Path of Thirty-Seven Obstacles emphasizes the development of personal skill and power, which can be achieved and demonstrated only by defeating a series of increasingly dangerous foes.

Primary Class: Battlemind
Primary Alignment: Unaligned

Beliefs and Traditions

Given their relative scarcity and lack of formal traditions, battleminds typically encounter each other only infrequently while at large in the world. When battleminds do meet, their innate confidence (and the arrogance that sometimes goes hand in hand with that confidence) inspires challenges and ritual combat designed to prove individual superiority.

The Path of Thirty-Seven Obstacles extends from this informal tradition. First noted only a few centuries ago, this philosophy was formalized when a group of thirty-eight battleminds gathered to compete against one another, other champions, and monsters found in the region. According to their rules of engagement, a single battlemind would emerge as champion after doing final battle with the conclave's other thirty-seven combatants.

As a philosophy, the Path of Thirty-Seven Obstacles has no formal teachings, but the story of the first conclave is well known among battleminds. Characters emotionally and physically drawn to the path feel an innate connection to those original thirty-eight warriors—a connection that sometimes borders on hero worship.

Through the centuries, the path's philosophy has remained consistent. Every follower is bound to a life of harsh self-improvement, endeavoring to reach the entirety of his or her potential. Anything less is a waste of a battlemind's talents, psionic or otherwise. Of equal importance is the demonstration of potential. Followers of the path are expected to seek out powerful monsters and famous foes to demonstrate their skills and hone their abilities. The fame, fortune, and authority that come with such a life are the battlemind's by right—as long as he or she can hold onto them.

Many followers of the path subscribe to the "more than human" psionics origin theory, but nearly every theory is represented among the philosophy's adherents.

Goals and Objectives

Followers of the path strive to bolster their abilities through training and practice in hunting and defeating increasingly powerful opponents. The most celebrated followers of this tradition maintain their harsh training regimen until the day they die.

Though they might eventually face off in combat, path psionics users typically treat each other as comrades, sharing instruction and training. Watching another follower of the path succeed can be satisfying, particularly when you know that he or she has been training with you.

When searching for opponents, followers of the Path of Thirty-Seven Obstacles consider multiple factors.

- A foe must be powerful enough to pose a challenge; anything less won't help build or prove a psionics user's abilities.
- Notoriety is equally important. Followers of the path want the tales of their success to spread. A monster that haunts the wilds on the outskirts of town is thus a far better target than one dwelling in an unoccupied forest. Similarly, orcs raiding a city's farmlands make better targets than those dwelling in distant caves.
- The path teaches that its practitioners have the right to any prizes their victories might earn. As a result, villains and monsters that possess wealth or treasure are better targets than those that do not.

Organization

Unsurprisingly, many followers of the Path of Thirty-Seven Obstacles choose the adventuring lifestyle. But not every group limits its members to monster slaying.

Hero Slayers: A handful of followers of the path understand that the most dangerous, most famous, and typically richest of all possible adversaries aren't monsters or villains—they are other successful adventurers. The loose guild known as the Hero Slayers has existed for several decades now, and its members are precisely what their name implies. These psionics users make a habit of tracking down and challenging adventurers—the more popular, the better. If their chosen opponents are reluctant to fight them, hero slayers aren't above threatening innocents to force the issue.

BACKGROUND BENEFIT

Trained to think only of improving your own skills and standing victorious against foes, you have learned to withstand all manner of duress and to swiftly judge the abilities of your opponents.

Associated Skills: Endurance, Insight

Twilight Dreamers

Drawn to the darkness and revolted by the thoughts and emotions of others, the ardents who follow the path of the Twilight Dreamers dedicate their lives to evil. Convinced of their superiority over those they control, the dreamers believe themselves to be the eyes and hands of an otherworldly malice.

Primary Class: Ardent

Primary Alignment: Evil and chaotic evil

Out of the Darkness

Followers of the philosophy of the Twilight Dreamers are primarily evil, having indentured themselves to powerful devils, demons, and inhuman Far Realm horrors. It is possible, however, for rare dreamers to maintain a measure of morality as unaligned or good characters.

Just because an ardent believes that his or her powers are the result of dark forces that expect obedience does not mean that this obedience must be given up without a fight. As an unaligned or a good dreamer, you might believe that Asmodeus or Ilsensine is the source of your psionic power. By your actions, you show your contempt for this master and rail against your fate. You might hold out hope that performing good deeds can cleanse the darkness lodged in your soul, preventing it from consuming you. You must strive to keep your true nature a secret from other dreamers, however, since they will attempt to destroy you if they discover who you are.

Beliefs and Traditions

When psionics first entered the world, distrust of its users was widespread. This alien power could affect the mind and emotions, doing so in many cases with no obvious signs of spellcasting. In areas already prone to superstition, panicked commoners assumed that evil was corrupting psionics users to befoul the natural world. That fear inspired horrid deeds on the part of otherwise moral folk, as they sought to rid their lands of this assumed evil.

Generations later, the dark aftermath of these purges lives on in the philosophy of the Twilight Dreamers. Ardents who dwell in areas where superstition about psionic power still holds sway are often consumed by the harsh emotions of those who fear them.

These dreamers have accepted that their otherness isolates them from their people, and for good reason. Their sensitivity to emotion convinces them that they are corrupt, born to shelter the wicked and serve dark and bloodthirsty masters. Dreamers typically believe that demons, devils, or Far Realm horrors are the source of their psionic power. These dark psionics users work tirelessly toward the day their overlords can dominate, corrupt, or destroy the natural world.

Followers of the Twilight Dreamers follow either the "less than human" or "gift of the gods" theories of psionics origin, although the "gods" they credit are only rarely divine entities.

Goals and Objectives

Followers of the Twilight Dreamers want to see the world thrown open to their dark masters. Each intends to sit at the right hand of his or her lord as the world's mortals are enslaved, consumed, and driven mad.

The sinister emotional energy that fills all dreamers draws them to one another. Occasional conclaves are held to discuss tactics and short-term objectives. These gatherings typically end in bloodshed, as thralls of different masters reject the idea of advancing another lord's plan.

Recently, cabals in service to one or another fiend have gained strength in a few regions. Their members still find cooperation elusive, though. Some want to use brute force to conquer local lands, and others advocate the subtle mental subversion of civic and religious leaders. Still others want to seek out rituals potent enough to obliterate the barriers between the natural world and their lord's realm. On occasion, dreamer cabals battle for control of a region or engage in bloody conflicts over whose master is the true source of psionic energy in the world.

Organization

The Twilight Dreamers' ideology functions as an umbrella philosophy under which numerous Far Realm sects and diabolic cults operate. Despite the expansive range of beliefs of these cults' followers, their psionic abilities and fell goals ultimately link them together.

Cabals of dreamers have given their allegiance to Tharizdun, the dukes and princes of the Nine Hells, a handful of demon lords, most of the more powerful entities of the Far Realm, and even a few primordials.

BACKGROUND BENEFIT

You focus your studies on whatever demonic, diabolical, or aberrant creature you believe imbued you with psionic power. When the natural world falls, you plan to ride the tide of blood alongside your master.

Associated Skills: Arcana, Dungeoneering, Religion

The Origin of Psionics

The origin of psionic power is likely the most rigorously debated aspect of psionics theory. The question of what—or who—links psionics users to their power source can become an obsession, and many psionics users feel the answer is integral to their self-identity. Divergent theories and heated disagreements have splintered numerous orders, and become the foundations for new philosophies or societies.

The most widely accepted psionics origin theories are summarized here.

Collective Sentience

A new and increasingly popular belief, the theory of collective sentience suggests that psionics users tap into the mental energy that the world's sentient population projects. The presence of so many thoughts forms an essence that psionics users can manipulate. Followers of this belief eagerly work toward taming the wilderness and encouraging the spread of civilization, because a denser population means a more potent power source.

Defenders of Reality

Still the most widely embraced belief among psionics users, this theory asserts that psionics developed as a reaction to the Far Realm's incursions. As that alien reality infected the mortal world, the world itself generated a defense against it. Psionics users who espouse this belief see themselves as the world's primary defenders against the Far Realm and the earliest embodiments of a stronger future. They believe that in the same way plague survivors develop stronger immune systems, so too will the mortal races advance when they finally turn back the Far Realm's corruption.

ERIC BELISLE

Gift of the Gods

The first appearance of psionic power at the height of the Dawn War created this oldest of origin theories, which suggests that psionics is a gift from the gods. Although few people continue to believe that psionics is simply a specialized form of divine power, adherents of this belief maintain that it is the gods who grant psionic power to the world's sentient creatures. Followers of this origin theory are divided along theological lines as they argue over which god controls psionic power. Most believers credit Ioun as the creator of psionics.

A few sects maintain that psionic power originated with the gods, but that it was not a deliberate gift. These groups claim that the Chained God's madness birthed psionics as his insanity warped the fabric of reality. Other groups maintain that the internal energy that empowers psionics is the spiritual essence of the uncounted deities who have died.

Less than Human

Rather than a defense against the Far Realm, psionics is claimed by some groups to be a symptom of its corruption of the world. Even though psionics users retain their humanoid appearance and sanity in this early stage of the Outside's invasion of the mortal realm, believers warn that this slow corruption will eventually spawn mortal creatures as hideous, powerful, and mad as the Far Realm's aberrants.

More than Human

Followers of this belief assert that psionics users are the next stage in the mortal races' evolution. The mind and soul have long been ready to tap psionic power, but the physiology of the earliest sentient races was not up to the task. Over time, however, the threats of fiends, dragons, the Far Realm, and the endless rise and fall of civilization has forced the world's inhabitants to grow stronger. As mortals evolve, even the gods will eventually prove unnecessary. Indeed, some scholars say the gods were once mortals who reached this potential early, and that they deliberately made their creations weak to avoid having their authority challenged.

The Phrenic Planes

Whether they embrace the third plane theory (see "The Phrenic Planes," page 91) or believe only in the Plane of Dreams and the Far Realm, adherents of this philosophy assert that psionic energy comes from the phrenic planes. As evidence, theorists point out that divine magic originates from the Astral Sea, just as shadow magic originates with the Shadowfell. In the same way, psionics bleeds into the world where the mortal world touches the phrenic planes. Believers in this origin share common ground with those who subscribe to the "defenders of reality" theory. They maintain that psionic energy is not specifically a defense against outside corruption, but the natural result of contact between planar realms.

This section builds on the system presented in Player's Handbook 2 and focuses on how the various Dungeons & Dragons races might interact with the psionic power source. In addition, these pages expand on three other background categories—society, birth, and occupation. "Philosophies and Orders" (page 110) offers additional background opportunities for psionic characters.

Society

Psionic talent surfaces in individuals of all stations, from a starving peasant to an emperor's heir. The following background elements illustrate the complications psionic characters might experience as they struggle to master their emerging abilities.

Isolated: You were raised in a secret society that sniffs out psionic talent, then guides its development in those who have it. This controlled environment allowed you to grow into your ability, and you never experienced the uncertainty and confusion that many other psionics users face. You exceeded your tutors' expectations, quickly mastering the fundamentals and harnessing the fullness of your power at an early age. Your gifted psionic status came at the cost of isolation, however. You studied history and culture, but you had no actual experiences with the natural world, its wonders, or its terrors.

How do you see your childhood? Did you live in an ivory tower where you could indulge in whatever intellectual pursuits you wanted, free from fear, pain, and want? Or was the order's compound a prison to you? How and why did you eventually leave? Were you free to go when your training was complete? Did you run away before your lessons had ended? How does your inexperience with the world shape your personality, views, and behavior?

Associated Skills: Arcana, History

Monastic: You lived for years in a monastery, studying, training, and learning life lessons from your masters. You might have joined the institution to become enlightened, before unexpectedly discovering your untapped potential. You might have been abandoned on the monks' doorstep, your arrival seen as a sign of fortune and destiny. For you, the monastery might have been a place of too-oppressive discipline that eventually forced you to leave. Alternatively, you might have been free to come and go as you pleased and welcomed in the surrounding community.

Your education could have focused on scholarship or martial development. Were you a willing student, or did fate place you inside the monastery's walls? How did you fare in that environment? Did you have a personal instructor? If so, what was your relationship like? Did you form any lasting friendships? Did you make any enemies? How long has it been since you were at the monastery? Would you be welcomed back if you returned?

Associated Skills: Athletics, Religion

Ostracized: Many characters born with psionic talent find the guidance, comfort, and understanding that allows them to recognize their nature and embrace it. You were not so lucky. Left to your own devices, you used trial and error to navigate the murky waters of your mind as your life devolved into a series of accidents. Your anger might have burned out a friend's mind. Your despair could have driven another to suicide. Your wild thoughts could have sent doors slamming, crockery flying, or been the cause of any number of bizarre occurrences. Even though the strange events dogging your heels were just as perplexing to you, your kinfolk came to fear you. They suspected you were possessed, cursed, or trafficking with dark powers. Friendships ended, relationships died, and isolation closed in around you.

How did you cope with the alienation? Did anyone reach out to you? If so, did he or she escape the experience unharmed? Did you remain in the community but apart from it, or did you leave? How did you finally come to terms with what you could do? Now that you have achieved a modicum of control, how do you feel about the people who rejected you?

Associated Skills: Intimidate, Stealth

Birth

Even if your psionic talent remained latent for decades, the circumstances of your birth might have played a part in the path you would one day follow.

Awakened: Your birth was unremarkable. You were healthy and seemingly normal. Your parents or caretakers quickly noticed, however, that something was amiss. Your newborn eyes gleamed with awareness, the first sign that you possessed the intellect of a full-grown adult. You learned to speak within hours, and you started walking as soon as your muscles could support your weight. You proved to be a prodigy in nearly every discipline.

Your awakened mind gave you advantages over your peers, but your incredible intelligence proved disconcerting to youngsters and adults alike. Did you try to fit in, or did you abandon your peers' petty concerns and embrace your destiny? How have your childhood experiences influenced your interactions with others? What advantages did you gain from your early development? What events from that time still haunt you?

Associated Skills: Bluff, Intimidate

Calamity: Your birth was a momentous event. The ground groaned. The dark sky split open, lashing the landscape with violet lightning and horrid storms. Water turned to blood. Animals sickened and died. The world trembled in fear of what your birth promised. Under such inauspicious circumstances, the folk around you were scared of you from the start. Even if these signs signaled some other dire event, your birth in such a time surely marked you as a herald of impending doom.

You grew up swathed in the calamitous day's shadow. How did you come to terms with the dark destiny that lay ahead? Did you consult soothsayers for clues? If so, what did they say? Did you reject superstition, vowing to live your own life regardless of omens? When you discovered your psionic potential, did you see it as a confirmation of what people thought? Or was it an opportunity to prove everyone wrong?

Associated Skills: Arcana, Insight

Created: You look like a typical member of your race, indistinguishable from others of your kind. But you are not truly what you appear to be. You are a creation—a child born not of body but of mind. You might have been formed to serve a greater purpose, or you could have been an experiment. Regardless of why you were made, the unnatural circumstances of your birth instilled you with unusual power.

When did you learn that you were different? How have you come to terms with your existence? Do you count yourself as a genuine member of your people? Have you told anyone what you believe? Have you uncovered incontrovertible truth that connects you to your presumed maker? And if not, how do you truly know what you are?

Associated Skills: Arcana, Nature

Occupation

Psionic characters are attracted to occupations that allow them to take full advantage of their talent.

Astronomer: Occultists claim that the stars in the night sky are windows into the Outside, and that to look upon them is to invite madness and physical corruption. Indeed, tales tell of mad warlocks who traffic with alien entities, securing power from the stars themselves. As your mind has opened to new possibilities, you search the heavens for answers regarding your internal wellspring of psionic energy. You examine celestial movements for clues about the world's fate, and to perhaps catch a glimpse of the terrors that lurk between the twinkling lights.

Associated Skills: Arcana, History

Con Artist: Your talent for reading people proved invaluable to your criminal career. You have always been able to assess others' emotions, anticipating their actions and compelling them to do your bidding with subtle manipulation. But as your skill grew, you realized you were engaging in more than guesswork and misdirection. You could hear people's thoughts. Faced with the knowledge of your burgeoning psionic abilities, did you change course? Did you see yourself as having an unfair advantage or violating others with your power? Or did you embrace your abilities and use them to their fullest?

Associated Skills: Bluff, Insight

Seer: Strange dreams have regularly troubled your rest, some more peculiar than others. These dreams were clear but chaotic, revealing places and sights you had never seen before. In time, you began to witness your dreams unfolding in reality—predictive visions that you have come to know as true dreams. As you grew older, you began to experience the true dreams at will, allowing you to scout the future.

Now, your talent provides you with insights into the situations that await you, your companions, and the folk that come to you seeking aid and advice. But what you see does not always come to pass, for the future is mutable. How much do you depend on your visions? Do you see the prophesied future as a destination toward which you must walk, or as a warning of a destiny that you can consciously avoid?

Associated Skills: Bluff, Insight

Wanderer: As you walk the road ahead, you leave your past behind you where it belongs. When you came of age, you pulled up stakes and left everyone and everything you knew. Is fate drawing you toward a particular location or individual, or is the unconscious pull you feel compelling you to fulfill some inscrutable purpose? Are you traveling to escape something, perhaps to overcome a loss, a conflict, or a humiliation? Whatever your reason, you do not or cannot put down roots. Before you run the risk of settling into any particular place, you pick up and move on again.

Associated Skills: Nature, Perception

Racial Backgrounds

As the use of psionic power has spread over many centuries, a multitude of races have adopted a range of beliefs about the power source and its users. As a member of a psionic class, your character might be heavily influenced by his or her race's experiences or prejudices.

Given the expansive nature of human culture, human characters typically focus on geographical and professional backgrounds. Half-elves and muls (half-dwarves) can use those same backgrounds, or

Races from Other Sources

You can find drow and genasi in the Forgotten Realms Player's Guide; changelings, kalashtar, and warforged in the Eberron Player's Guide; and thri-kreen and muls in the Dark Sun Campaign Setting.

they can select a racial background from their non-human parent race. Githzerai and shardminds, with their strong racial ties to psionic power, should select backgrounds from among the orders and philosophies presented earlier in this chapter.

Changeling

Mirror Mind: A changeling who grows up in another race's community might lack a strong sense of identity, trying on appearance after appearance until finding one that fits. As a budding psionics user (even if you didn't recognize it at the time), you felt this lack of self more than most. This is particularly true if you were an ardent, forced to experience the emotions of others while uncertain of your own. What kinds of torment did your struggle with identity cause you? Did it teach you how to pass yourself off as someone you were not? Or have you lived the life of an outsider, never able to fit in?

Associated Skills: Bluff, Insight

Deva

Voice of a Dozen Generations: Accustomed to thinking in terms of souls and past lives, many devas subscribe to the "collective sentience" theory of psionics origin. Some devas additionally theorize that psionics draws not only on the minds of living beings, but on the thoughts of all sentient creatures that have ever lived. You believe that your psionic abilities are derived, in part, from the thoughts, dreams, and ambitions of your prior incarnations and angelic ancestors. But do you feel obligated to honor your forebears' convictions? Or is their constant presence in your mind an endless burden that prevents you from making your own way in the world?

Associated Skills: Diplomacy, History

Dragonborn

Hereditary Psionics User: Several of Arkhosia's noble households boasted psionic talent and stood at the forefront of the empire's war effort against Bael Turath. You are a descendant of one of those families, which were scattered after Arkhosia fell. But do you feel the pride, confidence, and obligation that come with your legendary bloodline? Or are you secretly ashamed of your past—knowing that your forebears were among Arkhosia's best warriors, and that their skill failed the empire in the end?

Associated Skills: History, Intimidate

Drow

Paranoid Manipulator: In a society built on betrayal, secrets, deception, and murder, the ability to tap into thought and emotion is both a blessing and a curse. If your power were to be discovered, you would not long survive the vengeance of your kin. How successfully did you learn to discern friends from enemies? Did you consistently misdirect and elude those who would do you harm? Or were you forced to flee your home one step ahead of the blades that you know are seeking for you still?

Associated Skills: Bluff, Perception

Dwarf

Iron Mind: As you learned to control your unbidden power and sought out teachings beyond the interest of most of your kinfolk, you remained steadfast in your psionics studies. With the resolve and discipline of your people, you set out to master your power as thoroughly as other dwarves master warfare or the crafts of stone and steel. But how did that mark you in the end? Do your comrades question your choices? Or do they embrace the demonstration of commitment and skill that you have undertaken over a lifetime?

Associated Skills: Insight, Intimidate

Eladrin, Elf, or Gnome

Fey Inheritor: Many fey resent psionics users, feeling that they debase magic and encourage other races to usurp powers that rightfully belong to the folk of the Feywild. You, however, take the more benign view that you do not betray your fey heritage by embracing your psionic abilities—you grow closer to it. By studying the psionic power source, do you hope to gain the wisdom and abilities that come naturally only to the archfey? And if you do so, will there be a price to pay for seeing the world as those powerful elders do?

Associated Skills: Arcana, Diplomacy

HECTOR ORTIZ

Genasi

Substance of Thought: A small number of genasi philosophers do not subscribe to well-known psionics origin theories. Instead, they speculate that the essence of thought might have originated in the Elemental Chaos, manifesting in the material world like all other elemental power. By subscribing to this view, do you perceive psionics as a means of establishing closer ties to the surging chaos reflected by the natural world? Or do you embrace it as a kind of primal energy—endless and all-encompassing as it threads through every living thing?

Associated Skills: Arcana, Nature

Goliath, Half-Orc, or Minotaur

Victim of Superstition: Not all goliaths, half-orcs, and minotaurs are intolerant of psionics users, but nearly all their primitive communities are. For months or years after developing your abilities, you struggled to hide them. Were you discovered and driven from your people like a common brigand? Or did your instinct and intuition inspire you to leave before your secret could be revealed?

Associated Skills: Bluff, Stealth

Halfling

The Wide-Open Mind: Like many psionics users, especially battleminds and ardents, you have long questioned your place in the world. As so many halflings do, you took to exploring the world in order to find the answers to your questions, embracing new cultures in an effort to define yourself by the standards of your people. Where did your psionics come from? What does your power say about you and your obligations to your people? Even after those questions are answered, will you be able to return to your homeland? Or will the embrace of the wider world prove too hard to shake off?

Associated Skills: Nature, Streetwise

Kalashtar

Enlightened Prodigy: As a child of a psychic race, it is unsurprising that you developed psionic power and chose to immerse yourself in its study. Your nature, culture, and faith encouraged you in this pursuit. But your fascination eclipsed the interests even of your fellow psionic kalashtar. How does your enlightened drive manifest now? Do you strive to perfect your abilities so you can fulfill your sacred duty to guide others toward a path of light and understanding? Or do you see yourself as superior to those you once studied with, forced to make your own way when they refuse to accept the superiority of your understanding?

Associated Skills: Heal, Religion

Shifter

Psychic Hunter: You come from a clan of shifters that dwells far from civilized regions. Your people have refused to let the increasing danger of the wilds scare them off. Unlike the many shifter communities that see psionic powers as inherently evil, your clan views them as a survival tool—no better or worse than any other. That cultural acceptance must still compete with your kind's baser instincts. When your psionic abilities first manifested, did you welcome them or were you forced to fight your own fears? Once you did accept who you were, did you do so because your psionics allows you to defend your people? Or is it more important that your power grants you a measure of superiority over your peers?

Associated Skills: Nature, Perception

Thri-Kreen

Cosmopolitan Perspective: Your burgeoning psionic abilities caused you to unwittingly tap into the collected minds of other psionics users. After that initial exposure, you found yourself feeling increasingly disconnected from the traditional thri-kreen views of community. Do you still find it hard to trust others, instinctively viewing those you meet as either predator or prey? Or have such instincts fallen by the wayside for you? Are you openly accepted by the folk of other races? Or does your monstrous appearance continue to inspire a mistrust that you must struggle to overcome?

Associated Skills: Diplomacy, Streetwise

Tiefling

Heir to Power: From the first time your psionic power manifested, you have been consumed by the feeling that you are beholden to someone—or something—for that power. Do you trace your family line back to the psionics users of Bael Turath? Or do you believe that the diabolic power rumored to still watch over tieflings has granted you this gift? Do you embrace your power regardless? Or do you search endlessly for insights into the origin of psionic power, hoping to understand the nature of that power to prevent it from consuming you?

Associated Skills: Arcana, Religion

Warforged

Psionic Artifice: For reasons unknown, you emerged from the creation forge with powers that marked you as a psionics user, and with the knowledge that prepared you for that path. Your uniqueness has been a constant burden to you, separating you from your own kind and the mortal races alike. Do you fully embrace your psionic nature, confident that you will never meet your equal? Or do you curse your power, constantly yearning for the emotional and intellectual solitude in which other warforged dwell?

Associated Skills: Insight, Streetwise

PSIONIC BLOODLINES

Psionic power manifests in the world in any number of ways. Sometimes it stirs from dormancy in an unsuspecting individual, slipping free to wreak havoc until its host can restore control. Other times, the power comes forth grudgingly, revealing its presence only after extensive and painstaking training. For a rare few, psionic power is more than energy to wield and shape as needed. For these individuals, it is the lifeblood flowing through their veins.

Elans and foulborn are not true races such as those presented in the Player's Handbook and other supplements. Rather, they are examples of ancient psionic bloodlines that recur from time to time among the humanoid races.

This section describes the elan and foulborn bloodlines, and introduces a new racial paragon path for each bloodline. Bloodline feats are presented starting on page 142.

Elan

Enlightened souls in bodies forged from psionic energy, driven to protect the world from the Far Realm's corruption

Elans are not born—they are created. Singled out and raised up from among a multitude of candidates, a character of the elan bloodline is freed from the body he or she has worn since birth and given a new form imbued with psionics. The first elans appeared in ages past to combat the growing threat posed by the Far Realm and its creations. Faced with an inability to withstand the Outside's corrupting influence, the greatest psionic champions forged new bodies to protect their minds from madness and their souls from corruption. From those first champions, all new elans have descended—each generation chosen from the best and brightest to carry on the struggle to save the mortal realm.

Play an elan if you want . . .

- to free yourself from mortal expectations and become a being of pure psionic energy.
- to be a member of an ancient society committed to fighting the aberrant menace.
- to be a member of a race that favors psionic classes.

Physical Qualities

Ancient magic known as the rite of Awakening is the process by which an individual strips away imperfections to become an elan. An elan's new form is an idealized version of his or her original form. Elans are exquisite specimens who have attractive features and possess none of the flaws they might once have had.

In addition to their new and improved forms, all elans share a characteristic that sets them apart from other members of their original races: Elans do not have pupils or irises. Their eyes are pure white and glow with a soft light when an elan uses psionic power.

Elans retain the predilections of their original cultures in fashion. The vainest elans favor revealing clothing that displays their perfect forms, though such behavior is frowned upon by most of their kind. Many elans also accentuate their attire with white, lavender, or blue crystals.

An elan's transformation is more than aesthetic, however, creating a physical form that serves as a better vessel for the psionic mind. Each body is formed from substance shaped and molded through psionics so that it can withstand the Far Realm's corrupting influence. Elans feel disturbingly cool to the touch. Their skin is smooth and hairless except for the head. An elan's hair is thick and heavy, and only the strongest wind can stir it.

As immortal creatures, elans do not age and suffer none of time's infirmities. Elans can, however, die through violence, accident, or illness, their bodies collapsing into puddles of psychic ectoplasm. This fluid reconstitutes if an elan is restored to life by the Raise Dead ritual or similar effects.

Playing an Elan

It takes a rare individual to undergo the transformation required to become an elan. The process is not easy, sometimes requiring years of testing. Mysterious elan psions known as the Cullers form a council that controls the rite of Awakening is. They give no second chances to aspirants who reveal any negative personality traits or weakness. Those selected for Awakening do not always survive the process, which taxes the mind as the body is stripped away. In the end, only the soul and spirit are left behind. The Cullers then reconstruct the flesh with the aspirant's help until a new vessel is completed.

Merging the consciousness with this new flesh is an even more difficult process. The mind sometimes rejects the transfer, attempting to break free from the psychic bonds that would hold it fast. Many elans must undertake the transformation more than once before it finally holds, and a large number of disembodied minds have been lost in the process.

Elan candidates are chosen for their adaptability and versatility, as well as for their unwavering commitment to the cause of fighting the Far Realm. The Cullers also look for candidates who have few cultural or social ties, since the longevity the transformation brings means that elans will likely outlive family, friends, and children. Morality is rarely a factor in a candidate's selection, since both evil and good profit from a world safeguarded from the aberrant menace. Elans are, however, rarely created from those displaying philosophical extremes, excessive piety, madness, or deviant behavior.

As an enlightened people, elans open their minds and hearts to all folk untouched by the Far Realm. They interact with anyone, from goblins in the remote wilds to eladrin in their shining spires. But members of the mortal races can sense the lingering strangeness inherent in the elans, which sometimes makes common folk uncomfortable around them. Elans are also known for manipulating other creatures and using them to advance the elans' agenda, giving elans a bad reputation in many cultures.

Elans have little use for deities. Having already subverted life and identity by transcending the limitations of a mortal existence, each elan believes that morality and destiny are to be freely chosen. In place of faith, elans ritualize the ongoing effort to master their immortal forms and the power within them.

Elan Characteristics: Arrogant, brooding, callous, cold, disciplined, flexible, inventive, reflective, relentless, versatile

Elan Names: Elans retain their names from before their transformation. Among themselves, elans recently emerged from the Awakening are titled Newmade. Those who have lived a few decades are called Made, and who have lived centuries are called Eternal.

Elan Backgrounds

In addition to the character backgrounds presented in this book and other supplements, an elan character has access to the following backgrounds.

Aberrant Slayer: Madness grows in the shadows, spawning new horrors to assail the world and corrupt it, twist it, and remake it into unspeakable forms. You are wholly consumed with destroying the menace of the Far Realm, though only you know what path brought you to the Awakening. Did you lose your people or loved ones to the aberrant menace? Or is your obsession merely intellectual, built on the knowledge that you must sacrifice yourself to stop this growing doom?

Associated Skills: Dungeoneering, Perception

Disgraced Pragmatist: Once, you thought it possible to fight the Far Realm and its horrors. Yet for every aberrant put to the torch, for every planar breach closed, the Outside's insidious power only seems to grow. Thus it was that you made the secret petition to the Cullers and claimed your new form. Now, how will you carry out the mission that you already know will destroy you in the end? Will you take the fight directly to the aberrant menace, confident that your new strength will carry the day? Or do you abandon that cause and instead hunt down those who betray their world by seeking to control the power of the Far Realm?

Associated Skills: Dungeoneering, Intimidate

JOHN STANKO

Psionic Incarnate

"My Awakening was a passage through enlightenment's door. What is now possible is beyond anything I could have imagined."

Prerequisite: Elan Heritage feat

The Awakening opened your mind to new possibilities, aiding you in the acquisition and use of psionics. To achieve your present power, you sacrificed the body to which you were born. But even though the replacement contains none of the flaws of that first vessel, this new form is no longer suitable to hold the perfection that is your mind. The power you have gained over the course of your adventures is working to reshape you once again.

The body that is the temple of your psionic power grows ever more resilient. You respond to the worst injuries by steeling yourself in preparation for more. Hunger and thirst become dim memories as your need for such crude nourishment passes. You find sleep unnecessary, outgrowing this last lingering connection to your mortal life. The physical perfection of your new form serves your mind at the highest level. You are the living incarnation of psionic power, and your body now reflects your mastery of that power.

Psionic Incarnate Path Features

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Psychic Resilience (11th level): You gain psychic resistance equal to 5 + one-half your level.

Repletion (11th level): Psionic energy sustains you. You no longer need to breathe, eat, or drink. You never make Endurance checks to resist the effects of starvation, thirst, or suffocation.

In addition, you do not sleep. You instead enter a period of dormancy during which time you replenish the psionic energy needed to sustain your form. You need to spend four hours in this state to gain the same benefit other races gain from taking a six-hour extended rest. While dormant, you are fully aware of your surroundings and notice approaching enemies and other events as normal.

Resurging Action (11th level): You can spend an action point to regain 2 power points instead of taking an extra action.

Perfect Resilience (16th level): The first time you become bloodied in an encounter, you gain resist 5 to all damage until the end of your next turn.

Psionic Incarnate Disciplines

Discorporate Retaliation Psionic Incarnate Attack 11

Your body responds to attack by slipping the bonds of the material world, then unleashing a vicious psychic counterstrike.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Psychic
Immediate Interrupt Close blast 3
Trigger: You are hit by an attack
Effect: You are insubstantial until the end of the triggering attacker's turn.
Target: Each enemy in blast
Attack: Intelligence, Wisdom, or Charisma + 6 vs. Will Level 21: Intelligence, Wisdom, or Charisma + 9 vs. Will Hit: 3d6 + Intelligence, Wisdom, or Charisma psychic damage.
Augment 2
Close blast 5
Special: When you gain this power, choose Intelligence, Wisdom, or Charisma as the ability you use when making attack rolls and damage rolls with this power.

Elan Recovery Psionic Incarnate Utility 12

You focus mind and body to better shake off the afflictions imposed by your enemies.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain a +5 power bonus to saving throws until the end of your next turn.

Hidden Reserves Psionic Incarnate Attack 20

You draw psionic energy from your body to power a single devastating attack.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Personal
Effect: Make an attack using an augmentable at-will power. You can use any of the power's augmentations without spending power points, and the power deals 5 extra psychic damage and deals half damage on a miss.

STEVEN BELLEDIN

Foulborn

Touched by madness, a people burdened by the Far Realm's blessing

For most people, the natural world is the only world that is. The gloomy Shadowfell, the verdant Feywild, and the domains of the demons and devils are only legend. Few deny that the gods exist, but the starry heavens of the Astral Sea are seldom thought of as a place to which mortals might travel. Any planes beyond those mythical realms are considered by most folk to be matters for theologians and philosophers.

But there exists living proof of something more.

Aberrant creatures owe their existence to the union of the natural world and the Far Realm. Where the Outside surges against the natural boundaries of creation, contaminating energy warps and remakes anything it touches. This fell energy acts as a gateway through which the aberrant entities of the Far Realm tear free of that plane to thrash their way into the natural world. At other times, the energy of the Outside carries aberrant parasites that lodge themselves in living flesh to foment a transformation.

For generations, the Far Realm's hunger has thus transformed the mortal realm. Some changes are profound and immediate; others lie dormant, waiting with dim cunning for the best moment to reveal themselves. The most insidious of these lingering transformations spawns the foulborn.

Found among every race and culture, the foulborn are a grim demonstration of how widespread the Far Realm's stain extends, and how insidious its corruption can be. A people cursed, the foulborn shoulder a difficult burden, harboring within them the gravest threat the world will ever face.

Play a foulborn if you want . . .

- ✦ to struggle against the corruption of the Far Realm inside you.
- ✦ to have an intimate connection to the conflict between the world and the Outside.
- ✦ to be a member of a race that favors psionic classes.

Physical Qualities

Most creatures that feel the Far Realm's touch do not escape the experience unchanged. When affected by the Outside's seething energy, a creature's flesh might bubble, warp, or sprout tentacles. As its mind melts, its mouth is locked into a grin of madness. On occasion, however, the presence of the Outside does not effect an immediate transformation, but rather lays a seed of corruption that can linger unseen for years.

In some cases, such corruption manifests abruptly, transforming the humanoid host into a creature of madness. Other times, this taint does not appear in its unwitting host and instead passes unseen into its host's progeny. Generations later, it manifests with no warning, transforming an otherwise healthy child into a foulborn.

Foulborn are found only among the natural races; the corruption that spawns them does not manifest in warforged or other living constructs. Most foulborn do not exhibit signs of their heritage until adolescence or later, remaining more or less physically indistinguishable from others of their kind. Yet even with no outward sign, others can sense a subtle wrongness in a foulborn, perceiving a hidden menace in the eyes, the smile, or the shadow he or she casts.

When a foulborn's true nature finally reveals itself, his or her life is never the same. The effect of the Far Realm's touch manifests uniquely in each individual; the most obvious signs of physical corruption can range from the merely cosmetic to the truly bizarre. Skin, eyes, and hair of odd colors or patterns are common, as are unusually broad grins, eyes slightly out of place, extra digits, and so on. The worst changes bring about terrible suffering, and some foulborn manifest vestigial limbs, misplaced body parts, slavering maws in their palms, eyestalks, slimy skin, and any other feature suitable to their dark heritage.

Foulborn have the same physical characteristics as their original race, and can live as long.

Playing a Foulborn

The transformation into a foulborn comes at a terrible psychological price. Only the most disturbed creatures can delight in the violation of body that comes with this bloodline. The corruption doesn't always inspire a mental or spiritual transformation, but coming to terms with the flesh's betrayal is the first challenge every foulborn must face if he or she has any hope at leading a normal life. Even disciplined minds suffer as a result of this pressure, and foulborn can struggle with their sense of self for the rest of their days.

The nature of psionics remains shrouded in mystery, but most sages connect its rise in the mortal realm to the threat of the Far Realm. Foulborn are uniquely positioned to take advantage of psionic power, because they are creatures of both realms. But few foulborn are welcome in psionics colleges or orders. As a result, they must learn to control their gifts on their own.

Life is hard for foulborn. Those possessing the least unsettling transformations can blend in with other races. The more profound a foulborn's visible corruption, the more hostility and suspicion he or she faces. The lucky ones are driven out of their communities with angry mobs at their heels. The unlucky face inquisitors, zealots, and others who seek to destroy them to prevent their curse from spreading.

Though most foulborn flee from their people eventually, they are too few and too scattered to form societies of their own. Many turn to wandering in the untamed wilderness, seeking the shelter and comforts there that were denied them in civilization. Foulborn are suspicious and secretive by nature, and slow to trust others. When they form friendships, foulborn are loyal to the end—going to any length to preserve this rare treasure.

Foulborn Characteristics: Angry, bizarre, detached, deviant, hideous, insane, reserved, rigid, secretive, tortured, unnerving, violent, wild

Foulborn Names: Foulborn retain the names they were given at birth and reflect the variety of cultures in which foulborn appear.

Foulborn Backgrounds

Foulborn characters can make use of many of the backgrounds presented earlier in this chapter (particularly the ostracized, calamity, and created backgrounds). Because of their unique nature, foulborn can also select an additional background from those presented below. These backgrounds are focused specifically on the physical manifestation of the foulborn's innate connection to the Far Realm. Other options might be available at the Dungeon Master's discretion.

Bestial: You exhibit animalistic features or characteristics. You could have a tail, gleaming eyes, or goat legs. Your bestial trait might be merely cosmetic, or it might give you an advantage such as excellent balance or increased mobility.

Associated Skills: Acrobatics, Athletics

Chameleon: Your skin alters its coloring to blend in with your surroundings. Although clothing diminishes this effect somewhat, you still have a knack for escaping notice.

Associated Skills: Stealth

Exotic Appearance: You possess an unusual appearance, typically involving hair, eye, or skin coloration. Your skin might be unusually colored for your race, or it might be oddly patterned with checks, diamonds, or whorls. Alternatively, your eyes might be solid black, pure white, or multicolored. Such an appearance might be frightening to those around you, or oddly alluring.

Associated Skills: Diplomacy, Intimidate

Hulking: You are exceptionally large for your race. Your size doesn't change, but you might be tall, broad-bodied, or corpulent. Your size might give you greater endurance or make you more intimidating.

Associated Skills: Endurance, Intimidate

Keen Senses: You have keen senses thanks to extra eyes, eyestalks, spare ears, antennae, or particularly sensitive skin.

Associated Skills: Perception

JOHN STANKO

Impure Scion

"This power is my burden to carry, so it is mine to use as I see fit."

Prerequisite: Foulborn Heritage

A foulborn's life is a difficult one, and no one knows this better than you. You have carried the Far Realm's burden within you for more years than you can count. You long ago came to terms with your corruption, adapting to the unsightly transformation you were forced to endure. In doing so, you discovered ways to make the curse work for you. Many years spent testing your capabilities revealed unexpected advantages that help you exceed your normal limitations, enabling you not only to survive but to thrive.

Reflection and understanding do not come without a price, however. The more you draw on your corrupted power, the greater its effect on you and the more unhinged your mind becomes. This state of being lends itself to strange delusions and compulsions, but the power you gain is worth it. When you fully come into your legacy, you learn to share your gift with others, causing them to undergo transformations that wrack the body and mind.

Impure Scion Path Features

Paragon Power Points (11th level): You gain 2 additional power points.

Terrifying Action (11th level): When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you mark any enemy adjacent to you until the end of your next turn.

Unnatural Perception (11th level): You gain a +2 bonus to Insight checks, Perception checks, and initiative checks. You also have blindsight 5 while you are blinded.

Warped Mind (16th level): You gain a +1 bonus to Will. Whenever an enemy hits you with an attack that targets your Will, you gain a cumulative +1 bonus to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

LUCIO PARRILLO

Impure Scion Path Disciplines

Otherworldly Pulse — Impure Scion Attack 11

You channel the corruption of the Far Realm to attack the minds of nearby creatures and leave them reeling.

Encounter ✦ Augmentable, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: Constitution, Intelligence, or Charisma + 6 vs. Will Level 21: Constitution, Intelligence, or Charisma + 9 vs. Will
Hit: 4d6 + Constitution, Intelligence, or Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn. If the target is aberrant, it takes 2d6 extra psychic damage.
Level 21: 6d6 + Constitution, Intelligence, or Charisma modifier psychic damage.
Augment 2
Close burst 3
Target: Each enemy in burst
Special: When you gain this power, choose Constitution, Intelligence, or Charisma as the ability you use when making attack rolls and damage rolls with this power.

Strange Anatomy — Impure Scion Utility 12

The corruption of your body absorbs the worst of an attack.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: You take damage from an attack
Effect: You take half damage from the triggering attack. If the triggering attack is a critical hit, it turns into a normal hit.

Appalling Transformation — Impure Scion Attack 20

You call forth the contamination of the Far Realm, transforming an enemy into a creature too awful to behold.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Constitution, Intelligence, or Charisma + 9 vs. Fortitude. If the target is aberrant, you have combat advantage for this attack.
Hit: 2d6 + Constitution, Intelligence, or Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: The target assumes the form of the appalling transformation (save ends). While in this form, the target is dazed, slowed, and takes ongoing 15 psychic damage. Creatures not immune to fear take a −2 penalty to attack rolls for attacks that include the target.
Aftereffect: The target takes 10 damage.
Special: When you gain this power, choose Constitution, Intelligence, or Charisma as the ability you use when making attack rolls and damage rolls with this power.

New Feats

The new feats presented in this section are geared toward psionic characters, and add to the psionic feats introduced in Player's Handbook 3.

Augment Feats

Psionic energy flows from within and from without, and those who have the talent to wield its power can push beyond their physical limits and shape the world around them. Some psionic characters use their power unconsciously, allowing the magic to well up internally before releasing it in combat. But most psionic power users gather and store psionic energy in a kind of spiritual reservoir, then tap it as needed. Disciplines are the most obvious outlet for calling on such stored energy, but psionic characters can develop other methods for making use of it. Augment feats are one such method.

Only psionic characters who have the Psionic Augmentation class feature can take augment feats. The word "Augment" in brackets after a feat's name indicates that the feat is an augment feat. Augment feats allow you to spend power points to enhance actions or die rolls. Each feat describes how you can spend power points to gain the improved effect.

Unless the feat specifies otherwise, you spend the indicated power points to use the augmentation at any time as a free action. If you have two or more augment feats that allow you to spend power points under the same circumstances, you can spend power points for only one of those feats each time those circumstances arise.

MATIAS TAPIA

Heroic Tier Feats

Feats in this section are available to characters of any level who meet the prerequisites.

Autohypnosis

Prerequisite: Any psionic class, trained in Arcana
Benefit: You gain one healing surge.

While you are not bloodied, when you would make an Endurance check, you can make an Arcana check instead.

Befuddling Thoughts

Prerequisite: Changeling, changeling trick racial power, psion, send thoughts power, Telepathy Focus class feature
Benefit: You can expend your send thoughts as a free action to use your changeling trick as a ranged 20 power.

Beguiling Torment [Augment]

Prerequisite: Psionic Augmentation class feature
Benefit: Whenever you daze or stun an enemy using a psionic power, you can spend 1 power point to slide that enemy 1 square.

Bloodied Concentration

Prerequisite: Psion
Benefit: While you are bloodied, you gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls using augmented at-will psion attack powers.

Bloodied Enmity

Prerequisite: Ardent, Mantle of Impulsiveness class feature
Benefit: The first time you are bloodied during an encounter, your melee attacks deal 1d6 extra damage until the end of your next turn.

Blurred Speed

Prerequisite: Battlemind, blurred step power
Benefit: When you use your blurred step, you shift 2 squares instead of 1 square.

Bolstering Spike

Prerequisite: Battlemind, mind spike power
Benefit: When you use your mind spike, you gain temporary hit points equal to your Constitution modifier.

Brimming Wrath

Prerequisite: Half-orc, furious assault racial power, battlemind

Benefit: When you use your furious assault and have at least 1 power point, each enemy marked by you takes psychic damage equal to your Strength modifier.

Crack the Mountain

Prerequisite: Monk, Stone Fist class feature

Benefit: When you hit an enemy with a daily attack power, the enemy is also slowed (save ends). If the attack already slows the enemy, you instead slide the enemy 2 squares.

Deft Eruption

Prerequisite: Ardent, ardent eruption power

Benefit: The bonus to damage rolls for your ardent eruption increases by 2.

Double Scrutiny

Prerequisite: Psion, shaped consciousness power

Benefit: While the fragment conjured by your shaped consciousness is within 5 squares of you, you gain a +3 bonus to Insight checks and Perception checks.

Feral Advance

Prerequisite: Elf, battlemind, speed of thought power

Benefit: When you use your speed of thought, use your Dexterity modifier in place of your Charisma modifier to determine how far you move.

Feywild Advance

Prerequisite: Eladrin, battlemind, blurred step power

Benefit: When you use your blurred step and have at least 1 power point, you can teleport a number of squares equal to your Intelligence modifier (minimum 1 square) instead of shifting.

Fluid Motion

Prerequisite: Monk

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to speed. This bonus increases to +2 at 11th level.

Gestalt Anchor

Prerequisite: Kalashtar, ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature

Benefit: You and allies within the radius of your Ardent Mantle gain a +2 bonus to initiative checks.

The first time you drop to 0 power points during an encounter, allies within the radius of your Ardent Mantle gain a +2 bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Group in Motion

Prerequisite: Half-elf, battlemind, speed of thought power

Benefit: When you use your speed of thought, each ally adjacent to you can shift 1 square as a free action.

Harrying Step

Prerequisite: Battlemind, blurred step power, persistent harrier power

Benefit: When you use your blurred step, you can teleport to any square adjacent to the triggering enemy instead of shifting.

Haunted Darkness

Prerequisite: Drow, cloud of darkness racial power, psion

Benefit: While you are inside your own cloud of darkness, your unaugmented psion at-will attack powers deal 3 extra psychic damage.

Haunting Sounds [Augment]

Prerequisite: Gnome, ghost sound power, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: While you have at least 1 power point, you can use your ghost sound as an at-will power.

When you use your ghost sound, you can spend 1 power point to gain combat advantage with your next attack made before the end of your turn against one enemy adjacent to the target object or square.

Healing Fist

Prerequisite: Githzerai, monk

Benefit: When you use your second wind, you gain a bonus to damage rolls equal to your Wisdom modifier until the end of your next turn.

Helpful Hint

Prerequisite: Halfling, psion, send thoughts power

Benefit: Whenever an ally you can see within 20 squares of you fails a saving throw, you can expend your send thoughts as a free action to allow the ally to reroll the saving throw.

Human Ingenuity

Prerequisite: Human, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: When you spend an action point to make an extra attack, you regain 1 power point.

Immovable Resilience

Prerequisite: Battlemind, battle resilience power

Benefit: When you use your battle resilience, you can ignore forced movement until the end of your next turn.

Io's Roar

Prerequisite: Dragonborn, dragon breath racial power, any psionic class

Benefit: Any target hit by your dragon breath attack gains vulnerable 5 psychic until the end of your turn.

HEROIC TIER FEATS

| Any Class | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Autohypnosis | Any psionic class, trained in Arcana | Gain 1 healing surge; substitute Arcana for Endurance |
| Beguiling Torment | Psionic Augmentation | When you daze or stun, augment to slide enemy |
| Haunting Sounds | Gnome, ghost sound, Psionic Augmentation | Use ghost sound as at-will; augment to gain combat advantage |
| Human Ingenuity | Human, Psionic Augmentation | Spend action point to attack, regain 1 power point |
| Io's Roar | Dragonborn, dragon breath, any psionic class | Dragon breath confers vulnerable 5 psychic |
| Psionic Celerity* | Psionic Augmentation | +1 to speed when charging or running; augment to increase to +2 |
| Psionic Fortune* | Psionic Augmentation | +1 to saving throws; augment to increase to +3 |
| Psionic Initiative* | Psionic Augmentation | +3 to initiative check; augment to increase to +6 |
| Psionic Reflexes* | Psionic Augmentation | +1 to opportunity attacks; augment to increase to +2 |
| Psionic Skill* | Psionic Augmentation | +2 to checks with chosen skill; augment to increase to +3 |
| Psionic Toughness* | Psionic Augmentation | +3 hit points; augment to regain additional hit points with second wind |
| Shard Link | Shardmind, Telepathy, any psionic class | Share combat advantage with ally |
| Ubiquitous Step | Eladrin, fey step, Psionic Augmentation | Regain fey step at 0 power points |
| Zerth Instincts | Githzerai, iron mind, any psionic class | Shift with iron mind, or expend iron mind to cancel surprise |

*Augment feat

Iron Parry

Prerequisite: Monk, Iron Soul class feature

Benefit: When you are wielding a weapon (other than your monk unarmed strike), wearing cloth armor or no armor, and not using a shield, you gain a +1 bonus to AC.

Iron Trap

Prerequisite: Githzerai, iron mind racial power, battlemind

Benefit: When an attack misses you because of the bonus to all defenses granted by your iron mind, you mark the triggering attacker and gain combat advantage against it until the end of your next turn.

Jagged Force

Prerequisite: Shardmind, psion

Benefit: You gain a +2 feat bonus to damage rolls with force powers. This bonus increases to +3 at 11th level and +4 at 21st level.

Mantle of Understanding

Prerequisite: Ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature

Benefit: When you make a save, allies within the radius of your Ardent Mantle gain a +2 bonus to saving throws until the start of your next turn.

Martyr's Surge

Prerequisite: Ardent, ardent surge power

Benefit: When you use your ardent surge while bloodied, the hit points regained by the target increase by 1d6.

Mindlink

Prerequisite: Psion, send thoughts power

Benefit: When you use your send thoughts, your psion attacks against the target ignore concealment and cover until the end of the encounter, or until you or the target drops to 0 hit points or fewer.

Nature's Sentinel

Prerequisite: Wilden, Nature's Aspect racial trait, battlemind, battlemind's demand power, blurred step power, mind spike power

Benefit: Some of your powers gain an additional benefit depending on your current Nature's Aspect.

Aspect of the Ancients: When you use your blurred step, you shift 1 extra square.

Aspect of the Destroyer: When you use your mind spike, the target takes extra damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Aspect of the Hunter: When you use your battlemind's demand, you can target one additional creature in the burst.

Outraged Vengeance

Prerequisite: Ardent, ardent outrage power

Benefit: Allies gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls against any target granting combat advantage from your ardent outrage power.

Path to Clarity

Prerequisite: Githzerai, ardent, ardent surge power

Benefit: When you use your ardent surge, the target can also make a saving throw against any one effect that dazes, dominates, or stuns him or her.

HEROIC TIER FEATS CONT.

| Ardent | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Bloodied Enmity | Mantle of Impulsiveness | When first bloodied, melee attacks deal 1d6 extra damage |
| Deft Eruption | Ardent eruption | +2 damage for ardent eruption |
| Gestalt Anchor | Kalashtar, Ardent Mantle | You and allies gain +2 to initiative checks; allies gain +2 to all defenses when you drop to 0 power points |
| Mantle of Understanding | Ardent Mantle | Allies gain +2 to saving throws when you save |
| Martyr's Surge | Ardent surge | While you are bloodied, ardent surge hit points regained by target increase by 1d6 |
| Outraged Vengeance | Ardent outrage | Allies gain +2 damage against ardent outrage target |
| Path to Clarity | Githzerai, ardent surge | Ardent surge allows saving throw to end some effects |
| Refracting Mantle | Shardmind, shard swarm, Ardent Mantle | Allies in Ardent Mantle gain combat advantage with shard swarm |
| Surging Mantle | Ardent Mantle | Increase Ardent Mantle radius by 2 while you have 0 power points |
| Wind of Sympathy | Ardent Mantle | Use your second wind and ally in Ardent Mantle can use second wind |

| Battlemind | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Blurred Speed | Blurred step | Shift 2 with blurred step |
| Bolstering Spike | Mind spike | Gain temporary hit points with mind spike |
| Brimming Wrath | Half-orc, furious assault | Marked enemies take damage when you use furious assault |
| Feral Advance | Elf, speed of thought | Dex modifier determines speed of thought distance |
| Feywild Advance | Eladrin, blurred step | Teleport Int modifier with blurred step instead of shifting |
| Group in Motion | Half-elf, speed of thought | Allies adjacent to you shift with speed of thought |
| Harrying Step | Blurred step, persistent harrier | Teleport instead of shift with blurred step |
| Immovable Resilience | Battle resilience | Ignore forced movement after using battle resilience |
| Iron Trap | Githzerai, iron mind | Gain combat advantage when enemy misses because of iron mind |
| Nature's Sentinel | Wilden, Nature's Aspect, battlemind's demand, blurred step, mind spike | Battlemind powers gain benefit corresponding to your Nature's Aspect |
| Quick Reactions | Speed of thought | Cha for Dex on initiative check, +2 to speed with speed of thought |
| Resilient Demand | Battle resilience, battlemind's demand | Gain +2 to all defenses with augmented battlemind's demand |
| Thought Warning | Kalashtar, Telepathy | You and allies shift when you drop to 0 power points |

Power Cascade

Prerequisite: Psion

Benefit: When you hit an enemy with a daily psion attack power, your next attack against that enemy made before the end of your next turn using an unaugmented psion attack power deals 1d6 extra force or psychic damage.

Psionic Celerity [Augment]

Prerequisite: Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: Whenever you run or charge, you gain a +1 bonus to speed.

During a move action or a charge, you can spend 1 power point to gain a +2 bonus to speed until the end of your turn.

Psionic Fortune [Augment]

Prerequisite: Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: While you have at least 1 power point, you gain a +1 feat bonus to saving throws.

When you make a saving throw, you can spend 1 power point to increase the feat bonus to +3 until the end of your turn.

Psionic Initiative [Augment]

Prerequisite: Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: You gain a +3 feat bonus to initiative checks.

When you roll initiative, you can spend 1 power point to increase the bonus to +6.

Psionic Reflexes [Augment]

Prerequisite: Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus to opportunity attack rolls.

When you make an opportunity attack, you can spend 1 power point to gain a +2 power bonus to the attack roll.

Psionic Skill [Augment]

Prerequisite: Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: Choose any skill. You gain a +2 feat bonus to checks with that skill.

When you make a check with that skill, you can spend 1 power point to gain a +3 power bonus to the skill check.

Special: You can take this feat more than once. Each time you take this feat, choose a different skill.

HEROIC TIER FEATS CONT.

| Monk | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Crack the Mountain | Stone Fist | Enemy is slowed when hit by daily power |
| Fluid Motion | — | +1 to speed |
| Healing Fist | Githzerai | Gain damage bonus with second wind |
| Iron Parry | Iron Soul | +1 to AC with weapon, no armor, no shield |
| Shifting Stone | Dwarf | Shift with save to avoid being knocked prone |
| Skipping Stone Flurry | Flurry of Blows | Target one enemy within 10 squares with Flurry of Blows and sling |
| Skittering Mouse Style | Small size | Shift through enemies' spaces with movement technique |
| Violent Awakening | Half-orc, furious assault, Flurry of Blows | Flurry of Blows deals extra damage with furious assault |
| Water Splitting Stone | — | Unarmed strike critical hit causes target to lose resistances |

| Psion | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Befuddling Thoughts | Changeling, changeling trick, send thoughts, Telepathy Focus | Changeling trick becomes ranged 20 with send thoughts |
| Bloodied Concentration | — | +1 to attacks with augmented at-will powers while bloodied |
| Double Scrutiny | Shaped consciousness | +3 to Insight and Perception while within 5 squares of conjured fragment |
| Haunted Darkness | Drow, cloud of darkness | Deal extra psychic damage when inside cloud of darkness |
| Helpful Hint | Halfling, send thoughts | Expend send thoughts to let ally reroll saving throw |
| Jagged Force | Shardmind | +2 to damage with force powers |
| Mindlink | Send thoughts | Use send thoughts to ignore cover and concealment |
| Power Cascade | — | Extra force or psychic damage after hitting with daily attack |
| Unseen Dread | Gnome | Slide target you are hidden from after hitting with attack |
| Vicious Intrusion | Distract | Extra damage to target of distract |

Psionic Toughness [Augment]

Prerequisite: Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: When you take this feat, you gain additional hit points. You gain 3 additional hit points at each tier of play (at 1st, 11th, and 21st level).

In addition, when you use your second wind, you can spend 1 power point to regain 5 additional hit points. The additional hit points regained increase to 10 at 11th level and 15 at 21st level.

Quick Reactions

Prerequisite: Battlemind, speed of thought power

Benefit: When you roll initiative, you can use your Charisma modifier in place of your Dexterity modifier. In addition, when you use your speed of thought, you gain a +2 bonus to speed until the end of your next turn (after any surprise round, if applicable).

Refracting Mantle

Prerequisite: Shardmind, shard swarm racial power, ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature

Benefit: When you use your shard swarm, the target also grants combat advantage to allies within the radius of your Ardent Mantle until the end of your next turn.

Resilient Demand

Prerequisite: Battlemind, battle resilience power, battlemind's demand power

Benefit: When you augment your battlemind's demand, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.

Shard Link

Prerequisite: Shardmind, Telepathy racial trait, any psionic class

Benefit: Once during each of your turns, when you attack an enemy that you have combat advantage against, choose one ally within range of your telepathy. The ally gains combat advantage on his or her next attack against that enemy made before the start of your next turn.

Shifting Stone

Prerequisite: Dwarf, monk

Benefit: When you make a save to avoid being knocked prone, you can also shift a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier as a free action.

Skipping Stone Flurry

Prerequisite: Monk, Flurry of Blows class feature

Benefit: When you use your Flurry of Blows power and you have a sling in hand, you can replace one normal target of that power with one creature within 10 squares of you. This does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Skittering Mouse Style

Prerequisite: Small size, monk

Benefit: When you use a movement technique to shift 3 or more squares, you can shift through enemies' spaces.

Surging Mantle
Prerequisite: Ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature
Benefit: While you have no power points remaining, the radius of your Ardent Mantle increases by 2 squares.

Thought Warning
Prerequisite: Kalashtar, Telepathy racial trait, battlemind
Benefit: The first time you drop to 0 power points during an encounter, you and each ally within range of your telepathy can shift 1 square as a free action.

Ubiquitous Step
Prerequisite: Eladrin, fey step racial power, Psionic Augmentation class feature
Benefit: The first time you drop to 0 power points during an encounter, you regain the use of your fey step.

Unseen Dread
Prerequisite: Gnome, psion
Benefit: When you hit an enemy you are hidden from using a psion attack power, you slide that enemy 2 squares.

Vicious Intrusion
Prerequisite: Psion, distract power
Benefit: When you use your distract, your next attack against the target with a psion attack power made before the end of your next turn gains a +3 power bonus to the damage roll.

Violent Awakening
Prerequisite: Half-orc, furious assault racial power, monk, Flurry of Blows class feature
Benefit: When your furious assault and your Flurry of Blows power are triggered by the same hit, one target of your Flurry of Blows power takes extra damage equal to your Strength modifier.

Water Splitting Stone
Prerequisite: Monk
Benefit: When you score a critical hit using your monk unarmed strike, the target loses any resistance until the end of your next turn.

Wind of Sympathy
Prerequisite: Ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature
Benefit: When you use your second wind, one ally within the radius of your Ardent Mantle can use his or her second wind as a free action.

Zerth Instincts
Prerequisite: Githzerai, iron mind racial power, any psionic class
Benefit: When you use your iron mind, you can also shift 1 square as a free action.
In addition, when you are surprised, you can expend your iron mind to not be surprised.

Paragon Tier Feats
Feats in this section are available to characters of 11th level or higher who meet the feats' other prerequisites.

Anchoring Push
Prerequisite: 11th level, psion, forceful push power
Benefit: When you use your forceful push, you also slow the target until the end of your next turn.

Battle Psion
Prerequisite: 11th level, psion
Benefit: You gain a +2 feat bonus to damage rolls with at-will psion force or psychic powers. While you have no power points remaining, this bonus increases to +3. The bonus increases to +3 or +4 at 21st level.

Body and Mind
Prerequisite: 11th level, psion, shaped consciousness power
Benefit: While the fragment conjured by your shaped consciousness is within 5 squares of you, you gain a +1 bonus to all defenses.

Blurring Speed
Prerequisite: 11th level, battlemind, speed of thought power
Benefit: When you use your speed of thought, you also have concealment until the start of your next turn (after any surprise round, if applicable).

Bolstering Wind
Prerequisite: 11th level, ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature
Benefit: When you use your second wind, each bloodied ally within the radius of your Ardent Mantle regains hit points equal to 5 + your Wisdom modifier. The hit points regained increase to 10 + your Wisdom modifier at 21st level.

Centered Intuition
Prerequisite: 11th level, monk, Centered Breath class feature
Benefit: When you roll initiative, you can roll twice and use either result. If you roll the same number both times, you gain a +5 bonus to your initiative check.

Confounding Technique
Prerequisite: 11th level, monk
Benefit: You can swap places with an ally adjacent to you as a move action. This movement does not provoke opportunity attacks.

PARAGON TIER FEATS

| Any Class | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Empty Vessel | — | Drop to 0 power points and gain +2 to attacks and defenses |
| Prescient Dodge* | Psionic Augmentation | Gain +2 to all defenses until first turn; augment to gain +2 to all defenses after hitting enemy |
| Psionic Rush* | Psionic Augmentation | When you use action point, reduce augment cost by 1 |
| Psychic Wail | Any psionic class | Reduce enemy to 0 hit points with psychic attack and another enemy grants combat advantage |
| Threefold Fortitude* | Psionic Augmentation | +1 to Fortitude; augment to increase to +3 |
| Threefold Reflex* | Psionic Augmentation | +1 to Reflex; augment to increase to +3 |
| Threefold Will* | Psionic Augmentation | +1 to Will; augment to increase to +3 |

*Augment feat

| Ardent | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Bolstering Wind | Ardent Mantle | Use second wind and allies in Ardent Mantle regain hit points |
| Implacable Wrath | Ardent outrage | Push ardent outrage target 1 square |
| Instinctive Advance | Ardent eruption, Ardent Mantle | Ardent eruption target can shift 1 square |
| Lingering Swiftness | Ardent alacrity | Ardent alacrity target moves faster |
| Mantle of Caution | Ardent Mantle | While you are bloodied, allies in Ardent Mantle gain +2 to Fortitude, Reflex, and Will |
| Rising Hopes | Ardent surge, Mantle of Clarity | Dying target of ardent surge can stand up and shift |
| Suppressive Surge | Ardent surge | Ardent surge prevents enemies in Ardent Mantle from regaining hit points |
| Violent Joy | Ardent surge, Mantle of Elation | Ardent surge target scores critical hits on 19-20 |

| Battlemind | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Blurring Speed | Speed of thought | Gain concealment with speed of thought |
| Ferocious Resilience | Battle resilience | +2 to melee damage with battle resilience |
| Harried Recovery | Persistent harrier | Regain persistent harrier when you drop to 0 power points |
| Harrier's Control | Persistent harrier | Persistent harrier marks and slides target |
| Iron Propulsion | — | Ignore armor's speed penalty while you have 1 power point |
| Staggering Spike | Mind spike | Mind spike target grants combat advantage to attacked ally |
| Unstoppable Speed | — | When first bloodied, move 3 + Cha modifier |

Confusing Distraction

Prerequisite: 11th level, psion, distract power

Benefit: When you use your distract, the target also cannot take opportunity actions until the end of your next turn.

Corrosive Thoughts

Prerequisite: 11th level, psion

Benefit: Whenever a creature fails a saving throw against an effect caused by one of your psion attack powers, it gains vulnerable 3 psychic until the end of your next turn. This vulnerability increases to 6 psychic at 21st level.

Dazing Fist

Prerequisite: 11th level, monk, Stone Fist class feature

Benefit: When you hit an enemy with a daily attack power, you also daze the enemy (save ends). If the attack already dazes the enemy, it instead deals 5 extra damage.

Driving Rain

Prerequisite: 11th level, monk

SEAN MURRAY

PARAGON TIER FEATS CONT.

| Monk | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Centered Intuition | Centered Breath | Roll initiative twice, with bonus if you roll the same number |
| Confounding Technique | — | Swap places with an ally adjacent to you |
| Dazing Fist | Stone Fist | Target of daily power is also dazed |
| Driving Rain | — | Ki focus bonus to bull rush, and bull rush farther |
| Master's Instruction | — | Grant ally bonus to attack when you miss with encounter attack |
| Serenity in Simplicity | — | +1 to attacks with at-will powers when daily powers are expended |
| Still Water | — | +2 to AC with at-will attack when encounter powers are expended |
| Waking Senses | — | No penalty to Perception checks when blinded, deafened, or sleeping |
| Whirling Iron Defense | Iron soul flurry of blows | +1 to all defenses against iron soul flurry of blows target |

| Psion | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Anchoring Push | Forceful push | Forceful push target is also slowed |
| Battle Psion | — | +2 to damage with force or psychic at-will attacks |
| Body and Mind | Shaped consciousness | +1 to all defenses while within 5 squares of conjured fragment |
| Confusing Distraction | Distract | Deny opportunity actions to target affected by distract |
| Corrosive Thoughts | — | Vulnerable 3 psychic to creature that fails saving throw against your powers |
| Power Surge | — | Expend daily power to regain power points |
| Psionic Staff Focus | — | Ranged attack using staff doesn't provoke opportunity attacks |
| Puppeteer | — | Slide enemy that fails saving throw against effect of your power |

Benefit: You gain a feat bonus to bull rush attack rolls equal to your ki focus's enhancement bonus. When you hit with a bull rush, you push the target a number of squares equal to your speed, then shift into any unoccupied square adjacent to the target at the end of the push.

Empty Vessel

Prerequisite: 11th level

Benefit: The first time you drop to 0 power points during an encounter, you gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls and a +2 bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Ferocious Resilience

Prerequisite: 11th level, battlemind, battle resilience power

Benefit: When you use your battle resilience, you gain a +2 power bonus to melee damage rolls until the end of your next turn. This bonus increases to +4 at 21st level.

Harried Recovery

Prerequisite: 11th level, battlemind, persistent harrier power

Benefit: The first time you drop to 0 power points during an encounter, you gain a use of your persistent harrier that you can use the next time an enemy hits or misses you with an attack during the encounter.

Harrier's Control

Prerequisite: 11th level, battlemind, persistent harrier power

Benefit: When you use your persistent harrier, you also slide the target 1 square before or after the attack, and you mark the target until the end of your next turn.

Implacable Wrath

Prerequisite: 11th level, ardent, ardent outrage power

Benefit: When you use your ardent outrage, you also push the target 1 square.

Instinctive Advance

Prerequisite: 11th level, ardent, ardent eruption power, Ardent Mantle class feature

Benefit: When you use your ardent eruption, the target can also shift 1 square as a free action.

Iron Propulsion

Prerequisite: 11th level, battlemind

Benefit: While you have at least 1 power point, you ignore the speed penalty normally incurred by your armor.

Lingering Swiftness

Prerequisite: 11th level, ardent, ardent alacrity power

Benefit: When you use your ardent alacrity, the target can shift 2 squares or move at full speed.

Mantle of Caution

Prerequisite: 11th level, ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature

Benefit: While you are bloodied, allies within the radius of your Ardent Mantle gain a +2 bonus to Fortitude, Reflex, and Will.

Master's Instruction

Prerequisite: 11th level, monk

Benefit: When you use a monk encounter attack power and miss at least one target, one ally you can see gains a +2 bonus to his or her next attack roll against one target you missed with the attack power before the end of your next turn.

Power Surge

Prerequisite: 11th level, psion

Benefit: You can expend the use of an unused daily psion attack power to regain 2 power points. If the daily power is 15th level or higher, you instead regain 4 power points. If the daily power is 25th level or higher, you instead regain 6 power points.

Prescient Dodge [Augment]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: During each encounter, you gain a +2 bonus to all defenses until the start of your first turn.

Whenever you hit an enemy with an unaugmented attack power, you can spend 1 power point to gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.

Psionic Rush [Augment]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you can reduce the cost to augment any augmentable power you use during that action by 1 power point.

Psionic Staff Focus

Prerequisite: 11th level, psion

Benefit: When you use a ranged psion attack power using a staff against a target adjacent to you, the attack does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Psychic Wail

Prerequisite: 11th level, any psionic class

Benefit: When you reduce an enemy to 0 hit points with a psychic attack, one enemy you can see within 5 squares of the first enemy grants combat advantage to you until the end of your next turn.

Puppeteer

Prerequisite: 11th level, psion

Benefit: Whenever an enemy fails a saving throw against an effect caused by one of your psion attack powers, you can slide that enemy 1 square as a free action.

Rising Hopes

Prerequisite: 11th level, ardent, ardent surge power, Mantle of Clarity class feature

Benefit: When you target a dying ally with your ardent surge, the target can stand up and shift as a free action.

Serenity in Simplicity

Prerequisite: 11th level, monk

Benefit: While all your daily attack powers are expended, you gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls for monk at-will attack powers.

Staggering Spike

Prerequisite: 11th level, battlemind, mind spike power

Benefit: When you use your mind spike, the triggering enemy grants combat advantage to one ally targeted by the triggering attack until the end of the enemy's next turn.

Still Water

Prerequisite: 11th level, monk

Benefit: If you hit an enemy using a monk at-will attack power while all your encounter powers are expended, you gain a +2 bonus to AC until the start of your next turn.

Suppressive Surge

Prerequisite: 11th level, ardent, ardent surge power

Benefit: When you use your ardent surge, enemies within the radius of your Ardent Mantle cannot regain hit points until the start of your next turn.

Threefold Fortitude [Augment]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to Fortitude.

During your turn, you can spend 1 power point to increase the bonus to +3 until the end of your next turn.

Threefold Reflex [Augment]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to Reflex.

During your turn, you can spend 1 power point to increase the bonus to +3 until the end of your next turn.

Threefold Will [Augment]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to Will.

During your turn, you can spend 1 power point to increase the bonus to +3 until the end of your next turn.

Unstoppable Speed

Prerequisite: 11th level, battlemind

Benefit: The first time you are bloodied during an encounter, you can move a number of squares equal to 3 + your Charisma modifier as a free action.

Violent Joy

Prerequisite: 11th level, ardent, ardent surge power, Mantle of Elation class feature

Benefit: When you target a bloodied ally with your ardent surge and that ally regains enough hit points to no longer be bloodied, he or she can score critical hits with melee attacks on a roll of 19–20 until the end of your next turn.

Waking Senses

Prerequisite: 11th level, monk

Benefit: You never take a penalty to Perception checks when you are blinded, deafened, or sleeping.

Whirling Iron Defense

Prerequisite: 11th level, monk, iron soul flurry of blows power

Benefit: When you use your iron soul flurry of blows, you gain a +1 bonus to all defenses against each target's attacks until the start of your next turn.

Epic Tier Feats

Feats in this section are available to characters of 21st level or higher who meet the feats' other prerequisites.

Aggressive Construction

Prerequisite: 21st level, psion

Benefit: When you use a psionic power to summon a creature, each enemy adjacent to the creature when it appears takes psychic damage equal to your Intelligence modifier.

Battlemind Menace

Prerequisite: 21st level, battlemind, blurred step power

Benefit: When you use your blurred step, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.

Boundless Enthusiasm

Prerequisite: 21st level

Benefit: The first time you score a critical hit during an encounter, you regain 2 power points.

Close the Gap

Prerequisite: 21st level, ardent, Mantle of Impulsiveness class feature

Benefit: Each ally within the radius of your Ardent Mantle at the start of an encounter can shift 1 square as a free action.

Critical Understanding

Prerequisite: 21st level, ardent, ardent surge power, Mantle of Clarity class feature

Benefit: When you use your ardent surge, a bloodied target gains a +3 bonus to all defenses instead of a +1 bonus.

Dragon's Grasp

Prerequisite: 21st level, monk

Benefit: When you use the grab action, you gain a feat bonus to the attack roll equal to your ki focus's enhancement bonus. In addition, when an enemy provokes an opportunity attack from you and you are wielding no weapons, you can make a grab attack in place of a melee basic attack.

Fearsome Spike

Prerequisite: 21st level, battlemind, mind spike power

Benefit: When you use your mind spike, you also mark each enemy adjacent to the target until the end of your next turn.

WAYNE ENGLAND

EPIC TIER FEATS

| Any Class | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Boundless Enthusiasm | — | Regain 2 power points with first critical hit during encounter |
| Hostile Mind | — | Gain combat advantage when attack against your Will hits |
| Pure Mind | — | Gain resist 10 psychic, +2 Will |

| Ardent | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Close the Gap | Mantle of Impulsiveness | Allies in Ardent Mangle at the start of each encounter shift |
| Critical Understanding | Ardent surge, Mantle of Clarity | Bloodied target of ardent surge gains +3 to all defenses |
| Infectious Euphoria | Ardent surge, Mantle of Elation | Allies adjacent to ardent surge target gain temporary hit points |
| Instinctive Surge | Ardent surge, Mantle of Impulsiveness | Use ardent surge as immediate reaction when ally within Ardent Mantle becomes bloodied |
| Victorious Soul | Ardent Mantle | Score critical hit and allies within Ardent Mantle gain bonus to damage rolls |

| Battlemind | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Battlemind Menace | Blurred step | +2 to all defenses with blurred step |
| Fearsome Spike | Mind spike | Mark enemies adjacent to mind spike target |
| Inexorable Speed | Speed of thought | Move through enemies' spaces with speed of thought |
| Invigorating Demand | Battlemind's demand | Gain temporary hit points with augmented battlemind's demand |

| Monk | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Dragon's Grasp | — | Ki focus bonus to grab attacks, grab on opportunity attacks |
| Form Mastery | — | Regain encounter power when you spend an action point |
| Keep Your Feet | — | Stand up as an immediate reaction when knocked prone |
| True Freedom | — | Escape as immediate reaction when grabbed |

| Psion | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Aggressive Construction | — | Deal psychic damage to creatures adjacent to summoned creature |
| Lingering Force | Telekinesis Focus | +2 to all defenses with Telekinesis Focus power |
| Psion Implement Expertise | Int 21, Wis 15, Cha 15 | Score critical hit on 19-20 with psionic implement |
| Stalk the Senseless | — | You are invisible to creatures dazed or stunned by your attack |

Form Mastery

Prerequisite: 21st level, monk

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you also regain the use of a monk encounter attack power. You can use this encounter power as your extra action.

Hostile Mind

Prerequisite: 21st level

Benefit: When an enemy attack hits your Will, the enemy grants combat advantage to you for the first attack you make against it before the end of your next turn.

Inexorable Speed

Prerequisite: 21st level, battlemind, speed of thought power

Benefit: When you use your speed of thought, you can move through enemies' spaces and your movement does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Infectious Euphoria

Prerequisite: 21st level, ardent, ardent surge power, Mantle of Elation class feature

Benefit: When you use your ardent surge, each ally adjacent to the target gains temporary hit points equal to 5 + your Constitution modifier.

Instinctive Surge

Prerequisite: 21st level, ardent, ardent surge power, Mantle of Impulsiveness class feature

Benefit: When an ally within the radius of your Ardent Mantle becomes bloodied, you can use your ardent surge on that ally as an immediate reaction.

Invigorating Demand

Prerequisite: 21st level, battlemind, battlemind's demand power

Benefit: When you augment your battlemind's demand, you gain temporary hit points equal to your Constitution modifier.

Keep Your Feet

Prerequisite: 21st level, monk

Benefit: When you are knocked prone, you can stand up as an immediate reaction.

Lingering Force
Prerequisite: 21st level, psion, Telekinesis Focus class feature
Benefit: When you use a Telekinesis Focus power, you gain a +2 bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Psion Implement Expertise
Prerequisite: 21st level, Int 21, Wis 15, Cha 15, psion
Benefit: When you use a psionic power through an implement, you can score a critical hit on a roll of 19-20.

Pure Mind
Prerequisite: 21st level
Benefit: You gain resist 10 psychic and a +2 feat bonus to Will.

Stalk the Senseless
Prerequisite: 21st level, psion
Benefit: While a creature is dazed or stunned by one of your psion attack powers, you are invisible to that creature.

True Freedom
Prerequisite: 21st level, monk
Benefit: When you are grabbed, you can make an escape attempt as an immediate reaction.

Victorious Soul
Prerequisite: 21st level, ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature
Benefit: When you score a critical hit using an ardent attack, allies within the radius of your Ardent Mantle deal extra damage equal to your Charisma modifier on melee attacks until the start of your next turn.

Multiclass Feats
The following feats provide new psionics multiclassing options.

Awakened Potential [Multiclass]
Prerequisite: Int 15, trained in Arcana
Benefit: You gain the Psionic Augmentation class feature and 1 power point. You can spend this power point to augment powers, feats, or magic items that are augmentable. Once you spend this power point, you do not regain the power point until you take an extended rest. You also qualify for feats that require the Psionic Augmentation class feature. You gain 1 additional power point at 21st level.

Blood's Passion [Multiclass Ardent]
Prerequisite: Fervent Talent feat
Benefit: Choose a power granted by an Ardent Mantle class feature. You can use that power once per day.

Focused Talent [Multiclass Psion]
Prerequisite: Any multiclass psion feat
Benefit: Choose a psion Discipline Focus. You can use each power granted by the Discipline Focus once per day.

Monastic Adept [Multiclass Monk]
Prerequisite: Any multiclass monk feat
Benefit: You gain training in one skill from the monk's class list.
Choose a 1st-level monk at-will attack power. You can use that power once per encounter.

Wild Advance [Multiclass Battlemind]
Prerequisite: Demanding Talent feat
Benefit: You gain the battlemind's blurred step power and can use it once per encounter.

Wild Savant [Multiclass Battlemind]
Prerequisite: Any multiclass battlemind feat, paragon multiclassing as a battlemind
Benefit: Choose a power granted by a battlemind Psionic Study. You can use that power once per day.

MULTICLASS FEATS

| Name | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Awakened Potential | Int 15, trained in Arcana | Gain Psionic Augmentation and 1 power point |
| Blood's Passion | Fervent Talent | Ardent: Ardent Mantle power 1/day |
| Focused Talent | Any multiclass psion feat | Psion: Discipline Focus powers 1/day |
| Monastic Adept | Any multiclass monk feat | Monk: Training in one monk skill, monk at-will 1/encounter |
| Wild Advance | Demanding Talent | Battlemind: Blurred step 1/encounter |
| Wild Savant | Any multiclass battlemind feat, paragon multiclassing as a battlemind | Battlemind: Psionic Study power 1/day |

Bloodline Feats

Elans and foulborn are not true races such as those presented in the Player's Handbook. Bloodline feats, introduced in Dragon™ Magazine Annual 2009, allow player characters of one race to expand their racial identity to include one of these bloodlines. Elan Heritage, Foulborn Heritage, and the other bloodline feats in this section are noted as such in the feat's name. You can have bloodline feats of only one type; thus, if you choose the Elan Heritage feat, you can have only Elan Bloodline feats.

If you want to play a character who has one of these bloodlines, choose a race as normal and then select the Elan Heritage feat or Foulborn Heritage feat to gain that bloodline's abilities. Under most circumstances, a character must be 1st level to select a bloodline feat. The Dungeon Master might allow a character to take a bloodline feat later to reflect a dormant bloodline or a development in the campaign. The Dungeon Master can also rule that you cannot retrain bloodline feats without an explanation of how your character loses that heritage.

Elan Heritage [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Humanoid

Benefit: You are an elan. Your origin changes to immortal, and you are considered an immortal creature for the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin. You gain telepathy 5.

You have the elan resilience power.

Elan Resilience — Feat Power

Psionic energy flares around you, limiting the effect of an attack.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: You take damage from an attack
Effect: Reduce the triggering attack's damage by your Intelligence modifier.
Level 11: 3 + Intelligence modifier.
Level 21: 6 + Intelligence modifier.

Foulborn Heritage [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Natural humanoid

Benefit: You are a foulborn. Your origin changes to aberrant, and you are considered an aberrant creature for the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin.

You have the unbalanced mind power.

Unbalanced Mind — Feat Power

Your connection to the Far Realm unleashes psychic pain in response to attack.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Psychic
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: You take damage from an attack
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, any creature that enters a square adjacent to you or ends its turn there takes 5 psychic damage.

Heroic Tier Feats

Boon of the Made [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Elan Heritage

Benefit: When you use elan resilience, you gain resistance to all damage equal to your Intelligence modifier until the end of your next turn.

Diverse Focus [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Elan Heritage, psion, Discipline Focus class feature

Benefit: Choose and gain a Discipline Focus other than one you already possess. You can use any powers associated with that Discipline Focus as daily powers.

Elan Protection [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Elan Heritage, ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature

Benefit: When you use elan resilience, each ally within the radius of your Ardent Mantle gains a +2 bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.

Elan Retribution [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Elan Heritage, battlemind

Benefit: When you use elan resilience, each enemy marked by you takes psychic damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Fearsome Flurry [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Foulborn Heritage, monk, Flurry of Blows class feature

Benefit: When you use your Flurry of Blows power, you can forego the normal effect to have the target take a –2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

HEROIC TIER BLOODLINE FEATS

| Name | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Boon of the Made | Elan Heritage | Gain resistance to all damage when you use elan resilience |
| Diverse Focus | Elan Heritage, psion, Discipline Focus | Gain second Discipline Focus, use its powers as daily powers |
| Elan Heritage | Humanoid | Origin changes to immortal, gain elan resilience, telepathy 5 |
| Elan Protection | Elan Heritage, ardent, Ardent Mantle | Allies within Ardent Mantle gain +2 to all defenses with elan resilience |
| Elan Retribution | Elan Heritage, battlemind | Deal psychic damage to marked targets when you use elan resilience |
| Fearsome Flurry | Foulborn Heritage, monk, Flurry of Blows | Flurry of Blows can impose –2 to attacks |
| Foulborn Heritage | Natural humanoid | Origin becomes aberrant, gain unbalanced mind |
| Mantle of Unease | Foulborn Heritage, ardent, Ardent Mantle | Enemy scores critical hit and gains –2 penalty to attacks |
| Spike of Madness | Foulborn Heritage, battlemind, mind spike | Mind spike target slides 1 square and grants combat advantage |
| Untraceable Flurry | Elan Heritage, monk, Flurry of Blows | Flurry of Blows deals psychic damage and ignores insubstantial |
| Vision of Madness | Foulborn Heritage, psion | Daze with critical hit using augmented psion at-will attack |

Mantle of Unease [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Foulborn Heritage, ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature

Benefit: When an enemy not immune to fear scores a critical hit within the radius of your Ardent Mantle, it takes a –2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of its next turn. If you are bloodied, you also push the enemy 1 square.

Spike of Madness [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Foulborn Heritage, battlemind, mind spike power

Benefit: When you use your mind spike power, you also slide the target 1 square, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.

Untraceable Flurry [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Elan Heritage, monk, Flurry of Blows class feature

Benefit: You can deal psychic damage with your Flurry of Blows power. When you do, the power deals full damage to insubstantial creatures.

Vision of Madness [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: Foulborn Heritage, psion

Benefit: When you score a critical hit against an enemy using an augmented psion at-will power, that enemy is also dazed until the end of your next turn. If the enemy is already dazed or is dazed by the power, it instead takes 5 extra psychic damage.

Paragon Tier Feats

Aberrant Sight [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Foulborn Heritage

Benefit: You gain darkvision.

Accursed Revelation [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Foulborn Heritage, ardent, Ardent Mantle class feature

Benefit: When you first drop to 0 power points during an encounter, each enemy within the radius of your Ardent Mantle grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.

PARAGON TIER BLOODLINE FEATS

| Name | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Aberrant Sight | Foulborn Heritage | Gain darkvision |
| Accursed Revelation | Foulborn Heritage, ardent, Ardent Mantle | Enemies in Ardent Mantle grant combat advantage when you drop to 0 power points |
| Body Fuel | Elan Heritage, Psionic Augmentation | Regain 1 power point with second wind |
| Elan Mental Onslaught | Elan Heritage | Target Will on next attack after Flurry of Blows |
| Returning Resilience | Elan Heritage | Regain elan resilience with second wind |
| Terrible Aspect | Foulborn Heritage, battlemind | Mark each enemy within 3 squares of you when you first drop to 0 power points |

EPIC TIER BLOODLINE FEATS

| Name | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Bloodied Horror | Foulborn Heritage | While bloodied, +1 bonus to attacks using fear powers, bloodied enemies take –2 to attacks |
| Far Realm's Blessing | Foulborn Heritage | Regain 1 power point when first bloodied |
| Gift of the Eternal | Elan Heritage, Psionic Augmentation | Regain 1 power point at the start of your first turn in each encounter |
| Psionic Discorporation | Elan Heritage | Insubstantial when at 0 hit points or fewer, +2 attacks when you are no longer dying |

Body Fuel [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Elan Heritage, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: Once per encounter when you use your second wind, you also regain 1 power point.

Elan Mental Onslaught [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Elan Heritage

Benefit: When you damage an enemy using your Flurry of Blows power, your next attack against that enemy made before the end of your next turn can target Will instead of the defense normally targeted.

Returning Resilience [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Elan Heritage

Benefit: When you use your second wind, you regain the use of your elan resilience power.

Terrible Aspect [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 11th level, Foulborn Heritage, battlemind

Benefit: When you first drop to 0 power points during an encounter, you mark any enemy within 3 squares of you until the end of your next turn.

Epic Tier Feats

Bloodied Horror [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 21st level, Foulborn Heritage

Benefit: While you are bloodied, you gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls when using fear powers. In addition, bloodied enemies that are adjacent to you take a –2 penalty to attack rolls.

Far Realm's Blessing [Foulborn Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 21st level, Foulborn Heritage, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: The first time you become bloodied in an encounter, you regain 1 power point.

Gift of the Eternal [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 21st level, Elan Heritage, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Benefit: At the end of your first turn in each encounter, you regain 1 power point.

Psionic Discorporation [Elan Bloodline]

Prerequisite: 21st level, Elan Heritage

Benefit: While you are at 0 hit points or fewer, you are insubstantial. When you regain hit points so that you are no longer dying, you gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls for psionic powers until the end of your next turn.

Your epic destiny demonstrates a greater awareness of yourself, your purpose, and your place in the cosmos. Pursuing a psionic epic destiny sets you on a path that will ultimately free you from the constraints of reality—transcending mere immortality as you become one with the power within you.

Cosmic Soul

Your thoughts are windows to distant worlds, strange realities, and endless possibilities.

Prerequisite: 21st level, any psionic class

The cosmos has long fascinated you with its strange tales of far-flung realms populated by creatures beyond imagination. For much of your adventuring career, the lure of such places has pulled you onward, and each discovery only intensifies your appetite for more knowledge. Over time, however, you become frustrated with the material barriers that slow or prevent your explorations. You yearn to become the Cosmic Soul, peering across impossible distances with the power of the mind alone. You are limited only by your imagination, and there are no realms you cannot conquer.

Immortality

The door to your mind opens wide, filling you with an awareness of the cosmos around you.

Infinite Awareness: All material barriers to your curiosity fall away as you unlock the final door to your potential. Like a flower opening its petals to drink in the sun, your consciousness expands to touch all places, all peoples, all worlds in a flooding rush. Your thoughts flick from one world to another, your inner eye falling on the gods' dominions or bearing witness to the atrocities of the Nine Hells and the Abyss. Your vision extends even beyond the veil that shrouds the Far Realm, allowing you to perceive the full horror that lurks on the fringes of reality. With your mind freed, you have no need for the body and its limitations. The needs and cravings of your physical form fall away as you enter infinite awareness, ready to explore without limitation until the end of time.

Cosmic Soul Features

Cosmic Awareness (21st level): You can master and perform scrying rituals. Any scrying ritual you perform does not need a focus, and you gain a +5 bonus to any skill checks made to perform the ritual. Once per day, you can use any scrying ritual you know without expending components.

In addition, you gain truesight 5.

BEN WOOTTEN

Cosmic Experience (24th level): You have seen so much that whatever happens to you seems already familiar. You gain a +5 bonus to initiative checks, knowledge checks, and monster knowledge checks. In addition, you can speak all languages.

Cosmic Connection (30th level): All your ranged powers and area powers have a range of "sight."

Cosmic Soul Power

Merge with the Cosmos — Cosmic Soul Utility 26

Your body temporarily fades, replenishing you and granting you the advantage over your foes.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic, Zone
No Action — Personal
Trigger: You drop to 0 hit points or fewer
Effect: You are removed from play, creating a zone in a burst 10 centered on the space you last occupied and that lasts until you reappear. At the start of your next turn, you regain hit points equal to your level, and one ally within the zone can take a standard action as a free action. At the end of your next turn, you reappear in any unoccupied space within the zone. Each enemy within the zone when you reappear grants combat advantage to you until the end of the encounter.
Sustain No Action: You can choose to not reappear at the end of your turn, sustaining the effect.

Demiurge

Godhood is too limiting for a hero such as you. You reach higher than any deity's throne, for in your dreams are the seeds of a new world.

Prerequisite: 21st level, any psionic class

To the mortals who worship them, the gods are the highest form of life. Possessed of incalculable strength and wisdom, the deities hold the power to create new races and raze whole continents at their whim. Yet for all their magnificence, the gods are flawed beings, possessed of the same failures of judgment and character that plague the mortals living beneath their gaze.

You are not the first to look beyond godhood, bearing witness to an infinite perfection that supersedes even the deities' power. At the height of creation lies a cause or a purpose whose intent remains inscrutable even to the gods. Some might seek to pay homage to this being beyond beings—this idea and first cause, the Demiurge responsible for the sum of all things. You, however, have no intention of joining with or serving this force. Rather, you hope to secure its power for yourself. You will shape reality as you see fit, rebuilding the cosmos in your own image and from your own imagination.

Immortality

So arrogant is your objective, so profound your goals, that you find enemies to all sides of you. The most powerful beings in the cosmos set aside their darkest disputes to fight against your burgeoning power.

Monadic Transcendence: Enemies without number darken your path, even as the gods themselves attempt to deny you from your goal. But none can dispute the worthiness of your work, the perfection your efforts create, or the power you hold within you. Each victory on your quest places you closer to the pinnacle of creation, until at the completion of your great work, your mind and that of the first cause touch.

The contact you have long sought results in your utter annihilation, with not even dust left to mark your passing. Those who knew you come to forget you, the memory of your hubris fading as if you had never been. But away from this world, beyond the bounds of reality where a vast emptiness stretches to infinity, your nothingness gives birth to a new creation. Your essence becomes the catalyst that spawns new worlds, new monsters, new gods. You set in motion time's eternal flow, with a future guided and shaped wholly by your own immortal imagination.

ROBERTO MARCHESI

Demiurge Features

Becoming the One (21st level): Your Charisma score and one other ability score of your choice both increase by 2.

Perfection in Action (24th level): When you reach a milestone, you gain 2 action points instead of 1 action point. When you reach a second milestone, you can spend up to 2 action points in the same encounter.

Deification of the Self (30th level): You gain a +5 bonus to saving throws and you are immune to the attacks of any creature of level 20 or lower. In addition, the first time you are bloodied in each encounter, you teleport to any unoccupied space you can see, you can spend a healing surge, and you are insubstantial until the end of your next turn.

Demiurge Power

Demiurge Resistance — Demiurge Utility 26

Your connection to destiny allows you to shrug off the most potent effects imposed on you.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Free Action Personal
Requirement: You must not be bloodied.
Trigger: You are subjected to an effect that a save can end
Effect: You make a saving throw against the effect.
Special: If you roll a 15 or higher on the saving throw, you regain the use of this power.

Eighth Seal

You are a living seal against the Far Realm's intrusion, sheltering the world from its most virulent threat.

Prerequisite: 21st level, any psionic class

You are one with the Keepers of the Cerulean Sign—perhaps through your exposure to their writings or other works, perhaps by serving their ancient cause through your deeds. In your ceaseless fight against the aberrant menace, you have focused on closing the breaches to the Far Realm where ancient safeguards have begun to fail. But your need to keep the world safe will exact a terrible price in the end.

Immortality

Using your soul's power and your psionic abilities, you sacrifice yourself to strengthen the boundaries between the mortal realm and the madness of the Far Realm.

Living Seal: To complete your task, you must recover the ancient Cerulean Seals, believed to have been lost or destroyed since the keepers of old faded from this world. Your searching reveals that these are not devices, but rather the souls of the greatest champions who gave their lives to secure reality against the Far Realm's corrupting influence. By working with these guardians, you merge your spiritual energy with their own and restore the wards they built.

Eighth Seal Features

Keeper of the Cerulean Seals (21st level): As you embrace your destiny, the Seven Seals grant you the following benefit.

- You gain a +1 bonus to all defenses.
- When you hit an aberrant creature with an attack, the attack deals 2d12 extra psychic and radiant damage.
- You are immune to fear effects.
- You are considered an immortal creature for the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin.

The Mind's Shining Corridors (24th level): When an enemy misses you with an attack against Will, it takes 2d12 psychic and radiant damage and is dazed until the end of your next turn. If the enemy is already dazed, it is stunned instead.

In addition, when you are subjected to an effect that dazes, dominates, or stuns you that a save can end, you can make a saving throw against that effect a the start of your next turn. If you save, the effect ends on you.

Nature Restored (30th level): When you reduce an aberrant creature to 0 hit points, choose one of the following effects.

- You regain hit points as if you had spent a healing surge.
- Each enemy within 3 squares of the aberrant creature takes 10 psychic and radiant damage and is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Eighth Seal Power

Call Forth the Seven Keys — Eighth Seal Utility 26

Seven watchful guardians drenched in blue light lend aid to you and your allies.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Psionic
Standard Action Close burst 10

Effect: You conjure seven keybearers in unoccupied squares within range. Each keybearer lasts until the end of the encounter or until expended. A keybearer occupies its square, and you and your allies can move through it. A keybearer can be attacked. It has resist 20 to all damage and 1 hit point. When reduced to 0 hit points, it is destroyed. You can expend a keybearer as a free action during your turn to gain one of the following benefits. You can gain each benefit only once for each use of this power.

- You and each ally within 3 squares of the keybearer can spend a healing surge.
- You gain resist 15 to all damage until the end of your next turn.
- You gain a +5 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
- You and each ally within 3 squares of the keybearer gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.
- You and each ally within 5 squares of the keybearer gain a +5 power bonus to damage rolls until the end of your next turn.
- You teleport 5 squares. Each ally within 5 squares of the keybearer can teleport 5 squares as a free action.
- You and each ally who can see you or the keybearer are no longer dazed, dominated, or stunned.

ERIC BELISLE

Grandmaster of Flowers

You have lived your final lifetime and achieved the enlightened perfection you have long sought.

Prerequisite: 21st level, monk

It is said that not even the gods themselves know what lies in store for souls loosed from their bodies. You believe that beyond death is rebirth. Each lifetime is spent improving on the lifetime before, shedding imperfections in the hope of attaining the perfect state of enlightenment.

Your soul is like a great garden, and its beauty and perfection depend on how you tend it during all seasons. When the winter of death approaches, the garden becomes dormant for a time. Then, as the warm winds chase away snow and ice, new life begins. With the spring comes the chance to clear away the detritus and weeds of each life that has passed before. Only when you achieve perfection in your soul will you find the enlightenment that is your ultimate reward.

Immortality

You have lived many lives, each improving on the one before. In this last life, you have come closer than ever to achieving perfect harmony. If you can succeed in purging yourself of the last traces of imperfection, you will know enlightenment.

Perfect Peace: The state you seek removes all grief, all craving, all fear to bring mind, body, and soul into harmonious balance. In attaining this state, you are no longer troubled by the world's demands, and you spend your final days in quiet contemplation. During those days, many who seek the path to enlightenment will come to you in hopes of learning from your wisdom. When you are ready, you step free from this world to merge with those souls who have already attained the perfect peace for which you have long strived.

Grandmaster of Flowers Features

Enlightenment's Blessing (21st level): Your Dexterity increases by 2.

Balanced Mind (21st level): Whenever you make a saving throw to end a charm, fear, or psychic effect, you can take the better of 10 or your die roll.

In addition, when an enemy misses you with an attack against Will, that enemy takes 10 psychic damage.

Ubiquity (24th level): Whenever you hit with a melee attack, you can teleport 3 squares to an unoccupied square adjacent to the target as a free action.

Luminous Consciousness (30th level): You transcend mortal limitations. Your movement never provokes opportunity attacks, and when an effect allows you to shift, you can instead move your speed. You ignore difficult terrain. You can move across and end your movement on any vertical or liquid surface. Finally, whenever you walk, run, or charge, you can spend any or all of that movement flying. If you are still flying when you end this movement, you land safely in the nearest unoccupied space.

Grandmaster of Flowers Power

A Scattering of Petals — Grandmaster of Flowers Utility 26

You brush aside a ranged attack with practiced ease, redirecting its energy toward other targets.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Free Action — Personal
Trigger: A ranged attack hits you
Effect: You take half damage from the triggering attack, and the attack also hits one or two creatures you choose within 10 squares of you.

MIKE SCHILEY

Master of Moments

All times, all places, all moments are yours to explore.

Prerequisite: 21st level, any psionic class

Time is not a river but an ocean, extending in all directions to infinity. You are a sailor traveling wherever time's currents carry you, venturing into the uncharted future as you leave the inscrutable past behind. An awakened mind is your compass; your instincts are your only map. You are the Master of Moments, calling forth the psionic power that propels you into the future or lets you set course for forgotten times.

Immortality

You have never rested easy in the present. Now, it is your fate to free yourself from time's currents as you seek out new futures and altered pasts.

Alter the Past: You look back at your accomplishments, successes, and failures to analyze the ways in which you might have made your decisions differently. Have you long yearned to undo a choice that cost the lives of others dear to you? Do you look back on one moment when choosing the wrong path led to disaster? The more you reflect on your past, the more it colors your accomplishments, until you are determined to correct your errors in order to achieve an even greater end. You leave behind the present to venture into the past. But what changes will you make there? Will there be repercussions from your meddling? What new troubles might arise through your well-intentioned efforts?

See the Future: Having met your objectives in the present, you wonder what consequences they might bring. Rather than watch them unfold, you step ahead in time, traveling through the years to witness the seeds of your success take root and grow into a better future. But what if your efforts bring about not a better world but a darker one? Will you interfere and change history's course? Or will you direct new heroes to take up your mantle and continue the struggle on your behalf?

Master of Moments Features

Consummate Traveler (21st level): You can master and perform travel rituals. You gain a +5 bonus to any skill checks made to perform a travel ritual. Once per day, you can use a travel ritual you know without expending components.

Maximized Time (21st level): You can spend an action point to gain a standard action, a move action, and a minor action instead of only one extra action.

Bountiful Seconds (24th level): You can take an extra minor action during each of your turns. During your turn, you can give up two minor actions to gain an extra move action.

HECTOR ORTIZ

In addition, you can master and perform any travel ritual regardless of level.

Boundless Presence (30th level): You gain teleport 5 as a movement mode.

In addition, once per day when you become bloodied or drop to 0 hit points or fewer, you can remove yourself from play. You gain the benefit of a short rest. At the start of your next turn, you reappear in the space you last occupied or in the nearest unoccupied space.

Master of Moments Power

Freeze Time — Master of Moments Utility 26

Your attack freezes a foe in a timeless void.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Free Action — Personal
Trigger: You hit an enemy
Target: The enemy you hit
Effect: You freeze the target in time until the end of your next turn. While frozen in time, the target cannot take actions, does not have a start or an end of turn, is not aware of its surroundings, and is immune to all damage and effects.

Topaz Crusader

The only cure for madness is to excise its corruption and destroy it.

Prerequisite: 21st level, any psionic class, Psionic Augmentation class feature

Constant pressure causes the Far Realm's corrupting influence to leak through even the smallest breaches into the natural world, spawning horrors that tear at the fabric of existence. These breaches represent some of the greatest dangers to the mortal realm, and generations of heroes have dedicated themselves to maintaining the integrity of the Far Realm's boundaries. Over a lifetime's adventuring, however, you have grown weary of this ultimately doomed effort.

For each fissure that is closed, two more open elsewhere. Worse, how many of the fault lines riddling creation remain undetected? The Far Realm relentlessly seeks to corrupt the mortal realm, but whereas most heroes seek only to defend against the Outside's malign influence, you have a better idea. You will turn the tide on the Far Realm by assaulting its borders, its creatures—its very nature. And if you cannot reshape the Far Realm with the benign influence of the natural world, you will destroy it utterly to eliminate the threat it represents.

Immortality

As your mortal life winds to its end, you push ever closer to your goal of eliminating the Far Realm's threat.

THOMAS DENMARK

Into the Breach: Aberrant blood stains your weapons and armor. The horrors you have seen assail your memory, but you remain strong. Now is the time to carry the torch of purity against the hordes of corruption, finally driving back the tide that threatens all existence. Girding yourself in the protective energy contained in the psionic gemstone at your brow, you step out from this world, sounding one last battle cry as you carve a path of death and destruction into the heart of madness. You will end the Far Realm's threat even at the cost of your own life. In the centuries that follow, as the incursions of the unwholesome fade into myth, your spirit will find its reward.

Topaz Crusader Features

Bound to Greatness (21st level): Your Constitution or Charisma score increases by 2.

Topaz Focus (21st level): You protect yourself from aberrant influence with a meditative focus. You gain a +1 bonus to AC. You cannot be dazed or dominated. You gain a +2 bonus to Will against aberrant creatures, and you know the location of all aberrant creatures within 5 squares of you at all times. You don't grant combat advantage to those creatures, and if they have cover or concealment when you attack them, you don't take the -2 penalty to attack rolls against them.

When you will it, this focus manifests as a topaz gemstone in the center of your brow.

Topaz Meditation (24th level): Your focus grants you increased power. You gain 2 additional power points and a +2 bonus to all defenses, you cannot be immobilized or restrained, and you can ignore polymorph effects.

Topaz Flare (30th level): While you have no power points remaining, your unaugmented at-will powers grant you a benefit when they hit. If your attack roll is an even number, you regain 2 power points. If your attack roll is an odd number, the target you hit takes 5 extra psychic damage.

Topaz Crusader Power

Topaz Corona — Topaz Crusader Utility 26

You surround yourself and your allies with a shroud of swirling blue light, replenishing your strength and fueling your attacks against the creatures of the Far Realm.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic, Psychic, Zone
Minor Action Close burst 5

Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. The zone moves with you, remaining centered on you. While within the zone, you and your allies gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses and regeneration equal to 10 + your highest ability modifier. In addition, whenever you or an ally within the zone makes an attack against an aberrant creature, the attack deals 10 extra psychic damage. If the attack roll is 18-20, the target is also stunned until the end of your next turn.

EQUIPMENT: SUPERIOR KI FOCUSES

A ki focus is an item used by a monk to control and hone his or her psionic power. Unlike other implements, such as the orbs and staffs used by psions, the power of a monk's ki focus is only partially contained in the physical object. The focus serves as a means to gather and shape the ki energy already present within a character. Like all other implements, ki focuses come in mundane or magic varieties. A magic ki focus allows a monk to use its enhancement bonuses and powers with his or her implement powers.

A ki focus is often tied to a particular training or fighting style. A monk that uses a wooden practice sword as a ki focus draws no additional prowess from the harmless weapon. Rather, it is the memory of years of training with that weapon that allows the monk to effectively channel ki into his or her attacks. As a result, additional training or advanced knowledge can be tied to a ki focus a monk already uses.

By learning more advanced fighting styles and techniques, your monk character gains power functionally similar to that gained by wielding a superior implement, as described in Player's Handbook 3 (page 195). But instead of purchasing a superior ki focus, you undertake a special training regimen to unlock new ways to channel your power, whether you wield a magic ki focus or a mundane one. The listed price reflects the cost of the training by which you master the effect of the improved ki focus, and can be thought of as covering expenses such as food, lodging, and other supplies for the duration of your study.

Like other implement users, you can only access a superior ki focus if you take the Superior Implement Training feat (Player's Handbook 3, page 183). When you take the feat, you choose one superior ki focus. You can take the feat multiple times to channel additional superior properties through a single ki focus. You cannot use multiple properties at the same time, and you cannot channel properties from more than one superior ki focus during the same attack. Before you make an attack, you decide which superior ki focus property you will use for the attack.

An implement entry on the Ki Focuses table contains the following information.

Implement: The superior ki focus's name.

Price: The superior ki focus's training cost in gold pieces. This cost is included in the cost of a magic superior ki focus.

Weight: Because a superior ki focus adds to an existing physical focus, it has no weight.

Properties: The superior ki focus's special properties, as detailed below.

KI FOCUSES

| Implement | Price (gp) | Weight | Properties |
|---|---|---|---|
| Accurate Ki Focus | 25 | – | Accurate |
| Fluid Ki Focus | 30 | – | Mobile, shielding |
| Inexorable Ki Focus | 35 | – | Energized (force), unstoppable |
| Iron Ki Focus | 30 | – | Deadly, forceful |
| Mighty Ki Focus | 25 | – | Empowered crit, unerring |
| Mountain Ki Focus | 30 | – | Forceful, shielding |
| Serene Ki Focus | 35 | – | Energized (psychic), undeniable |
| Transcendent Ki Focus | 30 | – | Blinking, reaching |

Superior Ki Focus Properties

Accurate: You gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls using an accurate implement.

Blinking: When you hit with a teleportation attack power, you have concealment until the start of your next turn.

Deadly: You gain a +1 bonus to damage rolls with a deadly implement. This bonus increases to +2 at 11th level and +3 at 21st level.

Empowered Crit: When you score a critical hit using an empowered crit implement, the attack deals 1d10 extra damage. This extra damage is in addition to any critical damage dealt by a magic implement. The extra damage increases to 2d10 at 11th level and 3d10 at 21st level.

Energized: You gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls with attack powers that have a keyword matching an energized implement's damage type. This bonus increases to +3 at 11th level and +4 at 21st level.

Forceful: When you pull, push, or slide a target with an attack power using a forceful implement, the distance of the forced movement increases by 1 square.

Mobile: When you hit with an attack using a mobile implement, you can shift as a minor action before the end of your turn.

Reaching: You gain +1 reach with melee attacks using a reaching implement.

Shielding: Whenever you hit at least one target with an attack power using a shielding implement, you gain a +1 shield bonus to AC and Reflex until the start of your next turn.

Undeniable: You gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls against Will with an undeniable implement.

Unerring: You gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls against Reflex with an unerring implement.

Unstoppable: You gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls against Fortitude with an unstoppable implement.

Characters of any class can use many of the new items in this section. The nature of their magic makes these items particularly useful for psionic characters.

Ki Focuses

This section builds on the magic ki focuses presented in Player's Handbook 3. A ki focus is not an object whose power resides wholly within it, as with other magic items. Rather, it is a tool that the members of certain psionic classes use to focus their own psionic energy.

If you can use a ki focus as an implement, you can add its enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and damage rolls of implement powers you use through the ki focus. You can also use the ki focus's properties and powers. Being able to use a ki focus as an implement means you can also use it with your weapon attacks. You can add its enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and the damage rolls of weapon attacks you make using a weapon with which you have proficiency. You must choose to use the enhancement bonus, properties, and powers of the ki focus, rather than the weapon you're wielding, or vice versa. You can't use both when you use a power.

If you possess two ki focuses, you can benefit only from the ki focus to which you've most recently attuned yourself (see Player's Handbook 3, page 203).

Cascading Strikes Ki Focus — Level 3+

Your wide strike triggers your stout stone idol to release its power, helping you land a blow that would otherwise go astray.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Ki Focus)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You miss with an attack using this ki focus. Effect: Reroll the attack roll.

Crashing Tide Strike Ki Focus — Level 8+

You focus the ocean's wrath to strike your enemies with tidal force.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Ki Focus)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee attack using this ki focus. Effect: You push the target 1 square per point of the ki focus's enhancement bonus, then knock it prone. You then shift the same number of squares.

KI FOCUSES

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) |
|---|---|---|
| 2 | Hunting Panther Ki Focus +1 | 520 |
| 3 | Cascading Strikes Ki Focus +1 | 680 |
| 3 | Four Winds Ki Focus +1 | 680 |
| 4 | Hurricane Strike Ki Focus +1 | 840 |
| 4 | Thunderfist Ki Focus +1 | 840 |
| 7 | Hunting Panther Ki Focus +2 | 2,600 |
| 8 | Cascading Strikes Ki Focus +2 | 3,400 |
| 8 | Crashing Tide Strike Ki Focus +2 | 3,400 |
| 8 | Four Winds Ki Focus +2 | 3,400 |
| 9 | Forked Lightning Ki Focus +2 | 4,200 |
| 9 | Hurricane Strike Ki Focus +2 | 4,200 |
| 9 | Mountainfall Ki Focus +2 | 4,200 |
| 9 | Thunderfist Ki Focus +2 | 4,200 |
| 12 | Hunting Panther Ki Focus +3 | 13,000 |
| 13 | Cascading Strikes Ki Focus +3 | 17,000 |
| 13 | Crashing Tide Strike Ki Focus +3 | 17,000 |
| 13 | Four Winds Ki Focus +3 | 17,000 |
| 14 | Forked Lightning Ki Focus +3 | 21,000 |
| 14 | Hurricane Strike Ki Focus +3 | 21,000 |
| 14 | Mountainfall Ki Focus +3 | 21,000 |
| 14 | Thunderfist Ki Focus +3 | 21,000 |
| 17 | Haunting Presence Ki Focus +4 | 65,000 |
| 17 | Hunting Panther Ki Focus +4 | 65,000 |
| 18 | Cascading Strikes Ki Focus +4 | 85,000 |
| 18 | Crashing Tide Strike Ki Focus +4 | 85,000 |
| 18 | Four Winds Ki Focus +4 | 85,000 |
| 19 | Forked Lightning Ki Focus +4 | 105,000 |
| 19 | Hurricane Strike Ki Focus +4 | 105,000 |
| 19 | Mountainfall Ki Focus +4 | 105,000 |
| 19 | Thunderfist Ki Focus +4 | 105,000 |
| 22 | Haunting Presence Ki Focus +5 | 325,000 |
| 22 | Hunting Panther Ki Focus +5 | 325,000 |
| 23 | Cascading Strikes Ki Focus +5 | 425,000 |
| 23 | Crashing Tide Strike Ki Focus +5 | 425,000 |
| 23 | Four Winds Ki Focus +5 | 425,000 |
| 24 | Forked Lightning Ki Focus +5 | 525,000 |
| 24 | Hurricane Strike Ki Focus +5 | 525,000 |
| 24 | Mountainfall Ki Focus +5 | 525,000 |
| 24 | Thunderfist Ki Focus +5 | 525,000 |
| 27 | Haunting Presence Ki Focus +6 | 1,625,000 |
| 27 | Hunting Panther Ki Focus +6 | 1,625,000 |
| 28 | Cascading Strikes Ki Focus +6 | 2,125,000 |
| 28 | Crashing Tide Strike Ki Focus +6 | 2,125,000 |
| 28 | Four Winds Ki Focus +6 | 2,125,000 |
| 29 | Forked Lightning Ki Focus +6 | 2,625,000 |
| 29 | Hurricane Strike Ki Focus +6 | 2,625,000 |
| 29 | Mountainfall Ki Focus +6 | 2,625,000 |
| 29 | Thunderfist Ki Focus +6 | 2,625,000 |

Forked Lightning Ki Focus — Level 9+

Crackling lightning illuminates you as it forks toward your enemy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Ki Focus)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 lightning damage per plus
Power (At-Will ✦ Lightning): Free Action. Trigger: You make a melee attack using this ki focus. Effect: The attack deals lightning damage instead of any other damage type.
Power (Daily ✦ Lightning, Teleportation): Free Action. Trigger: You make a melee attack that deals lightning damage using this ki focus. Effect: Choose one enemy within 5 squares of the target of the triggering attack. You teleport to an unoccupied square adjacent to that enemy and make a melee basic attack against it. The attack deals lightning damage instead of any other damage type.

Four Winds Ki Focus — Level 3+

Channeling the power of air and sky, you command the four winds to speed your strikes and whisk you to safety.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Ki Focus)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and you slide the target 1 square per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee attack using this ki focus. Effect: You fly a number of squares equal to the ki focus's enhancement bonus. Your movement from this power does not provoke opportunity attacks. You must land at the end of this movement or you fall.

Haunting Presence Ki Focus — Level 17+

By calling on the magic in your gossamer focus, you become ghostlike—ephemeral and impossible to pin down.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Ki Focus)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 psychic damage per plus
Power (Daily ✦ Illusion): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an attack using this ki focus. Effect: You have concealment and are insubstantial until you are hit by an attack or until the end of your next turn.

Hunting Panther Ki Focus — Level 2+

These mummified eyeballs tucked inside a worn wooden box see through all your enemy's deceptions.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Ki Focus)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an attack using this ki focus. Effect: The target cannot benefit from concealment or cover until it hits you with an attack.

Hurricane Strike Ki Focus — Level 4+

As power swirls within this slender glass cylinder, your fast strikes knock your enemies back.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Ki Focus)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 force damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free action. Trigger: You use your Flurry of Blows power. Effect: Your Flurry of Blows power deals extra damage equal to this ki focus's enhancement bonus, and you push each target a number of squares equal to this ki focus's enhancement bonus.

Mountainfall Ki Focus — Level 9+

A leather pouch filled with pebble shards lends you the full weight of the mountain to strike against vulnerable enemies.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Ki Focus)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and you knock the target prone
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to damage rolls when using this ki focus for attacks against prone and immobilized targets.
Level 14 or 19: +4 item bonus.
Level 24 or 29: +6 item bonus.
Power (Daily): Free action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee attack using this ki focus. Effect: The enemy is immobilized (save ends).

Thunderfist Ki Focus — Level 4+

Roiling thunder booms with each strike you make, the metal of this focus vibrating as you assail your enemies with a cacophonous din.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Ki Focus)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 thunder damage per plus
Power (At-Will ✦ Thunder): Free Action. Trigger: You make a melee attack using this ki focus. Effect: The attack deals thunder damage instead of any other damage type.
Power (Daily ✦ Thunder): Free Action. Trigger: You make a melee attack using this ki focus. Effect: Each enemy adjacent to the target takes thunder damage equal to your highest ability score modifier and is deafened (save ends).

Augmentable Items

Introduced in Player's Handbook 3, augmentable magic items provide new channels for utilizing psionic power. Although some of these items can be used by any character, only characters with the Psionic Augmentation class feature gain the power points needed to increase the potency of an augmentable item's powers or properties. Likewise, some of these items have properties that function only while the wielder has at least 1 power point.

All these items use the same rules as the magic items found in the Player's Handbook and the Adventurer's Vault™ supplements.

Armor

Augmentable armor gives defensive-minded psionic characters an edge in combat, enhancing a wearer's mental or physical strength. In some cases, that enhancement allows the wearer to better protect his or her allies.

Anchoring Armor — Level 17+

Those who try to move close to you without warning are caught by the magic of this heavy armor.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Plate
Enhancement: AC

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: A creature teleports to a square adjacent to you. Effect: The triggering creature is immobilized and cannot teleport until the end of its next turn.
Augment 1: The creature is immobilized and cannot teleport (save ends).

Armor of Adaptable Resistance — Level 4+

This armor adapts to the attacks made against you, refocusing its protective power to keep you alive.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Hide, chain
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain resist 5 to one of the following damage types: acid, cold, fire, force, lightning, necrotic, poison, or thunder. The damage type is chosen when the armor is created.
Level 14 or 19: Resist 10
Level 24 or 29: Resist 15

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: You take damage from an attack of a type that this armor does not provide resistance to. Effect: Choose one of the damage types dealt by the attack. The armor's resistance changes to match that damage type until the end of the encounter.
Augment 1: The armor's resistance increases by 5 until the end of your next turn.

Blink Shirt — Level 8+

The smooth material of this comfortable shirt is stronger than it appears, and allows you to blink away from danger.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Cloth
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to AC against opportunity attacks.

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable, Teleportation): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An enemy misses you with an attack. Effect: You teleport a number of squares equal to 2 + the armor's enhancement bonus.
Augment 1: You regain the use of this power but cannot augment it again during this encounter.

Guardian's Armor — Level 15+

This heavy armor protects you well enough, but it achieves its full potential only when used in the defense of another.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC
Property: While you have at least 1 power point, each ally adjacent to you gains resistance to all damage equal to the armor's enhancement bonus.

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An ally adjacent to you is hit by an attack. Effect: The ally gains a +2 bonus to all defenses until the end of your turn.
Augment 1: The bonus increases to 2 + the armor's enhancement bonus.

Mind Hunter's Armor — Level 2+

This suit of pitted mail carries the scars of the fight against the Far Realm, and protects against effects that tear at the mind.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC
Property: While you have at least 1 power point, you gain a +2 item bonus to saving throws against effects that daze, dominate, or stun.

Phrenic Armor — Level 4+

When your mind is targeted, this armor lashes your foes with a pulse of psychic energy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Chain, scale
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain resist 5 psychic.

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable, Psychic): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An enemy attack hits your Will. Effect: Each enemy in a close burst 1 centered on you takes psychic damage equal to 3 + the armor's enhancement bonus and a −2 penalty to attack rolls for attacks that include you as the target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1: The size of the burst increases to 2.

MAGIC ARMOR

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Categories |
|---|---|---|---|
| 2 | Mind Hunter's Armor +1 | 520 | Scale, plate |
| 3 | Shaper's Armor +1 | 680 | Cloth, leather |
| 4 | Armor of Adaptable Resistance +1 | 840 | Hide, chain |
| 4 | Phrenic Armor +1 | 840 | Chain, scale |
| 7 | Mind Hunter's Armor +2 | 2,600 | Scale, plate |
| 8 | Blink Shirt +2 | 3,400 | Cloth |
| 8 | Shaper's Armor +2 | 3,400 | Cloth, leather |
| 9 | Armor of Adaptable Resistance +2 | 4,200 | Hide, chain |
| 9 | Phrenic Armor +2 | 4,200 | Chain, scale |
| 12 | Mind Hunter's Armor +3 | 13,000 | Scale, plate |
| 13 | Blink Shirt +3 | 17,000 | Cloth |
| 13 | Shaper's Armor +3 | 17,000 | Cloth, leather |
| 14 | Armor of Adaptable Resistance +3 | 21,000 | Hide, chain |
| 14 | Phrenic Armor +3 | 21,000 | Chain, scale |
| 15 | Guardian's Armor +3 | 25,000 | Scale, plate |
| 17 | Anchoring Armor +4 | 65,000 | Plate |
| 17 | Mind Hunter's Armor +4 | 65,000 | Scale, plate |
| 18 | Blink Shirt +4 | 85,000 | Cloth |
| 18 | Shaper's Armor +4 | 85,000 | Cloth, leather |
| 19 | Armor of Adaptable Resistance +4 | 105,000 | Hide, chain |
| 19 | Phrenic Armor +4 | 105,000 | Chain, scale |
| 20 | Guardian's Armor +4 | 125,000 | Scale, plate |
| 22 | Anchoring Armor +5 | 325,000 | Plate |
| 22 | Mind Hunter's Armor +5 | 325,000 | Scale, plate |
| 23 | Blink Shirt +5 | 425,000 | Cloth |
| 23 | Shaper's Armor +5 | 425,000 | Cloth, leather |
| 24 | Armor of Adaptable Resistance +5 | 525,000 | Hide, chain |
| 24 | Phrenic Armor +5 | 525,000 | Chain, scale |
| 25 | Guardian's Armor +5 | 625,000 | Scale, plate |
| 27 | Anchoring Armor +6 | 1,625,000 | Plate |
| 27 | Mind Hunter's Armor +6 | 1,625,000 | Scale, plate |
| 28 | Blink Shirt +6 | 2,125,000 | Cloth |
| 28 | Shaper's Armor +6 | 2,125,000 | Cloth, leather |
| 29 | Armor of Adaptable Resistance +6 | 2,625,000 | Hide, chain |
| 29 | Phrenic Armor +6 | 2,625,000 | Chain, scale |
| 30 | Guardian's Armor +6 | 3,125,000 | Scale, Plate |

Shaper's Armor — Level 3+

Your features seem to flow with each movement when you wear this nondescript armor.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth, leather
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable, Illusion): Minor Action. You gain a +2 bonus to AC until the end of the encounter. Each time an enemy attacks you, reduce the bonus by 1. When the bonus drops to 0, the effect ends.
Augment 1: The bonus increases to +4.

Weapons

Augmentable magic weapons flare with light when you infuse them with psionic power. Such weapons are often set with crystals or jewels, within which their psionic energy is stored.

MAGIC WEAPONS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Categories |
|---|---|---|---|
| 3 | Eager Weapon +1 | 680 | Light blade, spear |
| 8 | Aggressive Weapon +2 | 3,400 | Flail, hammer, mace |
| 8 | Eager Weapon +2 | 3,400 | Light blade, spear |
| 8 | Severing Weapon +2 | 3,400 | Axe, heavy blade |
| 13 | Aggressive Weapon +3 | 17,000 | Flail, hammer, mace |
| 13 | Bolstering Weapon +3 | 17,000 | Heavy blade, spear |
| 13 | Eager Weapon +3 | 17,000 | Light blade, spear |
| 13 | Severing Weapon +3 | 17,000 | Axe, heavy blade |
| 18 | Aggressive Weapon +4 | 85,000 | Flail, hammer, mace |
| 18 | Bolstering Weapon +4 | 85,000 | Heavy blade, spear |
| 18 | Eager Weapon +4 | 85,000 | Light blade, spear |
| 18 | Severing Weapon +4 | 85,000 | Axe, heavy blade |
| 23 | Aggressive Weapon +5 | 425,000 | Flail, hammer, mace |
| 23 | Bolstering Weapon +5 | 425,000 | Heavy blade, spear |
| 23 | Eager Weapon +5 | 425,000 | Light blade, spear |
| 23 | Severing Weapon +5 | 425,000 | Axe, heavy blade |
| 28 | Aggressive Weapon +6 | 2,125,000 | Flail, hammer, mace |
| 28 | Bolstering Weapon +6 | 2,125,000 | Heavy blade, spear |
| 28 | Eager Weapon +6 | 2,125,000 | Light blade, spear |
| 28 | Severing Weapon +6 | 2,125,000 | Axe, heavy blade |

Aggressive Weapon — Level 8+

Your latent psionic energy flows through this weapon, meting out increased damage to your foes.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Flail, hammer, mace
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus
Property: While you have at least 1 power point, your attacks using this weapon gain a +1 item bonus to damage rolls.
Level 13 or 18: +2 item bonus
Level 23 or 28: +3 item bonus

Bolstering Weapon — Level 13+

This weapon shines brightly to inspire hope in nearby allies.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Heavy blade, spear
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 psychic and radiant damage per plus
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an attack using this weapon. Effect: You and each ally in a close burst 1 centered on you gain a +2 bonus to saving throws until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1 (Healing): The size of the burst increases to 2. Any bloodied ally in the burst can also spend a healing surge.

Eager Weapon — Level 3+

Your psionic power primes this weapon to surge into action when an enemy tries to slip past your guard.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Light blade, spear
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus, or +1d12 damage per plus on opportunity attacks
Property: While you have at least 1 power point, you gain a +2 item bonus to opportunity attack rolls made using this weapon.

Severing Weapon — Level 8+

While you hold psionic energy in reserve, your weapon cuts deep.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Axe, heavy blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus, or +1d12 damage per plus while you have at least 1 power point
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an attack using this weapon. Effect: Your attack deals 1d6 extra damage.
Augment 1: Your attack deals 2d6 extra damage.

Orbs

Psionic orbs can become attuned to a particular user's mood, shifting through the color spectrum according to the wielder's emotions.

ORBS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) |
|---|---|---|
| 5 | Orb of Stored Energy +1 | 1,000 |
| 9 | Orb of Ghostbane Triumph +2 | 4,200 |
| 10 | Orb of Stored Energy +2 | 5,000 |
| 14 | Orb of Ghostbane Triumph +3 | 21,000 |
| 15 | Orb of Stored Energy +3 | 25,000 |
| 19 | Orb of Ghostbane Triumph +4 | 105,000 |
| 20 | Orb of Stored Energy +4 | 125,000 |
| 24 | Orb of Ghostbane Triumph +5 | 525,000 |
| 25 | Orb of Stored Energy +5 | 625,000 |
| 29 | Orb of Ghostbane Triumph +6 | 2,625,000 |
| 30 | Orb of Stored Energy +6 | 3,125,000 |

Orb of Ghostbane Triumph — Level 9+

Psionic energy clouds this darkened sphere, unfurling when you lash out at spectral foes.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d10 force damage per plus
Property: While you have at least 1 power point, your attacks with this orb ignore the insubstantial quality.
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an insubstantial enemy with an attack using this orb. Effect: The target loses the insubstantial quality until the start of its next turn.
Augment 1: The target loses the insubstantial quality (save ends).

Orb of Stored Energy — Level 5+

This glittering sphere stores psionic energy that you can unleash when your own power has waned.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | +1 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp |
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Expend 1 or 2 power points and place them in the orb. They remain there until you use them or until you take an extended rest.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Requirement: You must have at least 1 power point stored inside the orb. Trigger: You make an attack using an unaugmented attack power. Effect: You can augment the triggering power by spending 1 power point from the orb, instead of using your own power points to augment the power.
Level 25 or 30: You can augment the triggering attack by spending 1 or 2 power points from the orb.

Staffs

Like the staffs employed by other classes, most psionic energy staffs provide defensive benefits. A psionics user infuses his or her staff with power, storing energy in its embedded crystals and conductive metals.

Staff of Aggressive Thoughts — Level 4+

Psionic energy flows through this iron staff to scatter the enemies confronting you.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 force damage per plus
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy within 3 squares of you with a force attack using this staff. Effect: You push each enemy adjacent to you a number of squares equal to the staff's enhancement bonus.
Augment 1: You gain resistance to all damage equal to 3 + your Wisdom modifier until the end of your next turn.

STAFFS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) |
|---|---|---|
| 3 | Staff of Punishing Thoughts +1 | 680 |
| 4 | Staff of Aggressive Thoughts +1 | 840 |
| 5 | Staff of Scourging Revelation +1 | 1,000 |
| 7 | Staff of Bitter Dismissal +2 | 2,600 |
| 8 | Staff of Punishing Thoughts +2 | 3,400 |
| 9 | Staff of Aggressive Thoughts +2 | 4,200 |
| 10 | Staff of Scourging Revelation +2 | 5,000 |
| 12 | Staff of Bitter Dismissal +3 | 13,000 |
| 13 | Staff of Punishing Thoughts +3 | 17,000 |
| 14 | Staff of Aggressive Thoughts +3 | 21,000 |
| 15 | Staff of Scourging Revelation +3 | 25,000 |
| 17 | Staff of Bitter Dismissal +4 | 65,000 |
| 18 | Staff of Punishing Thoughts +4 | 85,000 |
| 19 | Staff of Aggressive Thoughts +4 | 105,000 |
| 20 | Staff of Scourging Revelation +4 | 125,000 |
| 22 | Staff of Bitter Dismissal +5 | 325,000 |
| 23 | Staff of Punishing Thoughts +5 | 425,000 |
| 24 | Staff of Aggressive Thoughts +5 | 525,000 |
| 25 | Staff of Scourging Revelation +5 | 625,000 |
| 27 | Staff of Bitter Dismissal +6 | 1,625,000 |
| 28 | Staff of Punishing Thoughts +6 | 2,125,000 |
| 29 | Staff of Aggressive Thoughts +6 | 2,625,000 |
| 30 | Staff of Scourging Revelation +6 | 3,125,000 |

Staff of Bitter Dismissal — Level 7+

When you batter an enemy with a forceful attack, this gnarled staff's potent psionic energy shunts the foe away from you.

Lvl 7 +2 2,600 gp
Lvl 12 +3 13,000 gp
Lvl 17 +4 65,000 gp
Lvl 22 +5 325,000 gp
Lvl 27 +6 1,625,000 gp

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 psychic damage per plus

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable, Teleport): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy within 3 squares of you with a force attack using this staff. Effect: You teleport the target a number of squares equal to the staff's enhancement bonus.
Augment 1: Before you teleport the target, you slide each enemy within 3 squares of the target 1 square toward it.

Staff of Punishing Thoughts — Level 3+

The crystal that caps this bronzewood staff blazes with light, assailing the minds of your enemies and leaving them at your mercy.

Lvl 3 +1 680 gp
Lvl 8 +2 3,400 gp
Lvl 13 +3 17,000 gp
Lvl 18 +4 85,000 gp
Lvl 23 +5 425,000 gp
Lvl 28 +6 2,125,000 gp

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 psychic damage per plus

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy within 3 squares of you with a psychic attack using this staff. Effect: Each enemy adjacent to you grants combat advantage to you (save ends).
Augment 1: Each enemy within 3 squares of you grants combat advantage to you (save ends).

Staff of Scourging Revelation — Level 5+

The ancient glyphs carved into the wood of this staff weaken your enemies' ability to withstand the attacks of the mind.

Lvl 5 +1 1,000 gp
Lvl 10 +2 5,000 gp
Lvl 15 +3 25,000 gp
Lvl 20 +4 125,000 gp
Lvl 25 +5 625,000 gp
Lvl 30 +6 3,125,000 gp

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: The target gains vulnerability to psychic damage equal to twice the staff's enhancement bonus (save ends)

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable, Psychic): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a psychic or a radiant attack using this staff. Effect: Each enemy in a close burst 1 centered on you gains vulnerable 5 psychic (save ends).
Level 15 or 20: Vulnerable 10 psychic.
Level 25 or 30: Vulnerable 15 psychic.
Augment 1: The size of the burst increases to 2.

Arms Slot Items

From delicate bracelets to heavy shields, these arms slot items help psionic characters boost attacks or build defenses.

ARMS SLOT ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) |
|---|---|---|
| 3 | Bracelets of Subtle Defense | 680 |
| 10 | Bolstering Shield | 5,000 |
| 13 | Focused Shield | 17,000 |
| 20 | Bolstering Shield | 125,000 |
| 30 | Bolstering Shield | 3,125,000 |

Bolstering Shield — Level 10+

This ornate shield captures ambient psionic energy, using it to strengthen you in the midst of combat.

Lvl 10 5,000 gp
Lvl 20 125,000 gp
Lvl 30 3,125,000 gp

Item Slot: Arms
Shield: Any

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Free Action. Trigger: You take damage from an attack. Effect: You gain 5 temporary hit points and shift 1 square.
Level 18: 10 temporary hit points.
Level 28: 15 temporary hit points.
Augment 1: You gain double the number of temporary hit points.

Bracelets of Subtle Defense — Level 3

When imbued with psionic energy, these bracelets help you escape attention on and off the battlefield.

Item Slot: Arms 680 gp
Property: While you have at least 1 power point, you gain a +2 item bonus to Stealth checks.

Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Minor Action. You have concealment from all enemies until the start of your next turn.
Augment 1: You have concealment from all enemies until you make an attack.

Focused Shield — Level 13

When a foe misses you at range, the complex engravings on this shield's surface hinder the accuracy of that foe's subsequent attacks.

Item Slot: Arms 17,000 gp
Shield: Any
Property: You gain resist 5 to all damage from ranged attacks.
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: A ranged attack misses you. Effect: The triggering enemy takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls for attacks that include you as a target until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1: The triggering enemy takes a −2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends).

Feet Slot Items

Magic footwear helps to enhance an adventurer's movement options.

FEET SLOT ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) |
|---|---|---|
| 7 | Dancer's Slippers | 2,600 |
| 12 | Nimble Shoes | 13,000 |
| 15 | Boots of Resolute Reflexes | 25,000 |
| 18 | Skating Boots | 85,000 |

Boots of Resolute Reflexes — Level 15

These thin leather boots respond to your thoughts, heightening your ability to avoid attack.

Item Slot: Feet 25,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to Reflex. You can spend 1 power point as a free action during your turn to increase the bonus to +3 until the end of your next turn.

Dancer's Slippers — Level 7

Your feet glide across the ground, letting you reposition yourself when an enemy's attack goes wide.

Item Slot: Feet 2,600 gp
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Free Action. Trigger: An enemy misses you with an attack. Effect: You shift 1 square.
Augment 1: You regain the use of this power but cannot augment it again during this encounter.

Nimble Shoes — Level 12

With these supple shoes on your feet, you leap and climb with ease.

Item Slot: Feet 13,000 gp
Property: When you would make an Athletics check, you can make an Acrobatics check instead.
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An attack knocks you prone. Effect: You stand up.
Augment 1: You cannot be knocked prone and you can ignore forced movement until the end of your next turn.

Skating Boots — Level 18

These steel-toed boots let you slide past foes in the heat of combat.

Item Slot: Feet 85,000 gp
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Move Action. You shift a number of squares equal to your speed.
Augment 1: This movement ignores difficult terrain.

Head Slot Items

These items of magic headwear further unlock a psionic character's already formidable mind, heightening awareness or boosting psychic attack abilities.

HEAD SLOT ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) |
|---|---|---|
| 11 | Eyes of the Deep Dwarf | 9,000 |
| 13 | Diadem of Exquisite Communication | 17,000 |
| 14 | Helm of the Mental Juggernaut | 21,000 |
| 15 | Circlet of the Resolute Mind | 25,000 |

Circlet of the Resolute Mind — Level 15

As it responds to your psionic power, this fine silver circlet strengthens your mind against mental attacks.

Item Slot: Head 25,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to Will. You can spend 1 power point as a free action during your turn to increase the bonus to +3 until the end of your next turn.

Diadem of Exquisite Communication — Level 13

This diadem makes you a conduit for unspoken thoughts and lets you take the advantage when an enemy attacks your strength of mind.

Item Slot: Head 17,000 gp
Property: While you have at least 1 power point, you have telepathy 5.
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Free Action. Trigger: An enemy attack targets your Will. Effect: The triggering enemy grants you combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Augment 1 (Psychic): The enemy also takes psychic damage equal to your Constitution, Intelligence, or Charisma modifier (whichever is highest).

Eyes of the Deep Dwarf — Level 11

These heavy goggles gleam faintly with psionic energy, helping you see what lurks in the darkness.

Item Slot: Head 9,000 gp
Property: While you have at least 1 power point, you gain darkvision.

Helm of the Mental Juggernaut — Level 14

A demon mask fronts this heavy helmet, its grinning visage protecting you when enemies attempt to hinder you in combat.

Item Slot: Head 21,000 gp
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to saving throws against effects that daze or stun.
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): No Action. Trigger: You start your turn. Effect: You make a saving throw against one effect that a save can end.
Augment 1: You gain a +2 power bonus to the saving throw.

Neck Slot Items

Ranging from protective cloaks to delicate necklaces, neck slot items help safeguard a psionic adventurer.

NECK SLOT ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) |
|---|---|---|
| 3 | Psyweave Cloak +1 | 680 |
| 8 | Psyweave Cloak +2 | 3,400 |
| 13 | Psyweave Cloak +3 | 17,000 |
| 15 | Amulet of Adept Movements +3 | 25,000 |
| 18 | Psyweave Cloak +4 | 85,000 |
| 20 | Amulet of Adept Movements +4 | 125,000 |
| 23 | Psyweave Cloak +5 | 425,000 |
| 24 | Medallion of Confounding Ideas +5 | 525,000 |
| 25 | Amulet of Adept Movements +5 | 625,000 |
| 28 | Psyweave Cloak +6 | 2,125,000 |
| 29 | Medallion of Confounding Ideas +6 | 2,625,000 |
| 30 | Amulet of Adept Movements +6 | 3,125,000 |

Amulet of Adept Movements — Level 15+

This plain charm grants you the quickness to slip past your enemies in the heat of combat.

Lvl 15 +3 25,000 gp Lvl 25 +5 625,000 gp
Lvl 20 +4 125,000 gp Lvl 30 +6 3,125,000 gp
Item Slot: Neck
Enhancement: Fortitude, Reflex, and Will
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to all defenses against opportunity attacks.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. You spend 1 power point and gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Medallion of Confounding Ideas — Level 24+

This copper amulet empowers you to lend strength to the minds of your allies, confounding enemy attacks.

Lvl 24 +5 525,000 gp Lvl 29 +6 2,625,000 gp
Item Slot: Neck
Enhancement: Fortitude, Reflex, and Will
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable, Zone): Minor Action. You create a zone in a close burst 3 that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone moves with you, remaining centered on you. Allies gain a +2 item bonus to Will while within the zone.
Augment 1: Allies also gain resistance to psychic damage equal to 3 + the item's enhancement bonus while within the zone.

Psyweave Cloak — Level 3+

This supple cloak feels cool to the touch, and can turn back attacks with the strength of the strongest armor.

Lvl 3 +1 680 gp Lvl 18 +4 85,000 gp
Lvl 8 +2 3,400 gp Lvl 23 +5 425,000 gp
Lvl 13 +3 17,000 gp Lvl 28 +6 2,125,000 gp
Item Slot: Neck
Enhancement: Fortitude, Reflex, and Will
Power (Daily ✦ Augmentable): Minor Action. You gain resist 5 to all damage until the start of your next turn.
Level 13 or 18: Resist 10 to all damage.
Level 23 or 28: Resist 15 to all damage.
Augment 1: Increase the resistance by 5.

Waist Slot Items

Psionic power users can gird themselves with powerful magic to ward off pain and hardship.

WAIST SLOT ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) |
|---|---|---|
| 15 | Girdle of the Resolute Body | 25,000 |
| 18 | Cord of Elusive Thoughts | 85,000 |

Cord of Elusive Thoughts — Level 18

This thin cord of eel's skin lets you focus the power of your mind to escape from physical restraints.

Item Slot: Waist 85,000 gp
Property: When you make an escape check, you can make an Arcana check instead of an Acrobatics or Athletics check.
Power (Daily ✦ Psionic): Minor action. Effect: You spend 1 power point and gain a +5 bonus to your next escape attempt made before the end of your next turn. If the attempt succeeds, you can shift 2 squares as a free action.

Girdle of the Resolute Body — Level 15

This wide leather belt augments your stamina and natural resilience.

Item Slot: Waist 25,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to Fortitude. You can spend 1 power point as a free action during your turn to increase the bonus to +3 until the end of your next turn.

About the Designers

ROBERT J. SCHWALB is a freelance writer with over one hundred game design and development credits to his name. His previous design work includes the Dark Sun® Campaign Setting, the Player's Handbook® 3 core rulebook, and the Monster Manual® 3 core rulebook, as well as numerous articles for Dragon® and Dungeon® magazines. He lives in Tennessee.

ARI MARMELL is a freelance writer with numerous design credits, including the 4th Edition Tomb of Horrors™ superadventure and The Plane Below: Secrets of the Elemental Chaos™ game supplement. He is also a novelist whose published works include Agents of Artifice, a novel based on the Magic: The Gathering® Trading Card Game. He lives in Texas.

FIND MORE
Adventure
EVERY WEDNESDAY
At a Store
Near You
D&D Encounters™ is an exciting, weekly gaming program that lets you play in an ongoing D&D® campaign—one epic encounter at a time.
As you defeat enemies, solve puzzles, finish quests, and perform heroic deeds, you'll earn "renown" points that you can use to get exclusive rewards that will give your character an in-game advantage.
Find a store near you.
DUNGEONSANDDRAGONS.COM
TM & © 2010 Wizards of the Coast LLC.
DUNGEONS & DRAGONS
ENCOUNTERS

Unleash the Power of Your Mind

You are all that stands between the world and the madness of the Far Realm. Training in ancient disciplines of body and mind, you harness the power of your will to work the magic of thoughts and dreams, of psychic projection and mental domination. Uniting your mind and body into a single weapon against alien forces of madness, you are a psionic champion, a tower of iron will.

This Dungeons & Dragons® supplement presents never-before-seen options for psionic characters created using Player's Handbook® 3, including new powers, feats, paragon paths, and epic destinies designed for the ardent, battlemind, monk, and psion classes. Psionic Power™ also provides background information about the world's psionic traditions, rules for wild talents, and two new races, as well as builds and class features that allow you to play new versions of your favorite psionic classes.

For use with these 4th Edition Dungeons & Dragons products:

Player's Handbook® core rulebooks

Dungeon Master's Guide® core rulebooks

Monster Manual® core rulebooks

D&D® Miniatures D&D® Dungeon Tiles

GET MORE AT D&D INSIDER™ www.dndinsider.com

d20 SYSTEM™

Wizards of the Coast®

ISBN: 978-0-7869-5560-2

9 780786 955602 52995

EAN

Sug. Retail: U.S. $29.95 CAN $35.00

Printed in the U.S.A. 210940000

Dungeons & Dragons®

Player's Option:
Heroes of the Feywild™

ROLEPLAYING GAME SUPPLEMENT

Rodney Thompson ✦ Claudio Pozas ✦ Steve Townshend

DUNGEONS & DRAGONS®

PLAYER'S OPTION:

HEROES OF THE FEYWILD™

ROLEPLAYING GAME SUPPLEMENT

Rodney Thompson ✦ Claudio Pozas ✦ Steve Townshend

CREDITS

Design
Rodney Thompson (lead), Claudio Pozas, Steve Townshend

Additional Design
Jeremy Crawford, Ari Marmell, Mike Mearls, Matt Sernett

Development
Jeremy Crawford, Stephen Schubert

Editing
Michele Carter, Cal Moore, Scott Fitzgerald Gray, Ray Vallese

Producer
Greg Bilsland

Managing Editing
Kim Mohan

D&D RPG Senior Manager
Mike Mearls

D&D Senior Creative Art Director
Jon Schindehette

D&D Brand Team
Liz Schuh, Kierin Chase, Laura Tommervik, Shelly Mazzanoble, Chris Lindsay, Hilary Ross

Playtesters
Angela Amburn, Bryan Amburn, C.J. Thrasher, Douglas Kilpatrick, Eva Orta, Galen Mullins, Greg Hartman, Ian Ramsey, James Auwaerter, Jeff Barnes, John-Alan Pascoe, Jonathan D'Silva, Jordan Conrad, Kevin Lawson, Lori Anderson, Mark Knobbe, Matt Fuchs, Nick Wolfanger, Patrick Neal, Pieter Sleijpen, Renout van Rijn, Shawn Merwin, Todd Keck, Tom Dale, Tony Lawrence, Yourik de Voogd

Art Director
Keven Smith

Graphic Designers
Leon Cortez, Keven Smith

Cover Illustrations
Emrah Elmasli (front)
Eric Belisle (back)

Interior Illustrations
Ryan Barger, Eric Belisle, Wayne England, Tyler Jacobson, Jim Nelson, William O'Connor, Andrew Silver, Matias Tapia, Eva Widermann, Mark Winters

Cartography
Mike Schley

Publishing Production Specialist
Erin Dorries

Prepress Manager
Jefferson Dunlap

Imaging Technicians
Carmen Cheung, Ashley Brock

Production Manager
Cynda Callaway

D&D 4th Edition Design
Rob Heinsoo, Andy Collins, James Wyatt

Building on the design of previous editions by
E. Gary Gygax, Dave Arneson, David "Zeb" Cook, Jonathan Tweet, Monte Cook, Skip Williams, Richard Baker, Peter Adkison

620-31731000-001 EN
ISBN: 978-0-7869-5836-8

First Printing:
November 2011
9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

U.S., CANADA, ASIA, PACIFIC, & LATIN AMERICA
Wizards of the Coast LLC
P.O. Box 707
Renton WA 98057-0707
+1-800-324-6496

EUROPEAN HEADQUARTERS
Hasbro UK Ltd
Caswell Way
Newport, Gwent NP9 0YH
GREAT BRITAIN
Please keep this address for your records

WIZARDS OF THE COAST, BELGIUM
Industrialaan 1
1702 Groot-Bijgaarden
Belgium
+32.070.233.277

Dungeons & Dragons, D&D, Wizards of the Coast, Dungeons & Dragons Essentials, Dungeons & Dragons Insider, Dragon, Player's Option: Heroes of the Feywild, Heroes of the Fallen Lands, Heroes of the Forgotten Kingdoms, Manual of the Planes, Monster Manual, Monster Vault, Rules Compendium, all other Wizards of the Coast product names, and their respective logos are trademarks of Wizards of the Coast LLC in the U.S.A. and other countries. All Wizards characters and the distinctive likenesses thereof are property of Wizards of the Coast LLC. This material is protected under the copyright laws of the United States of America. Any reproduction or unauthorized use of the material or artwork contained herein is prohibited without the express written permission of Wizards of the Coast LLC. Any similarity to actual people, organizations, places, or events included herein is purely coincidental. Printed in the U.S.A. ©2011 Wizards of the Coast LLC.

Visit our website at DungeonsandDragons.com

CONTENTS

Chapter 1
INTO THE BRIGHT ..... 4
Bard's Tale: The First Elves ..... 4
Welcome to the Feywild ..... 6
An Outsider's Perspective ..... 6
A Land of Enchantment ..... 6
A Land Fraught with Peril ..... 6
A Storybook Land ..... 7
A Land of Unknowns ..... 8
A Feywild Native's Perspective ..... 9
Fey Crossing Hamlets ..... 9
Many Worlds, One Feywild ..... 10
The Feydark ..... 10
Eladrin Cities ..... 10
Astrazalian ..... 10
Mithrendain ..... 11
Shinaelestra ..... 11
Factions of the Fey ..... 12
Demesnes of the Archfey ..... 12
Senaliesse ..... 12
Vale of the Long Night ..... 13
Borderlands and Wilderness ..... 14
Brokenstone Vale ..... 14
Cendriane ..... 14
The Isle of Dread ..... 15
The Fomorian Cities ..... 16
The Maze of Fathaghn ..... 17
The Murkendraw ..... 17
Nachtur, the Goblin Kingdom ..... 18
Bard's Tale: The Vanishing Villagers ... 19

Chapter 2
RACES OF THE FEY ..... 20
Racial Benefits ..... 20
Bard's Tale: The Knight and the Pixie ..... 20
Hamadryad ..... 22
Hamadryad Beauty ..... 26
Hamadryad Utility Powers ..... 26
Pixie ..... 28
Special Rules ..... 29
Bard's Tale: The Unruly Girl ..... 32
Hitching a Ride ..... 32
Pixie Utility Powers ..... 33
Satyr ..... 34
Bard's Tale: The Three Fair Beauties ... 36
Bard's Tale: The Ugly Satyr ..... 38
Satyr Utility Powers ..... 38

Chapter 3
CLASSES ..... 40
Bard's Tale: The Three Travelers ..... 40
Barbarian ..... 42
Berserker ..... 42
Berserker Race Choices ..... 45
New Barbarian Powers ..... 46
Bard ..... 53
Signs of Influence ..... 53
Skald ..... 54
Skald Race Choices ..... 56
Bard's Tale: The Skald's Apprentice ..... 58
New Bard Powers ..... 59
Bard's Tale: Halagar's Stand ..... 65
Druid ..... 69
Protector ..... 69
Protector Race Choices ..... 76
New Druid Powers ..... 77
Bard's Tale: The Lady of the Wood ... 78
Wizard ..... 86
Witch ..... 86
Worlds with Many Moons ..... 89
Witch Race Choices ..... 90
New Wizard Powers ..... 91
Bard's Tale: The Foolish Prince ..... 94

Chapter 4
CHARACTER OPTIONS ..... 102
Bard's Tale: The Sidhe Lord and the Satyr ..... 102
Character Themes ..... 104
Choosing a Theme ..... 104
Themes in Character Creation ..... 104
Themes in the Party ..... 104
Fey Beast Tamer ..... 105
Fey Beast Companion Actions ..... 106
Sidhe Lord ..... 108
Tuathan ..... 110
Unseelie Agent ..... 114
Paragon Paths ..... 116
Deadly Berserker ..... 116
Master Skald ..... 117
Legendary Witch ..... 118
Inner Circle Initiate ..... 120
Epic Destinies ..... 121
Shiradi Champion ..... 121
Wild Hunter ..... 123
Witch Queen ..... 124
Feats ..... 126
Multiclass Feats ..... 126
Familiars ..... 131
Your Familiar ..... 131
Feywild Gear ..... 133
Magic Items ..... 136
Totems ..... 136
Wondrous Items ..... 137
Consumables ..... 138
Fey Magic Gifts ..... 140
For the DM: Alternative Rewards ..... 140
Bard's Tale: The Nightmare Fairies ... 143

Chapter 5
BUILD YOUR STORY ..... 144
Bard's Tale: The Future-Teller ..... 144
Upbringing ..... 146
Eladrin Nobility ..... 146
Feydark Refugees ..... 146
Merchants ..... 146
Peasants ..... 147
Slaves ..... 147
Foster Parents (Cruel) ..... 147
Foster Parents (Kind) ..... 147
Civilized Lands ..... 147
Astrazalian ..... 147
Mithrendain ..... 148
Senaliesse ..... 149
Shinaelestra ..... 149
Wilderness Locations ..... 150
Brokenstone Vale ..... 150
Cendriane ..... 151
Fey Crossing Hamlet ..... 151
Feydark Opening Hamlet ..... 152
Feywild Trails ..... 152
The Isle of Dread ..... 153
The Lake of Dreams ..... 153
The Maze of Fathaghn ..... 153
The Murkendraw ..... 154
Plains of Echoing Thunder ..... 154
The White Well ..... 154
Dark Lands ..... 155
Feydark Wilds ..... 155
Fortress of Frozen Tears ..... 155
Harrowhame ..... 155
Mag Tureah ..... 156
Nachtur ..... 156
Vor Thomil ..... 157
Events ..... 157
Start Your Adventure ..... 159
Bard's Tale: The Wandering Child ..... 159

Appendix: Character Advancement Table ..... 160

CHAPTER 1

Into the Bright

AS A TRAVELER heads east from Fallcrest, winding along the King's Road over the Moon Hills and down beneath the sheltering boughs of Harken Forest, sometimes he or she feels a slight change in the wind. Like the perfumed whisper of a seductress, a breeze of honeysuckle, lavender, and eglantine wafts from the fastness of the wood. The weary traveler cannot help but sigh and reflect upon the spring of youth, when the world seemed new and alive.

Most people stay the course, following the King's Road toward their destination and the duties that await. Fields must be planted and sown, wars must be fought, horseshoes mended, and family provided for. Travelers mindful of their responsibilities move on, thinking no more of the wind's chance direction than a passing reminiscence of what might have been.

But some do not stay to the road.

The young, the romantic, and the adventurous might follow the soughing wind between tall trunks, across deer paths, and down steep defiles until all at once the wood shifts, and high on a forested hill now stands a bright metropolis, its crystal towers glittering as brightly as starlight. Radiant eladrin with shining eyes and silver-spun hair stride gracefully through the city's idyllic streets, and nymphs frolic like children beneath hanging gardens and fruit trees. Fair maidens with eyes the color of meadow violets sing the wind's song note for note, and their voices float through the wood like silver embers. As dusk settles on the eladrin city, pixies rise quietly from the forest floor, trailing golden stardust in their wake. On gossamer wings they paint the sunset across the sky in colors known only to the hearts of dreamers, poets, and lovers.

BARD'S TALE: THE FIRST ELVES

In the beginning, when the dew of creation still lay wet upon the planes, there were three elves. The youngest sister was the most cunning, the oldest daughter was the wisest, and the middle child was the most eager. Their father watched over them from afar, and together they made a beautiful and sometimes capricious trio, and all was well in the realm of the fey.

However, such paradise among the siblings could not last for long. The youngest sister had always been quick of mind and bold to a fault, and had no fear of exploring dark and dangerous places. With her brother and sister elsewhere, the youngest elf began exploring the shadowy reaches of their plane, and she discovered that there were invaders there, creatures that had once served the gods but had been cast out for their refusal to obey. Herself headstrong, the youngest sister sympathized with these outsiders, and began treating with them as if they were her allies.

When the older siblings learned of their sister's dealings with dark creatures, they confronted her. Unwilling to bend, the youngest sister lashed out at her brother, striking so quickly that, at first, the brother thought the attack to be some kind of dark joke. Only when the oldest and wisest sibling intervened did the truth become known: the youngest sister had turned against her siblings, and there was unrest in the fey realm as a result. The royal children of the Feywild, once idolized as a trio, had now been sundered forever.

After the attack on her brother, the youngest sister fled, then rallied her supporters to her side. For what seemed like eons, the youngest sister waged war on her older siblings, who in turn had marshaled their own forces. The lush and verdant Feywild ran red with the blood of elves, and violence became the standard of the day.

Finally, after years of conflict, the brother and older sister cast their youngest sibling out of their land. Those who allied with the sister were marked and cast aside as well, fleeing underground to become the first drow. The youngest sister embraced her new home and became a queen of her realm.

And so the harmony of the fey realm had been permanently disturbed. No longer unified with their sibling, the oldest sister and middle brother also parted ways. Some of their followers even left the fey realm, choosing the world of men with all its dangers and flaws over the despoiled paradise of the Feywild. Thus, the three elves became the first eladrin, elves, and drow.

MIKE SCHLEY

Kingdom of the Sea Lords
Yar Thamil
Porpheria's Island
Isle of Druid
Mithendain, City of Autumn
Shinadastra, The Falling City
Sendiazze
Lake of Dreams
Here Be Dragons
Kingdom of Nachtur
Astraedian, The City of Starlight
Brokenstone Vale
Cindriana
Horseshoe Vale
Mag Tarnath
The Vale of Long Knife
Fortress of Frozen Tears
Maze of Fathaghn
Plains of Echoing Thunder
The Murkendraw
The Murkendraw
W
S

Welcome to the Feywild

The Feywild, also sometimes called the land of Faerie, is a place bright with magic. Those who wander its enchanted roads discover miracles and wonders undreamed of in the mortal world. In the Feywild, the laws of science, logic, and reason defer to the arts of magic, story, and rhyme. Ordinary animals and objects converse as eloquently as any worldly mortal. Enchanted forests wander across the landscape like herds of roving sheep. Glorious castles perch on mountain spires that touch the starry heavens, and a bold traveler can board a vessel to a fey palace on the moon. Fairies anoint the dewdrops on morning flowers, and in the evening, satyrs play their gentle pipes to lull the world to sleep.

Yet for all its dreamlike splendor, the plane can be as perilous as the Elemental Chaos with its random explosions of stone and fire, and as deadly as the life-sapping Shadowfell. Here wicked hags place everlasting curses on their enemies, change mortals into toads, and blacken the moon in their flight across the midnight sky. Capricious fey play careless games with mortal lives. Underground caverns sprawl the length of the world above, and in these dark places, fomorian tyrants, brutal cyclopses, and hateful drow await the day when they will overthrow the surface dwellers. Those who are drawn to this realm of enchantment and danger must take care, for wonders and horrors beyond imagining lie around every bend in the woodland road.

An Outsider's Perspective

Although most mortals are raised on fairy tales, few continue to believe in such fancies as they grow older. Rural commoners might blame pixies, boggles, and hags for spoiled milk, sick livestock, or misplaced items, but town and city dwellers scoff at what they consider base superstition. By and large, the civilized peoples of the world, surrounded day and night with the ordered workings of their own hands, think little of the Feywild except as a passing fancy of childhood. The practicalities of day-to-day work, trade, and family dim the vivid wonders of the fairy stories until they fade from memory like dreams. But regardless of whether they truly believe in the Feywild, mortals from the world tend to view it in the following ways.

A Land of Enchantment

There is a land beyond the world where the wildest dreams can come true. In this place, magic is inherent in all things, and anyone can realize his or her heart's desire. In this place, wild unicorns gallop across the endless meadows like shooting stars, and frolicsome nymphs lovelier than the dawn take mortals as partners. In this land, a maiden enchanted to sleep for a thousand years can be awakened with true love's kiss. Clever mortals can outwit mighty giants, trolls, and dragons, winning fantastic treasures. Here, the pinnacle of mortal ambition is within reach, and each soul can attain its grandest potential.

Those who visit the Feywild and return to the mortal world rarely, if ever, readjust to their normal lives. The fey realm instills in them an adventurous, revivifying spirit. Visions of a flight of pixies setting the evening stars alight, or the sight of the city of Astrazalian shimmering on the dusky sea, leave impressions on a mortal heart that can never be erased.

It is said that in the Feywild, time passes differently than it does in the natural world. In some areas of the plane, time virtually stands still, basking in eternal summer or frozen in endless winter. After spending only a few days in the Feywild, a mortal might return to his home in the world to find that everyone he knew perished long ago. Thus, eladrin and other creatures that live in these timeless realms seem practically immortal to those with mortal life spans.

A Land Fraught with Peril

For all its enchantment, the Feywild is perilous to people who do not understand its ways. The changeable fey place little value on the brief lives of mortals. Fortunate visitors from the ordinary world deal with fey that are ambivalent toward them rather than fey that toy with them for amusement.

Aside from the unpredictable nature of fey creatures, numerous stories tell of hags, tyrannical fomorian kings, and powerful archfey that rule over vast, dark demesnes and command goblins, ogres, trolls, werewolves, and other creatures that savor the taste of mortal flesh. These villains can be as fundamentally evil as devils or demon lords, and they wield powers of comparable might. Only rarely can they be defeated by mere sword or spell. More typically, special conditions prophesy their overthrow or reform.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Keldar and Rowena prepare to enter a fey crossing that leads to the Fortress of Frozen Tears

TYLER JACOBSON

For example, it is said that the heart of the archfey known as the Prince of Frost froze when his true love betrayed him and escaped elsewhere in time with a mortal lover. If the prince ever finds his love again and forgives her, the icy casing around his heart will melt away, transforming him back into the Prince of Summer he once was. Or a powerful hag might be defeated only if a cold iron dagger forged at the hour of her birth is plunged into her heart by a man who was never born. Mortals visiting the Feywild do well to remember that fanciful rules govern this place, and few quests follow a direct path to victory.

A Storybook Land

You know from the stories of your childhood that the rules that dictate life in the fey realm are different. In the world, natural laws govern the physical environment and the study of arcane magic, but the chimerical Feywild rejects such conventions. Here, you can travel to nearly any location conceivable, whether it is the moon above, a dryad's spacious mansion inside the trunk of a beech tree, or a kingdom that exists atop the flowery fields of a dandelion stem. Any creature or object might live and speak in its own manner, including rabbits, roses, placid lakes, and the stars in the night sky. As happens in stories, occurrences that at first seem impossible often prove inevitable. The bards who dwell near fey crossings believe that reality is made from stories and that the events that occur in one's life are merely the threads of a larger tale. These bards see the storybook rules of the Feywild as the purest form of reality, only as consistent as the larger story currently unfolding.

Mortals who attempt to survive in the Feywild by strength of arms alone are doomed to fall to beings that wield magic far more cunning than any blade. Those who adapt to the storybook logic of the Feywild and learn to live by their wits stand a far better chance of survival.

The Feywild is a land of destiny both imposed and fulfilled. A mortal who trespasses in a fey demesne might be forbidden to leave until he or she completes seven seemingly impossible tasks, such as milking all the cows in the world in the course of a day, slaying seven immortal giants, drawing the song from a blade of grass, or interpreting the dreams of a boulder. Yet within the logic of the Feywild, these feats are possible.

However, woe to any creature that breaks a contract. The story magic that makes all things possible in the Feywild works both ways, and oath breakers find themselves at the mercy of those they seek to betray. A human who vows to praise a nymph's beauty in song for a fortnight had best keep his promise to the letter, or the nymph might take his voice, leaving him unable to sing for the rest of his days.

A Land of Unknowns

In the natural world, mortals stake their lives on physical boundaries. Cottage walls keep out the wind and weather, town fortifications separate civilization from the wild, and castle walls repel invading armies. While the empire of Nerath flourished, mortals felt secure within the protection of its borders, but since its fall, civilizations have become points of light in an indefinite sea of darkness.

The definable borders and boundaries of the world are important; you rely on them for security and protection. But what of the places that are neither one location nor another? The twilight that separates day from night, the uncertain days between one season and another, the perimeters of doorways and windows that are neither inside nor outside—these places are subject to superstition, which claims that demons, fey, and other frightening creatures can enter the world through indefinable regions.

In the natural world, magic too is governed by rules. Wizards study arcane texts, learn to cast specific spells, and improve their techniques through research and dedication. Fey magic, however, bends and breaks such rules. The humblest midwife can pledge herself to powers that can instantly plague mortals with curses that last a lifetime. Many fey change shapes as easily as a mortal changes clothing. Such unknown quantities inspire fear in the people of the natural world.

Fey creatures are not without limits, but their boundaries are more flexible and, at the same time, more binding. Most fey that make pacts and bargains are magically bound to their promises. Breaking an oath or granting a favor places the fey under the power of another creature. Thus, fey rarely swear oaths or promise favors, usually only in desperation or when they desire high-stakes fun.

Fey establish their borders and parameters based on conditions: "before the next moonrise," "only a mortal who dances with a griffon," "when the seventh son of the witch queen is slain," "until the towers of Astrazalian sink beneath the sea," and so forth. Similarly, fey respect ancient conditional laws, such as those that block them from boundaries ritually sealed with cold iron. Like a hag's curse that transforms a prince into a frog "until he receives the love of a princess," conditions act as boundaries for the fey, as strong as any wall and as binding as shackles of iron.

Nistyncia argues with two mischievous male pixies in the Brokenstone Vale, while Keldar waits impatiently

MARK WINTERS

A Feywild Native's Perspective

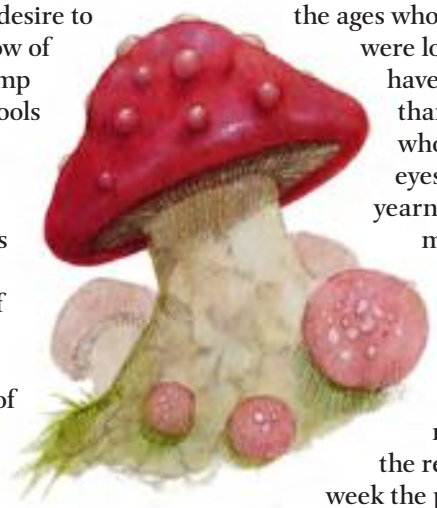
Those who were born in the Feywild and those who dwell near a fey crossing have an entirely different perspective about the lands beyond the veil. If you are a Feywild native or grew up near the places where eladrin cities appear in the mortal world, you are aware of the perils and enchantments of the place. The magic of the plane runs in your blood, and your life has given you at least some exposure to the wonders that lie beyond the ordinary world.

You might have taken the blessings and enchantments of the Feywild for granted, acknowledging them as an intrinsic part of your existence. For example, you are less likely to be swept away by a fairy's flight through a dusky glade or by the sudden appearance of a glorious eladrin city. In addition, the dangers that lurk in the Feywild are far more apparent to you than they are to outsiders. You are well aware of the brutal fomorians and sadistic drow in the Feydark below and their desire to overthrow the surface world. You know of wicked hags in the Murkendraw swamp that eat mortal flesh, lure unwitting fools into ironclad pacts, or turn them into newts. You know about wild pixies, skulking boggles, and capricious nymphs that play so hard with visitors that few survive the experience.



You also have a basic knowledge of important Feywild locales and others close to where you live. In the same way that mortals can point out areas of the natural world, you can provide general directions to the eladrin city of Mithrendain, the fomorian city of Mag Tureah, or the Summer Queen's palace in Senaliesse. Given the shifting boundaries of the Feywild, however, even the most carefully detailed map can lose accuracy between one sunrise and the next.

The following sections give you an idea of the mood and feel of living in a well-known Feywild locale, or in a mortal locale that has a fey crossing nearby. These sections also detail traditions and customs that your character might know if you hail from the vicinity.

Fey Crossing Hamlets

In the quiet wilderness far away from the cities of the natural world, small villages rest near areas where the border with the Feywild wears thin. You live in one such place, and every day passes much the same as the one that came before. You and your neighbors plow and harvest fields, hunt game, pull flax for linen, shear sheep, dye wool, forge metals, and more—a series of never-ending labors common to village life.

But as long as you have lived here, you have noticed something strange and magical about the hamlet. When pestilence and famine strike other nearby settlements, your crops grow tall and strong, wild game is plentiful, and your water remains pure and clean. The mists that rise in the evening suggest shapes of fantastic beasts such as unicorns and griffons. Sometimes after dusk in the moonlit woods and fields beyond your village, you hear strange sounds like the tinkling laughter of faraway bells, and you see distant colorful lights dancing slowly through the air like fireflies. Sometimes strangers happen by your hamlet, smelling of faraway scents that create cloud castles in your mind; they speak of domains of eternal summer that are home to elf maidens of surpassing beauty.

Although the land around your village is rich and fair, the elders forbid your people from wandering in the woods after sunset, warning of villagers through the ages who strayed from the known paths and were lost in a fairy realm. Some are said to have returned years later, not a day older than when they disappeared. But those who return never truly recover. Their eyes remain aglimmer with distant yearning as they recall enchanted forests, majestic hills, and flawless skies, like a dream one struggles to capture as it fades from memory.

Residing near a fey crossing in the mortal world, you are privy to charms, superstitions, and rumors regarding the creatures of the realm. In some villages, once each week the priest circles the settlement with a bag of iron shavings donated by the blacksmith. He sprinkles pinches of the shavings on the ground as he goes along, followed by chattering children and dogs sniffing for handouts. When you were young and ambled in this train, you asked the priest why he circled the village so, and he told you of the power of cold iron to ward away the creatures of fey. Not being of the mortal world, they must respect its boundaries and cannot pass over a border of cold iron without risking great peril. The local wise woman disagrees with the priest, claiming that only iron forged without heat can ward off the fey. The storyteller of your village offers a different tale, saying that the creatures of the Feywild are magic beings far older than iron, and every mechanical achievement decreases their magic and strength in the natural world. And you once spoke to a traveling sage who refuted all these claims, swearing that only iron forged from a fallen star can weaken the fey, for stars are beings of magic incarnate, with bones made of solid iron.

WAYNE ENGLAND

The Feydark

Just as the natural world has an Underdark, so does the Feywild have its own reflection of that dangerous subterranean realm. The Feydark is a vast underground tangle of caverns and tunnels occupied by some of the most dangerous creatures of the Feywild. The fomorians are the greatest organized threat in the Feydark, with their cyclops servants, but other fearsome creatures lurk in the shadows.

The Feydark, like the aboveground portions of the Feywild, teems with magic and life on a much greater scale than the Underdark of the natural world. Many sections of the Feydark, especially those inhabited by myconids, could be described as verdant. Food and water are plentiful for the underground inhabitants, but so are predators and malicious fey that inhabit the subterranean realm.

Eladrin Cities

Throughout the Feywild, the cities of the eladrin are bastions of civilization. They are often filled not only with natives of the Feywild but also with visitors from the mortal realms.

Astrazalian

The crystal stone towers of the City of Starlight sparkle like the wide sea that surrounds the island's emerald slopes, like the coins and gems that trade hands on its winding streets, like the stars that are the city's namesake.

In spring and summer, this city you call home occupies an island in the natural world. It is the crown jewel of the eladrin realms, the incarnate dream and the envy of every mortal race. As an inhabitant of Astrazalian, you are surrounded by affluence, diversity, and trade. You might be a merchant with the Star and Dolphin Coster, a warrior in service of Lady Shandria (niece of the Summer Queen and ruler of Astrazalian), or a student of magic at the oldest and most prestigious school of wizardry in the planes. If you have lived in Astrazalian for any amount of time, you cannot help but feel overwhelming pride when you look to the city's banners high among the clouds, the graceful swan boats in her harbor, and the bountiful magic that brings luxurious conveniences to every citizen. Perhaps other grand cities exist, but if there is one more perfect, richer with opportunity and diversity, you have never seen its like.

Yet for all Astrazalian's qualities, it is nearly impossible for you to attain significant power here. The ancient noble houses hold fast to their positions, as they have done for time out of mind. Your custom is to treat others with courtesy and respect, even if the honeyed words (yours or theirs) are false. You cannot tell who might rise to power or when, and it is good to have as many "friends" as possible when opportunities present themselves. You recognize the arrogant deceits that corrupt the veins of your home, though when you go abroad amid crude mortals, Astrazalian's legendary civility and grace never stray far from your heart.

You know a few mortals, but you rarely know them well; they can never secure power in Astrazalian. At the end of summer, they pack up their families and stalls and leave your beautiful city before it makes worldfall back to the Feywild. All through the autumn and winter, savage fomorians besiege Astrazalian from their Feydark borderlands in hopes

MANY WORLDS, ONE FEYWILD

Whether your campaign takes place in the region of the Nentir Vale, the world of the Forgotten Realms campaign setting or the Eberron campaign setting, some other published setting, or a world of your DM's creation, you can use the material in this book with little or no alteration. For all practical purposes, the Feywild exists as described in these pages (and in sources such as Manual of the Planes) regardless of the mortal world to which it is connected. You can view this consistency as a mysterious property of the Feywild—its features mirror every world at once—or as a convenience to make this material as useful as possible to the game.

Your DM might add or modify details of the Feywild depending on his or her campaign, and these changes might open up new possibilities for your character. For example, if you're playing in a Forgotten Realms campaign, you might play a star elf (eladrin) from Sildëyuir, the star-shrouded fey forest linked to the Yuirwood in the nation of Aglarond. In an Eberron campaign, you could come from one of the feyspires, the seven jewels of the Faerie Court that travel between Thelanis and the world. In Athas, the world of the Dark Sun campaign setting, the Feywild (referred to as the Lands Within the Wind) is reduced to pockets scattered across the burned world. A fey character in a Dark Sun campaign can come from these pocket planes, but Athasian characters are unlikely to have extensive adventures in the shattered Feywild.

of plundering the city and using it as a base from which to raid the natural world. The City of Starlight is lean and grim during these annual periods of war, and you are accustomed to enduring the giants or fighting them on the battlefield.

The darkness that taints your home, both internally and externally, has taught you that supreme beauty cannot exist without corruption, but the beauty is worth preserving at any cost. Astrazalian is the grandest city in the known realms, and you have long acknowledged that a grim price must be paid for your bounty.

Mithrendain Growing from the forest floor like a copse of towering trees, the fortress city of Mithrendain glints with copper, bronze, and gold in the amber rays of fey sunlight. Here, time drifts by as gradually as the first tentative falling leaves of autumn.

As an inhabitant of the Autumn City, you are accustomed to the slow passage of time. Mithrendain has no clocks, sundials, or magic timepieces, and you live your life as if ageless, basking eternally in the golden afternoon. In the light that glimmers through the russet boughs above, your people work toward the slow perfection of everything they touch. In a city without time, there is no hurry, no project left forever incomplete or abandoned, and no sense of early, late, or never. You consider it rude to place expectations on timeliness except in the most dire circumstances, such as war or invasion, and this attitude frustrates alienated mortals—especially impatient humans.

The results of the Mithrendain perspective show in the sheer artistic perfection that surrounds you at every natural angle. As a resident of the Autumn City, you have grown accustomed to this point of view, regardless of whether you embrace it, and you appreciate any task that is carefully and flawlessly executed.

A legend told in Mithrendain speaks of an age when time moved more quickly. In fact, it moved so quickly that it formed a wide, deep hole in the Feywild from which issued fomorians, drow, and all the evils of the Feydark underworld. According to the tale, seven eladrin wizards placed seven powerful seals on the hole and built a brooding fortress around the maw, in the spot where the golden Citadel Arcanum stands today. Then this council of wizards banished time from Mithrendain so their wards might remain ever new, thrumming with the magic that courses through every leaf, rock, and timber of the plane. Everyone in Mithrendain knows this legend, but few, if any, know whether it is true. Nevertheless, its legacy remains in the customs and traditions of your home. Timekeeping devices are considered ill fortune, and at every grand festival in Mithrendain, an hourglass is shattered before the crowd, its sands scattered to the winds.

If you are from Mithrendain, you might have a relaxed perspective or a wandering focus, letting time pass as it will, unmoved by panic or hurry in others. Alternatively, you might have left Mithrendain due to what you perceive as a stagnant stubbornness in the city, believing that your people might play in autumn but cannot forestall the winter forever.

Shinaelestra Every midnight, after the stars have appeared in the skies of the Feywild, the eladrin city of Shinaelestra starts to shimmer in the darkness like the slow ebb of green-white ocean waves. The city, already overrun by wilderness, recedes from the Feywild and emerges in the Howling Forest of the natural world.

As an inhabitant of the Fading City, you are a creature of two worlds, each as perilous as the other. In the golden sunlight of the Feywild, you work through the day, cultivating the plump grapes of the hills for feywine, fletching keen-tipped hunting arrows with the feathers of homing pigeons, or patching the places in the city where the roots of strong trees have grown through.

Yet beneath your feet in the caverns of the Feydark, the brutish fomorians of the evil Queen Connomae plot your downfall, emerging from their subterranean realm at dusk to attack. They seek to conquer Shinaelestra so they can raid the natural world each night when the fey city appears in the Howling Forest. You are a veteran of dozens of fomorian skirmishes, fervently battling the twisted giants until midnight when Shinaelestra fades away into the mortal realm.

Even after the worldfall leaves the fomorians behind, you cannot lower your guard. Creatures of the Howling Forest cry their bloodlust into the night air, and the trolls, especially, have developed a taste for the sweet delicacy of fey flesh. You shoot them with a hundred arrows, and still they come crawling from the darkness to steal your people. And although it is true that fire will stop a troll, fire will also burn a forest—and all life within it—to ashes.

Despite your troubles, the people of Shinaelestra are among the most valiant and vibrant in the Feywild. Constant adversity has made you strong and resourceful, and it has broken down the barriers of

WAYNE ENGLAND

FACTIONS OF THE FEY

Fey creatures are divided into a number of factions. Though these factions claim some loyalty to their chosen archfey, there is little to bind a creature to a faction permanently.

Court of Stars: Periodically, representatives of the factions assemble in a grand conclave hosted by the Summer Queen. Each of these gatherings is partly a political or business meeting and partly a time of revelry and friendly competition. (For more information on the Court of Stars, see the Shiradi Champion epic destiny, page 121.) Among the factions that might be in attendance at any time are those described here.

Court of Coral: The Court of Coral encompasses the aquatic and island-dwelling fey, ruled by the Sea Lords. The Sea Lords are Elias and Siobhan Alastai, siblings who oversee the rivers and seas of the Feywild, respectively.

Gloaming Fey: The Gloaming Fey are associated with dreams, darkness, stars, twilight, and dusk. They owe allegiance to a variety of archfey, the most famous of which is the Maiden of the Moon, a formidable hunter and the bane of all lycanthropes.

Green Fey: The Green Fey are the servants of Oran the Green Lord, the loftiest of the archfey of nature. Most of the Green Fey are forest-dwelling creatures, such as hamadryads, satyrs, and elves.

Summer Fey: The Summer Fey embody the innate beauty and power of their patron, Tiandra, the Summer Queen. Of all of the archfey, Tiandra commands the largest following of Sidhe lords and other eladrin.

Winter Fey: Fey creatures bound to the icy power of winter rarely consider themselves to belong to any faction and have no true leader. The most powerful among them is the Prince of Frost, and those who follow him and similar fey lords are roughly grouped together as the Winter Fey.

Unseelie Fey: Though they have no true representative among the Court of Stars, there are fey creatures of evil, maliciousness, and corruption that are collectively known as the Unseelie fey. Many of these creatures draw power or are shaped by the power of shadow, drawn from the Feywild's opposite counterpart, the Shadowfell.

isolation that many eladrin place between themselves and other races. If you come from Shinaelestra, you embrace your sylvan fellows, the elves, as close kindred, and you recognize the value of allying with humans who share your goals. It is your custom to offer small gifts and tokens to new friends and potential allies as an outward show of trust.

Some people refer to your home as the Fading City not because of its nightly worldfall but because they deem it a dying civilization. However, no one who witnesses your fighting spirit would dare make such a comparison. Under the able leadership of the ranger lord Calenon Thray, the people of Shinaelestra embrace the challenges they face, fighting more ferociously than drow and celebrating more vigorously than lusty satyrs. Wonder-struck mortals who chance upon your city pass on tales of elegant warriors, radiant as starlight, who hunt for the heads of giants. Ever victorious, the fey heroes feast and revel until dawn in marvelous halls arched by the boughs of trees, open to the night sky.

Demesnes of the Archfey

Among the most alluring and dangerous places in the Feywild are the demesnes belonging to the archfey. The personal realms of the mightiest fey creatures, these locations reflect the true nature of their lieges, each acting as a mirror of what lies within its core.

Senaliesse

Cresting the titanic silver trees of the Summer Queen's demesne is a palace woven from the living wood by the hand of Oran, the Green Lord, one of the greatest of the archfey. Summer never ends in this realm, hung with curtains of ivy and cascades of orchids, lavender, and roses. Here, the archfey of the Court of Stars gather to confer, revel, and scheme. Courtiers and petitioners from every realm in the known universe, overburdened with wondrous gifts, come to beg the Summer Queen's favor.

Cradled in mighty silver limbs high above the Feywild, the Summer Queen's demesne is a sacred haven reserved for the Court of Stars and those who have business with the archfey. The sheltering light of high Senaliesse bathes the enchanted forest for miles around in the protective glow of the Summer Queen's presence. It is here in the land of eternal summer that you make your home. Industrious gnomes flit amid the massive roots of great trees while sun-eyed summer nymphs play in the shady groves among passionate satyrs, stately treants, and quiet dryads. When the sun sets over the Feywild, unicorns the color of midsummer stars emerge to drink from the enchanted streams, and the tall grasses giggle with the childlike laughter of pixies reveling in the warm summer night.

If you hail from Senaliesse, you are accustomed to a life of perpetual merriment, experiencing every sensation as if for the first time. Your people never tire of games and sport. Visitors to Senaliesse who refuse to play become the targets of your tricks and pranks—a game unto itself. However, you give each friend of the fey a blue chrysanthemum that never loses its petals; those favored few can travel through your realm without molestation.

Diplomats and courtiers of every stripe pass through your enchanted forest, including benevolent sprites, wicked hags, and everything in between. Few creatures encounter as many powerful beings in their lives as you do in the course of a year, and you are quite comfortable in the presence of such beings. When you cross paths with a mighty archfey or hag, your people chant the rhyme, "Beneath the sun or falling rain, I yield to thee thy path again," in deference to the dominant traveler. Such verses have power in the fey realm, and anyone who recites that particular rhyme must immediately be excused for any perceived slight against the archfey.

Despite the wonder of Senaliesse, as an adventurer at heart you yearn for something beyond the protective light from above. Even among the most exquisite sights in existence, a restless part of you craves the conflicts and struggles of the wider world. People come to the Summer Queen for favors, bringing desperate causes, terrible tragedies, and tales of tyrants and monsters to be overthrown. And when they cannot find succor among the Court of Stars, some turn to you, begging for your help.

Vale of the Long Night

Beneath the oppressive snowfalls that drown the land in a crystal-white ocean of winter, the Fortress of Frozen Tears rises from a high glacial spire like a jagged icicle. The constant glow of the ever-full moon shines down on frozen lakes, gnarled and barren orchards, and lonely, snow-covered mountains. The stars burn coldly overhead, as distant and pitiless as billions of icy snowflakes poised in the everlasting darkness, waiting to descend.

Long ago, the Summer Prince who lived here lost his heart to one of the fair Daughters of Delight (see "Court of Stars: The Prince of Frost" in Dragon 374). She betrayed him for the love of a mortal hero, escaping to a time and place beyond his reach. As a result, the prince's heart turned to solid ice, and his demesne became a desolate realm of frozen night, the least hospitable land on the surface of the Feywild. Only the winter fey feel at home here, although they do not share the intense spite exhibited by the Prince of Frost.

If you hail from the Vale of Long Night, your existence constitutes little beyond grim survival in the endless moonlight. You spend your days hunting the hardy game animals that feed on tundra moss and grass, making clothes of their hides and tools of their bones; the realm has precious few resources, and even fewer crops grow in this area. Winter fey sculpt the snow to make ice castles, hags take flight across the frosty skies, and winter nymphs ride on the backs of wolves, howling across the tundra in search of prey.

TYLER JACOBSON

Keldar and Rowena (in cat form) approach the Fortress of Frozen Tears, the Prince of Frost's demesne

You might cling to this place for a variety of reasons. Perhaps the Prince of Frost froze you in a block of ice and kept you captive in his fortress for years or centuries, then recently released you to further his ends. You might be part of a nomadic tribe living on the border of the Vale of Long Night, or a subject of the prince, dwelling within the walls of his cold fortress. If you are a hamadryad, perhaps the vale contains your tree home, and you subsist on moonlight and snow rather than sunlight and water.

However you came to be here, your survival depends on your wit, strength, endurance, and capacity to make uncompromising choices. The indecisive are extinguished as quickly as candle flames in the winter wind. In this land, emotions are flaws to be manipulated, and the weak fall quickly to stronger predators. As a native of the Vale of Long Night, whenever you allow your emotions to rule your actions or words, it is your custom to spill three drops of your blood on the ground. You take this action in homage to the Prince of Frost, whose frozen heart can no longer feel or bleed.

Borderlands and Wilderness

The Feywild offers breathtaking vistas of natural beauty—forests that are graced by unicorns, mountain peaks that sweep the stars, sparkling oceans that resound with the songs of mermaids—interspersed with small cities that dot the great expanse of the magical realm.

Brokenstone Vale

Deep in the shadows of a mountain pass lies Brokenstone Vale, a haven for werebeasts and shapechangers that was conceded to them by the eladrin after years of brutal warfare. According to an ancient pact between the shapechangers and the Court of Stars, no creature can set foot in Brokenstone Vale without the lycanthropes' permission. If any careless traveler does so, his life is as good as forfeit. This pact also works the other way; lycanthropes that hunt beyond the vale can be slain by the Maiden of the Moon, an archfey who keeps her wary eye on them.

You come from the forested mountains above Brokenstone. By day, you hunt in the woods, farm the lower mountain slopes, or practice your trade. In their humanoid forms, the lycanthropes can be useful (if intimidating) trading partners, and many seem good-natured and genuine. However, others eye you when you pass by as if you were nothing more than a potential meal. It is the cries of these predators that seem the strongest when the vale fills with a chorus of feral howls beneath the light of the moon. During these times when the monsters are on the hunt, painting a silver stripe across the door to your dwelling tells the shapechangers that you have silver and the protection of the Maiden of the Moon. Even the most bloodthirsty of their kind heed the sign of the stripe.

You also know that the lycanthropes will not touch the wolfsbane that grows on the slopes of Brokenstone Vale. It is said that a touch of the plant, when properly applied, transforms a werecreature into its humanoid form and prevents it from changing again until the next moon rises. Displaying wolfsbane around your dwelling usually deters lycanthropes, but use of the plant can enrage them and single you out as a target. Wolfsbane is often dangerous to obtain because aside from its toxic nature, hags and witches collect the plant for use in their charms and spells. These creatures flit like black shadows across the face of the moon while the terrible howls fill the night from below.

Cendriane

In the midst of a dark, twisted forest as old as the world stands the abandoned city of Cendriane, its crystal towers rising through the treetops like polished skeletal fingers emerging from the earth. The city's desolate streets sprawl through the wood, creating a unique harmony between nature and the ruins of civilization.

Natives of the forest surrounding Cendriane believe that this place, once the most radiant of eladrin realms, is cursed. Ages ago, the longest battle of the bloody war between the eladrin and the drow took place here, and ever since, Cendriane has known no birdsong, no signs of life, nothing but the pall of silence surrounding the city's perfectly preserved architecture. Giant spiders, displacer beasts, and owlbears make their lairs in mansions where noble eladrin once dwelled, and sometimes by night terrifying specters drift through the streets.

If you come from this region of the Feywild, you stay clear of the abandoned city and its dangers, making your life in a small settlement on the perimeter of the forest. Why do you live in such close proximity to the haunted ruin? Perhaps your family originated in glorious ancient Cendriane and never had the heart to leave it far behind.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Lyrindel and Andronus find themselves shipwrecked on the Isle of Dread

MARK WINTERS

During your time on the outskirts, you have accumulated a variety of lore regarding the city within the wood. One rumor suggests that the elders of your settlement belong to an order that is dedicated to preventing outsiders from entering the ruined metropolis. Another story claims that the elders are charged with keeping something dangerous contained within the dark forest.

Outlaws and exiles eke out solitary lives in the wood, but they rarely last long. Eventually, rumors of fabulous wealth still unclaimed in Cendriane reach their ears, and they go out in search of ancient libraries stocked with eldritch scrolls and treasure maps, or they try to find vaults hidden beneath the city that are said to be filled with gold and magic. Such explorers seldom return.

You have seen treasure seekers walking the road to Cendriane. They come through your settlement, eyes glittering with visions of wealth. Before these would-be heroes enter the forest, your people offer to paint their faces and bodies black and white in equal measure. It is said that this ritual appeases the spirits of the drow and the eladrin that haunt Cendriane. Over time, the ritual has adopted new meanings, and now it is used on anyone who goes forth from home. Natives of Cendriane who hold with tradition carry two tokens, one pitch black and one snow white, as a reminder that long ago, the two fey races that fought and died in the ancient city were one people. According to the stories of your people, anyone carrying two such tokens will always be recognized as a native of Cendriane by drow and eladrin alike, no matter how dire the circumstances.

The Isle of Dread

Somewhere above the coral kingdoms of the Sea Lords rises a tropical island ringed with treacherous reefs and storm-tossed seas. The sands of its beaches are as dark as the jagged obsidian mountains in its center or the plumes of smoke spewing from its volcanoes, and its coasts are littered with the wreckage of ships. Sinister stone ziggurats break the canopy of verdant jungles blanketed in clouds of steam. Unseen beneath the dense foliage, enormous reptiles of the primeval world hold sway.

The Isle of Dread is also the home of the dreaded su monsters, dangerous treetop predators created by the wizard Halkith. Su monsters use their psychic link to monitor events that transpire on the island, including keeping tabs on the island's population of yuan-ti.

If you come from the Isle of Dread, you managed to stay alive in an environment determined to kill you. The island constantly shifts from the Feywild to the natural world at random, possibly at different points in the ocean of time. Ships from diverse historical eras and dimensions are battered to ruin upon its shores, and before the surviving castaways can be rescued, the island goes through another worldfall, pulling them to yet another time and place. Chances are that you are one of these castaways.

Once you had another life among more ordinary people—perhaps you were a merchant, a soldier, a trader, or a member of royalty—but your old existence was wrecked along with your ship. You became part of a tribe that might have consisted of your former shipmates, another group of castaways, or primitives you encountered on the island. You spent your time hunting any game you could catch, harvesting the bounty of the jungle, and searching for a way off the island. Among the ruins, you found terrifying monsters and powerful magic, which shaped you into the person you have become and facilitated your escape from the island's clutches.

The Isle of Dread tests every person it pulls to its shores. Few live long enough to escape or be rescued. Friends betray one another for survival, a chance to leave the island, or leadership of the tribe. Those who survive together—even if they come to hate one another—are forever bound; no other living being can understand their shared experience.

If you come from the Isle of Dread, portals that cross between worlds might make you anxious, and the customs you remember from your life before the island might be from a different time and place. Groups hold deep meanings and associations for you, and you cannot help but see your party members as your tribe. A close-knit group is everything, for such bonds contribute directly to survival. Did you get along well with the other members of your island tribe, or were you an outcast? What happened to the rest of your tribe? Did anyone escape with you? Do you dare speak of your island experiences, or will your new companions dismiss your stories as mad ravings?

The Fomorian Cities

Across the enchanted surface of the Feywild, fair eladrin cities glitter like bright jewels in the Summer Queen's crown. Deep beneath the fey realms, in subterranean caverns vast beyond imagining, the warped reflections of fey civilization glimmer like evil eyes glaring hatefully upward.

Three of these domains are fomorian cities: Harrowhame, Mag Tureah, and Vor Thomil. Each is ruled by a ruthless giant that has become twisted in body and mind as the result of wielding staggering arcane power. As a humanoid subject of one of these cities, you were captured to serve as a slave or born to enslaved parents; at best, you bore the title of servant or herald, though the distinction is purely academic. For a long time, your life was one of constant toil in the subterranean night while you feared being killed at any time for any reason. Most of the beings you regarded as companions were slain in the dark by quickling assassins, smashed into formless stains on the cavern floor by cyclops guards, or charred to ashes and dust by a chortling fomorian overlord. Captured eladrin, tuathans (humans touched by fey magic), and gnomes shared your confinement, but any alliances seldom lasted long because slaves inevitably betrayed one another to save their own lives.

No matter which fomorian city you came from, you knew only misery and peril beneath the fist of its warped tyrant. In Harrowhame, you mined tunnels or dug for precious gems in narrow Feydark channels where toxic gases brought silent death and dangerous monsters made their lairs. In Mag Tureah, you were employed as expendable infantry in bloody skirmishes against legions of myconids and vicious drow. In Vor Thomil, you served as a gladiator, a court entertainer, or an object of street sport hardly expected to survive a day in the Feydark. Of all your city's terrified inmates, only the gnomes, who had endured captivity under fomorian rule for time out of mind, could find wonder in the dismal circumstances. Their optimism called to mind the old gnome saying "There are diamonds, too, in the darkness."

Despite their miserable lives, few try to leave these nightmare tunnels. Attempted escape is punished by a brutal death beneath the blades of vicious spriggans and quicklings. Besides, if a prisoner somehow managed to escape and gain freedom, where would one go after such long captivity below? Most chastened subjects choose to remain with the dangers they understand rather than flee toward unknown perils.

When you meet another survivor of fomorian captivity meet, you recognize one another in an instant. The sign is not a brand of the flesh—the fomorians consider all creatures their subjects and find little point in taking the trouble to mark them—but rather a familiar faded look in eyes that have beheld the unspeakable horrors of the Feydark. The two of you rarely trade stories, for words cannot sate a survivor's guilt. Silently, each of you buries a small black stone next to the other's, and you part ways. This custom derives from a Feydark cant acknowledging your mutual time of darkness, of which the less said, the better.

WAYNE ENGLAND

The Maze of Fathaghn

There is a place in the Feywild where the trees grow close together and the twisting brambles are as tall and thick as living walls. Here the trees speak their secrets in the faint whisper of rustling leaves. The woodland path loses its way among shifting copses and the trunks of wandering treants, and playful nymphs and dryads lure unwary travelers along twisting detours to shady glades from which they will never emerge.

If you come from the outskirts of this perilous woodland labyrinth, you are almost certainly a fey creature, since few other humanoids can survive here for long. As enchanting and abundant as the Maze of Fathaghn might seem, it is no less a stronghold than Mithrendain, Mag Tureah, or the Fortress of Frozen Tears. The treants, dryads, nymphs, gnomes, pixies, and other fey denizens of this place might appear whimsical or harmless, but each is dedicated to safeguarding the secrets at the center of the maze, where it is said that the dryad queen Fathaghn protects the great Mother Tree that gave life to the first Green Fey. As a fey inhabitant of the maze, you spend your time at play, in harmony with nature. However, when necessary, you frighten intruders away or lure them to their deaths in the maze. Legends warn that if a trespasser were to destroy the Mother Tree, your lives too would come to an end—or, worse yet, the Feywild would lose all its magic and become as ordinary as the mortal world.

In the Maze of Fathaghn, you had protection and security, surrounded on all sides by some of the most powerful natural forces in existence. Why did you leave? Did you go forth to stem a stream of infiltrators at its source? Did mortals capture you from the maze and bind you into service elsewhere? Were you sent on a mission by Queen Fathaghn, chosen as her living representative beyond the maze? Whatever your reason, you carry your home within your heart.

Though some creatures feel paralyzed when presented with a choice of routes, abundant options give you a familiar sense of comfort. For example, at a woodland crossroads where paths diverge, you seldom deliberate. Instead, you turn around slowly three times to gain a strong impression of what lies in every direction. Then you choose one path and whisper a blessing down the other. You have little concept of what it means to be lost, for all roads lead somewhere for you, and fey natives of the Maze of Fathaghn take comfort in knowing that, in time, you will discover your destination, wherever it might be.

WAYNE ENGLAND

The Murkendraw

If the Feydark is a cancer that eats at the beauty of the Feywild from below, the Murkendraw is a pustulant boil on the face of that splendor. The bleak, sodden landscape in various shades of brown, gray, and black festers beneath thick swamp fog that is sometimes poisonous. Clotted mud gives way to sudden quicksand or curtains of assassin vines and yellow musk creepers. In the starless night skies, only the moon gazes down, casting its stark light across the drab wasteland.

The Murkendraw is a swamp the size of a sea, infested with feymire crocodiles as large as the flat-bottom skiffs that float among the putrid detritus. Fat, bloodthirsty marsh flies, some the size of dogs, buzz through the late afternoon air. Thunderstorms cover the area for days at a time, riddling the swamp with lightning, and hags such as the infamous Baba Yaga exult in the unbridled chaos.

If you come from the Murkendraw, you are accustomed to living in inhospitable conditions. Survival here requires extreme care; a single misplaced step can spell your end. However, for those who know the perils of the swamp, it can prove a stalwart ally. Witches driven from civilization by zealous clerics learn to use the natural environs of the Murkendraw against witch hunters, whose corpses feed the crocodiles, marsh flies, and quicksand pits.

Natives of the swamp learn to be careful, patient planners. The Murkendraw hags have a saying: "The one who strikes blind is stricken from behind." Here, brash, impulsive behavior leads to death.

Inhabitants of the Murkendraw bury a cold iron knife beneath each door and window of their house or hut. Doing so is said to prevent hags and other evil fey from entering.

Murkroot Trade Moot: Somewhere beneath the sodden soil at the edge of the great Murkendraw Swamp, a secret hides from the angry nobles of the Summer Court. Lost to all but those who have been there before, this place remains beyond the reach of those who would destroy, conquer, or exploit it—at least until someone who has been there betrays it. The Murkroot Trade Moot is an underground bazaar of the illegal and the illicit in the Feywild, a black market of things the Sidhe lords don't want the people of their realms to know about.

Suppliers of slaves, purveyors of poisons, mixers of uncertain elixirs, merchants of mercenaries, innovators of unusual items—all meet at the Murkroot Trade Moot to sell their wares. When an eladrin chokes upon wine at a ball or falls in the forest after the scratch of a dart, poisons purchased at Murkroot might be held responsible. When a princess swoons at the sight of a pauper or a priceless jewel vanishes from a vault, the potions of Murkroot frequently take the blame. The curse that cripples the hero might have its origins in Murkroot, as might its cure.

Nachtur, the Goblin Kingdom

Along the overland route between the eladrin realms and the goblin kingdom of Nachtur lies a great expanse of wilderness. To the south of eladrin territory, this wide swath of land is green and thickly forested. As a traveler moves east and north, the forest gives way to open meadows and eventually to dry, rocky ground before it becomes gray badlands of fissures, crevices, high cliffs, and glowering hills. These wastelands are the gates to Nachtur, the realm of the goblin king known as the Great Gark.

When the goblins come storming from their domain in the company of giants, ogres, and trolls, they take what they want and slay at random. In these twilight borderlands in which you dwell, rumor says that the goblins steal fey creatures and children and drag them back to the palace of the Great Gark, where the innocent are eaten and the malicious are changed into goblins. Perhaps you were kidnapped from the natural world, escaped or were rescued from the goblins, and have been stranded in Nachtur ever since.

Few but exiles, witches, and loners live in the badlands, and if you willingly make your home here, you must tread cautiously. Those cast out from their own societies wash up in dingy border towns on the outskirts of Nachtur with nowhere else to go. For eladrin, such a sentence is often as good as death; the goblins are many, and their hatred of eladrin is especially

In the kingdom of Nachtur, Viltham and Lyrindel attempt to convince the Great Gark not to kill them

MATIAS TAPIA

fierce. Some outcast eladrin make deals with the goblins to act as informants and spies; others broker information to both the goblins and the eladrin of the cities, hoping for a reprieve from one or acceptance from the other. Exiles or outlaws that collect a hundred goblin heads might be offered such a reprieve and a commission into an army or a specialized group of adventurers.

If you dwell in Nachtur, you must be wary not only of goblins, giants, trolls, and ogres but also of boggles skulking in the night. These small fey are cowardly when confronted. Boggles can make holes between distant spaces, reaching through from far away to steal your belongings or strangle you in your sleep. Goblins prize boggles as pets and have some success training them as assassins.

The fairy tales told on the borders of Nachtur rarely end with the hero defeating a foul ogre. Instead, they are cautionary tales—true (or supposedly true) accounts of fools who dabbled in the affairs of goblins or tried to outwit trolls and consequently came to gruesome ends. Others might deem your stories bloody or morbid, but in the lands of Nachtur, that's just how life is.

BARD'S TALE: THE VANISHING VILLAGERS

Once upon a time there was a small village on the edge of a deep, dark forest. In that village, there was a boy on the threshold of manhood who was unruly and caused problems for almost everyone else. The boy was selfish, and wanted to be treated like a man, but everyone in the village could see that he was not ready.

One evening at twilight the boy was sitting on the edge of the dark forest, a common test of bravery among the children of the village, when a frightening creature emerged and approached him. "I am a goblin in the service of the Great Gark," the creature said, "and I have come to grant your every wish. My lord has heard your whispers into the dark of the night, and the Great Gark knows that your people do not appreciate your potential."

The boy was frightened by the goblin's appearance, but the creature's words touched something deep and black in the boy's heart. "Very well," the boy said. "If you are to give me my every wish, then I wish to be rid of the blacksmith. He refused me apprenticeship and told the village elders I was not ready to be treated like a man."

The goblin bowed, and vanished into the forest. The next morning, when the boy awoke, a crowd had gathered in the village around the smithy. When the boy went to see what had happened, he discovered that the blacksmith had vanished in the night, and tiny footprints were left in the mud all around the house.

That day, the boy went to see the village baker. The baker was young and pretty, and the boy fancied her. However, she would not be wooed by him, and the boy left angry, his advances spurned. When the goblin came to him again that night, the boy said, "If the baker will not allow me to court her, then no one will be allowed to! I wish to be rid of her." The goblin bowed, and disappeared.

The next morning, the people of the village gathered around the baker's house, and again all that remained were dozens of tiny footprints—no sign of the baker herself.

This time, there were some people in the village who remembered seeing the boy courting the baker, and recalled his disagreements with the blacksmith. "The boy has something to do with this," they said, and began to question him on his involvement. Frightened, the boy fled back to his home and locked himself in, refusing to let even his parents inside. The villagers banged on the door and demanded he come out and face them, but the boy would not relent.

Night fell, and the villagers drifted back to their homes. The goblin appeared to the boy again, this time in his own home, and asked what the boy wished for. "The people of the village have turned against me," he said, "And I cannot face them. I wish the villagers would trouble me no more!" The goblin bowed, and disappeared.

When the boy awoke the next morning, there was no crowd outside. In fact, when he emerged from his home, he found that there were no villagers either. The entire community was empty, and the ground was covered with goblin tracks. In this way, the boy found himself free of the villagers' accusations.

At first the boy was pleased that he had no one to reject him and no one to answer to. But as the days passed, the boy became lonely. Eventually, he realized that he needed the company of his people, and he hoped for a chance to take back his wish. But the goblin never appeared to him again. So the boy prepared for a long journey and then set off into the dark forest, seeking out the goblin kingdom of Nachtur, where he hoped he might find out what happened to the vanishing villagers.

CHAPTER 2

Races of the Fey

MYRIAD RACES dwell within the Feywild, many of which have long since journeyed to the mortal realm. The eladrin and the drow are perhaps the best known of these, but they are not the only heroic fey peoples who travel in both worlds. This book presents three new Feywild races suitable for any campaign.

Hamadryad: Hamadryads are the enchanting spirits of oak trees. At one with nature, they can be as calm as the autumn sunset one moment and as violent as a thunderstorm the next.

Pixie: Childlike fairies full of wonder and magic, the tiny pixies fly on vibrant wings and vanish into thin air on a whim.

Satyr: Half humanoid and half goat, satyrs love music and celebration, and they constantly seek the chance to prove themselves good friends and deadly enemies.

Racial Benefits

Each of the new races presented here offers a variety of benefits, summarized below.

Ability Scores: Your character race offers a bonus to one ability score and a bonus to your choice of one of two other scores.

Speed: Your race determines how fast you can move.

Vision: Certain races, including the ones presented here, have the ability to see clearly in dim light.

Languages: Some races master a wider variety of languages than others, based on their culture and history. Pixies, for instance, can speak to the beasts of the world and those of the Feywild.

Racial Powers: Each fey race has a special racial power—usually a utility power, but sometimes an attack power. In addition, characters of a fey race have access to unique powers that they can take instead of class powers.

BARD'S TALE: THE KNIGHT AND THE PIXIE

Once upon a time there was a brave knight who was riding on the fringe of the Borderlands when he came upon a wounded pixie lying just on the edge of a dark forest. The knight, being kind of heart and gentle of hand, scooped up the pixie, laid it gently across his saddle, and returned to the keep whence he had departed.

For days, the knight nursed the pixie back to health. When the pixie finally awoke, some days after the knight found it, the tiny creature was disoriented and afraid. Yet the pixie was still too weak to flee, and so the knight continued to bring the pixie food and water, and they came to trust one another, at least enough that the pixie did not try to escape at every opportunity.

Over time, the knight and the pixie became friends. The pixie shared fantastic stories with the knight about a magical land of elves and satyrs and dryads, and the knight regaled the pixie with stories of the world of man. The knight told of places he had been, people he had met, all the while continuing to pay rapt attention when the pixie spoke of its world.

As the pixie recuperated, the knight also taught it some of the things that he had learned from years of life on the Borderlands, like tracking a quarry or sneaking unseen past sentries. The pixie shared a few secrets of the fey realm in turn, and before long they were exchanging truly valuable knowledge.

One day, the knight was called upon to leave the keep and venture forth into the world once more. Knowing that the pixie could not travel with him, the knight stole away when it was dark, leaving a note behind explaining to the pixie not to follow. When the pixie awoke, the knight was already gone, and the pixie was hurt and angry that the knight would leave so abruptly. Mostly, though, the pixie felt concern for the knight, who had told many stories of the dangers of the world. The pixie set out to find the knight, and it continues to search for the kind man to this very day.

MARK WINTERS

Hamadryad

Enchanting spellcasters, unparalleled beauties, wild queens of the fey

Racial Traits

Average Height: 5′6″-6′2″
Average Weight: 130-180 lb.

Ability Scores: +2 Wisdom; +2 Intelligence or +2 Charisma

Size: Medium

Speed: 6 squares

Vision: Low-light vision

Languages: Common, Elven

Skill Bonuses: +2 Diplomacy, +2 Nature

Female Only: All hamadryads are female.

Fey Origin: Your ancestors were native to the Feywild, so you are considered a fey creature for the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin.

Forest Walk: You ignore difficult terrain that is part of a tree, underbrush, or some other forest growth.

Oaken Vitality: Your tree heritage grants you a +5 racial bonus to Endurance checks to resist the effects of starvation, thirst, or suffocation, and you can survive for twice the normal time period before you are required to make such checks. You do not require sleep, but you must meditate at least four hours each day to absorb light (even from as small a source as a candle), soak in water, or connect with the earth beneath your feet. This meditation grants you the benefits that other races receive from an extended rest. While meditating, you are fully aware of your surroundings and notice approaching enemies and other events as normal.

Tree Mind: You gain a +2 racial bonus to saving throws against effects that daze, dominate, or stun.

Hamadryad Aspects: You have the hamadryad aspects power.

Hamadryad Aspects — Hamadryad Racial Utility

Drawing on fey magic, you call on your primal beauty and strength to thwart your foes.

Encounter
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Choose one of the following aspects each time you use this power. You gain that aspect's benefits.

✦ Spellbinding Beauty: Every enemy that can see you grants combat advantage to you until the end of your next turn.

✦ Wooden Form: You gain resist 5 to all damage until the end of your next turn.
Level 11: Resist 10.
Level 21: Resist 15.

JIM NELSON

Hamadryads are the incarnate spirits of living oak trees. Part flesh, part wood, and part fey spirit, they are the granddaughters of the seasons and the wind, and the supreme manifestations of nature's wild beauty.

At the beginning of time, the world had four daughters more beautiful in form than any creature—and more wild. They were called Summer, Autumn, Winter, and Spring, and they chased one another around the world while the primordials and the gods looked on. In their play, they frolicked with the brothers of the wind, and from this union the first nymphs were born. They were named Summer Ash, Autumn Oak, Winter Fir, and Spring Flower, and they were the spirits of the first trees that grew in the world.

The capricious nymphs played their own wild games in the forests of the dawning world for time out of mind. But they were not all to dwell in such bliss forever. With the rise of mortals, certain autumn nymphs—the wisest and most pensive of the tree sisters—withdrew from their games when they began to perceive the state of natural life in decline. Woodlands were burned, dryads' groves cut down, and great swaths of the world left lifeless by the wars and the avarice of reckless mortals.

To protect their homes, these autumn nymphs embraced their wild natures entirely. They gave up their carefree fey immortality and began the slow transformation into the wild tree maidens known as dryads. In these forms, they would protect their forests from harm with mighty branch and crushing limb, using their wisdom to understand the minds and motives of mortal creatures.

Hamadryads stand at an intermediate state between playful nymph and fierce dryad. Bound to a living tree, a hamadryad ardently protects the forests of which she is a part. She calls on the mighty strength of the wood to smash her enemies, summoning the spellbinding beauty of her majestic fey heritage to bewitch and charm mortals and thereby alter their destructive behavior. Hamadryads retain the flawless physical perfection of their autumn nymph form with all its grace and charm. However, they can harden their flesh to match that of the oldest tree in an instant, just as they solidify their wooden hearts against any hope of compassion.

Typically, a young hamadryad is bound to a tree home that somewhat resembles her feminine shape. As a youth, she remains in the forest where her tree grows, for her life is bound to its existence. However, rare hamadryads are able to break the connection to their tree home by some twist of fate or destiny.

Some do so in the course of surviving the destruction of their tree homes by natural disaster or monstrous forces. Others are drawn far from their forests in the name of undertaking quests meant to save those forests. Some hamadryads dwell close enough to the settlements of the civilization of other races that they take up the struggles of those races. Answering their heart's yearning call, they uproot themselves from the earth and leave all they know behind—seeking the wondrous perils and delights that are the stuff of mortal knowledge and emotion.

Physical Qualities

Born of the power of nature, all hamadryads are female, and they present themselves in two aspects. In their nymph form, these granddaughters of the seasons and the skies are idyllic paragons of fey perfection and physical beauty. Their hair and eyes match the colors of autumn leaves, from green to russet, gold, orange, red, and brown. Autumn leaves and acorns might dangle from a hamadryad's hair, and her eyes are clear orbs of green, white, or gold.

The dryad aspect of a hamadryad is not dissimilar. However, when a hamadryad draws on her dryad strength, her features take on the appearance of skillfully carved wood, the patterns of the grain manifesting across her form like ripples on the surface of a pond.

Inside their forest homes, hamadryads walk unclothed in their dryad aspect, blending easily into the background of bark and foliage. When they appear before mortals and civilized creatures, hamadryads favor light, gossamer clothing.

Adventuring hamadryads who set out to right the world through physical force favor armor made from natural materials such as leather or hide. Those who don heavier protection prefer the light mithral armor crafted by the eladrin and elves. When hamadryads wear armor, they ornament it with carved designs or embroidered patterns representing the natural order of their forest homes and the causes for which they fight. Hamadryad heroes who leave their forests carry a piece of their tree with them—a charm carved from the wood of a fallen branch, or a garland strung with autumn leaves whose colors never fade.

As the spirits of the autumn oak, most hamadryads live as long as the trees to which they are bound. Some have short lives at one or two hundred years. Others have been known to live for millennia. When a hamadryad's tree home dies, she undergoes a period of deep grief and mourning.

Attitudes and Beliefs

When the first autumn nymphs underwent the metamorphosis into hamadryads, they gave up their innocent immortal existence. Likewise, all hamadryads experience a fundamental change in their nature and outlook in the pursuit of worldly destiny or unfulfilled yearning. Like a tree shedding its leaves in autumn, a hamadryad abandons the joyful games of secrets and whispers she once played among her sisters, and the chill of winter settles over her heart. No longer an entirely capricious fey, she is ruled now by the purposes and goals that dwell within the hearts of mortals.

Despite this change, hamadryads retain the passionate, impulsive nature of their nymph heritage.

Lyrindel uses her magical beauty to beguile and distract goblins in the kingdom of Nachtur, while Viltham sneaks up behind them

They are accustomed to having their way with mortals, and sometimes have trouble understanding why they are denied what they ask for. Hamadryads new to the world sometimes lack the patience to absorb and mimic the extensive cultural traditions and taboos of the mortal races. When their natural charm fails, frustrated hamadryads sometimes manifest their dryad aspects to unleash brute natural force.

Many of the hamadryads that venture out into the world are disenfranchised forest spirits seeking justice or revenge for the destruction of their woodlands. Others have observed some aspect of mortal life that they themselves lack, and they become obsessed with understanding it. The spirit that drives mortal humanoids to undertake grand quests and sacrifice everything for principle has stirred many hamadryads, causing them to abandon their idyllic existence in the name of seeking something more.

Sometimes the prospect of mortal love moves a hamadryad to leave the security and peace of her woodland home. Though such mortal emotion is rare among the nymphs, those who feel its pangs or dwell too long thinking on its nature are doomed to try to fill the lonely, questioning void it creates.

Hamadryad Communities

Hamadryads live a lonely existence. In their youth, they dwelled happily in the woodlands of the world and the Feywild, frolicking with others of their kind. The choice to seek a life in the wider world means that a hamadryad loses the fellowship of her sisters.

When a hamadryad adventurer leaves her tree and ventures off into the world, she walks alone. As beautiful as they are, hamadryads naturally attract the attention of other humanoids—some who seek to serve that beauty, and others who hope to take advantage of a hamadryad's inexperience with the world.

Hamadryads quickly learn to congregate where other fey are found, and they are typically welcomed among gnomes, pixies, eladrin, elves, and satyrs. Some fey communities go so far as to treat hamadryads as honored guests or royalty—leading some hamadryads to expect this sort of deference at all times. This expectation, combined with a hamadryad's inability to adjust to the social norms of other cultures, can cause a hamadryad to come off as haughty or graceless in the eyes of those around her.

A hamadryad who travels in the wider world is eventually drawn back to a place within her wood that reminds her of her pain or longing. Here she dwells in isolation, planting her feet against the earth and setting down roots that delve deep into the soil. As her body becomes a tree, it grows tall and strong even as it retains a semblance of her nymph's form. Other fey creatures are attracted to the hamadryad's place of solitude, and pixies and gnomes are prone to make their homes in the vicinity.

MATIAS TAPIA

Hamadryad Adventurers

Hamadryad adventurers are fey spirits who turn their backs on immortality to seek the knowledge and experience found only beyond their forest homes. Destiny, revenge, or compassion draws them into a world they do not understand, where they are as eager to learn as they are to dispatch any creature that stands in the way of their goals.

Druid The forest is a hamadryad's realm, and its inhabitants are her subjects. In her tree home, she is fed by sun and rain. Her roots take sustenance from the soil, and birds and squirrels play in her oaken boughs. Hamadryads who choose to become druids embrace their inborn nature to the fullest, channeling the primal powers that are their birthright. A hamadryad is wiser than almost any other creature in the ways of the woodlands, for her grandmother was the season of autumn and her grandfather was the wind itself. Hamadryad druids protect and preserve nature at any cost, using all the power and cunning at their disposal. For all her fey beauty, majesty, and charm, a hamadryad is uncompromising and ruthless when dealing with creatures bent on despoiling the natural world.

Ranger Hamadryads of a warlike bent adopt the path of the ranger, defending their forests and taking vengeance on those that would despoil or destroy the natural world. Armed with blade or bow, a hamadryad ranger does not rest until she has proven herself by ending the threats of nature's enemies once and for all. Hamadryad rangers most often wander the forest lanes peaceably, content to protect the sanctity of their woodland glades. Some of the most savage hamadryad rangers are those who have survived the loss of their tree homes to wanton destruction. With her innate connection to nature stripped from her by careless mortals, a hamadryad will take up mortal weapons to settle the score in blood.

Warlord Hamadryads are accustomed to being served and obeyed, and they leave their tree homes only if they are consumed by a resolute passion and a purpose. A hamadryad warlord rallies others to that purpose, using her companions' weapons and abilities as extensions of her own. A hamadryad's spellbinding beauty and charm settles like a spell over those that follow her into battle, obeying her every command in precisely the way such majestic fey would expect. When enemies behold a hamadryad warlord, those that survive take away the impression that they have encountered a fierce warrior queen, or a goddess and her angels of battle. All count themselves fortunate to have escaped with their lives.

Wizard Like all nymphs, hamadryads are experts at entrancing mortals and binding them to their will, dazzling them with alluring dreams and fantastic illusions. As a result, hamadryads make talented wizards, and are well suited to becoming illusionists and enchanters. However, many hamadryads lack the patience for dedicated academic training or access to suitable tutors. Such hamadryads join the witch subclass (page 86) or become warlocks, seeking their patronage and powers from Oran the Green Lord, Tiandra the Summer Queen, or a power such as the Maiden of the Moon or Sehanine. Hamadryad wizards change reality to fit their idyllic vision of the world, weakening the will of brutal foes, bewitching the hearts of warriors and kings, and unleashing their magical wrath against those that would despoil the forests.

Roleplaying a Hamadryad

When creating a hamadryad adventurer, here are a few points to consider.

You are accustomed to being in charge. Like all nymphs, you are accomplished at using your beauty and power to sway mortals to your will. However, as a hamadryad, you have grown tired of using your powers for frivolous games, and are motivated now by a desire to protect and reshape your world. Although others might disregard your desires or dismiss them out of hand, you are used to being heeded. As such, those who ignore your wisdom or your advice also rouse your wrath. You are a fey creature wise and wild, a granddaughter of the skies and the seasons, and your concerns are more important than the trivial whims of mortals.

WAYNE ENGLAND

You are a stranger in the world. You never expected the world beyond your forest home to be so vast and wide. Everywhere you look, mortals have built up civilizations of wood and stone, constructing monumental works of magic and architecture to rival those of the eladrin. The ways of the other races are foreign to you, and often seem backward. As a result, the first lesson you learn is that you have so much more to learn. Though your fey nature leads you to be impetuous—some might call it vain—you know you must compromise if you are to accomplish your goals. If you are to succeed, you will need to adjust to the strange customs and peoples of this place, enlisting their aid to your cause and goals.

Experience, knowledge, love, and purpose. The world offers delights that are strange to you. Other races are driven by the pursuit of momentary goals, and they enjoy simple pleasures that intrigue and delight you. Every new sensation is a boon to your pursuit of experience and knowledge. The greatest mystery of the mortal world, however, is love. You understand compassion, for you feel that emotion for your friends and your forest home. You understand the concepts of longing and seduction, for these are the ways of nature and have long been your tools. However, the devotion of true love is alien to you, even as you sense that its power over mortal hearts and minds makes it worthy of investigation. Perhaps even you can experience its strange power.

Hamadryad Characteristics: Capricious, curious, enchanting, graceful, magnificent, placid, impulsive, vain

Hamadryad Names: Aileia, Celindara, Eilonwy, Irinea, Lyrindel, Rhiana

HAMADRYAD BEAUTY

The dryads of legends and tales are always renowned for their beauty, which hamadryads live up to in reality. Hamadryads have a supernatural beauty to them that can befuddle the minds of mortals, even affecting those such as eladrin who are accustomed to such visions. Most hamadryads have no concept of their own beauty, however, and often ensorcell mortals without ever intending to.

Hamadryad Utility Powers

When your hamadryad character gains a class utility power after 1st level, you can forgo taking a power granted to you by your class. Instead, you gain a hamadryad utility power of the same level or lower.

Body of Solid Oak

As the spirit of a living tree, you can transform your flesh into wood and bark, shrugging off blows that might otherwise lay you low. Axe, arrow, and claw pose less danger to you when you employ this power. However, fire becomes a more significant threat.

Body of Solid Oak — Hamadryad Utility 2

Your body hardens to take on the strength and resilience of the mighty oak.

Daily
Minor Action — Personal

Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to 3 + one-half your level. Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +2 power bonus to AC and Fortitude, but you also gain vulnerable 5 fire.

Sustain Minor: The bonus and the vulnerability persist until the end of your next turn.

Wooden Sanctuary

You are equal parts flesh and fey tree spirit, and as such, you walk the line between the waking world and that of the forest that created you. Your unique nature allows you to enter any tree or wooden object to draw strength from its essence, then slip back into the fight where your foes least expect you to appear.

Wooden Sanctuary — Hamadryad Utility 6

You abandon your body momentarily to slip into a secret sanctuary, reappearing strengthened and rejuvenated.

Daily ✦ Healing
Move Action — Personal

Requirement: You must be adjacent to a Medium or larger tree or other wooden object, such as a door or a table.

Effect: You can spend a healing surge. In addition, you are removed from play until the start of your next turn. At the start of your next turn, you return to play in the space you vacated or the nearest unoccupied space. Alternatively, you appear in an unoccupied space adjacent to a tree or a wooden object within 20 squares of your starting position.

Spirit Form

The connection you once forged with your tree home allowed your body to naturally shift into a semisolid state as you merged with its living form. With effort, you have trained yourself to consciously trigger this instinctive impulse, taking the form of a drifting ethereal creature for a time.

Lyrindel speaks to a jungle animal on the Isle of Dread, asking it for directions, while Andronus waits impatiently

Spirit Form — Hamadryad Utility 10

Your physical form fades into a diaphanous vision that can pass through the solid world like a ghost.

Encounter
Move Action — Personal
Effect: You are phasing and insubstantial until the end of your next turn. In addition, you shift up to 2 squares.

Feyborn Majesty

Those that would harm a powerful creature of the Feywild soon come to regret their rash action. When your body suffers a grievous hurt, the fey spirit within you flares with brilliance that unnerves your enemies.

Feyborn Majesty — Hamadryad Utility 16

As you reel from your foe's attack, your fury creates a display of otherworldly light all but impossible to look upon.

Encounter
Immediate Reaction — Special
Trigger: An enemy attack bloodies you or hits you while you are bloodied.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you shed bright light to a radius of 5 squares, the triggering enemy grants combat advantage, and enemies take a -5 penalty to attack rolls against you.

Fey Mind Mirror

Creatures of the Feywild are known for their resistance to the control of others. You have focused this innate resistance, allowing you to ignore the most debilitating coercion of mind and body even as you laughingly turn your foe's attack back on its creator.

Fey Mind Mirror — Hamadryad Utility 22

As you shake off an enemy's control of your mind and body, you turn the tables by using its own power against it.

Daily
Immediate Interrupt — Special
Trigger: You are subjected to an enemy's dazing, dominating, or stunning effect that a save can end.
Effect: You make a saving throw against the effect. If your saving throw is successful, the triggering enemy must make a saving throw against the same effect. If that enemy's saving throw fails, the enemy is subjected to the effect (save ends). If your saving throw fails, you do not expend this power.

MARK WINTERS

Pixie

Magical fairy folk, childlike mischief-makers, enchanted caretakers of nature

Racial Traits

Average Height: 0´6˝-1´
Average Weight: 1-4 lb.

Ability Scores: +2 Charisma; +2 Dexterity or +2 Intelligence

Size: Tiny

Speed: 4 squares, fly 6 squares (altitude limit 1). You cannot use this fly speed if you are carrying more than a normal load.

Vision: Low-light vision

Languages: Common, Elven

Skill Bonuses: +2 Nature, +2 Stealth

Fey Origin: Your ancestors were native to the Feywild, so you are considered a fey creature for the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin.

Speak with Beasts: You can communicate with natural beasts and fey beasts.

Wee Warrior: You have a reach of 1, rather than the reach of 0 that is typical for a Tiny creature. You also take a -5 penalty to Strength checks to break or force open objects. When wielding a weapon of your size, you follow the same rules that Small creatures do.

Pixie Magic: You have the pixie dust and shrink powers.

Pixie Dust — Pixie Racial Utility

You hurl a bright globe of fey magic that grants your friend the ability to soar through the air for a moment.

Encounter
Move Action Ranged 5
Target: One ally
Effect: The target can fly up to 6 squares as a free action.

Shrink — Pixie Racial Utility

At your touch, an object shrinks to your wee size or is restored to its original state.

Encounter
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: One object that is sized for a Medium or Small creature, is not inside a container, does not contain anything, and is not held, worn, or carried by anyone other than you
Effect: The target shrinks to a size appropriate for a Tiny creature's use. The new size ends at the end of your next extended rest unless the shrunken target is on your person. The size also ends if you or another pixie uses this power on the shrunken target. While shrunk, the target keeps its game statistics, such as damage dice and weight. A shrunken weapon, however, becomes an improvised one-handed weapon for a non-Tiny creature.

An enchanted race born of raw fey magic, pixies are the diminutive fairy folk of the Feywild. Under the direction of the Court of Stars, they etch the patterns of frost on the winter ponds and rouse the buds in springtime. They cause flowers to grow and sparkle with summer dew, and they color the leaves with the blazing hues of autumn. Some believe that the pixies stole the secret of honey from the mead goblet of the Summer Queen, then sold it to the bees. It is said that they taught the birds to fly and to sing. These child-like sprites have a penchant for mischievous fun, and there is no game a pixie will not play, no sport it will not attempt, and no revelry it will avoid or decline.

Once upon a time in the green-gold of the dawning world, the Summer Queen gave birth to a beautiful child. No one knew which of the archfey was the child's father, and the Summer Queen refused to say. Powerful archfey of the Court of Stars gathered around her so that each in turn might bestow his gift on the new fey royalty, for each believed the child was his own.

The first gift came from the child's mother—the gift of whimsy, so that like the warm winds of summer, she might roam wherever she pleased.

"But whimsy needs a course and a direction, lest it give way to the destruction of storms," said the Sea Lord, who believed the child was his own. "As young rivers play upon the land before maturing into the great wide sea, so shall the child play." And he bestowed the gift of play on the fey child.

Then Oran the Green Lord, who also believed the child was his own, said, "Like the frivolous waters, play can overreach its bounds and wreck the labor of others. So I give this child the gift of care. As young seeds are nurtured in the earth that bounds the rivers and the seas, so shall the child care for all things green and alive."

The Prince of Frost, who knew the child to be his sister, only laughed at the other archfey. "By her silence does the Summer Queen have us doing her bidding for the sake of a child whose provenance we will never know," he said. "And so laughter is my gift to the child. Laughter is the north wind's breath that elevates the spirit in the face of those that would channel, bind, or control it."

So the child was blessed with the four gifts the Court of Stars had bestowed upon her—whimsy, play, care, and laughter. But after the others had departed, the child's true father secretly appeared beside her gossamer cradle. And then, Corellon, lord of arcane magic, blessed his daughter with the gift of wonder that is the purest form of magic, so that she and all her descendants should ever retain their childlike spirits.

Legends of the mortal realm say that because the Feywild is the bright reflection of the world, pixies are a reflection of humanity. As the bards tell it, whenever a human child is born, a pixie also comes into existence. The personalities of the two races are indistinguishable during the first few years of life. However, human adolescents cast off their childhood ways, while pixies retain them forever. Sometimes pixies feel compassion for mortals who retain a degree of childhood innocence. They often watch over such humans, secretly aiding their "flawed" reflections with magic when they fall on ill circumstances.

JIM NELSON

In the world, pixies were once as prevalent as they were in the Feywild. However, during the years that mortals have ruled, they have diminished and gone into decline. As humanoid civilizations began to flourish, they encroached on the pixies' homelands, pushing the fairy folk back into the Feywild and into the dark unknown beyond civilization.

SPECIAL RULES

As a pixie, keep the following rules in mind.

Sharing a Space: Because you are Tiny, you can enter the space of a Small or larger creature and end your turn there (forced movement must still end in an unoccupied space, unless noted otherwise). Two creatures are considered adjacent if they are in the same square.

Altitude Limit: You fall at the end of your turn if you are using your racial fly speed and are more than 1 square above the ground (see the rules for flying and falling in the Rules Compendium).

Weapons: Because you follow the same weapon rules as a Small creature, you cannot use a two-handed weapon unless it has the small property. When you use a versatile weapon, you must use it two-handed but don't gain the normal +1 bonus to damage for using it in that manner.

Physical Qualities

Barely over a foot tall, pixies resemble diminutive eladrin with gossamer wings. These wings sprout from their backs like those of dragonflies or butterflies, but are grander and more beautiful than either. Pixie wings come in as many colors as there are shapes to dreams. Despite their almost insubstantial quality, they are as bright as the clear dawn and as luminous as the full moonrise.

Pixies rarely appear to onlookers unless they wish to be seen, and other people who happen to spot a pixie are astonished at the first sight of these tiny fey. When pixies fly, a shower of sparkling dust follows in their wake like the glittering tail of a shooting star. Pixie dust is said to be composed of the dreams of the living forest, the gold of the brightest sunbeams, and the starlight cast upon lovers. When such elements are combined as one, they elevate the soul and grant the ability to fly.

Pixies' eyes come in as many different colors as their wings. When pixies interact with mortals in the world, their eyes appear to have pupils. However, the natural state of a pixie's eye is a single glittering orb like that of an eladrin.

Pixies wear light, ephemeral clothing that grants maneuverability while they fly. Noble pixies array themselves like princes and princesses of the fey, wearing flowing gowns and doublets of spider and caterpillar silk that sparkle like moonlight on a pond. Wild pixies dress themselves in acorns, leaves and bark, and the pelts of woodland beasts. Pixies prefer armor made of acorns, insect chitin, leather, the scales of reptiles, stiff bark, or fine mithral mail. They rarely wear heavy armor.

Pixies live as long as eladrin. In the Feywild, the race measures time in centuries, and pixies are effectively immortal unless they are slain. However, legends claim that some pixies are so bound to their human reflections in the world that they perish when that human dies.

Attitudes and Beliefs

According to the oldest tales of the mortal races, pixies are as enchanting as the heart's true desire and as dangerous as the kiss of fate. Possessed of simple desires, pixies frolic in the sunlight, sing in the rain, and dance beneath the moon and stars. Eternally childlike, they find their joy in new games and new experiences, and boredom is their constant adversary.

Pixies thrive on randomness and excitement. The banal, common, and everyday routine of ordered life that mortal humanoids must endure is anathema to the long-lived pixies. Their restlessness gives rise to the kinds of tricks and pranks for which pixies are best known. When pixies enchant mortals to fall in love with ugly beasts or with their most hated enemies, they do so not only for their own amusement. Such magic is a gift that allows a bewitched mortal to break the ordinary routine of his or her life.

Despite their love of chaos, pixies obediently serve the Court of Stars and obey the commands of its leaders. They divide themselves into orders that revere their own rulers. Some serve the Summer Queen, others the Prince of Frost. In the world and in deep pockets of the Feywild, wild pixies can be found who serve no master. These dangerous fey view the members of other races as intruders in their realms, and are known to torture and slay them for sport.

Even the benevolent pixies who serve the Court of Stars can be dangerous. Mortals who wander into a fairy ring during a pixie dance can cross over into the Feywild without warning, becoming trapped there for years.

Like other fey, pixies rarely perceive short-lived humanoids such as humans as equals, living as they do only in the moment. Nevertheless, they believe that even the clumsiest mortals have the potential to experience the freedom and wonder that all pixies know.

Pixie Communities

In the world, pixies make their homes in deep forests or hidden grottos beneath the hills, far beyond the sight of other humanoids. In these places, pixies cast their shimmering lights to color their domains in incandescent hues, gradually shifting from soft red to bright yellow to deep violet and back again.

Some say that the realms of the pixies are the places where rainbows begin and end, and those rainbows are pixie roads emanating from the light of the kingdoms they connect, which can be seen by mortals only when the sun shines through the rain.

Though pixies prefer to keep out of sight, they can be found almost anywhere in the Feywild. As intrinsically magical as they are whimsical, pixies enhance the world around them with their presence. At the beginning of time, the Court of Stars passed down decrees on each type of pixie, charging it with duties to uphold in the Feywild. Some pixies brush the flower petals with morning dew, while others are responsible for conjuring the evening mists. Some are charged with awakening the winking stars in the night sky, while others paint each sunset into a masterpiece of vivid colors.

Such labors keep pixies focused on putting their magic to benevolent uses, rather than becoming a source of pure mischief. Pixies in the world carry these traditions over with them. A creature that strays near a pixie home finds the world more alive somehow, thrumming with life, color, and breathtaking natural beauty.

Pixie settlements vary as widely as the shifting spectrum of color found in them. Isolated pixies build their homes among the roots of great trees in settlements similar to those of the gnomes. Larger pixie settlements resemble kingdoms in miniature, expanding to fill underground caverns or the insides of entire hills. Wild pixies live high up in the trees, where they tame birds and arboreal mammals for war and labor.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Pixie communities are ruled by nobility, usually a hereditary king, queen, prince, or princess whose ancestor was granted this title by the Court of Stars in the distant past. Pixie monarchs are at once wise, graceful, fierce, and powerful—a wonder to behold. Although pixie rulers enjoy mischief and play as much as any other member of their race, the responsibility given them by the Court of Stars keeps such behavior in check.

Pixie Adventurers

Pixies who venture forth into the world do so for a variety of reasons. Some go at the command of their monarch to assist clumsy mortals on their quests. Some go forth to fight a great evil that threatens the pixie realms or the Feywild as a whole. Some take up a life of adventure simply because they are bored, seeking the excitement that comes with travel and the inherent chaos that comes with entanglements in the mortal world.

Bard As one of the kinds of fey creatures most likely to travel far and wide, pixies are among the greatest of storytellers . . . when they can be convinced to actually part with their stories. Pixies are also natural masters of arcane magic, and the combination of being well traveled and skilled in the arcane arts makes pixies excellent members of the bard profession. A devoted pixie bard is a stalwart ally as well, buzzing across the battlefield while shouting orders and singing inspiring songs. Despite their small stature, pixie bards know how to throw their weight around just as well as their larger companions (figuratively if not literally) and impose their will on the world around them.

Ranger Only a fool laughs at the notion of a pixie warrior armed with a miniature blade or bow, for what pixies lack in size, they make up for in deadly accuracy and precision. Wild pixies have been known to set upon intruders like a pack of vicious wolves, tearing their foes apart. Most pixie warriors are lightly armored rangers who ride the wind and fight their enemies with the fierce determination intrinsic to the fey. When these skilled warriors leave the homes they protect, they most often do so to hunt down a dangerous threat or trespasser. However, some venture out simply because they find their settlements too safe, wishing to test their skills against the chaos and danger to be found in the wider world.

JIM NELSON

Rogue Their tiny size makes pixies perfectly suited for the life of the rogue. Pixie rogues serve as spies to the Court of Stars, undertaking missions of stealth that few others will risk. Strongholds all but impregnable to larger creatures are no trouble for a pixie rogue, who can squeeze through arrow slits, hide in the smallest shadows, and take to the air to avoid traps. In the world, pixie rogues are devious tricksters and thieves who occupy themselves bedeviling mortals and leading them on merry chases. Most such rogues steal for fun rather than profit. Rumors abound of retired pixie rogues who have hollowed out small hills for use as trophy rooms, glittering with their ill-gotten wealth.

Wizard Tales are told of pixies dazzling mortals with love spells or enchanting their legs to make them dance wild jigs. As creatures of the Feywild, pixies hold magic as their birthright. They excel at the casting of mischievous enchantments and are nearly as fond of befuddling mortals with playful illusions. Pixie wizards almost always receive their patronage and powers from an archfey of the Court of Stars or from Corellon or Sehanine.

Roleplaying a Pixie

When creating a pixie adventurer, here are a few points to consider.

A childlike perspective. Pixies experience the world much as children do. They focus on the present, concerning themselves little with the past or the future. This is not to say that a pixie is not deeply saddened by the passing of a close companion, or that pixies are incapable of real emotion. Pixies simply don't dwell long on such matters, instead committing fully to the present moment and the experiences it has to offer. You give your full attention and interest to the task at hand, but cannot be bothered to reflect on the events of yesterday or tomorrow. For this reason, some creatures view you as flighty and capricious, even as others see you as a wise mystic, free from attachment and constantly living to your fullest potential.

Possessive of things, protective of friends. Though they abhor typical civilization, pixies have a strong sense of ownership. You do not keep many possessions, but those you do carry—a bird skull helmet, a bat wing cloak, a fine ribbon, a silver bell—are your treasures. No pixie will tolerate another creature handling such possessions without permission. By the same token, pixies see their friends as possessions. Anyone who threatens to harm your companions rouses your ire and will likely suffer for it.

Braver, bolder, and fiercer than you appear. Though pixies are tiny in stature, they exhibit a bravery that surpasses their size. When pixies take to arms, they fight with a singular ferocity. In their mail of shining leather, scales, or insect shells, they resemble miniature versions of the eladrin stalwarts of old.

Pixie Characteristics: Brave, charming, childlike, energetic, fierce, magical, mischievous, outgoing, playful, possessive, stealthy, vigilant

Pixie Male Names: Acorn, Barleycorn, Briarthorn, Buckthorn, Dogwood, Hawthorn, Hayseed, Hazelwood, Hoarfrost, Juniper, Maplesap, Mistlethrush, Nettle, Pinecone, Sparrowhawk, Thistledown

Pixie Female Names: Appleblossom, Bluebell, Cobweb, Cottonwood, Dewdrop, Heartsease, Holly, Hyacinth, Ivy, Larksong, Lilyflower, Mistletoe, Moth, Mustardseed, Peasblossom, Willowbough

BARD'S TALE: THE UNRULY GIRL

Once there lived a wild little girl who caused so much trouble that her parents did not know what to do with her. She overturned the milking buckets, spooked the horses, and cut off a stray cat's tail so she could fasten it to the back of her ragged skirt and pretend to be a monster. One day while she was far afield hunting geese with a handful of stones, she came upon a band of pixies playing games in the shade of an oak tree. The girl asked if she could join their sport, and the fairy folk agreed, for pixies love all children.

Never had the girl played such wild games. The pixies changed her into a pigeon, and she flew through the fields terrifying mice and squirrels while the fairy creatures flew alongside her. But the girl soon became bored and started chasing the pixies, seizing their wings in her beak and talons. So the pixies sprinkled their magic dust upon her and bade her not wake again as a girl until the first light of dawn touched her eyes. Then they crept away.

The girl slept through the night under the oak tree. Just before sunrise, a tailless cat came stalking through the field. What a stroke of luck for the beast—a plump, juicy pigeon lay asleep beneath the boughs of a nearby oak. The cat gobbled it up and went away feeling pleased with himself. He lived happily on the farm until the end of his days and was never hungry again.

HITCHING A RIDE

Pixie adventurers who have a lot of trust in their comrades sometimes allow themselves to be placed in a pouch or pocket while the group is traveling. Hiding a pixie in this manner is a great way to sneak in an extra adventurer when the characters are infiltrating a dangerous place. The presence of an extra hero can often turn the tides against an unprepared opponent.

Pixie Utility Powers

When your pixie character gains a class utility power after 1st level, you can forgo taking a power granted to you by your class. Instead, you gain a pixie utility power of the same level or lower.

Ventriloquist Prank

Pixies delight in causing mischief by creating disembodied voices to startle gullible mortals. With their ability to communicate with all manner of birds and beasts, pixies can mimic a staggering range of sounds. Focusing that ability through your magic, you leave your disconcerted foe uncertain which way to move or unable to defend itself.

Ventriloquist Prank Pixie Utility 2

You gleefully project an alarming noise that distracts and hinders your foe.

Encounter ✦ Illusion
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature that isn't deafened
Effect: Roll a d6 to determine the power's effect.
1–3: You slide the target up to 2 squares, but not into hindering terrain.
4–6: The target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.

Pixie Invisibility

As a tiny creature of equal parts mischief and magic, you must remain unseen to carry out your best tricks. Creeping carefully and invisibly under the noses of friend and foe alike, you are a spy and a saboteur beyond compare.

Pixie Invisibility Pixie Utility 6

Focusing all your concentration, you vanish from sight.

Encounter ✦ Illusion
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You become invisible until you attack or until the end of your next turn.

Gift of Flight

When you fly, you leave a trail of pixie dust glittering in your wake. By tossing up a shower of that same dust, you grant your allies the freedom of flight for a time.

Gift of Flight Pixie Utility 10

With a sprinkling of pixie dust, your companions take to the air.

Encounter
Minor Action Close burst 1
Target: Each ally in the burst
Effect: Each target gains a fly speed of 6 until the end of his or her next turn. If the target doesn't land at the end of this movement, he or she descends to the ground without taking falling damage.

Fairy Dance

The fey are well known for their wild, chaotic revelry. In fairy rings beneath the light of the moon, pixies lure mortals to join in their dances. However, only those you favor will be able to keep up with you. With this power, you compel every creature around you to dance to your tune.

Fairy Dance Pixie Utility 16

You strike up the enchanted music of the fey, granting your companions grace even as your foes trip and fumble around you.

Daily ✦ Aura, Charm
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 2 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any ally who starts his or her turn in the aura can shift 1 square during that turn as a free action. Any enemy that starts its turn in the aura is slowed until the start of its next turn.
Sustain Minor: The aura persists until the end of your next turn.

Pixie Teleport Trick

As a child of the Feywild, you are in tune with the shortcuts between dimensions. With your pixie teleport trick, you disappear and reappear to confound an enemy's efforts to get the better of you in battle.

Pixie Teleport Trick Pixie Utility 22

Even as you reel from a foe's attack, you vanish in a puff of fragrant smoke and reappear a safe distance away.

Daily ✦ Teleportation
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, whenever an enemy attacks you, you can use an immediate reaction to teleport up to 5 squares.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Satyr

Adventurous fey, wild revelers, curious explorers

Racial Traits

Average Height: 5′2″-5′10″
Average Weight: 120-190 lb.

Ability Scores: +2 Charisma; +2 Dexterity or +2 Constitution

Size: Medium

Speed: 6 squares

Vision: Low-light vision

Languages: Common, Elven

Skill Bonuses: +2 Nature, +2 Thievery

Male Only: All satyrs are male.

Fey Origin: Your ancestors were native to the Feywild, so you are considered a fey creature for the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin.

Light of Heart: You can make saving throws both at the start of your turn and the end of your turn against fear effects that a save can end.

Pleasant Recovery: You regain 1d8 additional hit points for each healing surge you spend during a short rest.

Sly Words: Bluff is always a class skill for you.

Lure of Enchantment: You have the lure of enchantment power.

Lure of Enchantment — Satyr Racial Utility

A softly sung tune causes your enemy to wander as you direct it.

Encounter ✦ Charm
Free Action Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with an attack.
Effect: You slide the enemy up to 3 squares, but not into hindering terrain. The enemy grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.

A race branded by folklore as tricksters, hedonists, and charlatans, satyrs only partially deserve the dark aspect of their reputation. Satyrs first came to the mortal realm when the world was young and had not yet fully healed from the destruction of the Dawn War. That war drew the Feywild closer to the mortal realm, connecting the two through rifts in the fabric of the planes that the inhabitants of the natural world would come to call fey crossings.

Possessed of mischievous and investigative souls, satyrs ventured cautiously through the fey crossings and made contact with the fledgling races of the world. Most of these early meetings were brief and violent. Though adventuresome, satyrs are also skittish, even as the humanoids of the world often see unintended threats in the strange and the unknown. From these early encounters came the seeds from which the folk tales sprung—stories of satyrs appearing within frontier villages to spread merry mayhem, and using the magic of song to charm children, maidens, and matrons alike.

Over time, the growing conflicts of the mortal realm saw the satyrs abandon the fey crossings to sequester themselves in their safe havens in the Feywild. There, they avoided the wars of other races, content to spend their days in revelry rather than try to interfere in the troubles of mortals and fey alike.

In recent times, the mortal realm has begun to call to the satyrs once again. With the fall of great empires and the collapse of civilization down to isolated outposts in a widening wilderness, the satyrs are drawn to explore that wilderness once more. Their race has become well known to the barbarian tribes and civilized outposts along the borderlands, where they emerge from fey crossings to sate their curiosity regarding the mortal realm.

Physical Qualities

Born of a union between satyr and nymph, a satyr is always male. Satyrs resemble humans with the legs of goats, and they are covered in fur from the waist down. Most satyrs have a pair of small horns

EVA WIDERMANN

Nistyncia carries an unseelie candle as she and Andronus journey through the Murkendraw

sprouting from their heads, ranging in shape from a pair of small nubs to the curling horns of the largest rams. They display the broad shoulders and powerful upper bodies of humans, and most sport some kind of facial hair. Their wild, curly hair ranges in length, with younger satyrs keeping their hair short. Older satyrs let it grow as they age, until it hangs about their shoulders.

Though not as robust as other fey, satyrs lead long lives compared to most humanoids. They reach adulthood at around the same age as humans, but can live to be two hundred years old or more. Satyrs become tough and serious as they age, losing the mischievous appearance of their youth to resemble stern grandfathers and stoic leaders. However, a twinkle of troublemaking still shines in even the oldest satyr's eyes.

Young satyrs grow quickly to maturity. Though they remain small in size as children, satyrs are capable of complex speech and movement in a matter of weeks. Young satyrs resemble infants in size and appearance, but they speak and interact with the competence of a human adolescent.

Attitudes and Beliefs

Satyrs are driven by curiosity and hedonism in equal measure. They have a natural sense of wonder regarding the world around them and the creatures with which they share that world. Though many satyrs are shy, satisfying their curiosity cautiously and from the shadows, they all have a burning desire to see, touch, and know more. This is not to say that they are reckless, however. Satyrs exercise great caution in their exploration, a result of living in the Feywild with its wild magic and hidden dangers. In addition, satyrs seek to satisfy their curiosity through the spread of stories and songs, allowing a satyr to feed the inquisitiveness of others by retelling a tale of his exploits. Most satyrs are proficient with at least one musical instrument, and a satyr revel is always a musical affair.

A satyr will take risks, but those risks are typically measured against his preparation and cunning. A satyr seeks to gain any advantage that he can early on, then presses that advantage. When meeting new creatures, satyrs are cautious to the point of outright suspicion. When new people have proven themselves trustworthy, a satyr becomes a dedicated and relentless ally.

ERIC BELISLE

BARD'S TALE: THE THREE FAIR BEAUTIES

Once upon a time, a prince rode through the wood regaling the animals and trees with songs in praise of his true love.

"She sings more sweetly than thee, little bluebird," said the prince. "I'll wager my heart there's no lady more beautiful in all Faerie!"

Just then the bluebird alighted in his path, transformed itself into a resplendent fairy damsel, and accepted his brash challenge.

The prince tried to rescind his words, but a wager spoken before the fey cannot be unsaid. The damsel said that she would show him three fair beauties in that very wood, and if his lady proved superior to them all, the fey would bless his wedding. But should the prince speak falsely, he must yield his heart to the shapeshifter's dagger.

The damsel showed the prince a spring nymph that enticed his lust, and a hamadryad that awakened his wonder. As splendid as they were, the prince swore that neither was as fair as his love, and he spoke truly from his heart.

"But is she more beautiful than I?" said the damsel at last. The prince looked upon her dark eyes, her shapely form, and the sapphire feathers strung through her midnight locks.

At last, after great deliberation, he said, "Aye, even more so than thee." The lady transformed into a bluebird and flew away, and the relieved prince was spared his life.

The prince married his true love and ruled his kingdom, but for the rest of his days, he never looked upon her or anything else of beauty without yearning for the fairy damsel, who possessed his heart as surely as if she had carved it from his chest.

Satyrs allow no opportunity for revelry to pass them by. They celebrate any holiday they have ever heard of—and are entirely cognizant that the civilizations of the world have enough festivals and holy days between them to justify celebrating on a nonstop basis. However, despite their love of wine, song, dance, and stories, satyrs are rarely reckless in their hedonism. In the midst of a celebration, a satyr maintains an awareness for danger, and he ensures that his revels do not cause the creatures he cares about to come to harm.

Satyr Communities

Satyrs have always dwelled in the Feywild, and most of their communities are found there. They live in small clans, usually numbering one to two dozen but sometimes as small as five or six. Satyrs who venture into the world rarely do so in groups, however. Most often, a single satyr goes exploring on his own to satisfy a unique curiosity. Satyrs remain rare even in cosmopolitan cities, and are scattered and not part of a cohesive community. As cautious as satyrs are, they also jealously guard their explorations and rarely allow let others of their kind to join in.

Satyrs in the Feywild congregate in places of beauty and safety. Forest glades, patches of open grass near babbling streams, and shaded ponds under willow trees are all excellent places to find satyrs at rest. Satyrs build their homes as a part of the landscape, with houses constructed in the trunks of trees or dug into the ground like burrows. Their homes are humble and comfortable, for although they love revelry, they enjoy the simple pleasures the most. When entering a satyr's home, one finds a well-stocked pantry and a collection of fine food and drink from far-flung places. Despite these comforts, satyrs spend little time in their homes, instead preferring to dwell in the open beauty of nature.

Satyr Adventurers

With their natural curiosity, it is no surprise that satyrs seek out great adventures. They do so in their own special way, with goals that are more personal than lofty. A satyr can be a boon as an adventuring companion—provided that his curiosity is aligned with his companions' in a way that overcomes his natural reluctance to put himself in danger.

Bard The satyrs' love for song and story makes them excellent bards. Satyrs enjoy few pleasures as much as a compelling tale, and a satyr who has a vast collection of such tales earns the respect of his people. Your fey nature means that you also have an innate connection to magic, which lends itself to mastering the bard's repertoire of arcane tricks. As a satyr bard, you are always searching for the next great story—and all the better if you yourself are the star of that tale.

Rogue Satyr adventurers are cautious in their exploration, and no class better suits this mind-set than the rogue. Building on your race's reputation for cunning and curiosity, you lurk in the shadows to gain the advantage over more powerful foes. In social situations, you are a silver-tongued charmer, defusing dangerous conflicts with a few well-placed words or convincing others to help you by crafting an exquisite set of lies. Satyr rogues have a reputation for slyness and creativity, and you attempt to use your wits first to escape any sticky situation.

Sorcerer Satyr bards take up their magical training over time, but a spark of arcane power sometimes takes a stronger hold in a satyr—manifesting without warning or choice. Such satyrs often become sorcerers, harnessing their innate magic in a way that fuels their adventurous spirit. As a satyr sorcerer, you channel the wild magic spell source, as befits your kind's hedonistic bent. The magic of the Elemental Chaos reflects the wildness in your heart, and in turn provides an outward representation of your free-spirited nature.

Warlock Satyrs deal with powerful fey creatures on a daily basis. It is natural, then, for a satyr's curiosity to inspire it to forge a pact of power with such creatures. Satyrs typically become fey pact warlocks to protect themselves from the dangers that arise as they explore the Feywild and the wilderness of the world. If your sense of exploration pushes you more toward the role of an arcane warrior, you might bargain with a powerful entity of the Feywild to become a hexblade warlock.

Roleplaying a Satyr

When creating a satyr adventurer, here are a few points to consider.

You live life to the fullest. Satyrs don't let any opportunity for reveling pass them by, but this is not to say that you are completely self-centered or obsessed with your own hedonism. Rather, everything you do is focused in some way on adding to your full and rich life. To satyrs, much of what constitutes a rich life consists of good wine, good friends, and the company of the nymphs they love. However, even the most shallow of satyrs knows that a life of leisure doesn't come easily. As an adventuring satyr, you do what you do in pursuit of something you love, whether excitement and thrills, new stories and experiences, or simply material wealth.

Friends are better than enemies. Given the choice between easily making an enemy and going out of his way to make a friend, a satyr will almost always try the harder course. Satyrs are fond of saying that no one ever had to look over his shoulder to make sure he wasn't being chased by a friend. Satyrs dislike conflict, and would often rather give up some personal comfort on a short-term basis than offend someone. They prefer to get along with everyone if they can, believing that with peace comes prosperity.

As such, you almost always greet every stranger as if he or she were an old friend, in the hope that such people might eventually become trusted allies. If you do make an enemy, you try to rectify the situation if you can. However, even the most optimistic satyr recognizes base villainy, and you are not easily taken in by duplicity or false friendship.

Never fight on even footing. Those that have seen a satyr's friendly side often make the mistake of assuming you are easily cowed in combat. But when conflict arises as it inevitably does, satyrs fight with a ferocity that belies their cautious reputation. You look for every possible advantage in battle, and you have little regard for the idea of honorable combat or a fair fight. Your inclination to avoid conflict when out of combat makes you a more dangerous enemy in a battle, since satyrs believe that failing to finish off a disadvantaged foe means risking another fight with that foe in the future. Though you do not seek out combat, you recognize that the faster it ends, the quicker you might return to the more important pursuits of life.

TYLER JACOBSON

You live the life you deserve. Satyrs believe that the fate that befalls all sentient creatures occurs for a reason. You believe that the winds of good fortune and ill fortune alike blow according to how every creature lives his or her life. When you have the advantage, you never take it for granted, acknowledging those who have stood by your side and helped you live a fulfilling life. When things turn bad for you and your allies, you understand that it is simply because you haven't tried hard enough yet to tip the balance of fate in your favor.

Satyr Characteristics: Amicable, capricious, inquisitive, lighthearted, mischievous, tricky

Satyr Names: Adronus, Barases, Canteon, Dantes, Gilderos, Pan, Puck, Romeus, Silenus, Tarteron

BARD'S TALE: THE UGLY SATYR

Once there was a young man who loved a lord's daughter. Night after night he came to her window to woo her, but each time the lady refused him, saying, "My love's face is secret, my love is most rare, my love plays the music upon the night air."

One night, as the young man went out to woo his lady, he heard a beautiful melody in the wood. He followed the sound to a glade where an ugly satyr played the pipes with skill beyond mortal reckoning.

"If you would teach me that tune, I would give you anything you ask," said the young man. The satyr agreed in return for a small vow, and he taught the man the tune upon the pipes. When the man played it at the lady's window, she consented to marry him. A wedding day was set, guests were invited, and all was made ready.

On the eve of the wedding, the ugly satyr arrived to claim his due: a kiss from the lady who adored his music. The young man scoffed at the request and turned the satyr away. The man then set a circle of cold iron around his beloved's chamber, for the creatures of Faerie cannot cross such boundaries.

That night, as the man slept, a beautiful new melody drifted from the forest and into the bridal bower. On the morning of the wedding, the lady was gone from the tower. The only trace of her was a single delicate footprint outside the circle of cold iron. Try as he might, the man who broke his vow to the satyr never discovered where she had gone.

Satyr Utility Powers

When your satyr character gains a class utility power after 1st level, you can forgo taking a power granted to you by your class. Instead, you gain a satyr utility power of the same level or lower.

Satyr's Leap

A satyr's legs are as powerful as those of the wild goats of the mountains, enabling him to jump incredible distances with no effort. Whether you are vaulting over the heads of foes or bounding through the forest to avoid terrain that might slow you, your distinctive leap is one of your most recognizable features.

Satyr's Leap — Satyr Utility 2

You crouch and spring to catch your foes off guard, putting your powerful legs to good use.

At-Will
Move Action — Personal
Effect: You jump with a +10 power bonus to the Athletics check. When you make this jump, you are always considered to have a running start. The distance you jump cannot exceed your speed.

Bending the Balance

Most satyrs believe that all creatures get what they deserve, and you have learned not only to accept fate but to push its boundaries to your benefit. After all, your allies deserve their good fortune, just as your foes will get what's coming to them.

Bending the Balance — Satyr Utility 6

Your very presence causes fate to twist in an ally's favor.

Daily
Immediate Reaction — Ranged 10
Trigger: A creature within 10 squares of you regains hit points or takes damage from an attack that hits it.
Target: The triggering creature
Effect: The target either regains 2d6 additional hit points or takes 2d6 extra damage.

Tune of Enchantment

In legend, satyrs are said to produce music that is so captivating because it draws on fey magic for its power. Such legends arise from the satyrs who have practiced the art of the tune of enchantment. When you play your song, its haunting notes burrow deep into the minds of your enemies, who find themselves enthralled by your music.

Tune of Enchantment — Satyr Utility 10

You play a whimsical tune in the heat of combat that clouds your enemies' minds.

Daily ✦ Aura, Charm
Minor Action — Personal
Requirement: You must be playing a musical instrument.
Effect: You activate an aura 5 that lasts until the end of the encounter. Any enemy must roll twice when making saving throws against charm effects while in the aura, using the lower result. The aura is deactivated if you are not playing your musical instrument at the end of your turn, but you can reactivate the aura as a minor action.

Rowena negotiates with a satyr of night, while Viltham sneaks up to steal the ever-blooming rose

Foes into Friends

As with all satyrs, you would rather make allies than enemies. You have learned a natural charm that allows you to intervene when an enemy would fall, controlling that foe to spare its life—or taking revenge to show it the error of its ways.

Foes into Friends — Satyr Utility 16

You draw an enemy back from the brink of death, holding it under your spell.

Daily ✦ Charm
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 10
Trigger: An enemy within 10 squares of you drops below 1 hit point.
Target: The triggering enemy
Effect: The target instead has 1 hit point, and it is dominated by you until the end of the encounter. The target cannot regain hit points, and a missed attack cannot damage it. If the target still has 1 hit point at the end of the encounter, it drops to 0 hit points. You choose whether it dies or is unconscious.

Channel the Unseelie

Though most satyrs seek the bright pleasures of life, there also exist satyrs of the night—shadowy creatures that have been transformed by exposure to dark magic. By manipulating subtle currents of this magic, you temporarily take on the form of a dark creature.

Channel the Unseelie — Satyr Utility 22

You tap into dark fey power, transforming yourself into a creature of shadow.

Daily ✦ Polymorph
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You transform into the form of a satyr of the night, and you remain in that form until the end of the encounter. While in this form, you have partial concealment, and when you would normally have partial concealment because of dim light, you are instead invisible. Additionally, you take only half damage from necrotic attacks.

ERIC BELISLE

CHAPTER 3

Classes

THE FEYWILD is a realm of magic; this much anyone who has ever heard a fairy tale knows. The very substance of the plane is infused with arcane magic, and many of the creatures that inhabit the realm are so tightly bound to arcane power that it is a natural and instinctive part of their very being. As such, it should come as no surprise that those who hail from, and venture into, the Feywild often develop a natural aptitude for arcane magic.

However, the Feywild is also a wild and verdant place where primeval natural landscapes remain untouched since their creation. Moreover, the influence of the Feywild spills over into the mortal world at fey crossings. Many of those who live on the borders of the Feywild and the natural world develop a rapport with primal spirits, emboldened by the verdant growth the Feywild fosters.

Some of the material in this chapter is for use with classes found in other books. The barbarian and the bard appear in Player's Handbook 2, the druid appears in Player's Handbook 2 and Heroes of the Forgotten Kingdoms, and the wizard material is for use with either the Player's Handbook or Heroes of the Fallen Lands.

This chapter includes the following material.

- New powers for the barbarian, as well as alternate class features for the berserker subclass.
- New powers for the bard, as well as alternate class features for the skald subclass.
- New powers for the druid, as well as alternate class features for the protector subclass.
- New powers for the wizard, as well as alternate class features for the witch subclass.

BARD'S TALE: THE THREE TRAVELERS

Once upon a time there were three travelers who had entered the realm of the fey and were following one of the lesser known paths through a thick forest. The first was a bard of one of the human tribes that lived just on the other side of a crossing, in the world of men. The second was an elf whose druid circle protected that same crossing on the other side, in the Feywild. The third was a satyr, young and brash and prone to berserk rages when upset, who traveled with the other two for their protection.

One day the trio came upon a place where the path seemed to bend around a massive tree. As they examined the odd sight, a dryad emerged from the tree, beautiful and terrifying. She demanded that each of the three travelers do something to honor her, stating that only then would she send them on their way.

The first to speak was the human bard, who lamented that he could only immortalize the dryad in story or song, for they were the greatest tools at his disposal. "Fool!" the dryad cried. "Can you keep no secrets? Your songs would bring woodsmen and devious creatures right to my tree." She beckoned the bard closer, whispering a secret of arcane magic in his ear. "Now, I have given you one secret. A second is the secret of my tree's location, which you must also keep. Only when you find a third secret, a secret greater than all others, can you return to this land." Saying that, she waved her hand and banished the bard from the Feywild.

Angry at seeing his friend so cursed, the satyr leaped forward, bringing a wicked axe to his hand and flying into a screaming rage. As the berserker lunged for the dryad's tree, intent on chopping it down, the dryad struck him on the forehead with her palm. "I left your friend with the memory of my secret, to bind him with the power of three. You shall not be so lucky." With that, she stole his memories from him, cast him out of the Feywild, and spoke that only when all three travelers were reunited would his memories return.

The elf, seeing her friends cursed and banished, approached the dryad humbly. She offered to use the knowledge of her circle to make her tree stronger, to fill the area with verdant growth, and to change the course of the path to carry it around the great tree. The dryad was pleased, and she gave the druid a staff made from one of the branches from her tree. "Seek out the ancient dryad that inhabits the great World Tree, and give her this. You will be rewarded beyond your wildest wishes." And, as the dryad said that, the druid was free to go.

MARK WINTERS

Barbarian

Barbarians are commonly thought to be uncivilized and savage. Wielding mighty weapons, barbarians show little control or discipline in the way they fight, and they call on the forces of nature to aid them. But even among the barbarian peoples, there are those individuals who stand out from all others for their unbridled fury during combat. Those warriors not only call on the primal spirits to aid them, they let those spirits inhabit their bodies, using the spirits' power directly.

In this section, you will find new powers for the barbarian, introduced in Player's Handbook 2, including some tied to the new barbarian subclass, the berserker.

Berserker

Martial and Primal Defender and Striker: Your skill and experience make you good at defending others, but when your rage surfaces, you become an aggressive attacker.
Key Abilities: Strength, Dexterity

On the edge of civilization, far beyond the comfortable life within cities and towns, tribes of barbarian peoples maintain a simple yet primitive existence. Life for these people is not easy, and it is made more difficult because fey crossings commonly appear in their lands. As children, tribe members are taught about the perils of crossing into the Feywild, and about the monsters that emerge from that realm with malicious intent. Faced with this constant danger, the barbarians continually fight to maintain their way of life.

Some among them have fought so hard for so long that they know little other than violence as a means of protecting their tribes. These individuals, prone to rage that transforms them into whirling forces of destruction, are known as berserkers. Most berserkers are skilled warriors with keen survival instincts. When their ire is stoked, however, much of that experience and discipline is replaced by an animal fury unmatched among other warriors.

If fury and aggressiveness was all that berserkers had to protect them from harm, they would eventually tire and be overcome by their enemies. When the berserkers' unbridled rage overtakes them, they become beacons of the spirit world, and their rage sounds like a gong calling to the primal spirits. Those spirits are drawn to such strong emotion, and are able to inhabit berserkers during their rages, protecting them against harm. The spirits also lend their energy to the berserkers, allowing them to perform incredible, even supernatural, feats.

It is not just barbarians in the mortal world who become berserkers. Within the Feywild are many savage warriors, and that bright realm is a place where warriors who are as mercurial as the berserker fit right in. Many berserkers are found among the lycanthrope tribes of the Brokenstone Vale, others are among the elves who still dwell in the forests of the Feywild, and yet others can be found anywhere civilization has not yet encroached upon.

Creating a Berserker

A berserker is a type of barbarian, a class introduced in Player's Handbook 2. To create a berserker, use the character creation rules in the Rules Compendium or the Player's Handbook. The Character Advancement table (page 160) summarizes how many powers and feats your berserker should have at each level, as well as when ability scores increase.

A berserker lacks all of the barbarian class features from Player's Handbook 2: Barbarian Agility, Feral Might, rage strike, and Rampage. A berserker gains new class features: Berserker Fury, defender aura, Heartland, Poised Defender, and vengeful guardian. In addition, a berserker has proficiency with light shields. Because of these new features, a berserker can serve as both a defender and a striker.

Berserker Traits

Hit Points: You start with hit points equal to 15 + your Constitution score. You gain 6 hit points each time you gain a level.

Bonus to Defenses: +2 to Fortitude

Healing Surges per Day: 8 + your Constitution modifier

Armor Proficiencies: Cloth, leather, hide; light shield

Weapon Proficiencies: Simple melee, military melee

Class Skills: Acrobatics (Dex), Athletics (Str), Endurance (Con), Heal (Wis), Intimidate (Cha), Nature (Wis), Perception (Wis)

Trained Skills: Three from the list of class skills

Ability Scores

When you determine your ability scores, keep in mind that a berserker is best served by superior Strength and Dexterity scores. Strength should be your highest score, since the berserker's attacks rely on it.

When thinking of your character's personality, consider your highest scores other than Strength and Dexterity. A berserker with a high Wisdom might be a tribal leader who tries to maintain control of his or her rage and is filled with regret each time it is unleashed. A berserker with a high Constitution might be a large, brawny survivor, whose battle scars are a testament to his or her persistence in facing danger and surviving. A berserker with a high Intelligence could be a barbarian chieftain who, if he or she had been born in civilization, would have been a great military tactician; instead, the berserker stands at the forefront of a horde of raging warriors, directing them into battle.

Class Features

A berserker has the following class features, starting at level 1.

Heartland Berserkers live on the edge of civilization, where they are closer to the land and more shaped by the environment than other warriors are. You have cultivated certain abilities that are based on your experiences in your heartland's environment.

You choose one of the following terrain types that best represents your heartland and gain its benefit.

Arid Desert You hail from a hot, dry desert region and are accustomed to the blistering heat and searing sands of your heartland. Your people prize light protective clothing that keeps you from overheating, and compensate for lighter armor with greater agility.

Benefit: While you are wearing cloth armor or no armor and not using a shield, you gain a +3 bonus to AC and a +2 bonus to Reflex.

At 4th level, you gain resist 5 fire. The resistance increases to 10 at 14th level and 15 at 24th level.

Frozen Land You hail from a land covered in ice and snow, and as such you know how to survive in cold environments. You are comfortable when others are shivering with cold, and you have become toughened by constant exposure to harsh temperatures.

Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus to Fortitude and Will.

At 4th level, you gain resist 5 cold. The resistance increases to 10 at 14th level and 15 at 24th level.

Temperate Land You hail from a land covered in forests and plains. Your people are accustomed to having access to abundant resources and typically carry defensive gear such as shields.

Benefit: While you are wielding a one-handed weapon and using a shield, you gain a +2 bonus to the damage rolls of any weapon attack you make with that weapon.

At 4th level, you gain a +1 bonus to speed while charging.

Defender Aura You've spent a good deal of time engaged in a battle against enemies, natural or otherwise. Your fighting skills are honed to the point where you stand as a capable defender of your people, interposing yourself between enemy and ally.

Benefit: You gain the defender aura power.

Defender Aura Barbarian Utility

You work to occupy nearby foes, using a combination of fighting skill and clever tactics to keep them distracted.

At-Will ✦ Aura
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until you end it as a minor action or until you fall unconscious. While in the aura, any enemy takes a –2 penalty to attack rolls when it makes an attack that does not include among its targets either you or an ally of yours who has this aura active. Marked enemies are not subject to this aura.

EVA WIDERMANN

Poised Defender As long as your primal rage does not take over, your martial training helps you dodge and parry incoming attacks if you're not burdened by heavy armor.

Benefit: While your defender aura is active and you're not wearing heavy armor, you gain a +2 bonus to AC.

Vengeful Guardian Protecting your family while living on the frontier of civilization, or some other uncivilized land, has taught you how to draw attention to yourself and away from those you protect. When an enemy is foolish enough to ignore you and go after your loved ones, you punish it for its oversight.

Benefit: You gain the vengeful guardian power.

Vengeful Guardian Barbarian Attack

Your nearby enemies learn the hard way that it is unwise to ignore you.

At-Will ✦ Martial
Opportunity Action Personal
Trigger: An enemy subject to your defender aura either shifts or makes an attack that targets an ally of yours, without targeting you or an ally who has an active defender aura.
Effect: You make a melee basic attack against the triggering enemy and deal 1d8 extra damage to it.
Level 11: 2d8 extra damage.
Level 21: 3d8 extra damage. On a miss, the attack deals half damage to the triggering enemy.

Berserker Fury Though you are a warrior of skill and poise most of the time, when your ire is stoked you become a force of destruction on the battlefield. At times of desperation, or when the scent of your enemies' blood fills your senses, you fly into a frenzy of rage. While engulfed in this primal rage, you abandon much of your discipline and training, allowing primal spirits to flow into you and assume control.

Benefit: When you use a barbarian primal attack power, you enter your Berserker Fury until the end of the encounter. Alternatively, you can use a minor action while you are bloodied to enter the fury. The fury has the following effects.

- Your defender aura ends, if it was active, and you cannot use defender aura or vengeful guardian until the fury ends.
- Some of your powers, such as your barbarian martial at-will attack powers, gain additional benefits, as noted in those powers.
- Your melee basic attacks deal 1d8 extra damage. This extra damage increases to 2d8 at 11th level and 3d8 at 21st level.

Powers

Your berserker starts with four barbarian powers of your choice.

- Two 1st-level barbarian at-will attack powers
- One 1st-level barbarian encounter attack power
- One 1st-level barbarian daily attack power

See the Character Advancement table (page 160) for the powers you gain as you advance in level.

When you select powers, consider the barbarian powers introduced in this book, which are tailored for the berserker and offer a mix of martial and primal options. Player's Handbook 2 and Primal Power present a variety of other barbarian powers to choose from.

Skills

You should consider Athletics for one of your trained skills, because the ability to reach an enemy by climbing, jumping, and swimming is essential for someone who fights face to face. Acrobatics is useful to help you blunt the damage of falling long distances, and to help you cross dangerous surfaces without falling.

Training in Nature can represent your connection to the natural world, developed over years of living in a rustic environment. Likewise, if you emphasize Intimidate, that choice reflects a life lived in a more primitive society, where influence over your peers is as important as dominance over your enemies. A focus on the Heal skill could indicate that you have learned how to manage your many wounds, or perhaps you had an apprenticeship under your tribe's shaman, learning how to deal with basic ailments and battle injuries.

Feats

Your choice of feats not only shapes your abilities, but speaks to your past and your origins. For example, if you choose one of the feats from the learning and lore category such as Linguist or Skill Training, it could reflect your history as a learned barbarian, flouting the view of primitive tribes held by city-dwellers. If you come from a particularly religious tribe, you might choose one of the divine devotion feats such as Disciple of Strength to represent your dedication to the gods.

If you want to focus more on martial prowess and your ability to defend allies, consider defensive feats from the armor training category such as Armor Proficiency: Chainmail. If you want to emphasize strong primal attacks, consider feats from the weapon training category, such as Two-Handed Weapon Expertise (page 130), and other feats that boost your damage output.

Additionally, since you can use martial powers only when you are not under the influence of your

BERSERKER RACE CHOICES

The following races make good choices for a berserker.

Half-Orc: Half-orcs have natural strength and agility, which align perfectly with the berserker's nature. Moreover, the half-orc's furious assault racial power adds extra savagery to a raging berserker's attacks. Since most berserkers don't wear heavy armor, a half-orc's ability to gain temporary hit points when bloodied provides extra protection in the thick of battle.

Half-orc characters come naturally to the role of the berserker. All half-orcs are likely to have grown up on the fringes of society or as an outcast. In the culture of the tribes that roam the wilderness, petty differences such as ancestry are overlooked, allowing a berserker's contributions to be the measure by which his or her place in the society is determined.

Human: In any region, tribes of human barbarians are usually more common than those of any other race. Not only do humans have the persistence and toughness to survive in brutal environments, they also naturally band together, increasing their chances for survival through cooperation. The versatility and adaptability of humans makes them excellent berserkers, because their strength is a boon when making attacks, and their wide range of abilities and overall hardiness helps them overcome any defensive vulnerabilities.

Wilden: The wilden (Player's Handbook 3) make good berserkers because of their ability to channel the wrath of nature. Wilden come from the primeval, untouched reaches of the Feywild, and any encroachment on those unspoiled lands by drow, goblins, or other interlopers often provokes a quick and violent response. Though wilden do not have a Strength bonus, their bonus to Dexterity helps improve a berserker's AC. More important, wilden have the option of choosing a racial power for whichever role of the berserker you want to play. If you are feeling more like a defender, after an extended rest choose the wrath of the destroyer racial power. If you are feeling more like a striker, choose pursuit of the hunter.

Berserker Fury, you should consider multiclassing into one of the Strength- or Dexterity-based martial classes and picking up or swapping in a power from that class. The fighter makes an excellent choice for multiclassing with the berserker, since the fighter has many martial powers designed for a defender. You might also consider the warlord as a good way to pick up a martial power, allowing you to be well-rounded and adaptable.

Equipment

You start with 100 gp to buy your starting equipment. You should consider buying an adventurer's kit, a weapon (two-handed if you choose to be from an arid desert or a frozen land, or one-handed if you are from a temperate land), and a shield (if you are from a temperate land). Alternatively, you should choose a one-handed weapon and a shield if you are from an arid desert or a frozen land and want to lean toward a defender role.

Your high Strength means that you can carry a lot, but you might choose to avoid being burdened with a lot of other gear. As a barbarian accustomed to long overland journeys, you could opt for lighter equipment that can be carried over long distances without fatiguing you.

RYAN BARGER

New Barbarian Powers

The barbarian powers in this section expand on those found in Player's Handbook 2, Primal Power, and other sources. These powers are among your options when you choose barbarian powers of the given levels.

Level 1 At-Will Powers

Aggressive Lunge

In the wild places of the world, you have encountered beasts and monstrous creatures that respond only to aggression. You've learned to show such creatures the same lack of fear, lunging toward them to force them back.

Aggressive Lunge — Barbarian Attack 1

You lunge forward at your enemy, hoping to send it reeling.

At-Will ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Strength modifier damage, and you push the target 1 square. You then shift 1 square into the space the target just left.
Level 21: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Berserker Fury: This attack gains the primal keyword and deals 1d6 extra damage.
Level 11: 2d6 damage.
Level 21: 3d6 damage.

Jarring Smash

An enemy knocked off balance is one that can soon be taken out of the fight. You strike at your foes in such a way that they reel from your attack in pain and disorientation.

Jarring Smash — Barbarian Attack 1

You slam your weapon into your enemy, causing it to reel at the force of your blow.

At-Will ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Strength modifier damage, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Level 21: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Berserker Fury: This attack gains the primal keyword and deals 1d8 extra damage.
Level 11: 2d8 damage.
Level 21: 3d8 damage.

Run Down

You have spent much time hunting for food for yourself and your family, and you have learned methods of keeping your prey from escaping. A quick strike to the legs, a slash at a hamstring, or a well-placed shove keeps your opponent close.

Run Down — Barbarian Attack 1

You smash your enemy in a vulnerable place, slowing it and keeping it from escaping you.

At-Will ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Strength modifier damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Level 21: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Berserker Fury: This attack gains the primal keyword and deals 1d8 extra damage.
Level 11: 2d8 damage.
Level 21: 3d8 damage.

Stalk and Strike

Nimble and skittish prey will startle and run when a pursuer gets too close. You have experience in stalking your prey from a distance, then suddenly striking, and have learned to apply those techniques to making quick dashes in combat.

Stalk and Strike — Barbarian Attack 1

You creep toward your enemy, low and lurking, and then strike with surprising speed.

At-Will ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: You shift up to 2 squares before the attack.
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Level 21: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Berserker Fury: This attack gains the primal keyword and deals 1d8 extra damage.
Level 11: 2d8 damage.
Level 21: 3d8 damage.

Level 1 Encounter Powers

Batter Down

A cowed enemy is a defeated enemy. You know that once you can stand over your opponent, you have the advantage. You have learned how to throw your weight behind a strike to send a foe sprawling.

Batter Down — Barbarian Attack 1

You hammer your enemy, knocking it to the ground before you.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage, and you knock the target prone.

Savage Cut

When the bloodlust takes hold of you, you swing your weapon with strength and fervor that can come only from some supernatural force. As you cede control to rage-filled primal spirits, you can push your body beyond its normal limits.

Savage Cut — Barbarian Attack 1

You drive your weapon into your enemy in the way that the jaws of a wolf seek its prey's throat, and you rend it savagely.

Encounter ✦ Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + 1d8 + Strength modifier damage.

Level 1 Daily Powers

Life-Ending Strike

Death is a part of nature, and the primal spirits that inhabit your body when you give yourself over to your fury know this better than any other creature. When your enemies have been battered and beaten back, the spirits guide your hand and fuel your ferocity, ensuring a quick demise for those who oppose you.

Life-Ending Strike — Barbarian Attack 1

You lash out at your enemy with a mighty strike that presages the end of its life.

Daily ✦ Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Special: When charging, you can use this power in place of a melee basic attack.

Sweeping Cut

You have sometimes found yourself surrounded by enemies, seemingly with little hope of survival. But you have always come out victorious. When you find enemies on all sides, you know how to use techniques that work against multiple foes, making them pay for ganging up on you.

Sweeping Cut — Barbarian Attack 1

You sweep your weapon in a wide arc, driving your foes to the ground where they will be at your mercy.

Daily ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in the burst
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage, and you knock the target prone.
Miss: Half damage.

Level 2 Utility Powers

Ignore Pain

When the rage overtakes you, part of your mind recedes, replaced by something primal and dangerous. For a short time, pain, hunger, and fear fall by the wayside, the troubles of a mortal body disregarded by the force of nature you have become.

Ignore Pain — Barbarian Utility 2

When your enemies hurt you, the strength of your rage allows you to shove the pain aside for a time.

Daily ✦ Primal
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: You take damage.
Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to the triggering damage.

Nomad's Rush

You have traveled through many kinds of dangerous terrain throughout your life. You know that you can't always avoid such places and must be able to pass through them unscathed. In battle you apply that same principle, moving through dangerous terrain as if it wasn't there.

Nomad's Rush — Barbarian Utility 2

Your training allows you to spot rough terrain with ease—and dash over it without a second thought.

Encounter ✦ Martial
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed + 4. During this move, you ignore difficult terrain.

Level 3 Encounter Powers

Implacable Advance

When you select your foe, you know it is your responsibility to keep it from harming your allies. Once an enemy becomes the target of your attention, it can do little to escape, because you press your attack when it tries to retreat.

Implacable Advance — Barbarian Attack 3

You advance on your enemy and strike, continuing to close with your foe even if it tries to flee.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage. In addition, the first time the target moves before the end of your next turn, you can shift up to your speed to a square adjacent to the target as a free action after its movement.

Thundering Smash

Sometimes, the primal spirits that control you when your fury emerges also channel elemental power. You can funnel this power into your attacks, unleashing a weapon strike that carries a concussive effect.

Thundering Smash — Barbarian Attack 3

You attack your enemy with such crashing force that the foes around it feel the effect of the blow.

Encounter ✦ Primal, Thunder, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage, and each enemy adjacent to the target takes 5 thunder damage.

Level 5 Daily Power

Dangerous Presence

You've seen your share of battles, and you have the scars to prove it. When you set yourself against a group of foes and lay waste to one of their number, they see that you are an opponent to be feared.

Dangerous Presence — Barbarian Attack 5

You strike quickly and decisively, showing your deadly skill to your enemies and causing them to cower in fear.

Daily ✦ Fear, Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, enemies grant combat advantage while subject to your defender aura.

Feral Rampage

Your rage fuels your speed as well as your strength. When you succumb to your bloodlust, the spirits inhabiting you make your heart race and your reactions quicken, allowing you to dash from enemy to enemy like a wild beast.

Feral Rampage — Barbarian Attack 5

The passion of the predator flows through you, allowing you to move between your enemies and cut both of them down like stalks of wheat.

Daily ✦ Primal, Weapon Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One or two creatures
Effect: You can shift up to your speed after the first attack.
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.

Level 6 Utility Powers

Cull Weakness

You know the ways of the wild; nature demands that the strong survive and the weak be culled. The spirits that enhance your abilities while inhabiting your body enforce this law, giving you the strength to uphold the tenet of survival of the fittest.

Cull Weakness — Barbarian Utility 6

Only the strong survive, and you let your enemies know that you are a survivor as you strike down the weakest among them with ease. The others quail before you as their wounds mount.

Daily ✦ Primal, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the cull weakness stance. Until the stance ends, bloodied enemies grant combat advantage to you, and you gain a +4 power bonus to damage rolls against them.

Wilderness Step

Vines cannot hold you, sand trap you, nor stones impair you. You've spent so much time in the wild, tackling the worst terrain that nature can create, that no obstacle can hinder you for long.

Wilderness Step — Barbarian Utility 6

Your skill in traversing the wilderness allows you to bypass hindering effects that would delay others.

Encounter ✦ Martial
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You start your turn subject to an immobilized, restrained, or slowed condition that a save can end.
Effect: You make a saving throw with a +2 power bonus against one triggering condition.

EVA WIDERMANN

Level 7 Encounter Powers

Deny Escape

When your enemies grow wary of your might, some try to flee the battlefield. You know how to ensure that they do not get away.

Deny Escape — Barbarian Attack 7

In your bloodlust, letting an enemy go isn't an option. You attack with great force, preventing your foe from escaping your fury.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Strength modifier damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.

Shattering Strike

When the primal spirits fight from within you, your attacks have the weight of supernatural force. By letting the magic of the spirits flow freely from you, you are able to wound creatures that are barely harmed by normal attacks.

Shattering Strike — Barbarian Attack 7

The primal force flowing from your body enables your attack to strike true even against ethereal targets.

Encounter ✦ Force, Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier force damage. This damage ignores the insubstantial quality.

Level 9 Daily Power

Eye of the Maelstrom

When your back is to the wall and the odds against you are overwhelming, you call upon all your experience as a warrior, evening the odds. You dare enemies to come within striking distance, and then you punish them when they don't devote their full attention to you.

Eye of the Maelstrom — Barbarian Attack 9

You attack your foes with incredible speed and strength, becoming a vortex of whirling strikes that seek out any foe that unwisely ignores you.

Daily ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your defender aura expands to an aura 2, and you can shift 1 square as a free action before making a melee basic attack granted by your vengeful guardian power.

Wrath of the Storm

At the height of your rage, your weapon strike carries the power of a raging storm. The primal spirits that fuel your rage lend you their strength, and you blast an enemy away from you with the force of a roaring gale.

Wrath of the Storm — Barbarian Attack 9

Your rage is like that of the howling storm. When you attack, you violently sweep aside the foe that dared to stand in your way.

Daily ✦ Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You push the target up to 4 squares and knock it prone.

Level 10 Utility Powers

Circle of Battle

Among the barbarian tribes you associate with, the rite of single combat is often used to determine which side of a conflict is in the right, avoiding the bloodshed of battle. You've learned how to apply that fighting style, enabling you to single out and defeat a foe as you would an opposing tribe's champion.

Circle of Battle — Barbarian Utility 10

You command your allies to clear out a space, allowing you to draw an enemy's focus to yourself.

Encounter ✦ Martial
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: One enemy subject to your defender aura
Effect: As a free action, each of your allies adjacent to the target can shift up to 2 squares to a square that is not adjacent to the target. Additionally, until the start of your next turn, when you hit the target with an opportunity attack or a vengeful guardian attack, you immobilize it until the end of its next turn.

Surge of Fury

When the primal spirits flow through you during your rage, they also offer you some protection. When an opponent seeks to incapacitate you or to overcome your will, the spirits help you ignore such threats.

Surge of Fury — Barbarian Utility 10

You release a howl that blocks out the whispers of your enemies and fills you with a fury that gives you a clarity of purpose.

Daily ✦ Primal
No Action Personal
Trigger: You start your turn subject to a dazing or dominating effect.
Effect: You end the triggering effect. Until the end of your next turn you are immune to effects that daze or dominate you.

Level 13 Encounter Powers

Drive to the Ground

An unbalanced enemy is a quickly defeated enemy. You have mastered the ability to send your foes stumbling to the ground when you strike them. When you do so, your enemy is both at a disadvantage in combat and unable to threaten your allies effectively for a time.

Drive to the Ground — Barbarian Attack 13

You drive your weapon into your foe with such ferocity that it staggers away and crashes to the ground.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier damage, and you slide the target up to 2 squares and knock it prone.

Blood for Strength

When you cleave your enemies, the blood that spills does more than whet your appetite. Such an offering strengthens your connection to the primal spirits, who must be placated lest they abandon you when you need them most.

Blood for Strength — Barbarian Attack 13

You deliver a brutal wound to your enemy, offering the result of your bloodlust to the spirits that fuel your rage.

Encounter ✦ Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + 2d8 + Strength modifier damage.

Level 15 Daily Powers

Bloodletting Assault

With the spirits driving your fury, you can rush across the battlefield and deliver a massive strike against your enemy, harming it severely if not killing it outright.

Bloodletting Assault — Barbarian Attack 15

You sprint over the intervening ground, then drive your weapon into your enemy with an unnatural strength that cannot be denied.

Daily ✦ Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 6[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Special: When charging, you can use this power in place of a melee basic attack.

Slash at the Knees

This attack is especially useful when you're at the center of a battle, which is where you like to be. You can wound and hinder a number of enemies at one time, making them easier targets for your allies.

Slash at the Knees — Barbarian Attack 15

Even though surrounded by foes, you become a whirlwind of death, hurting and incapacitating every one of them.

Daily ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in the burst Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Half damage.

Level 16 Utility Powers

Distracting Advance

You have learned how to attract an enemy's attention, making the foe hesitate so that your endangered allies can get to safety.

Distracting Advance — Barbarian Utility 16

You bolt into the fray, bellowing a battle cry that distracts your foe long enough for your comrades to move away.

Encounter ✦ Martial
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to half your speed. If you end this shift adjacent to an enemy, each of your allies adjacent to that enemy can shift up to 3 squares as a free action to a square that is not adjacent to that enemy.

Path of the Predator

Primal animal spirits hunt alongside you, remaining invisible but lending you their strength. When you throw yourself against your enemies, overflowing with fury, these spirits surge with you, granting you newfound strength and speed.

Path of the Predator — Barbarian Utility 16

You lunge forward with such quickness and grace that you pounce on your foe before it sees you coming.

Daily ✦ Primal
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to twice your speed. During this shift, you can make Athletics checks to climb, jump, and swim. If you end this shift adjacent to an enemy, that enemy grants combat advantage to you until the end of your next turn.

Level 17 Encounter Powers

Forceful Spirits

When you unleash your fury, some of your strikes are more powerful than you can normally make because the spirits surround your weapon, lending their aid to increase the speed and strength of your blows.

Forceful Spirits — Barbarian Attack 17

Your attack is driven by the power of the spirits, sending foes near your enemy reeling.

Encounter ✦ Force, Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Strength modifier damage. In addition, each enemy adjacent to the target takes 5 force damage and is pushed up to 2 squares from the target.

Unavoidable Stalker

You are a predator that cannot be escaped. Years of hunting, whether for wild game or fleeing enemies, have taught you how to relentlessly track your quarry before bringing it down.

Unavoidable Stalker — Barbarian Attack 17

You strike your target and then continue to track it, remaining in step with it no matter where it goes.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier damage. In addition, at the end of the target's next turn, if it is not adjacent to you, you can shift up to your speed + 2 to a square adjacent to the target as a free action.

Level 19 Daily Powers

Terrifying Presence

When you enter your battle fury, your appearance takes on a dangerous cast, as if death is hovering near you. When you attack, you leave those near your foe quaking from your frightening countenance.

Terrifying Presence — Barbarian Attack 19

You land a mighty blow and face your enemies, terrifying them with the visage of your battle lust.

Daily ✦ Fear, Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter or until your defender aura ends, enemies in your defender aura grant combat advantage and cannot make opportunity attacks.

Torrent of Destruction

Your rage sends ripples out through the world, attracting primal spirits as moths are drawn to a flame. When they come, you let the spirits take hold of you, turning you into a creature of primal power whose speed and strength is augmented by supernatural forces.

Torrent of Destruction — Barbarian Attack 19

The spirits spur you into action, giving you the speed and fury to sweep across the battlefield like a windstorm.

Daily ✦ Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Effect: You shift up to your speed. During the shift, you can make the following attack once against each creature to which you move adjacent.
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.

Level 22 Utility Power

Limitless Advance

With the power of the primal spirits supporting you, you can surpass mortal limits of exertion. You can now leap across chasms, swim mighty rivers, and scale sheer surfaces without slowing.

Limitless Advance — Barbarian Utility 22

No enemy is beyond your reach, and you let no obstacle stop you from reaching a foe.

At-Will ✦ Martial, Primal
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed. During this movement, you can jump horizontally a number of squares up to your speed without needing to make an Athletics check, and you can climb and swim at full speed rather than half speed. Your total distance moved cannot exceed your speed. Additionally, any falling damage you take is reduced by 20 until the end of the turn.
Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Level 23 Encounter Powers

Driving Smash

When the spirits are fueling your rage and answering its call at the same time, nothing can stand between you and your foe. You know how to bend the spirits' power to your will, harnessing their magic to drive past any defenses.

Driving Smash — Barbarian Attack 23

As your weapon strikes home, you shatter your enemy's defenses in addition to dealing it a vicious blow.

Encounter ✦ Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Strength modifier damage. This attack ignores the insubstantial quality and the target's resistances.

Wracking Wound

A wounded enemy will take risks, sometimes causing itself as much injury as if you had struck it a heavy blow. You know how to inflict pain on a foe with every step it takes.

Wracking Wound — Barbarian Attack 23

You slash at your foe, dealing it a wound that causes great pain when your enemy moves.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 3[W] + Strength modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target takes damage equal to your Strength modifier for each square of voluntary movement it undertakes.

Level 25 Daily Power

Unmatched Precision

Many warriors hear tales of becoming one with the flow of a battle, where it seems as though time slows down and all of one's attacks slip past enemy defenses with little effort. You are able to achieve this state, finding intense focus when the situation is most dire.

Unmatched Precision — Barbarian Attack 25

You strike down your foe with such focus and poise that it seems as though your attacks cannot miss.

Daily ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 6[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Berserker Fury: This attack gains the primal keyword and deals 2[W] extra damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, while you have no unused encounter attack powers, whenever you make an attack roll for a melee basic attack or a barbarian at-will attack power, you can roll twice and use either result.

Level 27 Encounter Powers

Forceful Evisceration

You have battled enemies that have defenses so tough that your allies' attacks barely scratch them. In a fight against such a foe, it is your responsibility to wound the enemy badly, opening it up to further assaults from your friends before it can recover.

Forceful Evisceration — Barbarian Attack 27

You channel the primal power around you into your weapon and strike. The attack not only causes immense damage, it leaves your enemy devoid of its natural protection for a time.

Encounter ✦ Force, Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + 3d8 + Strength modifier force damage, and the target loses all resistances until the end of your next turn.

Keep It Down

Fighting from a disadvantageous position is dangerous, but if you can put an enemy into the same situation, its chances of survival drop rapidly. You've learned how to not only drop an opponent, but to keep it off balance, allowing anyone nearby to attack it as it tries to right itself.

Keep It Down — Barbarian Attack 27

You put your enemy down on the ground—and keep it there.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 4[W] + Strength modifier damage, and you knock the target prone. Until the end of your next turn, the target provokes opportunity attacks whenever it stands up.

Level 29 Daily Power

Deadly Sweep

Whoever strikes the quickest remains standing at battle's end. You have perfected the technique of lashing out with several blows at those around you, which can make the difference between taking a life and losing your own.

Deadly Sweep — Barbarian Attack 29

You execute a series of strikes so blindingly fast that your enemies fall before you or are driven back.

Daily ✦ Martial, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy you can see in the burst
Attack: Strength vs. AC
Hit: 5[W] + Strength modifier damage.
Berserker Fury: This attack gains the primal keyword and deals 2[W] extra damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You can choose to either push the target up to 2 squares or knock it prone.

Bard

Bards play an important role in the Feywild and among those who live near its fringes. Bards are not only masters of a form of arcane magic, an important part of life in the Feywild, but also are the keepers of knowledge and history, revered for their role in preserving the past.

In this section, you can find new powers for the bard class, introduced in Player's Handbook 2, as well as optional class features and a new bard subclass, the skald, that can be made by swapping out one set of class features for another.

Signs of Influence

Optional Class Feature

All bards wield some influence no matter where they go among civilized peoples. Even in hostile cities, you might be regarded with respect, however grudging. The Signs of Influence optional class feature represents the extent of a bard's influence in the world.

If you and your DM agree, your bard gains access to certain qualities known as signs of influence. Each sign of influence provides an ability that the bard can use to gain some benefit in a civilized area. Most signs of influence provide benefits of little monetary value, but they can be a great boon or relief when a bard leads a bedraggled group of adventurers back into civilization after a harrowing adventure.

Benefit: At 1st level, your bard gains two Signs of Influence options of your choice. At 13th level and 17th level, you can choose an additional option.

Attract Attendants

In any civilized area that reveres bards, there are always those who are eager to please, hoping to have themselves represented in the bard's tales. These seekers offer their services to the bard for a short while, allowing the bard to focus on important business while the attendants take care of menial tasks.

Benefit: Whenever you are in a village, town, or other civilized location that reveres bards, up to three servants will attend to your needs while in that location. These servants run errands for you, help you with physical tasks (such as moving chests of treasure or cleaning), and carry out any mundane task that a servant could reasonably be asked to perform.

Demand Audience

Refusing an audience with a bard is tantamount to writing yourself into history as a villain of one sort or another. Bards can often gain entry into places that others would be turned away from, and even the most powerful rulers know better than to refuse a bard who requests a meeting.

Benefit: Whenever you are in a village, town, or city that reveres bards, you can receive an audience with someone representing the ruling power within 24 hours, and you are guaranteed safe passage to that audience by the local authorities. You can use this ability no more than once a month in a particular settlement.

Ritual Beneficiary

Though the bard is a master of many talents, sometimes you might have to call on someone who has greater knowledge in a certain field, especially in matters related to magic. When you have need of magical expertise, sages and magic users that respect your calling are eager to provide you with their services.

EVA WIDERMANN

Benefit: Whenever you are in a village, a town, or some other civilized location where a person lives who is capable of casting rituals, once per day you can have any ritual cast for free if it normally has a component cost of 150 gp or lower, provided that the ritual caster is not hostile toward you. The ritual cannot be one that produces a permanent item.

Travel in Style

Bards spend a lot of time on the road. They like to travel with a bit of style when possible, or at least with speed and comfort. Many consider it an honor to give or loan one's horses to a bard, and many a good word has been included in a bard's tale for a kindly stable master.

Benefit: Whenever you are in a village, town, or other civilized location where horses, carts, and carriages can be obtained and where bards are revered, you can procure horses for you and up to seven of your allies, plus a single cart or carriage at no cost, from someone in that location. Before you can use this ability again, you must return the horses and cart or carriage, leave them at a predetermined location, or pay for them.

At the DM's discretion, you can obtain other modes of transportation of a similar value when available. For example, when visiting Cendriane, you might be able to obtain griffons to carry you to the city of Mithrendain, provided that the eladrin valued the use of griffons similar to that of horses and carts in the mortal world.

Welcome Guest

Having a bard stay under one's roof is a great honor indeed. Innkeepers often compete vigorously for the opportunity to offer shelter and food to visiting bards, and the winner brags about having such a guest for weeks or months to come.

Benefit: Whenever you are in a village, a town, or a city that has a public inn where bards are revered, you can use your influence (and perhaps the promise of a performance) to obtain meals and a comfortable room for you and up to seven of your allies for the duration of your stay in that location.

Skald

Arcane and Martial Leader: You combine a strong tradition of martial training and expertise with arcane tricks that you pick up along the way.
Key Abilities: Charisma, Intelligence

Those who live on the fringes of civilization, or who come from places where civilization is nothing like what the mortal races understand, rely on chroniclers and historians who maintain their history as oral tradition. These individuals, respected for their knowledge and insights, serve as the keepers of the heritage of their people. It is their responsibility to make sure that none forget the past. They are both observers and storytellers; what they see becomes the legends and tales passed on from one generation to the next. These historians are known as skalds.

A skald is no mere entertainer. Skalds are responsible for witnessing firsthand the great events of their time, committing those events to memory, and then passing on those tales. They learned all the tales of the previous generation as well, and theirs is a line of storytellers who pass on the entire history of their people. Skalds travel from one place to the next, acting as witnesses to the events of their time. Along the way they pick up new stories and bits of magic and other tricks that add to their mystique.

Among the people of the world and other realms who know of this bardic tradition, skalds are nearly sacred. They can move freely through enemy territory and are considered untouchable even during the most bitter of tribal feuds. In many ways, skalds are like holy leaders: All but the most honorless thugs hesitate to attack them, and they are revered and respected for their role as masters of history. When a culture's entire history is contained within the tales told by a single person, that person is more than just a storyteller; he or she is the sum total of that history, and that of all its ancestors, given flesh.

In the Feywild, a skald is treated as a visiting dignitary, no matter where he or she comes from. From Cendriane to Mithrendain, even the most unmannered and barbaric skalds can find food, shelter, and respect throughout the lands of the eladrin. The Summer Queen herself would not refuse an audience with a skald, though most skalds know better than to bother powerful fey lords and ladies with trifling matters in such sessions. The status of a skald

WAYNE ENGLAND

Andronus plays a tune on his lute, lulling the dinosaurs on the Isle of Dread to sleep, as he and Lyrindel pass safely by

is perhaps even more elevated in the Feywild than it is in the mortal world, so that few in the fey realm would risk being savaged in the stories of a skald, their names blackened for the rest of history because of an offense they committed against a storyteller.

Creating a Skald

To create a skald, use the character creation rules in the Rules Compendium or the Player's Handbook. The Character Advancement table (page 160) summarizes how many powers and feats your skald should have at each level, as well as when ability scores increase.

A skald lacks several of the bard class features from Player's Handbook 2: Bardic Training, Bardic Virtue, majestic word, and Multiclass Versatility. A skald gains new class features: Deceptive Duelist, skald's aura, and Master of Story and Song.

Ability Scores

When you determine your ability scores, keep in mind that a skald is best served by superior Charisma and Intelligence scores.

When thinking of your character's personality, consider your highest scores other than Charisma. If you have a high Constitution score, it could indicate that you come from a brutal environment, such as the frozen wastelands of the north, or the craggy, broken steppes of a mountain range. If you have a high Intelligence score, it might represent your past as a scholar of some kind; if so, what drew you away from your studies to a life of travel and storytelling? If you have a high Wisdom score, it might signify your

Skald Traits

Hit Points: You start with hit points equal to 12 + your Constitution score. You gain 5 hit points each time you gain a level.

Bonus to Defenses: +1 to Reflex, +1 to Will

Healing Surges per Day: 7 + your Constitution modifier

Armor Proficiencies: Cloth, leather, hide, chainmail; light shield

Weapon Proficiencies: Simple melee, simple ranged, military ranged, longsword, scimitar, short sword

Implement Proficiencies: Wands

Class Skills: Acrobatics (Dex), Arcana (Int), Athletics (Str), Bluff (Cha), Diplomacy (Cha), Dungeoneering (Wis), Heal (Wis), History (Int), Insight (Wis), Intimidate (Cha), Nature (Wis), Perception (Wis), Religion (Int), Streetwise (Cha)

Trained Skills: Arcana, plus four more from the list of class skills

MARK WINTERS

SKALD RACE CHOICES

The following races are particularly good choices for a skald.

Human: Skalds are frequently found among human tribes and in settlements on the fringes of civilization. When making a human skald, you should consider putting your racial ability score bonus in Charisma, since you will use Charisma not only for social skills but also for your attacks. You could also choose to put your ability score bonus in Intelligence to improve your AC and Reflex. Since skalds already receive several skill choices, you should consider for your human bonus skill one that reflects your character's history and upbringing.

Human skalds possess the tenacity and ambition of humanity. As they travel in search of new tales, they often come across strange and mysterious powers, finding themselves changed by their experiences in a way that their own people might find alien.

Pixie: Pixies may be capricious and winsome, but they are also eager explorers and seekers of knowledge. As such, the calling of the skald is a natural fit for the pixie. Pixies are also natural users of arcane magic, and their ability to inspire their allies with story and song rivals that of any other race. Pixie skalds are all well respected in the courts of the archfey, since they have often seen and heard things that no other creature has. It is not unsual for pixie skalds to be summoned to the Summer Queen's court to regale the Court of Stars with tales from across the Feywild.

Satyr: Though satyrs are naturally concerned more with their own entertainment than the dramas of the larger world, they make excellent skalds because of their love of good stories and their tendency to seek out such tales for their own amusement.

Satyrs tend to be flamboyant storytellers more than historians. They love the drama of their tales, and are likely to embellish their stories a bit; a satyr skald is more interested in the spirit of the tale, rather than getting the details right. However, just like other skalds, a satyr garners respect wherever he goes, since satyr skalds are often seen as the most trustworthy sources of information in the Feywild—if the listener can hear through their embellishments to the truth of the tale underneath.

prior position as an elder or leader of your people. Perhaps you are a member of a tribe's ruling council, or a village elder from a place near a fey crossing. If your Dexterity is high, you might have spent years as a roguish minstrel, wandering from realm to realm, getting yourself in and out of trouble as you gathered and created tales.

Class Features

A skald has the following class features, starting at level 1.

Deceptive Duelist A skald depends not on speed of sword or strength of arm, but on the natural ability to read enemies and trick them into making themselves vulnerable. You know how to use your cunning in combat to make your enemy all but fall onto your blade or in some other way open itself up to your attack.

Benefit: When you make a melee basic attack with a one-handed weapon, you can use Charisma instead of Strength for the attack roll and the damage roll.

Skald's Aura When danger strikes, often the only thing standing between your allies and their defeat is their morale. Your ability to inspire your allies gives them (and you) the energy to fight on.

Benefit: You gain the skald's aura power.

Skald's Aura Bard Utility

You chant, sing, or otherwise inspire your allies with your words, allowing them to draw the strength to battle on from your encouragement.

Encounter ✦ Aura, Healing, Martial
Minor Action Personal

Effect: You activate an aura 5 that lasts until the end of the encounter. If the aura ends prematurely for any reason, you can reactivate it during the encounter as a minor action.

Twice per encounter but only once per turn, you or any ally in the aura can use a minor action to spend a healing surge and regain 1d6 additional hit points. Alternatively, you or any ally can use a minor action to allow an adjacent ally to spend a healing surge and regain the additional hit points.

Level 6: 2d6 additional hit points.
Level 11: 3d6 additional hit points.
Level 16: 4d6 additional hit points, and the healing can be used three times per encounter.
Level 21: 5d6 additional hit points, and the healing can be used three times per encounter.
Level 26: 6d6 additional hit points, and the healing can be used three times per encounter.

EVA WIDERMANN

Master of Story and Song

The skald's greatest ability is his or her mastery of song and tale. When the situation is most dire, the skald can recall stories and ballads that provide great hope or inspire the strongest zeal. The skald's memory for such art is legendary, and it rarely fails.

Benefit: You gain two 1st-level bard daily attack powers of your choice, but each day you can use only one bard daily attack power.

When you gain a bard daily attack power at 5th level, you can use two bard daily attack powers per day, but no more than one of a particular level. Similarly, after you gain a bard daily attack power at 9th level, you can use three bard daily attack powers per day, but still no more than one of a particular level.

At level 15, 19, 25, and 29, you gain a bard daily attack power of your level or lower without having to replace a power, but the number that you can use per day remains at three.

Song of Rest

It is said among the fey races that the right notes of a song, or the right words to a tune, can not only soothe pain but actually help the healing process. Whether this assertion is true or not, bards are always good to have along on an adventure, thanks to their ability to use their talent with music to provide a more refreshing rest.

Benefit: When you play an instrument or sing during a short rest, you and each ally who can hear you are affected by your Song of Rest. When an affected character spends healing surges at the end of the rest, that character regains additional hit points equal to your Charisma modifier with each healing surge. A character can be affected by only one Song of Rest at a time.

Skill Versatility

Your travels have taken you to places where you have encountered many strange and wondrous things. It benefits you to remain versatile, and you are adaptable to almost any situation.

Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus to untrained skill checks.

Words of Friendship

Bards use magic to honey their words and turn the simplest argument into a compelling oration.

Benefit: You gain the words of friendship power.

Words of Friendship Bard Utility

You infuse your words with arcane power, turning even the simplest speech into a compelling oration.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Charm
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain a +5 power bonus to the next Diplomacy check you make before the end of your next turn.

Powers

Your skald starts with five bard powers of your choice.

- ✦ Two 1st-level bard at-will attack powers
- ✦ One 1st-level bard encounter attack power
- ✦ Two 1st-level bard daily attack powers granted by the feature Master of Story and Song

See the Character Advancement table (page 160) for the powers you gain as you advance in level.

When selecting your powers, consider the bard powers introduced in this book, which are tailored for the skald. Typically, a skald is either a master of oratory, speech, and storytelling, or a musician who puts tales to song. Many of these powers modify your skald's aura and reflect the nature of the tale or the song your allies hear from you.

Player's Handbook 2 and Arcane Power present a variety of other bard powers to choose from.

Skills

Training in both Diplomacy and Bluff can be invaluable for the skald, who is often the social representative for a group of adventurers. Skalds develop excellent communication skills thanks to their storytelling abilities, and they know when to deal honestly with people as well as when to pull the wool over their eyes. Streetwise, too, can be invaluable for the skald, since it is a skill most often associated with gathering information in a civilized setting.

A skald who has training in Dungeoneering or Nature might have spent a lot of time exploring, satisfying his or her curiosity by visiting distant lands or dusty ruins. A skald who has training in History or Religion might have started his or her career as a scholar, then moved on to a more practical pursuit of history by becoming a gatherer of stories.

Though most skalds pick up a few arcane tricks along the way, few are actually trained spellcasters or masters of the arcane. If you choose to have training in Arcana, that choice could represent your dedicated study of the magical creatures and events you come across during your travels.

Feats

When you choose your feats, consider those that benefit your basic attacks, since they are the only attacks you will make. Weapon Focus for your chosen weapon, or the relevant weapon expertise feat, will go a long way toward helping you bring down your foes. Since you are a master of skills and knowledge, feats from the learning and lore category make excellent choices for the skald, particularly since Skill Focus can help boost your already impressive skills such as Bluff or Diplomacy.

BARD'S TALE: THE SKALD'S APPRENTICE

Long ago there was an old man, a storyteller of such great skill and reputation that young people came to him from all across the land, begging to be his apprentice. After many years of refusing them, finally the skald relented, taking on a young half-elf female as his apprentice. For months they traveled together as the skald passed on his knowledge to the apprentice. The apprenticeship was not easy, for the skald demanded perfection from his student, but she was determined and hard-working, and eventually she proved herself worthy of his secrets.

One day, when traveling through a dark forest, the skald and his apprentice were set upon by seven great dire bears. Though the apprentice was quick and skilled with her rapier, she knew that the skald's fighting days were well behind him. "I will protect you," she said, "but I believe these bears will be the death of us both." The skald, smiling as though he was not facing certain death, said to his apprentice, "How much you have learned, yet how little you know. It is not just the words of a tale, but the telling of it that has power." With that, the skald began to recite the tale of a foolish bear cub who was stung by a hive of bees, and though the dire bears could not understand the skald's words, to her astonishment the apprentice saw the animals begin to back down.

After a few minutes, the dire bears turned and fled. "My master," the young apprentice said, "How did you do it? Those bears should have been our deaths!" The skald turned to the young woman, and said in a kindly voice, "The bears might not have understood my story, but they could hear my voice. All things, in nature and in the world of men, can sense the power of a skald's words."

You might also consider taking feats from the enduring stamina category, such as Great Fortitude and Improved Defenses, since they can help boost your Fortitude, which might lag behind your other defenses.

Equipment

You start with 100 gp to buy your starting equipment. You should buy a weapon of your choice, hide armor, and an adventurer's kit. If you plan on having your skald be a part of a musical tradition, you should purchase a light and portable musical instrument to carry with you on your travels, such as a harp or a mandolin.

WAYNE ENGLAND

New Bard Powers

The bard powers in this section expand on those found in Player's Handbook 2, Arcane Power, and other sources. These powers are among your options when you choose bard powers of the given levels.

Level 1 At-Will Powers

Bolstering Speech

Though some would scoff at the thought of a few mere words affecting the outcome of a battle, just as many would say that a brief bit of inspiration can turn the tide, even in the middle of combat. Many military leaders hire bards as standard bearers or drummers for their armies, counting on the bards to provide words of encouragement at just the right moment.

Bolstering Speech — Bard Attack 1

You offer up a story that inspires and reinforces the morale of your allies, urging them to fight past their pain.

At-Will ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter or until you use another bard at-will attack power, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Each time you hit an enemy with a basic attack, one of your allies in the aura gains temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier.

Song of Savagery

Among many barbaric tribes, songs of victory are laced with the most violent and brutal descriptions of battle. The bards of these tribes say that it is the viciousness of the lyrics that keep battle in the minds of their tribe's warriors at all times, and that when those songs are chanted on the battlefield, they drive the warriors into a frenzy.

Song of Savagery — Bard Attack 1

You sing a song that imparts a tale of violence and savagery, getting your allies' blood up and driving them into a frenzy.

At-Will ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter or until you use another bard at-will attack power, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Each time you hit an enemy with a basic attack, one of your allies in the aura gains a +4 power bonus to his or her next damage roll before the end of your next turn.

Song of Serendipity

Luck and fate are two concepts that find their way into almost every song and tale about the Feywild, for the fey races seem to be masters at bending chance to their will. Bards who sing about these events often find that their allies are suddenly overcome by a streak of good luck themselves. Some believe that it is enough to sing of the fey in order to steal their luck, but most bards believe it is simply the ally making his or her own good fortune.

Song of Serendipity — Bard Attack 1

You sing a song that tells of serendipitous events, giving your allies a keen eye for openings in your enemies' defenses.

At-Will ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter or until you use another bard at-will attack power, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Each time you hit an enemy with a basic attack, one of your allies in the aura gains a +2 power bonus to his or her next attack roll before the end of your next turn.

Words of Gravity

Stories about the perils of the world are among the most common stories told by bards about the Feywild. Though most children eventually grow too old for such tales, there are some stories even adults know better than to ignore. These stories, told in the heat of combat, can focus the mind and keep allies from falling prey to attacks.

Words of Gravity — Bard Attack 1

You tell a story full of danger and violence, urging your allies into a defensive mind-set.

At-Will ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter or until you use another bard at-will attack power, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Each time you hit an enemy with a basic attack, one of your allies in the aura gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Level 1 Encounter Powers

Lesser Dimensional Step

Many creatures of the Feywild, such as eladrin, can teleport short distances. You've learned the secret of these teleporting creatures, and you can use it to put yourself and an ally within striking distance of a foe.

Lesser Dimensional Step — Bard Attack 1

As your weapon strikes, you and one of your allies vanish from one spot and appear in another, confusing your opponent.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Teleportation
No Action Close burst 5
Trigger: You hit an enemy within 5 squares of you with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The attack deals 1[W] extra damage to the enemy you hit, and you and one ally in the burst can teleport to a square adjacent to that enemy.

Lesser Flash of Distraction

Malicious fey often use distraction and misdirection to cause a mortal to drop his guard for a moment. After experiencing such an event firsthand, you learned the trick of creating small flashes of light that can temporarily dazzle your enemies.

Lesser Flash of Distraction — Bard Attack 1

A sudden burst of light and a blast of noise leaves your foe momentarily disoriented.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
No Action — Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The enemy you hit is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Lesser Ringing Weapon

Some of the most dangerous magical predators use invisibility or natural camouflage to stalk their prey. In order to protect yourself from such creatures, you have developed a trick that uses your weapon's strike to create a loud noise that makes it easy to locate the predator.

Lesser Ringing Weapon — Bard Attack 1

You drive your weapon into an enemy and then channel a spell through it, causing it to ring like a tuning fork and draw the attention of others.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Thunder
No Action — Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The enemy you hit takes 5 thunder damage. Until the end of your next turn, that enemy grants combat advantage and cannot benefit from partial concealment.

Level 1 Daily Powers

Cautionary Tale

One of the most common kinds of stories you pick up in your travels is the cautionary tale, one that provides some warning to the unwary. Though most commonly told to children, you know a number of such tales that can inspire even the most hardened soldier to tread lightly in the face of an enemy.

Cautionary Tale — Bard Attack 1

Your warning inspires your allies to be vigilant against danger from all sides. Your comrades exercise caution, waiting until one of them can strike with greatest effect.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Allies in the aura do not grant combat advantage while flanked. In addition, once before the end of the encounter, one of your allies in the aura can deal 2d10 extra damage on any one attack that hits an enemy.

Dirge of the Damned

Among the litany of songs you know, some can only be called funeral dirges. These songs or chants sound much like those sung for fallen allies, but instead hold woeful portents for your enemies.

Dirge of the Damned — Bard Attack 1

You begin chanting a dirge that makes every strike from your allies cut just that much deeper into your doomed enemies.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Allies in the aura gain a +2 power bonus to damage rolls, or a +4 power bonus to damage rolls against bloodied enemies.

Disruptive Words

Tricky fey creatures such as satyrs and gnomes tell stories designed to mock their enemies. These tales tend to drive enemies who hear them to distraction; merely the tone of your voice can be enough to cause your enemies to let their guard down.

Disruptive Words — Bard Attack 1

You call out to your enemies with words that distract and confuse them, drawing their attention away at a critical moment and opening them up to your allies' attacks.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Enemies in the aura grant combat advantage. Once before the end of the encounter, when an enemy in the aura takes damage from any source, you can choose for that enemy to be dazed (save ends).

Level 2 Utility Power

Bardic Lore

Through your travels as well as your knack for collecting stories, you have collected a large amount of general knowledge on subjects both common and esoteric. You can recall useful bits of information, gleaned from people you have met or other bards with whom you have exchanged stories.

Bardic Lore — Bard Utility 2

Using your magic to sharpen your memory, you recall an important piece of information that you picked up in a story or a song you heard in your travels.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You use Arcana, Dungeoneering, History, Nature, or Religion to make a knowledge check, but instead of rolling a d20, resolve the check as if you had rolled a 20.

Level 3 Encounter Powers

Chilled Blade

Satyr bards claim that the original enchantments for making weapons that exude an unnatural cold were forged by the Prince of Frost deep within the Fortress of Frozen Tears. Whatever the truth, those satyrs—or someone like them—taught you how to turn a weapon as cold as ice.

Chilled Blade Bard Attack 3

Frost forms along the edge of the weapon as you lay your hand on it, a fine mist falling off it toward the ground.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: One weapon
Effect: The next weapon attack made with the target weapon before the end of your next turn slows the attack's first target until the end of its next turn. On a hit, that target also takes 1d10 extra cold damage.

Echoing Weapon

You developed this enchantment to impart your strikes with more noise, allowing you to intimidate your opponents by having your attacks echo with the crash of thunder.

Echoing Weapon Bard Attack 3

You place your hand on the weapon, and it begins to rumble quietly, as though a booming thunderhead is contained within.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Thunder
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: One weapon
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, the next weapon attack made with the target weapon deals 2d6 thunder damage to one target of the attack, regardless of whether the attack hits or misses.

Seek Weakness

Some bards claim to have come across weapons imbued with such great magic that they develop minds of their own. You know magic that allows you to imbue a weapon with the desire to seek out the weak spots in an enemy and plunge into them.

Seek Weakness Bard Attack 3

The weapon you enchant quivers under your fingertips as though eager to strike.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: One weapon
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, weapon attacks made with the target weapon have combat advantage and gain a +2 power bonus to damage rolls.

ERIC BELISLE

Nistyncia and Andronus find comfort and safety in the home of an old woman who dwells in the Murkendraw

Level 5 Daily Powers

Haunting Tune

You have mastered songs so beautiful that they touch the soul. When you sing one of these haunting tunes, it can affect even the most hardened hearts with its beauty, sapping your foes' willingness to continue fighting.

Haunting Tune — Bard Attack 5

You chant a haunting dirge that seems to reach right into your enemies' psyches, leaving them shaken.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Fear, Psychic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Enemies that end their turns in the aura take 3 psychic damage. This damage cannot drop an enemy below 1 hit point. If the damage would normally drop an enemy below 1 hit point, that enemy must immediately move up to its speed as a free action if it can, ending the move as far from you as possible.

Scathing Rebuke

In your arsenal of stories and legends are a few designed to rebuke those who would do you harm. When you recite one of these tales, your enemies think twice before laying a hand on you.

Scathing Rebuke — Bard Attack 5

You keep a barbed tongue handy for your enemies, offering them no quarter with your disparaging words.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Fear
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Any enemy in the aura whose Will is equal to or lower than 12 + your level cannot attack you, unless that enemy is marked by you or in your defender's aura.

Song of Hope

You have mastered several heroic ballads, stories of survival and success despite long odds. When you sing one of these songs, your allies' minds are filled with visions of victory and the will to succeed despite any disadvantages they face.

Song of Hope — Bard Attack 5

You sing a song that inspires your allies, giving them the confidence to triumph.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Your allies in the aura gain a +2 power bonus to skill checks. Once before the end of the encounter, when one of your allies makes an attack roll, as a free action you can choose to have that ally roll twice for the attack and use either result.

Level 6 Utility Powers

Reactive Wards

Eladrin masters of warding magic long ago developed protections to combat harmful magic already affecting a victim. You've learned some of these wards and can cast them to help an ally shake off a malicious effect.

Reactive Wards — Bard Utility 6

You quickly inscribe a runic shape into the air, a ward against further harm, and then cast it on one of your allies.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Ranged 10
Target: You or one ally
Effect: The target makes a saving throw against an effect that a save can end, with a +2 power bonus to the saving throw. If the saving throw fails, the target gains temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier.

Revitalizing Incantation

A spell derived from ancient satyr songs of merriment, this incantation revitalizes a wounded ally. Bards learn this spell to heal allies who are unconscious or cannot hear their inspiring words and songs.

Revitalizing Incantation — Bard Utility 6

You whisper a few phrases in a secret language, urging your ally's body to mend itself.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Healing
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: You or one ally
Effect: The target can spend a healing surge. Additionally, the target gains temporary hit points equal to his or her healing surge value.

Level 7 Encounter Powers

Alter Fate

Sometimes great change can be wrought by a matter of mere inches. Instead of deflecting off the enemy's helm, your ally's arrow punches through an eye slit, dropping the foe. You can bend fate so that your allies' attacks always seem to find just the right spot.

Alter Fate — Bard Attack 7

You curl your hand in a twisting motion, and a strike that might have been a glancing blow becomes a grievous hit.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Immediate Reaction Ranged 10
Trigger: An enemy within 10 squares of you is hit by your ally's attack.
Target: The triggering enemy
Effect: The target takes 1d12 extra damage from the attack.

Prescient Warning
This magical technique allows you to send a short message backward in time, warning one of your allies of an imminent attack. The message arrives just in time to allow a first strike, perhaps stopping the enemy from attacking in the first place.

Prescient Warning — Bard Attack 7

You utter words of warning that fly upstream through the river of time, warning your ally of danger.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 10
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you is hit by an enemy's attack.
Target: The triggering ally
Effect: The target can make a basic attack against the attacking enemy as a free action, dealing 1d8 extra damage on a hit.

Urge to Victory
Sometimes, the forces of fortune seem to conspire to keep your allies on their heels. When one of your allies stumbles after being dazed by a blow to the head, or when an ally has to dash madly across the battlefield just to get into position, you can use this spell to give him or her a nudge in the right direction.

Urge to Victory — Bard Attack 7

You cast a spell of haste and direction on one of your allies, allowing your friend to strike when it seemed as though he or she could not.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Immediate Reaction Ranged 10
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you ends his or her turn without having made an attack.
Target: The triggering ally
Effect: The target can either make a basic attack or charge an enemy as a free action, even if the target is dominated or stunned. If the attack hits, it deals 1d10 extra damage.

Level 9 Daily Powers

Anthem of Aggression
Many songs passed down by warriors are meant to stoke the fires of battle within their veins. You've spent time studying these battle songs and can replicate them to drive your allies to victory.

Anthem of Aggression — Bard Attack 9

You sing a song that gets the hearts of your allies racing, sending them into battle with fervor.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: The first time each turn one of your allies in the aura misses with an at-will attack, that ally deals damage to the missed target equal to your Charisma modifier.

Exposure of Weakness
A good tale can not only provide listeners with entertainment and lessons, it can expose the faults and foibles of the audience. By studying the reactions of an audience to certain tales, you can tell where a listener's vulnerabilities lie and then exploit them with further words.

Exposure of Weakness — Bard Attack 9

You tell a tale that reveals the gaps in your enemies' armor, exposing them for your allies to see.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Enemies in the aura gain vulnerable 2 to all damage dealt by your allies.

Level 10 Utility Powers

Enchantment Ward
You know spells that can prepare you and your allies for the dangers that you face, even warding you against harmful spells that might be cast your way.

Enchantment Ward — Bard Utility 10

You place wards on an ally well in advance, allowing him or her to resist harmful effects before they can take hold.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Ranged 10
Target: You or one ally
Effect: The first time before an extended rest that the target is subjected to an effect that a save can end, the target can make a saving throw to end that effect, with a +3 power bonus to the saving throw. If the effect has the arcane, charm, fear, or illusion keywords, the bonus instead equals your Charisma modifier.
Special: If the target is still under the effect of this power when he or she is subjected to an effect that can normally be removed only by the Remove Affliction ritual, that effect and this power both end.

Project Vitality
When the situation is dire, this spell enables you to exude your own vitality so that your allies can benefit from it. It effectively broadcasts magical healing on the strength of your own willpower, and it can bring your allies back from the brink of death.

Project Vitality — Bard Utility 10

You allow your eyes to slip half-closed, then project both strength and health out to your allies.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Healing
Minor Action Close burst 5
Target: You and each ally in the burst
Effect: Each target regains a number of hit points equal to your Charisma modifier. In addition, until the start of your next turn, the healing benefit of your skald's aura can be used as a free action instead of as a minor action (it can still be used only once per turn).

Level 13 Encounter Powers

Dimensional Step

What was once stolen knowledge—the secret of teleportation magic—has now become a full-fledged weapon in your repertoire. As you learn more about the subtleties of teleportation, you unlock new secrets about its nature. Just like powerful eladrin warriors, you can use your ability to teleport to let one of your allies make a devastating attack.

Dimensional Step — Bard Attack 13

You warp the fabric of the world around you, transporting you and your ally instantaneously into positions from which your comrade can strike.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Teleportation
No Action — Close burst 5
Trigger: You hit an enemy within 5 squares of you with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The attack deals 1[W] extra damage to the enemy you hit, and you and one ally in the burst can teleport to squares adjacent to that enemy. The ally can then make a basic attack against the enemy as a free action.

Flash of Distraction

Small distractions and arcane tricks once served you well; now a greater degree of mastery over such magic enables you to more deeply confuse your enemies' minds. Images and sounds form the basis of the distracting flash you place before your enemy, but there is also a pattern underneath it that lingers in your enemy's mind and makes it hard for the foe to focus on you.

Flash of Distraction — Bard Attack 13

You create a burst of image and sound that startles your opponent and leaves the distracting visage lingering in its mind for a short time.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
No Action — Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The enemy you hit is dazed and takes a –2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Ringing Weapon

When you channel magic through a weapon you wield, you can strengthen the sound it makes to create painful vibrations that inflict harm on your enemy while keeping it from slinking away.

Ringing Weapon — Bard Attack 13

A surge of sound rings out across the battlefield as you strike, making it impossible for your enemy to hide its presence.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Thunder
No Action — Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The enemy you hit takes 10 thunder damage, and until the end of your next turn, that enemy grants combat advantage and cannot benefit from partial concealment.

Level 15 Daily Powers

Directed Aggression

Sometimes when you tell a story, you alter it in such a way that it has more immediate meaning. Whether you change the names or embellish on the details, you can use a story to communicate information relevant to the current situation—inspiring one of your allies to strike where you intend, without tipping off your enemies to your tactics.

Directed Aggression — Bard Attack 15

You twist a common tale to make it so that your ally knows where to attack, while your enemy has no idea what is coming.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Once before the end of the encounter, when you or an ally in the aura hits an enemy with an attack, that character can deal 3d10 extra damage to the enemy with that attack.

Song of Solidarity

Many great ballads tell tales of stalwart companions standing side by side in the face of danger. When you perform one of these ballads, it inspires your allies to mimic the heroes of the song, supporting one another when lesser warriors would be tempted to run.

Song of Solidarity — Bard Attack 15

Your words ring out over the battlefield, urging your allies to come to one another's defense.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: When an enemy uses a melee attack power against an ally of yours in the aura, that enemy provokes opportunity attacks from any of your allies who are in the aura but not targeted by that attack power.

BARD'S TALE: HALAGAR'S STAND

Once upon a time there was a man named Halagar, who was a well-loved storyteller of his people. As all men do, Halagar grew old and withered, to the point where his hands no longer had the strength to grip his sword. One day, the old man was traveling from his village at the foot of the Barrier Peaks to a nearby keep, planning to spend a few days entertaining the people who lived there and keep their spirits high.

As he traveled alone through the wilderness, Halagar was set upon by a pack of vile gnolls, intent on slaying him and stealing his belongings. However, Halagar was an imperious man, even in his advanced age, and he set about berating the gnolls, casting insults upon them and scouring them with every piece of savage mockery that he had learned in his many years spent traveling and collecting tales. The gnolls were so taken aback by the vitriolic words of the old man that they stood transfixed for several long minutes, their weapons forgotten in their hands.

Halagar kept the gnolls distracted long enough for several soldiers from the keep to sneak up on the gnolls and fall upon them, saving Halagar from a grisly fate. Thereafter, whenever the keep fell under attack by outside forces, the stewards of the keep would always send word to Halagar, begging him to come to their aid, for it was said that his very words could stop entire armies in their tracks.

Level 16 Utility Powers

Dramatic Intercession

Like fey creatures themselves, fey magic is often described as nimble by its admirers, or slippery by those who have been on the receiving end of it. You've learned to quickly interpose a spell between your allies and certain death, intervening in the nick of time.

Dramatic Intercession — Bard Utility 16

At the last second, you create a shield made of fey magic that appears between your ally and danger, giving the ally a moment to recover and keep fighting.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Healing
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 10
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you drops below 1 hit point.
Target: The triggering ally
Effect: The ally instead has 1 hit point and can spend a healing surge, regaining additional hit points equal to 10 + your Intelligence modifier.

Fearless Example

Though fear can blind even the most courageous hero from time to time, you know ways to break through the fear and inspire your allies to keep fighting. You can use this spell to project fearlessness into the minds of your allies, not only protecting them against fear but also helping them shake off other lingering maladies.

Fearless Example — Bard Utility 16

You project a surge of courage into the minds of your allies, allowing them to push through and keep fighting.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Close burst 5
Target: You and each ally in the burst
Effect: All fear effects end on each target. In addition, each target can make a saving throw against each effect that a save can end.

Level 17 Encounter Powers

Greater Chilled Blade

The magic used to create a greater chilled blade spell, as well as its lesser versions, is said to draw power from the Prince of Frost's domain. When you cast this spell, you widen that connection, allowing through it a cold infused with the arcane power of the Feywild, a cold so deep that it can make living fresh brittle.

Greater Chilled Blade — Bard Attack 17

You touch a weapon and lay your enchantment upon it, sheathing the weapon in a thin layer of jagged ice.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: One weapon
Effect: The next weapon attack made with the target weapon before the end of your next turn slows the attack's first target until the end of its next turn. On a hit, that target also takes 2d10 extra cold damage.

Greater Echoing Weapon

Your skill with the lesser version of this spell has improved, and the rumbling thunder you can place on a weapon now sounds more like the coming of a storm that threatens to wipe entire villages off the map.

Greater Echoing Weapon — Bard Attack 17

Your touch causes vibrations to shoot from one end of the weapon to the other, filling the air with a low rumble.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Thunder
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: One weapon
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, the next weapon attack made with the target weapon deals 3d6 thunder damage to one target of the attack, whether the attack hits or misses.

Greater Seek Weakness
You have honed your ability to create spells that seek out your enemies, and now your enchantments have been fine-tuned to the point of deadliness. Since your temporary enchantment lasts longer than many others of its kind, you or an ally capable of making multiple strikes quickly can take advantage of it repeatedly before the magic fades.

Greater Seek Weakness — Bard Attack 17

After you place your hand upon a weapon and enchant it, the weapon seems to point to your enemy's weak spots.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: One weapon
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, weapon attacks made with the target weapon have combat advantage and gain a +4 power bonus to damage rolls.

Level 19 Daily Powers

Fable of Focus
You have learned several stories that tell of great concentration leading to great success. Likewise, you have mastered the art of telling one of these tales in such a way that, for your allies, your words fade away into background noise, drowning out other distractions and leaving your allies in a state of intensity.

Fable of Focus — Bard Attack 19

You weave a tale that forces your allies to concentrate on the task before them, ensuring that every attack counts.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: You and each ally in the aura can reroll any result of 1 or 2 on any damage die, keeping the second result for each die rolled.

Song of Flagging Strength
While many of your songs are directed toward inspiring your allies, some are designed to demoralize your opponents and draw away their will to keep fighting. In fact, the right notes and words at the right time can cause an enemy that has been struck to fight half-heartedly for a time as it reconsiders its dedication to the battle.

Song of Flagging Strength — Bard Attack 19

Your song seems to sap the spirit of your enemies, taking some of the zest of battle out of them.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Psychic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Twice before the end of the encounter, when you or one of your allies hits an enemy in the aura with an attack, that enemy is weakened and takes ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends both).

Level 22 Utility Power

Aura of Reverence
You have seen the worst that the world has to offer, and you did not flinch. You carry with you the knowledge of a thousand tales and songs, and you are treated as an honored guest in the halls of greatest power. You can harness the confidence that this knowledge gives you and use it to project your assuredness, making your enemies back down.

Aura of Reverence — Bard Utility 22

Enemies cringe before you, skulking away lest you turn your attention to them.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Fear
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Any bloodied enemy that starts its turn in the aura must use the first action of its turn to move out of the aura, if possible.

Words of Manipulation
In many cultures, when a bard talks, others listen. There is an art to manipulating one's voice to inspire fear, hope, joy, and even obedience—the last of which makes bards such effective leaders on the battlefield.

Words of Manipulation — Bard Utility 22

You choose your words carefully, prompting one of your allies into action.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: As a standard action, you can choose one ally in the aura; that ally can then take a standard action as a free action.

Level 23 Encounter Powers

True Alter Fate

Greater forces of fortune and fate know of your existence, and they favor you with gifts. Now, when all seems arrayed against you, you can call upon the supernatural forces that alter the patterns of fate and luck to benefit your allies' attacks, such that every hit might be a killing blow.

True Alter Fate — Bard Attack 23

Your outstretched hands bend the fabric of reality, turning an unspectacular attack into a devastating hit.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Immediate Reaction Ranged 10
Trigger: An enemy within 10 squares of you is hit by your ally's attack.
Target: The triggering enemy
Effect: The target takes 3d12 extra damage.

True Prescient Warning

While your other spells have improved thanks to your mastery over the magic that governs them, the effectiveness of this spell comes largely from your mastery of language. You choose the perfect combination of words to travel back through time, telling your ally exactly what he or she needs to know to avoid harm.

True Prescient Warning — Bard Attack 23

A few quick words sail backward in time a few seconds, giving your ally timely insight.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 10
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you is hit by an enemy's attack.
Target: The triggering ally
Effect: The target can make a basic attack against the attacking enemy as a free action, dealing 3d10 extra damage on a hit.

True Urge to Victory

The enemy of any great bard is time; even the nigh-immortal fey races must grow old and fade some day. You have mastered the art of twisting time, giving you the ability to hasten your allies to victory even when they might not be in control of themselves for a moment.

True Urge to Victory — Bard Attack 23

You let no opportunity for triumph pass, using arcane power to urge an ally into making a quick and brutal attack.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Immediate Reaction Ranged 10
Trigger: An ally within 10 squares of you ends his or her turn without having attacked.
Target: The triggering ally
Effect: The target can either make a basic attack or charge an enemy as a free action, even if the target is dominated or stunned. If the attack hits, it deals 3d10 extra damage.

Level 25 Daily Powers

Chant of Devastation

Often, the songs you sing require precise timing in order to inspire your allies in just the right way. You can weave a tune so perfectly that your allies are inspired to land devastating blows on your enemies.

Chant of Devastation — Bard Attack 25

You chant a song that drives your allies to strike, and strike hard.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Once per round when you or an ally in the aura hits an enemy with an attack, that enemy takes ongoing 15 damage (save ends).

Zeal-Inspiring Tale

Stories are meant to instill emotions in their listeners, and you know how to whip your listeners into a frenzy. You can tell stories that fill your allies with zeal, so that they seize any opening to strike at an enemy that shows any sign of weakness.

Zeal-Inspiring Tale — Bard Attack 25

You tell a tale that fills your allies with a zeal unmatched by the words of even the most skilled demagogue.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Each time one of your enemies in the aura misses one of your allies with a melee attack, that enemy provokes an opportunity attack from that ally.

Level 27 Encounter Powers

Greater Dimensional Step

Time and space bend themselves to your command, treating you with the respect that a king would give to a bard of your stature. When you bend reality and hurtle your ally toward an enemy, he or she arrives with such speed that the resulting attack can be devastating.

Greater Dimensional Step — Bard Attack 27

You and an ally vanish from one place, appearing near an enemy in a flash. When your ally strikes, the momentum of the transport gives weight to the attack.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Teleportation
No Action Close burst 5
Trigger: You hit an enemy within 5 squares of you with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The attack deals 1[W] extra damage to the enemy you hit, and you and one ally in the burst can teleport to squares adjacent to that enemy. The ally can then make a basic attack against that enemy as a free action, dealing 1d10 extra damage if the attack hits.

Greater Flash of Distraction

Your ability to create a distraction no longer simply muddles the mind of a foe for a moment, it seizes that mind and paralyzes it. The patterns you choose when creating a greater flash of distraction seem to trigger something in all creatures that causes them to freeze for a moment, unable to clear their heads.

Greater Flash of Distraction Bard Attack 27

You create a dizzying array of images and sounds that scrambles your foe's senses.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
No Action Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The enemy you hit is stunned until the end of your next turn.

Greater Ringing Weapon

The thunder that rolls out of weapons you touch is no longer that of a dangerous gale; instead, your thunder is drawn from the depths of the Feywild, the vestiges of a great primeval maelstrom that lives only in stories and legends.

Greater Ringing Weapon Bard Attack 27

A great clap of thunder accompanies your strike, which seems to linger on your enemy, calling your allies' attention to your foe's position.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Thunder
No Action Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The enemy you hit takes 15 thunder damage. Until the end of your next turn, that enemy grants combat advantage and cannot benefit from partial concealment.

Level 29 Daily Powers

Climactic Crescendo

The method of a bard's telling is as important as the tale itself, and you know better than any others how to craft a story that reaches its dramatic peak at the right moment. You can bring your tale to its climax at just the right time, inspiring one of your allies to deal a crippling blow to an enemy.

Climactic Crescendo Bard Attack 29

As your tale reaches its peak, so too does your ally's deadliness.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Once before the end of the encounter, when you or an ally in the aura hits an enemy with an attack, that character can turn that hit into an automatic critical hit against the enemy.

Demoralizing Dirge

Some songs are so filled with depressing imagery that the listener cannot help becoming despondent upon hearing it. It is said that master bards have passed on the knowledge of the song sung by the Raven Queen to the dying, and they can use that song to literally exhaust their enemies with sorrow.

Demoralizing Dirge Bard Attack 29

You sing a sorrowful tune that demoralizes your enemies each time they are struck by your allies.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Psychic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Each time one of your allies hits and damages an enemy that is in the aura, that enemy also takes ongoing psychic damage equal to your Charisma modifier (save ends).

WAYNE ENGLAND

Druid

Druids are exceptional masters of primal magic. Capable of summoning creatures out of thin air and shapeshifting, druids are found among many races of the Feywild, defending the primeval regions of the plane from despoilers.

This section includes new powers and a new subclass for the druid, the protector.

Protector

Primal Controller: You have mastered the power and magic of nature, using it to create a line of defense between the natural world and those that would harm it.

Key Abilities: Wisdom, Constitution, Dexterity

Though most people associate the Feywild with arcane magic, it is also home to some of the most pristine regions of natural growth across all of the planes. Primeval forests sit untouched by civilization since their creation, alongside mountainsides and hilltops upon which no intelligent being has ever set foot. It should be no surprise that there are those who have chosen a life of protection and guardianship over the natural treasures of the plane.

As with all druids, protectors are the masters of the magic first shared with mortals by the primal spirits. The primal spirits might dwell chiefly in the world, but the druids of the Feywild hear their call and heed their guidance even in the fey realm. Though it might seem as though the presence of the primal spirits in the Feywild would be at a diminished level, in truth primal magic is often among the most effective tools to use in a plane infused with arcane magic. Where many of the dangers of the Feywild have evolved over the eons to deal with the omnipresent nature of arcane threats, primal magic is still untamed and unanticipated by most creatures of the plane.

As a protector, you learned your primal magic from a druid circle, which trained you to protect nature and punish those that would do it harm. By ensuring that the land, the water, and the sky inhabited by the primal spirits is protected, you become a staunch defender of those who live in harmony with nature and show respect for their natural surroundings.

You might go out into the world to seek new experiences and powerful artifacts of primal magic. Though you will stray far from your druid circle in the course of your adventures, your efforts reflect on its goals, and you will use the knowledge it has granted you to battle despoilers and defilers throughout the world and across the planes.

Creating a Protector

A protector is a type of druid, a class introduced in Player's Handbook 2. To create a protector, use the character creation rules in the Rules Compendium or the Player's Handbook. The Character Advancement table (page 160) summarizes how many powers and feats your protector should have at each level, as well as when ability scores increase.

A protector lacks some of the druid class features from Player's Handbook 2: Balance of Nature, Ritual Casting, and wild shape. A protector gains new class features: nature's growth; Druid Circle, which determines the druid's Primal Aspect; Primal Attunement; and summon natural ally.

Also, rather than gaining druid daily attack powers, a protector gains additional uses of summon natural ally as he or she advances in level. A protector also gains the ability to summon more powerful creatures at higher levels.

Protector Traits

Hit Points: You start with hit points equal to 12 + your Constitution score. You gain 5 hit points each time you gain a level.

Bonuses to Defenses: +1 to Reflex, +1 to Will

Healing Surges per Day: 7 + your Constitution modifier

Armor Proficiencies: Cloth, leather, hide

Weapon Proficiencies: Simple melee, simple ranged

Implement Proficiencies: Staffs, totems

Class Skills: Arcana (Int), Athletics (Str), Diplomacy (Cha), Endurance (Con), Heal (Wis), History (Int), Insight (Wis), Nature (Wis), Perception (Wis)

Trained Skills: Nature, plus three more from the list of class skills

Ability Scores

When you determine your ability scores, remember that a protector depends on intuition and instinct to channel primal power, so make Wisdom your highest score. A high Constitution or Dexterity lends increased potency to many of your attack powers, depending on your Druid Circle choice. Make Constitution your second highest score if you are a member of the Circle of Renewal, and make Dexterity your second highest score if you are a member of the Circle of Shelter.

When thinking of your character's personality, consider your highest scores other than Wisdom and Constitution. A good Charisma score might suggest that you are one of your druid circle's ambassadors to the settlements you protect. With a high Intelligence score, you might have been a sage in your druid circle—almost a wizard of primal magic. A high Strength score might suggest a past as a hardworking farmer who mastered primal magic to produce bountiful harvests, then was formally invited to join a druid circle.

Class Features

A protector has the following class features, starting at level 1.

Nature's Growth One of your fundamental evocations, nature's growth allows you to bring life to even the harshest conditions and climes. The power of nature erupts at your command to hinder your foes, even as you slip through the hindrance with ease.

Nature's Growth Druid Utility

A thicket of vines, plants, and tough shrubs erupts as if from nowhere to clutch at your foes.

Encounter ✦ Primal, Zone
Minor Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares (burst 2 at 11th level and burst 3 at 21st level)
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. The zone is difficult terrain for all creatures except you. You can dismiss the zone as a minor action.

Druid Circle Each protector druid belongs to a druid circle, a group of like-minded servants of nature. A druid circle bears some similarity to the orders of clerics and other servants of the gods. However, the druids of your circle serve a different entity as they revere and protect the natural world.

A druid circle might be a secret society of masters of primal magic, congregating to enact an agenda known only to themselves. A circle is just as likely to devote itself solely to the communities that arise along the fringe of the wilderness, acting as mystics and advisors while they channel the wisdom of the natural world. Whatever its motive and structure, each druid circle is known for the wisdom of its older members, whose counsel is sought by influential members of all cultures and races.

A druid circle has a hierarchy much like that of a religious organization. At 1st level, you are an initiate of your circle. As you gain levels, you improve your standing. Even as your adventuring career brings you experience and prestige, it grants you influence with your fellow druids. With the growth of your mastery of primal magic, you gain greater understanding of the secrets kept by your order. Many druid circles guard mysteries of primal power said to have been handed down in the first days following the Dawn War. The higher you rise through the ranks, the more of these pieces of ancient lore are revealed to you.

Benefit: Choose a druid circle. You gain the benefits of that circle.

Circle of Renewal As a member of the Circle of Renewal, your mission is to restore places ravaged by war and unnatural threats. Druids such as you make it their cause to bring life back to parched deserts and scrublands, or to seed life for the first time in areas that have never known it.

Your druid circle teaches you that the life created by your nature's growth can be used to heal the land of its wounds. The plants you draw forth even from rock or lifeless wasteland exude a primal energy that helps speed the restorative process for your allies.

Benefit: You gain the following features.

Primal Guardian: While you are not wearing heavy armor, you can use your Constitution modifier in place of your Dexterity or Intelligence modifier to determine your AC.

JIM NELSON

Healing Growth: When any ally in your nature's growth zone or adjacent to it spends a healing surge to regain hit points, he or she regains additional hit points equal to your Constitution modifier.

Circle of Shelter A druid who chooses the Circle of Shelter has made a pledge to defend the bounty of nature. Members of your druid circle watch over forests, plains, and grasslands, keeping them safe from monsters, uncaring humanoids, and dark magic.

Your druid circle teaches you to shape your nature's growth for the benefit of your allies, giving them an advantage of movement in the midst of combat.

Benefit: You gain the following features.

Primal Predator: While you are not wearing heavy armor, you gain a +1 bonus to your speed.

Unhindering Growth: Your allies ignore the difficult terrain created by your nature's growth.

Primal Attunement Your innate connection to the power of the primal spirits grants you a measure of control over the world around you. With your magic, you manipulate your surroundings to your advantage.

Benefit: You gain three Primal Attunement powers of your choice.

Air Spirit The primal spirits of the air are ever-present in the natural world and are always ready to lend their aid to your cause.

Air Spirit — Druid Utility

With a flick of your fingers, the air stirs before you to lift objects with ease.

At-Will ✦ Conjuration, Primal
Minor Action Ranged 5

Effect: You conjure an air spirit in an unoccupied square within range. The spirit lasts until the end of your next turn or until you use this power again. When the spirit appears, it can pick up or manipulate an object weighing 20 pounds or less.

As a minor action, you cause the spirit to pick up or manipulate a different object of the specified weight. As a move action, you move the spirit up to 5 squares. As a free action, you cause the spirit to drop an object it is holding.

As a minor action, you cause the spirit to shed bright light in a 4-square radius. You can extinguish this light as a free action.

Sustain Minor: The spirit persists until the end of your next turn.

Call the Spirits The greatest of the primal spirits boast a level of power that you can only dream of one day gaining access to. However, even the least of the spirits can prove useful in your everyday life.

Call the Spirits — Druid Utility

By directing the minor magic of the primal spirits, you can subtly alter the world around you to suit your needs.

At-Will ✦ Primal
Standard Action Close burst 5

Effect: You use this power to produce one of the following effects.

- ✦ Cause one candle, torch, lantern, or campfire in the burst to burn more brightly, increasing the radius of its illumination by 1.
- ✦ Open or close a door in the burst that is not latched, locked, or stuck.
- ✦ Create a light gust of wind that can blow small, unattended objects in the burst that weigh less than 1 pound to any other location in the burst.
- ✦ Create sparks from your fingertips that can light one candle, torch, or campfire in the burst.

Special: Nothing you do with this power can deal damage or hinder another creature's actions. This power cannot duplicate the effect of any other power.

Senses of the Wild As a protector, you are one with the natural order, and you can detect disruptions in that order and the balance between life and death.

Senses of the Wild — Druid Utility

You close your eyes, so that you might sense the upheavals in the balance of nature that otherwise cannot be seen.

At-Will ✦ Primal
Minor Action Close burst 5

Effect: You use this power to produce one of the following effects.

- ✦ Automatically detect the presence of a disease or a diseased plant or creature in the burst.
- ✦ Detect the presence or absence of a type of mundane plant or animal of your choice in the burst.
- ✦ Until the end of the current turn, gain a +5 power bonus to Perception checks and Insight checks to detect poison or hazards that deal poison damage in the burst.
- ✦ Sense the presence of corpses in the burst.

Verdant Touch Your touch can heal the land and direct its growth, letting you gently impose your will on plant life and allowing it to prosper.

Verdant Touch — Druid Utility

You lay your hands on the flora that surrounds you, granting it a momentary semblance of life as it shifts and grows at your command.

Encounter ✦ Primal
Minor Action Close burst 1

Effect: You can turn difficult terrain in the burst into normal terrain until the end of your next turn, but only if the terrain is composed of grass, underbrush, vines, or similar growth and was not created by a power.

You can also use this power to cause plants in the burst to blossom with flowers and to cause small plants or grass in the burst to begin growing in barren terrain.

JIM NELSON

Vine Rope The primal spirits of the earth send forth a sturdy vine at your command, providing a helpful tool or an easy escape at a moment's notice.

Vine Rope Druid Utility

With a twist of your hands, you draw a fast-growing vine from the ground before you, then watch as it weaves itself into a resilient rope.

At-Will ✦ Primal
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You draw a vine from the ground that is up to 50 feet in length. The vine functions as a silk rope and lasts until the end of the encounter or until you use this power again. You can cause the vine to vanish as a minor action.

Summon Natural Ally You count the creatures of the natural world as your allies. With magic learned from the elders of your druid circle, you can call one of those creatures to you at any time and across any distance. With this ally at your side, you can tip the balance of combat in your favor.

Because of this feature, you do not gain a druid daily attack power at level 5, 9, 15, 19, 25, or 29. Instead, you gain the summon natural ally power at level 1. At level 5, you can use summon natural ally twice per day, and at level 9, you can use it three times per day.

Summon Natural Ally Druid Attack

You call out to the spirits of the natural world, which send a faithful creature to do your bidding.

Daily ✦ Primal, Summoning
Standard Action Ranged 5
Effect: You summon a creature associated with your Primal Aspect (such as Primal Guardian or Primal Predator) and of your level or lower. The creature appears in an unoccupied space within range. It is an ally to you and your allies.

The creature lacks actions of its own. Instead, you spend actions to command it mentally, choosing from the actions in the creature's description. You must have line of effect to the creature to command it. When you command the creature, you and the creature share knowledge but not senses.

When the creature makes a check, you make it using your game statistics, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties.

The creature lasts until it drops below 1 hit point, at which point you lose a healing surge (or hit points equal to your surge value if you have no surges left). Otherwise, it lasts until you dismiss it as a minor action or until the end of the encounter.

Primal Guardian

Level 1: The creatures of the remote deserts of the world are among the most resilient, sharing a strength that they dedicate to you in combat. Said to have no natural enemies, the giant cobra has a venomous bite that can drop prey in a heartbeat. The desert hawk is a patient predator whose swooping strikes can stagger any foe.

You can use summon natural ally to summon a giant cobra or a desert hawk.

Giant Cobra Level 1 Summoned Creature
Medium natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the cobra if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6

Standard Action (poison) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d6 + your Wisdom modifier damage plus 2d6 poison damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The cobra either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the cobra any commands by the end of your turn, it attacks an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Desert Hawk Level 1 Summoned Creature
Medium natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the hawk if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, fly 8

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Effect: Before the attack, the hawk shifts up to 2 squares.
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the hawk can slide the target 1 square.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The hawk either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the hawk any commands by the end of your turn, it attacks an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Level 15: As your power grows, you are able to call on beasts from more desolate climes, capable of surviving conditions that would slay lesser creatures. The venomous scorpion is an instinctive killer whose poison will freeze a foe in its tracks. The rare bulette is a brute of a beast, its enormous claws raking through foes or enabling it to swim through solid ground as a shark moves through water.

You can use summon natural ally to summon a bulette or a venomous scorpion.

Bulette Level 15 Summoned Creature
Large natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the bulette if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, burrow 6

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Standard Action ✦ Encounter
Attack: Close burst 1 (creatures in the burst); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the target falls prone.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The bulette either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the bulette any commands by the end of your turn, it uses its melee attack power against an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Venomous Scorpion Level 15 Summoned Creature
Large natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the scorpion if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6

Standard Action (poison) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + your Wisdom modifier poison damage, and the target is immobilized and takes ongoing 10 poison damage (save ends both).

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The scorpion either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the scorpion any commands by the end of your turn, it attacks an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Level 29: When you are at the height of the epic tier, the creatures you summon are the fiercest predators of the wastelands. A blue dragon wyrmling that answers your call is no less formidable for its relatively small size, but it overcomes its naturally wicked tendencies to do your bidding. When you summon a desert roc, you claim the allegiance of a fell bird of prey that can descend on your enemies and snatch them up before they can escape.

You can use summon natural ally to summon a blue dragon wyrmling or a desert roc.

Blue Dragon Wyrmling Level 29 Summoned Creature
Large natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the wyrmling if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 8, fly 8

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the wyrmling marks the target until the end of your next turn.

Standard Action (lightning) ✦ Encounter
Attack: Close blast 5 (creatures in the blast); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d10 + your Wisdom modifier lightning damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The wyrmling either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the wyrmling any commands by the end of your turn, it uses its melee attack power against an adjacent enemy if it can, preferring an enemy marked by it. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Desert Roc Level 29 Summoned Creature
Large natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the roc if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 8, fly 8

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the target is grabbed if the roc has fewer than two creatures grabbed. The grab lasts until the end of your next turn.
Sustain Minor: The grab persists on any creature grabbed by the roc until the end of your next turn.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The roc either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls. If the roc has a Large or smaller creature grabbed, it can pull the grabbed creature with it. The creature remains grabbed, and the roc does not provoke opportunity attacks from the grabbed creature for this movement.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the roc any commands by the end of your turn, it sustains a grab if it is grabbing a creature. If it is not grabbing a creature, it attacks an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Primal Predator

Level 1: The creatures of the wilderness live in harmony with nature, but they are fierce in defense of their territories and their young. You call on that fierceness when you summon the grizzly bear or the pack wolf to fight at your side.

You can use summon natural ally to summon a grizzly bear or a pack wolf.

Grizzly Bear Level 1 Summoned Creature
Medium natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the bear if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the target is grabbed if the bear has no creatures grabbed. The grab lasts until the end of your next turn.
Sustain Minor: The grab persists until the end of your next turn.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The bear either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the bear any commands by the end of your turn, it sustains a grab if it is grabbing a creature. If it is not grabbing a creature, it attacks an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Pack Wolf Level 1 Summoned Creature
Medium natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the wolf if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d10 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the target falls prone.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The wolf either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the wolf any commands by the end of your turn, it attacks an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Level 15: Your commitment to defending nature grants you sway over the strongest and most perilous creatures of the forest and jungle. The dire bear is a larger, primeval version of the deadly grizzly you earlier learned to tame. The hunting tiger is an enormous feral beast of the jungle, a lone stalker with fangs like daggers and a thirst for blood.

You can use summon natural ally to summon a dire bear or a hunting tiger.

Dire Bear Level 15 Summoned Creature
Large natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the bear if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the bear pushes the target up to 3 squares.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The bear either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the dire bear any commands by the end of your turn, it attacks an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Hunting Tiger Level 15 Summoned Creature
Large natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the tiger if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Effect: The tiger shifts up to 2 squares.
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the target falls prone.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The tiger either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls. If the tiger has either superior cover or total concealment when it ends this movement, it can make a Stealth check to hide with a +15 power bonus to the check.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the tiger any commands by the end of your turn, it attacks an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Level 29: The most fearsome creatures of the living world are now yours to command. The raptor behemoth is a jungle predator without peer, whose talons and fangs can bring any enemy down. The dire lion is the true king of the jungle, with a roar that can frighten its foes to death.

You can use summon natural ally to summon a dire lion or a raptor behemoth.

Dire Lion Level 29 Summoned Creature
Large natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the lion if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the target falls prone.

Standard Action (fear, thunder) ✦ Encounter
Attack: Close burst 2 (enemies in the burst); your level + 5 vs. Will
Hit: 5d8 + your Wisdom modifier thunder damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The lion either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the lion any commands by the end of your turn, it uses its melee attack power against an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Raptor Behemoth Level 29 Summoned Creature
Large natural beast

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the behemoth if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage.
Effect: If the target ends its next turn within 2 squares of the behemoth, the behemoth shifts 1 square as a free action to a square adjacent to the target and deals 15 damage to it.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The behemoth either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Instinctive Effect
If you haven't given the behemoth any commands by the end of your turn, it attacks an adjacent enemy if it can. Otherwise, it moves up to its speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.

Powers

Your protector starts with six druid powers of your choice.

- ✦ Two 1st-level druid at-will attack powers
- ✦ One 1st-level druid encounter attack power
- ✦ Three druid powers granted by the Primal Attunement feature

See the Character Advancement table (page 160) for the powers you gain as you advance in level, but rather than gaining druid daily attack powers, you gain summon natural ally.

When selecting your powers, consider the druid powers introduced in this book. Player's Handbook 2, Primal Power, and Heroes of the Forgotten Kingdoms present a variety of other druid powers to choose from.

Skills

As a druid, you walk a fine line between the natural world and the world of civilization. You need to be able to communicate with the inhabitants of both worlds, making skills such as Diplomacy and Insight important to you. Likewise, Endurance and Heal represent your time spent learning the mysteries of the natural world.

The other skills you select say something about how you fulfill your role as a member of your druid circle. If you have training in Arcana, you might have been a student of magic who abandoned that path in favor of a more natural power source. Training in History might mark you as a scholar studying the impact of humanoid encroachment on nature, or seeking insight into how the world has been shaped by cities, war, famine, and disease. If you were a farmer or a woodcutter before taking up the path of the protector, the Athletics skill reflects a life spent working the land.

Feats

Implement training feats help you maintain an edge in combat. Both Implement Focus and an expertise feat for your implement (either Staff Expertise or Totem Expertise) are straightforward feat choices that will boost your accuracy and damage.

The primal soul feats are also appropriate for a protector. Such feats not only grant good benefits in combat, they mirror your dedication to primal power and your connection to the natural world.

As a defender of nature, you might consider feats from the vigilant reflexes category. These feats reflect the eternal watchfulness you embody as part of your druid circle. When you put yourself in danger in order to further the goals of your circle, improvements to your mobility and defenses can make the difference between life and death.

Equipment

You have proficiency with the following types of armor: cloth, leather, and hide. You have proficiency with the following types of weapons: simple melee and simple ranged. You also know how to use staffs and totems as implements.

You have 100 gp to buy your starting equipment. Purchase an implement of your choice that represents your relationship to nature and your commitment to defending the natural world. Then choose your weapons and armor. You should also consider

PROTECTOR RACE CHOICES

The following races are particularly good choices for a protector druid.

Drow: Though their race enjoys a reputation as aloof spellcasters, many drow have an uncharacteristically strong connection to the power of nature. The Underdark that is their birthplace is a brutal landscape teeming with as much life as the surface world. Drow protectors are trained to deal with the deadly flora and fauna found throughout their subterranean realm, and they act as guides for their peoples' exploration of the Underdark. Those drow protectors who make their way to the surface world find that their knowledge and abilities easily translate to this less familiar world. Indeed, drow protectors often have an edge in dealing with the darker creatures and magic of nature because of their experiences beneath the earth.

Half-Elf: As a child of two races, the half-elf is a natural fit for a class that stands astride two worlds. Half-elves inherit their relationship to nature from their elf parents. They have an innate connection to the land that they share with their elf kin, enabling them to hear the whispers of the primal spirits.

Many half-elves prefer to live as loners or to dwell on the fringes of society, granting them ample opportunity to reflect on their place in the natural world. Half-elves shunned by their communities can find a new community in a druid circle, appreciating the chance to dwell among people willing to accept them for who they are.

Human: Humans make exemplary protectors, thanks largely to the versatility that is their birthright. Human protectors often come from the ranks of those who have eschewed life in the settlements of their people. Acting as emissaries between their kin and the primal spirits, they dwell along the frontier between the civilized and the natural worlds. A human protector is as flexible as the reed that bends before the blustering wind, yet remains strongly rooted to his or her ideals. In the aftermath of the fall of the Empire of Nerath, human druid circles and the protectors they train have become an increasing presence in the regions between isolated points of civilization.

Viltham and Lyrindel flee from a horde of goblins in the kingdom of Nachtur

gear for surviving in the wilderness. Though your allies no doubt have survival gear of their own, they will look to you as their guide and advisor on long treks through inhospitable terrain. Such gear lets you deal with the threats of the natural world easily, letting you reserve your magic for more important challenges.

New Druid Powers

The druid powers in this section expand on those found in Player's Handbook 2, Primal Power, and other sources. These powers are among your options when you choose druid powers of the given levels.

Level 1 At-Will Powers

Jolt of Lightning

The power of the storm is yours to command even from your first steps along the druid's path. Your jolt of lightning can balance the odds against the most opportunistic foe, curbing its ability to react in the heat of combat.

Jolt of Lightning Druid Attack 1

A bolt of lightning streaks down from empty air, crippling your foe with a numbing pulse of power.

At-Will ✦ Implement, Lightning, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d10 + Wisdom modifier lightning damage, and the target cannot take opportunity actions until the end of your next turn.
Level 21: 2d10 + Wisdom modifier damage.

Magic Stones

By imbuing mundane stones with the strength of nature, you fuel a deadly primal attack. The magic stones you create drive your enemies back as if the earth had moved beneath their feet, serving as a potent challenge to those that violate the land you are sworn to renew.

Magic Stones Druid Attack 1

Three small stones clutched in your hand glow with a green light as you throw them, then explode when they strike your foes.

At-Will ✦ Implement, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One, two, or three creatures
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d4 + Wisdom modifier damage, and you can push the target 1 square.
Level 21: 2d4 + Wisdom modifier damage.

MATIAS TAPIA

Spirit Briar Many stories tell of ghosts of departed humanoids haunting their former abodes. In the Feywild, the destruction of some primeval vines leaves behind an echo of their existence in much the same manner. Druids who have seen these spectral plants of the fey realms can mimic their appearance and create them using primal magic.

Spirit Briar — Druid Attack 1

Phantom thorns gouge the flesh of those who move against them.

At-Will ✦ Implement, Poison, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Will
Hit: 1d8 + Wisdom modifier poison damage. Choose either yourself or one ally you can see. If the target ends its next turn adjacent to the chosen character, the target takes poison damage equal to your Constitution or Dexterity modifier.
Level 21: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier damage.

Level 1 Encounter Powers

Gust of Wind This evocation subjects the power of the wind spirits to your command. Creatures caught by your attack cannot hope to stand fast, leaving enemies prone and vulnerable to your allies' follow-up attacks. The gust affects all creatures, however, so be careful that allies do not stray into its path.

Gust of Wind — Druid Attack 1

A blast of air buffets nearby creatures, hurling them backward as it drives them to the ground.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Wisdom modifier damage, and you knock the target prone.
Effect: You push the target up to 2 squares.

Insect Swarm You call forth thousands of buzzing insects that swarm around you in a tight cloud. Creatures that stand too close to you feel the brunt of their stings and bites and are hard-pressed to see you through the cloud.

Insect Swarm — Druid Attack 1

A buzzing drone fills the air as a heavy cloud of insects swirls around you.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier damage.
Effect: The area of the burst is lightly obscured for your enemies until the end of your next turn.

Wall of Smoke You draw on the power of the primal spirits of fire and air, creating a caustic haze that swirls and rises at your command. By laying down a wall of smoke at the opportune time, you can create a hazy barrier that thwarts your enemies' sight and chokes them if they try to pass through it.

Wall of Smoke — Druid Attack 1

The ground blackens as foul smoke rises in a roiling wall that shrouds the battlefield.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Poison, Primal
Standard Action Area wall 5 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the wall
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d10 + Wisdom modifier poison damage, and you can slide the target 1 square.
Effect: The wall of smoke lasts until the end of your next turn. The squares of the wall are lightly obscured, and any creature that ends its turn in the wall takes poison damage equal to your Constitution or Dexterity modifier.

BARD'S TALE: THE LADY OF THE WOOD

Once there were two princely brothers who lived in a faraway kingdom. The elder brother concerned himself with the duties of rulership and warfare. The younger hawked and hunted, for he loved the forest more than any other man in the kingdom.

One day, the younger brother came to court with a beautiful lady whom he introduced as his bride. She was tall and fair as the sunrise, with eyes as calm and golden as autumn hearth fires. When the elder brother saw her, he knew his reign would mean nothing if she were not his queen.

The next day when the young prince went hunting, the elder prince waited in ambush. As he prepared to strike, an oaken branch knocked him violently to the ground. Suddenly, standing over him was a terrible female creature of bark and vine, with blazing eyes as fierce as wildfires. It said to him, "I am the spirit of the wood, and this curse I cast on thee: Strike at thy brother, and you shall lose all you desire."

Terrified, the elder prince fled the wood. That very night he commanded that the entire forest be burned to the ground, his brother along with it.

The next morning as he walked among the cinders, the elder prince saw the beautiful lady standing alone amid the charred stumps, her eyes like smoldering embers. He reached out to touch her, and as he did so, her body turned to ash, for the lady his brother had loved was the spirit of the trees. And when his subjects saw what beauty he had destroyed, they turned on the elder prince and buried his remains in an unmarked grave.

Level 2 Utility Powers

Form of the Sprinting Elk

You take on the form of the sprinting elk, becoming a bounding creature of the forest. You can cross vast distances with ease, allowing you to outdistance your foes or come quickly to the aid of those who need you.

Form of the Sprinting Elk — Druid Utility 2

Your form shifts as you assume the guise of a great elk and quickly bound away.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Primal
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You assume the form of the sprinting elk until you take an extended rest or until you end the form as a free action. While in this form, you gain a +4 bonus to speed, but you cannot attack, manipulate objects, or use any magic item powers. Also, your gear becomes part of the form and is inaccessible.

Lesser Restoration

You call on the energy of nature's growth and resilience, channeling that energy to enable an ally to shake off the effects of combat.

Lesser Restoration — Druid Utility 2

Motes of green energy suffuse your ally, letting him or her draw strength from the essence of the world.

Daily ✦ Healing, Primal
Minor Action — Ranged 10
Target: One ally
Effect: The target can make a saving throw and spend a healing surge.

Level 3 Encounter Powers

Call the Crows

The crows that blacken the sky above a battlefield are nature's response to the wars of the mortal races. Called by your primal power, a spectral flock of such crows appears in the midst of the fray to tear at your enemies. Be wary of leaving your allies exposed, however, because the crows you call cannot tell friend from foe.

Call the Crows — Druid Attack 3

With a shrieking hiss of wings, a ghostly flock of crows descends on your enemies.

Encounter ✦ Force, Implement, Primal, Zone
Standard Action — Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier force damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that ends its turn in the zone takes force damage equal to your Constitution or Dexterity modifier.

Quills

Many animals have developed natural deterrents to predators, including spines and barbs. This power allows you to transform your body to adopt this lethal defense, striking enemies that believe they are out of range of your melee attacks.

Quills — Druid Attack 3

Poison-tipped quills emerge from your body, then shoot out to strike the foes that press you.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Poison, Primal
Standard Action — Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Wisdom modifier poison damage.
Effect: Each target is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Wind Wall

By calling on the spirits of air, you tame the winds that blow across the battlefield. This evocation creates a barrier whose strength is the swirling storm, assailing your enemies and turning aside ranged attacks with ease.

Wind Wall — Druid Attack 3

Swirling wind stirs up a wall of dust and debris, tossing your foes about and deflecting projectiles that pass through it.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal, Zone
Standard Action — Area wall 8 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in the wall
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Wisdom modifier damage, and you can slide the target 1 square.
Effect: The wall creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone grants superior cover against ranged attacks made through it that target AC or Reflex.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Level 6 Utility Powers

Meld into Stone

Though stone and rock are impassable for most creatures, you recognize and take advantage of stone's connection to the natural world. By slipping inside living rock, you create a safe haven that even the most dedicated foe struggles in vain to break.

Meld into Stone — Druid Utility 6

Your body merges with stone, letting you slip out of sight and away from harm.

Daily ✦ Primal
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift into an adjacent square occupied by an object made of stone or earth that is your size or larger, such as a wall, a statue, or a boulder. While you occupy this square, you can see normally but you do not have line of effect to anything, and nothing has line of effect to you. You remain in this state until the end of the encounter, until you end this effect as a minor action, or until the object is destroyed. When the effect ends, you appear in the nearest unoccupied square.

Nature's Stride

The bond you forge with nature lets you sense the contours of the world around you. Just as the wind shifts around rocks and trees, the primal spirits can direct you to avoid any object or obstruction that might bother you as you move.

Nature's Stride — Druid Utility 6

You gain a heightened sense of the world around you, letting you move unhindered.

Daily ✦ Primal
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: You or one ally
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, the target gains a +2 power bonus to speed and ignores difficult terrain.

Verdant Surge

Even after your resources have been expended, this evocation allows you to tap into the power held by the natural world around you. You open yourself to that reserve of primal energy, which enables you to channel again the power of life and growth.

Verdant Surge — Druid Utility 6

The power you learned at the earliest stage of your training can be unleashed again.

Daily ✦ Primal
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: Your nature's growth must be expended.
Effect: You regain the use of your nature's growth, and you can use it as a free action.

Level 7 Encounter Powers

Charm Beast

Your link with the primal spirits creates a conduit between your mind and the mind of another, granting you a connection to that creatures. Your power is most potent when used to charm the beasts of the natural world, but your will can be imposed on sentient beings as well.

Charm Beast — Druid Attack 7

You gaze hard at your foe, momentarily bringing that enemy under your control.

Encounter ✦ Charm, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Will. You gain a +2 bonus to the attack roll when using this power against a beast.
Hit: The target is dominated until the end of your next turn.
Miss: The target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Grasp of Winter

The chill winds of the distant reaches of the world are drawn forth at your command. Like a creature trapped in an icy wasteland, your foe is drained of life and frozen to the quick, unable to move as it is seized in winter's clutches.

Grasp of Winter — Druid Attack 7

A cold wind swirls around your enemy, slashing it and grasping it with icy claws.

Encounter ✦ Cold, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier cold damage.
Effect: The target is restrained until the end of your next turn.

Swarm of Scarabs

This evocation allows you to call forth a cloud of scarab beetles that swarm at your command. Filling a vast space, the scarabs feast on any creature they can find—including you and your allies, if you draw too close.

Swarm of Scarabs — Druid Attack 7

A chittering swarm of ravenous insects sprays out from your hand, covering all creatures in its path.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Wisdom modifier damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Creatures grant combat advantage while in the zone. Any creature that ends its turn in the zone takes damage equal to your Constitution or Dexterity modifier.

Level 9 Daily Power

Pain from Perseverance

Primal magic taps into the foundations of life and can be used to transform some of the most fundamental aspects of a creature's nature. Druids of the Feywild often use this evocation to strip away the defenses of malicious fey before turning their own weapons against them.

Pain from Perseverance — Druid Attack 9

Your wrath sends a bitter spirit through your foe, transforming its resistance into weakness.

Daily ✦ Implement, Primal, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier psychic damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Choose one damage type: acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. The target loses any resistances to that damage type and gains vulnerable 5 damage to that damage type (save ends both). Until the end of the encounter, your druid attack powers can deal damage of the type you chose instead of their normal damage type.

Level 10 Utility Powers

Form of the Hunting Falcon

This evocation grants you the ability of flight by transforming you into a hawk, a falcon, or a similar bird. Though being in this form might take you out of the fight, you can soar long distances with almost perfect perception of the world below you.

Form of the Hunting Falcon — Druid Utility 10

You change into a nimble bird of prey that easily soars out of reach of your foes.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Primal
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the form of the hunting falcon until you take an extended rest, or until you end this effect as a free action. While in this form, you are Small, you have a fly speed of 8, and you gain a +5 power bonus to Perception checks. However, you cannot attack, manipulate objects, or use any magic item powers.

Updraft

You have learned to whisper to the wind and have it answer your call. As long as you maintain your control over the spirits of the air, they can carry you and your allies wherever you want to go.

Updraft — Druid Utility 10

A gust of wind swirls around you, lifting you into the air.

Daily ✦ Primal
Move Action Ranged 10
Target: You or one ally
Effect: The target flies up to 5 squares.
Sustain Move: The target flies again, or you use the power on a different target.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Level 13 Encounter Powers

Bolt of Lightning

You call down the energy of the deadliest storms, channeling it through your body and unleashing it as a bolt of lightning that can leave any foe reeling.

Bolt of Lightning — Druid Attack 13

An arc of energy lances out from your hand to strike a foe.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Lightning, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Wisdom modifier lightning damage.
Effect: The target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Primeval Thunder

This evocation calls on the echo of the storms that swirled across the world during its creation. With that power at your command, you produce a pulse of thunder that explodes out from you, blasting your foes and leaving them out of position for their follow-up attacks.

Primeval Thunder — Druid Attack 13

A deafening clap of thunder unfurls around you to thrust your foes back.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal, Thunder
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d6 + Wisdom modifier thunder damage.
Effect: You push the target up to 3 squares.

Verdant Retaliation
The rise of civilization has inflicted many wounds on the world, but this evocation gives you the ability to let nature take its revenge. As the ground churns with life beneath your enemies, those foes will experience the wrath of nature firsthand.

Verdant Retaliation — Druid Attack 13

Writhing plants thrust up beneath your foes, assailing them with poisonous barbs and thorns.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Poison, Primal
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Wisdom modifier poison damage.
Effect: Each enemy in your nature's growth zone that was not hit by this power takes 10 poison damage.

Level 15 Daily Power

World-Warp
The first druids to develop this power were eladrin members of a circle guarding a fey crossing in the natural world. Their order had been founded to keep mortals from wandering into the Feywild, and they developed ways to use primal magic to manipulate the fey crossing's inherent thinness.

World-Warp — Druid Attack 15

A ripple in the natural world transports your enemy and protects you from its attack.

Daily ✦ Primal, Teleportation
Immediate Interrupt Close burst 10
Trigger: An adjacent enemy makes a melee attack against you
Target: The triggering enemy
Effect: The target and one of your allies in the burst teleport, switching places. The triggering attack now targets another creature of your choice adjacent to the target. If the triggering attack now has no legitimate target, the attack is lost.

Level 16 Utility Powers

Form of the Raven Flock
Though many evocations allow you to take on the shape of a wild beast, form of the raven flock lets you scatter your body and mind between a group of creatures. With your life force spread out in this way, you are better protected against individual attacks, and you can swarm around creatures that would block your path.

Form of the Raven Flock — Druid Utility 16

A shadow passes over you as you are scattered and reshaped, becoming a flock of ravens that quickly takes to the air.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Primal
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the form of a flock of ravens until you take an extended rest or until you end this effect as a minor action. While in this form, you have a fly speed of 6 and can move through enemies' spaces. However, you cannot attack, manipulate objects, or use any magic item powers. You take only half damage from melee attacks and ranged attacks, but you gain vulnerable 15 to close attacks and area attacks.

Level 17 Encounter Powers

Bloodthirsty Vines
The most dangerous creatures of nature are nothing in comparison to the deadly flora you command. Vines that you call forth from the earth drag your enemies closer to you as they drain those foes of life.

Bloodthirsty Vines — Druid Attack 17

Rope-like vines spring from the ground, sinking their thorns into your foes.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d10 + Wisdom modifier damage.
Effect: You pull the target up to a number of squares equal to 2 + your Constitution or Dexterity modifier.

Center of the Vortex
The eye of a storm offers a safe haven that you take advantage of when you call on the power of storms to destroy your foes. Caught in your vortex, enemies are thrown out of position and forced to watch as you teleport away from possible retribution.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Center of the Vortex — Druid Attack 17

A spiraling storm forms at your command, drawing your enemies toward its center even as you slip away.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Lightning, Primal, Teleportation, Thunder
Standard Action Close burst 3
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d6 + Wisdom modifier lightning and thunder damage, and you pull the target up to 2 squares.
Effect: You teleport up to 4 squares to a square outside the burst.

Rolling Earth By drawing primal power from the earth, you cause the ground to buck up, forcing nearby creatures away from you and leaving a wall of dirt and stone that will keep them away.

Rolling Earth — Druid Attack 17

You strike the ground with your open palm, causing it to shift and roll like the waves of an ocean storm.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Wisdom modifier damage, and you push the target up to 5 squares.
Effect: Choose up to 5 contiguous, unoccupied squares in the blast that are on a solid surface. Until the end of your next turn, those squares are blocking terrain that is up to 2 squares high.

Searing Winds You have seen much of the world in your lifetime, even as you draw primal power from places you might never visit. When you use this evocation, you reach out to the distant desert to steal the strength of a burning storm.

Searing Winds — Druid Attack 17

Drawing power from the storms of the deepest deserts, you hammer your enemies with a pulse of blistering heat.

Encounter ✦ Fire, Force, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Wisdom modifier fire and force damage.
Effect: The target is weakened until the end of your next turn.

Level 19 Attack Power

Thorns of the Hinterlands High in the mountains of Brokenstone Vale are said to be druid circles composed of lycanthropes that gather near fey crossings into the mortal realm's hinterlands. Many of these lycanthropes believe that the key to controlling their urges lies with the primal spirits of the world, and the druids' understanding of primal magic is twisted by their own shifting nature. As such, many of their evocations cause the world to transform into something more deadly, just as lycanthropes do.

Thorns of the Hinterlands — Druid Attack 19

All across the field of battle, thickets and brambles rise up to entrap your foes.

Daily ✦ Acid, Conjuration, Implement, Poison, Primal
Standard Action Area wall 12 within 20 squares
Effect: You conjure two walls of thorny, writhing vines, which cannot have any squares adjacent to each other. Each wall contains 6 of the power's 12 squares and can be up to 4 squares high. The walls must be on a solid surface, and they last until the end of your next turn. Each wall provides cover and blocks line of sight.

Entering a wall square costs 2 extra squares of movement. If a creature enters the wall's space or starts its turn there, that creature takes 1d10 + your Wisdom modifier acid and poison damage (a creature can take this damage only once per turn), and it takes ongoing 5 acid and poison damage (save ends).

Sustain Minor: The walls persist until the end of your next turn.

Level 22 Utility Powers

Wall of the World A living barrier channeled by your primal power, the wall conjured by this evocation recognizes your allies even as it holds your enemies behind an impenetrable expanse of stone and dirt, bark and vines. You can cause the wall to heal if it is damaged, thwarting your enemies' attempts to break through it.

Wall of the World — Druid Utility 22

Earth, stone, and plants rise up at your command, forming a living wall to hem in your foes.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Primal
Standard Action Area wall 12 within 10 squares
Effect: You conjure a wall of earth, trees, vines, and other plant life that lasts until the end of the encounter. The wall can be up to 6 squares high and must be on a solid surface. The wall is blocking terrain for your enemies, but your allies can move through (though not occupy) the squares of the wall. Each square of the wall can be attacked, has your defenses, has 50 hit points, and crumbles into difficult terrain if it is destroyed. As a minor action, you can repair 1 unoccupied square of wall within range that has been destroyed, causing it to be restored with 50 hit points. The whole wall crumbles into difficult terrain at the end of the encounter.

Level 23 Encounter Powers

Dominate Beast Your command over the natural world lets you reach into any creature's mind and use your primal magic to break that creature to your will.

Dominate Beast — Druid Attack 23

Your mind reaches out to touch that of your enemy, bringing that creature under your sway.

Encounter ✦ Charm, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Will. You gain a +2 bonus to the attack roll when using this power against a beast.
Hit: The target is dominated until the end of your next turn.
Miss: This power is not expended.

Ice Spikes The power of winter is yours to command. You channel icy shards that strike like a storm of daggers, slashing at your foes and pinning them in place as fast-frozen statues.

Ice Spikes — Druid Attack 23

The air swirls white before you, congealing as a blast of icy spikes that launch themselves at your foes.

Encounter ✦ Cold, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier cold damage.
Effect: Each target is restrained until the end of your next turn.

Scalding Geyser By combining the forces of water and fire, you create an attack far deadlier than either on its own. The ground shatters where you call forth a geyser of boiling water and superheated steam that scours your foes.

Scalding Geyser — Druid Attack 23

The earth cracks and breaks open at your command, releasing a fountain of searing water whose force slams your foes to the ground.

Encounter ✦ Fire, Force, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Wisdom modifier fire and force damage.
Effect: Each target falls prone.

Whipping Vines When you use this power, the spirit trees spawned at the world's creation send forth vines that do your bidding. These tendrils can turn the most well-ordered force into a shambles, sending even the largest foes careening out of position at your command.

Whipping Vines — Druid Attack 23

Flailing vines wrap themselves around an enemy you gesture to, binding that foe as they sling other enemies across the battlefield.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d10 + Wisdom modifier damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You slide the target and each of your enemies adjacent to it at the beginning of the slide up to 2 squares.

Level 25 Daily Power

Writhing Henge The great primal spirit known as the Steadfast Henge is one of the most ancient powers of the mortal world, its existence dating back to the days immediately following the Dawn War. In those days, the foundations of creation were often unstable, and the Feywild intruded upon the world for a short time. Among the primal spirits present at this intrusion was the Steadfast Henge, which has since become a patron to druid circles of both the Feywild and the natural world.

Writhing Henge — Druid Attack 25

The limbs of the Steadfast Henge protrude from the earth, flinging and rending at your command.

Daily ✦ Implement, Primal, Summoning
Standard Action Close burst 10
Effect: You summon up to six Medium briar-covered tendrils in unoccupied squares in the burst. The tendrils have a speed of 0 and are immune to being pushed, pulled, or slid. You lose a healing surge only when all the tendrils have been destroyed. You can give the tendrils the following special command. On the turn you summon the tendrils, you give this command as a part of using this power.

Standard Action: Each tendril makes an attack against a different target: Melee 2; targets one creature; Wisdom vs. Reflex; 2d8 + Wisdom modifier damage, ongoing 5 damage (save ends), and the tendril slides the target up to 3 squares.

Instinctive Effect: If you haven't given the tendrils any commands by the end of your turn, each one attacks the nearest creature within 2 squares of it, if it can.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Level 27 Encounter Powers

Barrage of Lightning

This evocation enables you to harness the might of the deadliest planar storms, letting you hurl multiple bolts of lightning at your enemies while leaving your allies unscathed. Even a foe that escapes being harmed by the storm is left reeling in the aftermath of your attack.

Barrage of Lightning — Druid Attack 27

With a clenched fist, you create an arcing storm of lightning bolts that lash and debilitate even the most resilient foes.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Lightning, Primal
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each enemy in the blast
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier lightning damage.
Effect: Each target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Cast in Stone

When your most powerful foe seizes control of the battlefield, you can negate its advantage by trapping it in an unbreakable crust of stone. By continuing to concentrate, you can hold that foe in this state, preventing it from engaging your allies.

Cast in Stone — Druid Attack 27

As you hold out one hand and lock it into a fist, your enemy is frozen in a shell of stone.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: The target is petrified until the end of your next turn.
Sustain Standard: You repeat this attack against the same target, but only if the target is still petrified by this power.

Lava Vents

This evocation reaches down into the depths of the earth, calling up the molten rock and volcanic gases that pool there. When you open up the ground to release this storm, all nearby creatures are consumed by it, so you must be careful to keep your allies at a safe distance.

Lava Vents — Druid Attack 27

Great cracks split the ground beneath your feat, venting caustic gas and lava that turns the area around you into a maelstrom.

Encounter ✦ Acid, Fire, Implement, Poison, Primal
Standard Action Close burst 3
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Wisdom modifier acid and fire damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, the area of the burst is difficult terrain, and any creature other than you that ends its turn in that area takes 15 poison damage.

Phantom Serpent

When you call on the power of this evocation, you manifest an aspect of an ancient primal spirit whose poison blinds any creature it touches. A throwback to the primal guardians of the earliest world, the phantom serpent can help debilitate even the most formidable of foes.

Phantom Serpent — Druid Attack 27

A ghostly serpent materializes and wraps around your foe, subjecting it to a poisonous bite and a blinding cloud of venom.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Poison, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Wisdom modifier poison damage.
Effect: The target is blinded until the end of your next turn.

Level 29 Daily Power

Hinterland Exile

In certain regions of the mortal realm, the walls between worlds are particularly thin, and the fabric of the world is weakened, influenced, and besieged by other worlds, including the Feywild. These regions, known to many druids as the Hinterlands, contain gaps in creation filled only with nothingness. The most powerful druids can banish creatures to this void.

Hinterland Exile — Druid Attack 29

You send your foe to a place between worlds, where the planes meet and the fabric of creation is torn by cosmic force.

Daily ✦ Force, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. Will
Hit: 5d10 + Wisdom modifier force damage, and the target is removed from play (save ends).
Third Failed Saving Throw: The effect ends, but the target is permanently trapped on another plane (DM's choice), unless the target has some means of planar travel.
Miss: Half damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).

WAYNE ENGLAND

Wizard

In the Feywild, wizards and spellcasters in general are far more common than they are in the world, thanks to the plane's strong ties to arcane magic. The following section presents new powers for wizards with a strong Feywild theme, as well as a new wizard subclass, the witch.

Witch

Arcane Controller: You practice the first, most ancient form of arcane magic, which allows you to charm, transform, and curse your enemies.

Key Abilities: Intelligence, Wisdom

Part religion, part ritual, and all mystery, witchcraft is an ancient practice that came about in an age before arcane magic was studied, institutionalized, and etched in writing, when monstrous titans ruled over creation and the secret of making fire was yet undiscovered. In this chaotic dark age, the gods had little influence on the titans' world. Instead of seeking their aid, the primitive peoples called out to the night for protection and power, and a voice from the darkness answered. Those who accepted its arcane gifts became the first witches, and they wielded such power as only immortals had known—seen by some jealous gods as an affront that they have never forgiven.

Witches gain their power from a patron who instructs them by way of a mystical familiar that comes and goes as it pleases, unbound by the strictures of the material world. The most prevalent patron among witches—the original voice from the darkness—is the moon goddess Sehanine, referred to by witches as simply the Goddess. Other entities have since seen the advantage of imbuing mortals with power, and so your patron might be an archfey, a god, an angel, a primordial, a demon lord, a devil, or another legendary being that believes it can benefit by imbuing you with a gift of arcane prowess. It might prefer to remain anonymous.

The circumstances by which you obtained your gift can vary widely. Some witches seek out the gift in order to fulfill a personal desire or vendetta, while others were brought up in a coven. Some receive their power after making a pact with a devil, as a warlock might do, and others have it bestowed upon them by a fairy godparent or a witch queen.

Though witches are common among the fey races in the Feywild, as a witch in the natural world you must be mindful of whom you trust. In the world, common folk fear your kind. Envious wizards refuse to acknowledge you as a peer and would see your wondrous powers vanish from the world, while clerics of jealous gods decree you an unholy menace, sending witch hunters to track you down and destroy you.

JIM NELSON

Creating a Witch

A witch is a type of wizard, a class introduced in the Player's Handbook. To create a witch, use the character creation rules in the Rules Compendium or the Player's Handbook. The Character Advancement table (page 160) summarizes how many powers and feats your witch should have at each level, as well as when ability scores increase.

A witch lacks some of the wizard class features from the Player's Handbook: Arcane Implement Mastery, Ritual Casting, and Spellbook. A witch gains new class features: Witch's Familiar, Moon Coven, and augury.

Witch Traits

Hit Points: You start with hit points equal to 10 + your Constitution score. You gain 4 hit points each time you gain a level.

Bonus to Defenses: +2 to Will

Healing Surges per Day: 6 + your Constitution modifier

Armor Proficiencies: Cloth

Weapon Proficiencies: Dagger, quarterstaff

Implement Proficiencies: Orbs, staffs, wands

Class Skills: Arcana (Int), Diplomacy (Cha), Dungeoneering (Wis), History (Int), Insight (Wis), Nature (Wis), Religion (Int)

Trained Skills: Arcana, plus three more from the list of class skills

Ability Scores

When you determine your ability scores, keep in mind that a witch is best served by a superior Intelligence or Wisdom score. Intelligence is the primary ability associated with arcane magic, and a high Intelligence contributes to both the accuracy and the damage of your attacks. Wisdom is a strong secondary ability, however, reflecting every witch's need to be canny, perceptive, and self-sufficient in a world that hates and fears their kind. A high Wisdom contributes to the side effects of some of your spells.

Witches tend to be loners, and most spend periods of each day in solitude living by their wits in the wilderness, gathering herbs and components for their spells or conferring with their familiars high on isolated hills or in sheltering groves beneath the moon. This constant activity makes witches hardier than most other wizards, and since some witch abilities grant the capacity to make attacks at close range and in reach of enemies' swords, your witch might benefit from a good Constitution. Your very presence unnerves and intimidates other creatures, which naturally find your eldritch powers either awe-inspiring or frightening. A good Charisma score enhances the dread or awe they experience when you intimidate or charm them.

Class Features

A witch has the following class features, starting at level 1.

Witch's Familiar

Unlike other wizards, a witch receives the gift of arcane power from a patron such as an archfey, a god, a devil, an angel, a demon, or another powerful being. The witch might or might not be aware of the patron's true identity or its reasons for bestowing power, but such entities always have their reasons, which become clear in time, for good or ill.

A witch's familiar takes the shape of a Tiny creature, usually a natural or a fey beast such as a cat, a serpent, or a raven, and acts as an intermediary between the witch and the patron of the witch's power. Bound to the witch's soul, this familiar instructs the witch in the use of supernatural powers.

Your familiar can have as active a role as you like. Familiars have a distinct personality and a unique relationship with the witches they instruct. Your familiar might provide hints and lore, or it might be a subtle presence in the background that appears and disappears without a sound, if you prefer to downplay its role in your story.

Benefit: You gain the Arcane Familiar feat (page 126) as a bonus feat.

At the end of each extended rest, when you confer with your familiar you can replace one of your wizard daily attack powers or wizard utility powers with another wizard power of the same type. The new power must have a level, and its level must be the same as the old power's level.

When you reach level 24, your familiar enables you to spend an action point on your turn to regain the use of one of your expended wizard encounter attack powers, instead of taking an extra action. If you do so, you gain combat advantage against every target of that power the next time you use it during the current encounter.

Witch Cantrips

A witch knows a few tricks at the outset of his or her career that can be of great use even when other potent eldritch powers are also at the witch's disposal.

Benefit: You gain three cantrips of your choice. (This book includes the chameleon's mask cantrip. See Heroes of the Fallen Lands or the Player's Handbook for other cantrip options.)

Moon Coven

When you create your witch, you choose a moon coven with which you are affiliated. A moon coven is a loose order of witches that share a philosophy of witchcraft. Each moon coven represents one of two phases of the moon—full or dark (new)—and symbolizes the witch's quintessential attitude toward the application of his or her craft. Each moon coven reflects a member witch's philosophy regarding the use of magic—not necessarily corresponding to the witch's alignment, since witches of all alignments are found in each coven. Nevertheless, a greater number of evil witches gravitate toward the dark moon and its powers over ill fortune and necromancy, whereas good witches more frequently affiliate themselves with the full moon coven and favor its charms and healing magic.

Nistyncia commands a bewitched werewolf in the Brokenstone Vale to defend her, while Keldar attempts to break through the door to a dungeon

Witches are solitary by nature, requiring little arcane instruction beyond the teachings of their familiar, and most prefer to keep their craft secret lest they be targeted by witch hunters. Therefore, a moon coven typically convenes only once during the course of a year, in an isolated location in the wilderness often near standing stones, ley lines, or other sites that thrum with arcane power, on an evening when the coven's moon phase displays in its ideal state in the dark heavens above. Despite their opposing philosophies on witchcraft, the two moon covens sometimes come together on the night of a lunar eclipse, when both are symbolically represented in the night sky. Such meetings occur only when all witches, or the world in which they live, are threatened by forces bent on their extermination.

In addition to, or instead of, meeting with their moon coven, some witches gather in local covens attended by witches that inhabit the area. Such local covens are often the way new witches are initiated into the craft, and they show the initiate the way to call on a powerful entity and receive the gift of its power in the form of a familiar. These local covens usually have their own aims and goals related to their immediate surroundings, and might or might not adhere to the philosophy of either of the moon covens.

Many witches learn their craft in isolation, unaware of the presence of the fundamental moon covens, or even of other witches. Regardless of whether a witch or a local coven identifies with a moon coven, every witch makes a choice concerning the type of witchcraft he or she wants to practice.

Benefit: Choose a coven, and gain its benefits.

Dark Moon Coven

The witches of the dark moon coven believe that the night is a witch's birthright. Powers over fate and darkness are theirs to command, and they strive to further their own ends at any cost. Good dark moon witches use their powers of fear, terror, and darkness against the wicked, whereas evil dark moon witches blight those that cross them with ill fortune and plague, heedless of the mortal lives that fall in their wake. Dark moon witches call on the tides and the night winds and summon the dead from their graves; they conjure objects from nowhere, or imbue them with momentary life.

Benefit: You gain the dread presence power (page 92).

In addition, you gain training in the Intimidate skill. At level 5, you gain a +2 bonus to Intimidate checks and Stealth checks.

MARK WINTERS

WORLDS WITH MANY MOONS

Some worlds, including Athas of the Dark Sun campaign setting and the world of the Eberron setting, have multiple moons, which has an impact on the nature of moon covens on those worlds. For a witch in one of these settings, you have several options for describing how the multiple moons interact with your moon coven. Here are two suggestions to help you reconcile multiple moons and your coven.

Single Moon: You focus your attention on one of the moons. This means that you are accustomed to a regular rhythm of ebb and flow in the world. You and others of your coven are likely patient and able to think long-term, and you don't let setbacks slow you down. After all, it's only a matter of time before the moon changes phases again. You make plans, watch for signs of change, and take no action without careful consideration.

All Moons are Equal: Your coven treats all of your world's moons equally, meaning that at any given time you have one moon full, one moon new, and others waxing or waning. As a result, you and other members of your coven are often seen as mercurial at best, or conflicted and contradictory at worst. Your eyes constantly flit to the heavens at night, and every day brings a different mood upon you.

Full Moon Coven Witches of the full moon coven believe in the sanctity of life, the tidal pull of love, and the capacity of pure beauty to enchant the eye. These witches use their powers to beguile, charm, and inspire. Many full moon witches are kind and good; others are stark, aloof, and compassionless, idealizing the image of beauty and grace but not the heart of it. When they manifest their power, full moon witches awe allies and enemies alike with the celestial majesty of their presence.

Benefit: You gain the glorious presence power (page 92).

In addition, you gain training in the Heal skill. At 5th level, you gain a +2 bonus to Heal checks and Diplomacy checks.

Augury Because of their intimate connection with powerful otherworldly entities, witches are well versed in the arcane arts of fortune telling and prophecy. The witch's familiar instructs them in the means to look deep into the spirit world and see the patterns and images that reveal the future. Some learn to read runes, decks of cards, tea leaves, knucklebones, or weather patterns. Some gaze into crystal balls or boiling cauldrons, and some channel spirits directly into their bodies, which foretell the future. As a witch, your method of prophecy might be one of these or it could be a ritual of your own devising. Witches are said to achieve the most favorable results beneath the light of the moon.

Augury Wizard Utility

You read the mystic signs and glean a notion of the future.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Standard Action Personal
Requirement: You must use this power during an extended rest.
Effect: You ask a question and receive a vague notion of the future. You might receive a clue as to whether a specific course of action is likely to have positive or negative results. This notion can take the form of a single image, a hint about a danger that might be faced, or just a positive or negative feeling about the current course of destiny.

Powers

Your witch starts with six wizard powers of your choice:

- ✦ Two 1st-level wizard at-will attack powers
- ✦ One 1st-level wizard daily attack power
- ✦ Three wizard cantrips granted by the feature Witch Cantrips

Your 1st-level wizard encounter attack power is determined by your Moon Coven choice. See the Character Advancement table (page 160) for the powers you gain as you advance in level.

When selecting your powers, consider the wizard powers introduced in this book, which include many of the magical effects witches display in folklore. The Player's Handbook, Arcane Power, and Heroes of the Fallen Lands present a variety of other wizard powers to choose from.

Skills

Novice witches keep the secret of their craft well hidden, preferring to spend time in the wilds gathering herbs and spell components for complicated charms rather than socializing with the locals in village taverns or discussing magical theory among the academic elite. Despite that fact, many witches are cunningly persuasive, choosing training in the Diplomacy skill, their wits sharpened by perilous

WITCH RACE CHOICES

The following races make good choices for a witch character.

Hamadryad: Blessed with the accumulated wisdom of ancient trees that nightly stretch their branches toward the moon, hamadryads take naturally to the arts of witchcraft. Charm magic is inherent to hamadryads, whose spellbinding beauty enhances the witch's ability to make others do her bidding. Hamadryads dwell in harmony with the birds and tiny beasts of the wood, and learning to adopt such familiar shapes comes easily to them.

As a hamadryad, magic runs deep in the roots of your heritage. Your grandmothers were the seasons themselves, and you received their gift under the light of Sehanine's moon. Alternatively, you might have been granted the gift of your magic from an archfey such as the Summer Queen or the Prince of Frost.

Are you a witch who snares the minds of others with your spells, or one who brings the power of the night down upon those that incur your wrath? Did you leave your home to battle those who would destroy the woodlands, or did you accept the gift of magic to aid you in pursuit of a quest or to help you unravel the riddle of mortal thought and emotion?

Human: Outside the Feywild, most witches originate in rural villages and the wild borderlands far removed from civilized centers of arcane learning.

Humans become witches for a variety of reasons. Many seek a quick path to power, burning with ambition. Ordinary folk desperate for harmony in a brutal world of monsters, famine, and strife gain some measure of control over their lives with the abilities witchcraft bestows upon them. Others are seduced by devious entities that grant them power in order to terrorize an unwary populace.

As a human witch, you most likely keep your power a secret. Word of strange doings spreads quickly, and you have heard tales of how ordinary folk accused of being witches for the most trivial of reasons were captured and executed by frightened mobs seeking a scapegoat for their troubles.

Unlike the witches of the Feywild, who usually receive their gift from Sehanine or the archfey, human witches are endowed with power from any number of sources, not the least of which include devils and demon lords. For this reason, witches in the world have an evil reputation, and clerics of many deities hunt and destroy witches of any kind.

interactions with fey beings and otherworldly entities.

Your exploits in the natural world, studying its flora and fauna, might give you an expert grasp of the Nature skill. It is also likely that through the rituals you learned to call your familiar, you gained insight into the nature of immortal entities that promise power to witches, from gods to devils. The Religion skill reflects this choice, and gives you the ability to identify undead.

Feats

Since you use an implement, consider feats from the implement training category. Implement Focus or one of the expertise feats, such as Orb Expertise, can make your attack powers even more potent. Likewise, feats from the quick reaction category, such as Improved Initiative, allow you to unleash your spells before your enemies can react, giving you an edge at the start of combat. Witches have a number of abilities that move them into close contact with their foes. You might consider taking Toughness, Improved Defenses, or Defensive Mobility to give yourself a better chance of escaping close encounters.

Equipment

Witches are proficient with cloth armor. Many simply wear robes, gowns, or traveling clothes. As for weapons, you have proficiency with the dagger and the quarterstaff, but you rarely use them; your powers of witchcraft are far greater than any mere weapon.

You start with 100 gp to buy your starting equipment, as normal. Purchase a dagger or a quarterstaff for contingencies, but you should otherwise spend your money on adventuring gear and supplies of use to you and your allies.

You use an implement—an orb, a staff, or a wand—as a conduit for your spells. Magic implements add to your attack rolls and damage rolls with your arcane powers, just as magic weapons do to weapon powers. You should purchase the proper implement if you have taken one of the implement training feats. Perhaps your witch uses an orb like a crystal ball that you gaze into to make predictions and prophecies, or maybe you possess a willow wand made from the bark of an infamous dryad witch, or a staff that manifests the face of every creature you have cursed patterned in the wood grain. When you choose to play a witch, you're playing a character who possesses exciting story-focused abilities such as the ability to instantly turn an enemy into a frog, so your equipment should have an equally interesting story flavor or personality.

New Wizard Powers

The powers in this section expand on those found in the Player's Handbook and other sources. They can be selected by any wizard of the appropriate level.

Cantrips

Chameleon's Mask

This cantrip lets you put your arcane learning to practical use, bending light and sound to make you almost invisible. Wizards use this power to hide from strong creatures that get too close, or to spy on creatures that happen to wander into their lairs.

Chameleon's Mask — Wizard Utility

You pull strands of shadow, blending your colors and sounds with your surroundings to help you hide from your enemy's sight and hearing.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Illusion
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You make a Stealth check.
Effect: You make an Arcana check instead, using that result to determine the outcome of the Stealth check.

Level 1 At-Will Powers

Beast Switch

Some polymorph spells can transform a creature from one form to another for a moment, and others for all time. Beast switch contains only the barest essence of a transformation spell, ideal for transforming a foe just long enough to confound it and take advantage of its disorientation.

Beast Switch — Wizard Attack 1

You reach out to touch your foe, and for an instant it transforms into a small, frightened beast that runs in a wild panic before returning to its true shape.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Implement, Psychic, Transmutation
Standard Action Melee 1
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage. You knock the target prone and can slide it 1 square. The target cannot make opportunity attacks until the end of your next turn.
Level 21: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.

Breath of Night

Whether you stand in the fastness of a sunny elven grove or in a dark cavern beneath the surface of the world, the night wind knows your voice, and you can call it to your command.

Breath of Night — Wizard Attack 1

At your whisper, the chill night wind answers, a forceful gust that heeds your will.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Cold, Evocation, Implement
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d6 + Intelligence modifier cold damage, and you push the target up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Level 21: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier cold damage.

Winged Horde

A wizard, and particularly a witch, cultivates knowledge from practical experience, and your study of (or perhaps unpleasant contact with) the tiny but vicious sprites of the Feywild has given you new fodder for creating nightmare visions in the minds of your enemies.

Winged Horde — Wizard Attack 1

A horde of flesh-devouring sprites appears in your foes' minds. The enemies shriek in horror and swat at the menace, leaving them unable to react to your allies' maneuvers.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Illusion, Implement, Psychic
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d6 psychic damage, and the target cannot take opportunity actions until the end of your next turn.
Level 21: 2d6 psychic damage.

Witch Bolt

You have mastered the ability to create bolts of energy and hurl them against your enemies. Wizards use this spell to ward off enemies that approach too closely, or to punish a foe that does not have the ability to escape.

Witch Bolt — Wizard Attack 1

You hurl a bolt of crackling energy, forming a line of lightning between you and your foe.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Evocation, Implement, Lightning
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d10 + Intelligence modifier lightning damage.
Level 21: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier lightning damage.
Sustain Standard: Reroll the damage and deal it to the target again. Once the target is out of range, you can't sustain this power.

Level 1 Encounter Powers

Dread Presence

Spellcasters from the Feywild have mastered the art of appearing to be more frightening than they are, scaring off enemies with a presence so terrifying that it causes pain in the minds of those who look on the caster.

Dread Presence — Wizard Attack 1

Your shadow lengthens and grows, looming over your enemies and overcoming them with dread.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Fear, Implement, Necrotic, Nethermancy, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d10 + Intelligence modifier necrotic damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy that ends its turn in the zone takes necrotic damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Special: All damage from this attack and its effect ignores 5 points of necrotic resistance.

Glorious Presence

The Sidhe lords and other eladrin nobility are often described as having the epitome of regal bearing. Many eladrin learn to project a strong presence that inspires awe and wonder in those who look upon them, so much so that the eladrin seem to burn brightly with pure silver energy. As happened with many eladrin secrets, it did not take long for knowledge of this spell to spread to other races.

Glorious Presence — Wizard Attack 1

Radiant moonlight streams from you in all directions, and those who behold you are stricken with awe.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Charm, Enchantment, Implement, Radiant
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier radiant damage, and you push the target up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Effect: You and each ally in the burst gain temporary hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Level 1 Daily Powers

Bewitching Charm

When the mind is seized by a strange attraction or dazed under the influence of a spell, a person is said to be bewitched. Bewitching charm defines this effect, overtaking the senses and captivating the subject, setting its mind to wander as if in a dream.

Bewitching Charm — Wizard Attack 1

You chant the twisting words of the bewitching charm, lulling your foes into a waking dream.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Charm, Enchantment, Implement
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: The target is dazed (save ends).
First Failed Saving Throw: The target is instead dazed and immobilized (save ends both).
Miss: The target cannot make opportunity attacks until the end of your next turn.

Charm of Forbiddance

The charm of forbiddance places a punishing hex on a creature that intends you harm. Whenever it tries to resist the charm and make an attack, it suffers the same pain it means to inflict.

Charm of Forbiddance — Wizard Attack 1

Your voice tremulous with thunder, you invoke the charm of forbiddance on your enemy. With each further attack it makes against you, it howls its torment.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Charm, Enchantment, Implement, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.
Miss: Half damage.
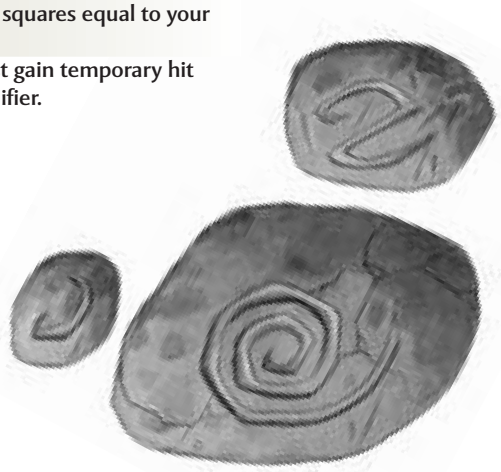
Effect: The target takes psychic damage equal to 2 + your Wisdom modifier whenever it hits or misses you or one of your allies (save ends).



WAYNE ENGLAND

Level 2 Utility Powers

Charm of Protection

In moments of desperation, a wizard can hastily summon objects to block an attack that might otherwise have proved fatal. The charm of protection places a physical barrier between the wizard and the coming blow and grants a slight amount of magical protection.

Charm of Protection Wizard Utility 2

The instant before a blow connects, your spell interposes a spectral object in its path.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: You are hit by an attack.
Effect: You gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses against the attack, and you gain temporary hit points equal to 2 + your Wisdom modifier.

Herbal Healing

Some wizards, and most witches, are famous for their knowledge of magical herbs and poultices that harm and heal. Wild plants and restorative herbs prepared with a healing incantation can ease pain and aid in the recovery of an ally's stamina.

Herbal Healing Wizard Utility 2

Using a mix of herbal lore and witchcraft, you work a spell that binds a wound.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Melee 1
Prerequisite: You must have training in Heal.
Target: One creature
Effect: The target can make a saving throw and use his or her second wind if it is available.

Simple Animation

Many wizards are solitary folk. In order to weed gardens, wash clothing, and organize herbs and spell components, they learn to animate ordinary objects and set them to tasks. In magical duels, they move such items to take shelter behind them, or to deny such protection to their opponents.

Simple Animation Wizard Utility 2

At your command, an ordinary object springs to life and moves where you bid.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Move Action Ranged 10
Target: One Medium or smaller object that is not fastened in place or held by a creature
Effect: The target animates until the end of your next turn, and you slide it up to 5 squares. While the target is animated by this power, you can move it farther by sliding it up to 5 squares as a move action.
Sustain Move: The animation persists until the end of your next turn, and you slide the target up to 5 squares.

Level 3 Encounter Powers

Call the Night Winds

In the night, beneath the moon, it is said that witches are at their most powerful. You have learned to call the night winds to you and to swirl them about you in a flurry of darkness that grants protection from your foes.

Call the Night Winds Wizard Attack 3

Howling night winds spiral around you, blotting out light, chilling your foes, and heeding your every command.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold, Evocation, Implement, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier cold damage.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone is heavily obscured to creatures other than you, and any creature but you that starts its turn in the zone is slowed until the end of its next turn.

Grim Shadow

Those that stand before you cower beneath the shadow you cast. Deeper and darker than any ordinary play of the light, it originates in the Shadowfell, and you can extend it to tower over your foes, freezing the blood in their veins.

Grim Shadow Wizard Attack 3

Reaching into the Shadowfell, you cast a tangible, looming shadow that strikes fear into the living.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Fear, Implement, Necrotic, Nethermancy
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier necrotic damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.
Effect: Each target takes a -2 penalty to Will until the end of your next turn.

Level 5 Daily Powers

Foe to Frog In stories and folk tales, witches transform unfortunate mortals into toads, mice, and other tiny animals. Foe to frog turns a powerful threat into a tiny, harmless creature of the wizard's choice.

Foe to Frog — Wizard Attack 5

A billowing cloud of green fog surrounds your foe. When the fog dissipates, your enemy is gone, and a minuscule creature such as a frog, a newt, or a mouse stands in its place.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Implement, Polymorph, Transmutation
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: The target turns into a Tiny beast of your choosing (save ends).
Miss: The target turns into a Tiny beast of your choosing until the end of its next turn.
Effect: As a Tiny beast, the target is dazed, and the only actions it can take are to move its speed or shift. All of the target's equipment transforms with it. If it takes damage from any source, this effect ends.

Savage Transformation When you cast savage transformation, you turn your target into a bestial, half-humanoid monster driven by savage instincts. Use this power when your target is surrounded by its allies, forcing your enemy to choose between movement and taking damage from its friends. A brute is an especially good target for this power.

Savage Transformation — Wizard Attack 5

You warp your enemy's form, changing it into a monster covered with coarse fur or scales, the flames of savagery burning in its eyes.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Implement, Polymorph, Transmutation
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and you partially transform the target's mind and body into that of a savage monster (save ends). Until this transformation ends, the target must make an opportunity attack against any creature that willingly leaves a square adjacent to it, and if any creature ends its turn adjacent to the target, the target must use a free action to deal damage to that creature equal to 5 + your Intelligence modifier.
Miss: Half damage, and the target must make an opportunity attack against any creature that willingly leaves a square adjacent to it until the end of your next turn.

Level 6 Utility Powers

Evanesce When a wizard casts this spell, he or she does not reappear immediately. Some believe that you exist for a moment removed completely from time and space.

Evanesce — Wizard Utility 6

The instant you feel your enemy's attack, you vanish in a puff of black smoke.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Zone
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: You are damaged by an attack.
Effect: You are removed from play until the start of your next turn. The space you vacate becomes a zone that is heavily obscured and lasts until the end of the encounter. At the start of your next turn, you reappear in a square of your choice up to 5 squares from the zone.

BARD'S TALE: THE FOOLISH PRINCE

Once upon a time there was a young, brash, and spoiled eladrin prince whose parents left their home to join the court of the Summer Queen, bequeathing their castle in the Feywild to him. One day, a traveler arrived at the gates of his castle. The foolish prince ordered his soldiers to turn the traveler away, but they refused his order, and instead escorted the man into the prince's audience chamber. The man was old and gnarled, like an ancient tree, and wore furs and a tattered suit of leather armor. The man introduced himself as a bard from the mortal realm, and requested food and shelter for the night. The prince refused and personally threw the bard out of the castle, mocking him the entire way.

Months passed until the day that the prince found his castle besieged by cyclopses. The prince sent messengers to nearby castles, requesting help, but they were refused. When the walls of the castle fell, the prince and his retainers fled into the forest. There, they came upon a group of satyrs, lounging by the riverbank, and asked for shelter. The satyrs also refused him. Finally, days later, the prince and his few remaining retainers arrived at Senaliesse. Falling to his knees at his parents' feet, the young prince said, "Forgive me, I could not hold your castle when none would come to my aid."

His father looked down upon him, then turned his back, saying, "I have no son. My son died the day he refused hospitality to a bard and lost the respect of the entire kingdom."

To even the odds against a pair of cyclops guards, a witch changes one of them into a frog

JIM NELSON

Oracular Maneuver

With their powers of prophecy, witches witness brief flashes of events that might come to pass. Oracular maneuver enables you to take action in response to such a vision.

Oracular Maneuver — Wizard Utility 6

You witnessed this encounter in a dream, and you told your companions that it would come to pass.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Immediate Reaction Close burst 5
Trigger: An enemy ends its turn within 5 squares of you.
Effect: You and each ally in the burst can shift 1 square as a free action.

Revitalizing Charm

With a sprinkled handful of dried herbs and a brief incantation, you cause the subject of your spell to reach deep into his or her reserves of inner strength.

Revitalizing Charm — Wizard Utility 6

You crumble enchanted herbs between your fingers and command your flagging companion to steel herself or himself for battle.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: You or one ally
Effect: You remove one effect from the target that a save can end.

Level 7 Encounter Powers

Puckish Sprite

The puckish sprite spell conjures forth a glimmering fey creature, or at least an impressive simulacrum of one, that grabs an enemy and whisks it a short distance away, causing it to attack one of its companions. Before the sprite vanishes, it dances around, taunts your enemies, and otherwise distracts them from their tasks.

Puckish Sprite — Wizard Attack 7

You call forth a mischievous fey creature, aglow with fairy light and as meddlesome as a satyr.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Conjuration, Implement, Radiant
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 1d10 + Intelligence modifier radiant damage. You slide the target up to 2 squares, and it makes a basic attack as a free action against a creature of your choice.
Effect: You conjure a puckish sprite in an unoccupied square adjacent to the target. The sprite lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy of yours adjacent to the sprite takes a -4 penalty to attack rolls.

Vile Vermin

This spell causes swarms of skittering, crawling creatures to answer the spellcaster's call. These creatures bite, sting, and nip at a chosen foe, harrying enemies that get too near to the swarm.

Vile Vermin — Wizard Attack 7

The ground seems to burst upward as a surge of centipedes, beetles, rats, and snakes work their way to the surface around your foe.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Implement, Poison
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier poison damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, any enemy that ends its turn adjacent to the target takes 5 poison damage.

Level 9 Daily Powers

Fool's Charm

The fool's charm sends a creature carelessly wandering about, heedless of any possible danger. Wizards who wish to rid themselves of troublemakers place the charm upon them and send them out near cliffs, down into mine shafts, or into the sea.

Fool's Charm — Wizard Attack 9

You turn your implement round and round, invoking the words to the charm that will rob your enemy of all tactical sense.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Charm, Enchantment, Implement, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and you slide the target up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier. The target also takes ongoing 5 psychic damage (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: You slide the target up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Miss: Half damage, and you slide the target up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Hex of Madness

Mortal creatures seldom realize how close their fragile minds rest to the brink of madness. This power nudges them over the edge.

Hex of Madness — Wizard Attack 9

You incite a mob of your enemies, turning them into a frenzy of raving madness.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Enchantment, Implement, Psychic, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d12 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Each enemy that ends its turn in the zone takes psychic damage equal to 2 + your Intelligence modifier.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 10 Utility Powers

Witch Thorns

Your expertise with plants, herbs, and the powers of transformation has given you insight into a spell that creates a climbing wall of twisting black thorns that expands and grows madly in all directions. Many a witch has cast this spell to bar intruders or to create a temporary shelter in the wild.

Witch Thorns — Wizard Utility 10

As you utter the command word, the vegetation at your feet writhes like snakes, twisting into a high wall of black thorns that snag those who try to pass through it.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Transmutation, Zone
Standard Action Area wall 3 within 10 squares
Effect: The wall creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. The zone can be up to 4 squares high and must be on a solid surface. The zone can provide partial cover and blocks line of sight. The zone is difficult terrain, and when any enemy attempts to leave a square in the zone, the creature must succeed on a saving throw or be immobilized until the start of its next turn. Once per round as a minor action, you can expand or contract the zone by 2 squares in any direction.
Special: If the zone is created in an area of natural vegetation, the zone's squares can be attacked, and it doesn't vanish at the end of the encounter, instead remaining until destroyed. Each square of the zone has 25 hit points and vulnerable 10 fire and can be hit automatically by any attack, but it is immune to forced movement, all conditions, and attacks that target Will.

Level 13 Encounter Powers

Improved Dread Presence

Fear can be a potent power in any spellcaster's arsenal. When you unleash the fury of your presence upon your enemies, you not only make them want to flee before you, but can also cause them to quake with such fear that they seem unable to do more than cringe at the sight of you.

Improved Dread Presence — Wizard Attack 13

You become a great shadow made manifest, a thing of nightmare that causes your enemies to cower before you.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Fear, Implement, Necrotic, Nethermancy, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier necrotic damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy that ends its turn in the zone takes necrotic damage equal to your 5 + your Wisdom modifier.
Special: All damage from this attack and its effect ignores the first 10 points of necrotic resistance.

Keldar sits enchanted upon a throne of thorns in the Brokenstone Vale, while Nistyncia attempts to drag him away before gas fills the chamber

MARK WINTERS

Improved Glorious Presence

When you release the energy bound within you, it no longer flashes quickly and vanishes. Instead, the very world around you seems to warp with the impression you made on it, causing vestiges of your prowess to linger long enough to inspire your allies.

Improved Glorious Presence Wizard Attack 13

The bright light of the full moon erupts from within you, leaving thousands of glittering motes of faint light lingering nearby.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Charm, Enchantment, Implement, Radiant
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 3d6 + Intelligence modifier radiant damage, and you push the target up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.
Effect: You and each ally in the burst gain temporary hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier + one-half your level.

Level 15 Daily Powers

Charm of the Dark Dream

You can change into the form of a dream to haunt your enemies and drive them to madness and murder. Wizards in the Shadowfell cast this spell to eliminate their enemies without a trace.

Charm of the Dark Dream Wizard Attack 15

As a wisp of black smoke, you enter your enemy's mind and control it with sinister whispers.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Charm, Enchantment, Implement, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is dominated (save ends). Until the domination ends, you are removed from play. You can end the domination at the start of your turn. When you return to play, you appear in an unoccupied space within 5 squares of the target.
Miss: Half damage, and you are removed from play until the start of your next turn. When you return to play, you appear in an unoccupied space within 5 squares of the target.

Hex of Woe

The hex of woe is used by wizards to make themselves appear mighty before their enemies. The charm quenches the spirit of your enemy, removing its will to fight, thus granting your allies a momentary advantage.

Hex of Woe — Wizard Attack 15

When you complete the spell, your foe resigns itself to the chill of death, leaving holes in its defenses.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Cold, Implement, Necromancy, Necrotic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 4d10 + Intelligence modifier cold and necrotic damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target gains vulnerable 5 to all damage (save ends).

Level 16 Utility Powers

Mare's Body

When you need to travel swiftly across the battlefield or make a quick overland journey, mare's body grants you additional legs. You can even transport a companion who can fight from your back.

Mare's Body — Wizard Utility 16

You partially transform your body into that of a swift horse, a monstrous spider, a scaly lizard, or an even stranger creature.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Polymorph, Transmutation
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you transform your body from the waist down into the body of a creature with more than two legs, such as a horse, a lizard, or a giant spider. While in this form, you retain your equipment and gain +4 power bonus to speed. When you move willingly, you can choose one adjacent ally, and for each square you move you can pull that ally 1 square. Your size category also increases by one (from Medium to Large, for instance); however, your weapons do not grow, and when you use a close power, you must choose a single square in your space as its origin square. You can end this form as a minor action.

Tides of Fate

As the beneficiary of arcane might from a powerful entity, you can call upon it to sway the balance of fortune in your favor. As the moon pulls the tides of the ocean, so you bring luck back to your allies, just as those who oppose you learn too late that it is bad luck indeed to tangle with you.

Tides of Fate — Wizard Utility 16

With a cry to your mighty patron, you alter the course of fate, turning the tables on your enemies.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Aura
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 3 that lasts until you end it as a minor action or until you fall unconscious. Any ally who fails a skill check in the aura gains a +2 bonus the next time he or she makes the same kind of skill check, and any ally who fails a saving throw in the aura gains a +2 power bonus to his or her next saving throw. Any enemy in the aura that hits you or an ally in the aura grants combat advantage until the end of its next turn.

Level 17 Encounter Powers

Choking Shadow

Some witches can draw upon the dark of moonless nights to animate their own shadows with necrotic energy. Many a murder has been committed in this way, with shadows materializing above their sleeping victims and strangling them before drifting away to reunite with their masters.

Choking Shadow — Wizard Attack 17

Your shadow separates from you and flits across the ground to throttle your enemy with spindly talons made of freezing darkness.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold, Conjuration, Implement, Necrotic, Nethermancy
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Effect: You conjure your shadow in an unoccupied square adjacent to the target. The shadow lasts until the end of your next turn or until the target is not adjacent to it. The shadow then makes the following attack against the target.
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier cold and necrotic damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Half damage, the target is slowed until the end of your next turn, and you cannot sustain the shadow.
Sustain Standard: The shadow persists until the end of your next turn or until the target is not adjacent to it, and the shadow repeats the attack against the target.

Night Tempest

Now that you have mastered the night wind, you can control its temper, inciting it to destruction or calming it to a gentle breeze. When enemies press upon you, you can call down a windstorm to sweep them away.

Night Tempest — Wizard Attack 17

Your will is as strong as the chilling wind that comes at your call, grasping your enemies and tossing them like toys.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold, Evocation, Implement
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier cold damage, and you push the target up to 5 squares and knock it prone.
Miss: Half damage, and you can push the target 1 square.

Level 19 Daily Powers

Fragile Form

Wizards use fragile form to transform their enemies into dolls made of flimsy, easily destroyed materials. A spark or a flame typically consumes such creatures so quickly that there is little left of them by the time the spell has run its course. A wizard typically reserves this spell for an enemy that poses so great a threat it must be eliminated quickly.

Fragile Form — Wizard Attack 19

With a word, you transform your enemy's body into a living doll made of glass, dry paper, or threadbare cloth.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Implement, Polymorph, Transmutation
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and you transform the target's physical form into glass, paper, cloth, or another fragile material (save ends). Until the transformation ends, the target is slowed and the target gains your choice of vulnerable 10 to all damage or vulnerable 15 fire.
Miss: Half damage, and the target gains vulnerable 5 to all damage (save ends).

Mass Transformation

Your mastery of shapechanging nearly complete, you can now cast spells you learned long ago in the form of powerful incantations strong enough to reduce armies to flopping, scurrying creatures. Mass transformation removes several enemies from the battlefield, allowing you to concentrate on one threat at a time.

Mass Transformation — Wizard Attack 19

When you utter the powerful command, your foes disappear in plumes of smoke, to be replaced by frogs, mice, hermit crabs, or some other tiny creatures.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Implement, Polymorph, Transmutation
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 20 squares
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: The target turns into a Tiny beast of your choice (save ends).
Aftereffect: The target takes 3d8 + your Intelligence modifier damage from the transformation.
Miss: The target turns into a Tiny beast of your choice until the end of its next turn.
Effect: As a Tiny beast, the target is dazed, and the only actions it can take are to move its speed or shift. All of the target's equipment transforms with it. If it takes damage from any source, this effect ends.

Level 22 Utility Powers

Preserving Sleep

The powerful preserving sleep spell places an enchantment on the subject at the moment death would take it, putting it in a deep slumber until it can be awakened to life. Some wizards cast the spell on themselves, sleeping through the ages to reawaken in an unsuspecting world that believed them to be only legends.

Preserving Sleep — Wizard Utility 22

With words as soft as falling grains of sand, your spell places the subject into a deep slumber, preserving it from death.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Immediate Interrupt Ranged 20
Trigger: You or an ally within 20 squares of you dies.
Target: The triggering character
Effect: The target does not die. All harmful effects end on him or her, and the target's hit points reset to 0. The target falls into a stasis that resembles sleep. In this state, the target does not age, although he or she can be killed, and the target is immune to hunger, thirst, poison, disease, and suffocation. This stasis lasts until the target is healed.

Umbral Stride

With this power you transform your being into shadow substance, allowing you to merge with the darkness and transport yourself from one creature's shadow to another. Where the veil between shadow and the world is thin, some wizards use this power to cross freely between planes.

Umbral Stride — Wizard Utility 22

You change into an insubstantial entity that flits from shadow to shadow.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Nethermancy, Teleportation
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you are phasing, and you can use a move action to teleport up to 10 squares to a square adjacent to a creature that you can see.
Sustain Minor: The effect persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 23 Encounter Powers

Brutish Construct

Many wizards spend months or years laboring over the construction of artificial guardians. This spell enables you to bring together pieces of debris, discarded materials, and anything else that is lying around to build such a construct on the fly. This construct is stable enough to last for only a short time, but before the bindings that hold it together dissipate, it is capable of landing at least one great blow.

Brutish Construct — Wizard Attack 23

Pieces of debris and discarded fragments fly together to form a lumbering construct that obeys your commands.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Conjuration, Implement
Standard Action Ranged 5

Effect: You conjure a construct in an unoccupied square in range that lasts until the end of your next turn. The construct occupies its square, and while you are adjacent to the construct, any enemy that ends its turn adjacent to it takes 15 damage. When the construct appears, it makes the following attack.

Target: One creature adjacent to the construct
Attack: Intelligence vs. AC
Hit: 4d10 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the construct pushes the target up to 5 squares.

Horde of Puckish Sprites

Much like the puckish sprite spell, this spell calls forth tiny fey creatures that act as distractions for your foes. In such a large group, these glowing sprites are even more capable of mischief than they are individually, and by the time they cease to exist, they will have sown chaos on the battlefield.

Horde of Puckish Sprites — Wizard Attack 23

Several glimmering, mischievous sprites seem to spring forth from nowhere, wreaking havoc on nearby foes.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Implement, Radiant, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier radiant damage, and the target is slowed until the end of its next turn.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. When any enemy of yours ends its turn adjacent to one or more creatures in the zone, choose one of the creatures in the zone to make a melee basic attack against that creature as a free action.

Level 25 Daily Powers

Bewitching Gaze

Some wizards, particularly witches, become so beautiful or so terrifying that not even devils can look upon them unmoved. Beneath the gaze of such an individual, supplicants bow, their minds ready to carry out the wizard's desires.

Bewitching Gaze — Wizard Attack 25

Under the pull of your steady gaze, your foe bows to your every command.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Charm, Enchantment, Implement, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage, and the target is dominated until the end of your next turn. On the target's turn, you can command it to take a full set of actions (standard, move, and minor).
Sustain Standard: You repeat the attack against the target. On a miss, the power ends.
Miss: You do not expend this power.

Moonlight and Darkness

You channel the twin forces of light and darkness and loose them upon the battlefield, dousing your enemies in the full, clear light of the moon while concealing your allies within the shadow of the new moon. This power represents the apex of accomplishment for a witch that is a master of the full moon and the dark moon.

Moonlight and Darkness — Wizard Attack 25

The stark, pure light of the moon mingles with darkness and shifting shadow in such concentration that it sears your enemies.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Evocation, Implement, Radiant, Necrotic, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 3 within 20 squares
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 4d8 + Intelligence modifier radiant and necrotic damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Allies in the zone have partial concealment. Enemies in the zone have vulnerable 10 radiant and vulnerable 10 necrotic, and they grant combat advantage.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Level 27 Encounter Powers

Supreme Dread Presence

So strong is your dread presence that your very shadow has practically become a living, animate thing. Occasionally it might disobey you, reflecting an action wholly different than the one you are taking. However, when you command it to obey you in your strongest voice, it becomes an implement of the terror you inspire.

Supreme Dread Presence Wizard Attack 27

You become a vision of nightmare, cloaking yourself in the dread shadow that is inexorably bound to you, wrapping it around you like a mantle.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Fear, Implement, Necrotic, Nethermancy, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier necrotic damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy that ends its turn in the zone takes necrotic damage equal to your 10 + your Wisdom modifier.
Special: All damage from this attack and its effect ignores 15 points of necrotic resistance.

Supreme Glorious Presence

Yours is the glory of the bright, full moon. You are radiant and terrible all at once, and your enemies cannot help but bow before you when they are caught within your moonlit thrall. The power you draw upon to cast this spell is that of the moon at its strongest and brightest, and it is said that a witch who casts this spell under the light of the brightest moon of the year can transcend his or her physical existence and become a thing of pure moonlight.

Supreme Glorious Presence Wizard Attack 27

As the light of your radiance repels your enemies, it also brings them to their knees before you, giving your allies a chance to draw near and rejuvenate themselves.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Charm, Enchantment, Implement, Radiant
Standard Action Close burst 3
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 4d6 + Intelligence modifier radiant damage, and you push the target up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier and knock the target prone.
Effect: You and each ally in the burst gain temporary hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier + one-half your level.

ANDREW SILVER

Level 29 Daily Power

Visions of Wrath

Though many see the trickery and confusion inspired by spellcasters of the Feywild as little more than mischief, some such spells can be truly terrifying. The most accomplished spellcasters of the Feywild can bring to bear such powerful spells that they completely muddle the minds of their enemies, bringing the foes under the caster's control by presenting them with an alternate reality composed solely of illusion.

Visions of Wrath Wizard Attack 29

At your command, your enemies fall upon each other with bloodcurdling cries.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Illusion, Implement
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 20 squares
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: The target is dominated (save ends). If you or your allies attack the target, it gets a saving throw against this effect. If you do not compel the target to make any attack rolls during its turn, it automatically succeeds on its saving throw against this effect at the end of that turn. If you compel the target to make one or more attack rolls but it does not hit any targets, it automatically fails its next saving throw against this effect.
Miss: The target is dazed until the end of your next turn.

CHAPTER 4

Character Options

IT TAKES all kinds of heroes to vanquish the malicious creatures that emerge from the Feywild. Similarly, heroes of all sorts find themselves thrust into the Feywild, either out of necessity or as a twist of their fortunes, and they must adapt to survive. This chapter provides several new options that reflect the kinds of abilities that can be learned from adventuring in the Feywild, fey heritage, or from coming into contact with fey creatures.

Though some of the material in this chapter is class-specific and draws on material found elsewhere within this book, heroes created using other sources can still find useful options here. Additionally, this chapter includes material for races and classes from all the DUNGEONS & DRAGONS rulebooks.

This chapter includes the following sections.

- Themes to customize your character with fey qualities.
- Fey-themed paragon paths.
- Fey-themed epic destinies.
- New feats, including new racial feats and feats available to characters of any class.
- Selections of mundane gear and magic items.
- Fey gifts, benefits that your character can obtain from patrons in the Feywild.

BARD'S TALE: THE SIDHE LORD AND THE SATYR

Once upon a time there was a young and arrogant eladrin nobleman, a son of one of the true Sidhe lords of the Feywild. The nobleman called the great city of Mithrendain his home, and he was well known to the other people of the city as a boor and a snob, not to mention a dangerous minor tyrant who wielded the influence of the Sidhe lords as if he were a petulant child.

One day, the lord was chasing after a pretty eladrin girl who had struck his fancy when the Sidhe lord stumbled across a crippled satyr slowly making his way to the city. Angered that the satyr had spoiled his sport, the eladrin shouted curses at him, and kicked the satyr over into the mud. "You old cripple," the eladrin screamed, "how dare you stand in the path of your betters? Where the Sidhe lords go, the people bend knee and get out of the way!"

The satyr pushed himself slowly up to his feet and whispered the words of a curse, pointing a crooked finger at the Sidhe lord. "A true Sidhe lord would not waste the day chasing women that do not want him," the satyr replied. "A true Sidhe lord would not abuse those who would be his subjects," the satyr said. "You are no true Sidhe lord; you are a monster!" And then the satyr cast his curse upon the eladrin, transforming him from a handsome young man into a hideous monstrosity, unrecognizable as his former self.

Horrified, the Sidhe lord fled back into the city, running straight for his home. The guard, however, did not see the young lordling returning, but instead viewed a screaming madman, hideous and twisted, demanding to be let in. They barred the door against his entrance and treated him like an unwanted vagrant. For days, the Sidhe lord lived in the shadowed corners of Mithrendain, begging for food and trying his best—and failing—to convince the guards to let him into his home. The young Sidhe lord had lost everything, and he was filled with despair.

One day, the twisted wretch who has once been the lord overheard some of those who had sworn loyalty to his house speaking about his disappearance. "Good riddance," they said. "The boy was a tyrant in the making." Soon after, the Sidhe lord was approached by the very satyr that had transformed him into a monster. The satyr said that he thought the lord had been punished long enough, and offered to change him back.

The young Sidhe lord refused. He claimed that he now knew he did not deserve his post, and the Feywild was better with him absent. The satyr took pity on the young man and reversed most of the curse, transforming his visage from monstrous to simply scarred and blemished. The satyr told him to go and make his way in the world of men, and that as he proved himself more worthy, the scars and marks would fade, eventually restoring him to his former appearance when he was truly ready to accept the mantle of a Sidhe lord.

ERIC BELISLE

Character Themes

Just as race and class help to define who your character is in the world, theme adds a third component to refine your story and identity. The themes presented here explain what your character knows about the Feywild and provide story hooks that you can use to roleplay him or her.

A theme generally embraces characters of many different classes. A few more narrowly focused themes are limited to a small selection of classes or races—for example, a tuathan must be a human. Each theme has a sidebar that describes any such restrictions.

This section presents four themes.

- Fey beast tamer, master of fey creatures
- Sidhe lord, noble of the fey
- Tuathan, human or half-elf touched by the Feywild
- Unseelie agent, ally of an unsavory patron

Choosing a Theme

A character can have only one theme, which you choose when you create your character. You don't have to select a character theme if you don't want to.

When you select a theme, it grants you the following benefits.

Background: You can use one of these themes as a background for your character. Each theme has a "Background" sidebar that lists skills associated with the theme. If you choose the theme as your background, you can gain a +2 bonus to checks made for one of those associated skills, or you can add one of those skills to your list of class skills before you choose your trained skills.

Starting Features: Each theme includes one or more features that you gain when you select the theme.

Additional Features: Most themes offer additional features at levels 5 and 10. You gain additional features automatically when you reach the appropriate level; they don't replace your normal class features.

Optional Powers: Each theme includes a small number of attack powers, utility powers, or both that become available at 2nd level or higher. These powers are added to the list of powers you can choose from when you gain levels. For example, if you're a 6th-level fighter, you can choose a 6th-level fighter utility power or a 6th-level utility power from your theme (if such a power is available).

Prerequisites: Just like classes and races, themes can be prerequisites for feats, paragon paths, and other features.

Themes in Character Creation

Themes offer a wide array of character creation tools. You might choose your theme first and then pick a class or race to reinforce that identity. For example, a character who has the Unseelie agent theme can be of any class, but choosing the warlock class might strengthen your pact with your patron.

You can also use a theme to take your character in a new direction, adopting a story role that your class or race otherwise might not provide. For example, if you play a dwarf barbarian who has the fey beast tamer theme, the combination can offer new opportunities for story hooks and roleplaying. Which of your ancestors was connected to those who could tame the creatures of the Feywild, especially given your race's history of distance from the elves? What legacy did that ancestor pass on to you?

Use your chosen theme to inform the background of your character and how you roleplay him or her. Like class and race, your theme is only part of who your character is.

Themes in the Party

The themes in this section can provide story elements that are unique to your character. Perhaps your character has knowledge that he or she wants to keep secret from other party members, or your character might have a hidden agenda. Such secrets are meant to create fun roleplaying opportunities, not to set your character against the others. Every theme in this section has a good reason to want to work with the others.

Think about your character's theme and how he or she would interact with the other party members. Discuss these possible interactions with the DM and the other players in the same way that you might talk about each party member's class or role.

Changing Character Theme

You can retrain your theme choice when you gain a level. However, if you have any feats or powers that require your theme as a prerequisite, you first must retrain those feats or powers. Then you can change your theme by retraining at the next opportunity.

Fey Beast Tamer

"Of course you can domesticate an owlbear! Want me to show you how?"

When the natural world was young and humanity was in its infancy, callous elf nobles intentionally opened fey crossings between their realm and the natural world, sending dangerous monsters through to terrorize early mortal civilizations. Many of humanity's oldest folk tales concern these first encounters with creatures such as owlbears and displacer beasts. Although eladrin scholars have tried to disprove the assertion that their ancestors were responsible, there is no doubt that an unusual number of stories passed down by human cultures involve such occurrences.

However troublesome or malicious the ancient elves might have been, they inadvertently gave the people of the natural world a familiarity with fey creatures. During these formative years for human culture, contact with Feywild beasts had a great impact; the magic of that plane touched hearts and souls in the mortal world. As a result, some members of mortal races developed an affinity for dealing with creatures from the Feywild. They could command the beasts of the fey realm just as mortal nobles could command their subjects. Renowned fey beast tamers, many of whom have been immortalized in story and song, rode into battle with powerful denizens of the Feywild at their side.

Generations passed, empires rose and fell, and wars came and went. Bloodlines that once had been strong were thinned out by centuries of marriage and expansion. The beast tamers who commanded armies of fey creatures died out, and every generation of their offspring grew weaker in their control over fey beasts until the ability was almost forgotten.

Once every few generations, however, a mortal is born of parents who still have strong blood ties to the ancient beast lords. Such individuals grow up with the inherent ability to bond with fey creatures. Though many never realize their full potential, some discover—through chance encounters—that they can influence fey beasts by sheer willpower. These special mortals usually bond with a single creature, forming a connection that is as strong as the one shared by soldiers who serve together in battle.

You are one of these rare individuals with an ability that reaches back to the dawn of civilization. You have formed a connection with a fey creature and can command it to aid you and protect you from harm. Over time, as you develop this bond further, you will begin to absorb the inherent magic of the creature and find yourself capable of things you never thought possible.

BACKGROUND

You have learned to exploit your bond with a creature from the Feywild, learning much about your own world or the workings of the fey realm.

Associated Skill: Arcana or Nature.

Building a Fey Beast Tamer

Fey beast tamers are able to control feral creatures from the Feywild, although the creatures are never truly domesticated. A fey beast tamer creates a bond with his or her companion animal and usually has a natural affinity for beasts of all kinds.

Class Prerequisite: None. The ability to bond with a fey creature has little connection to other aptitudes, instead reflecting something deep within a person's soul. That said, heroes who have a strong connection to the natural world, such as druids or shamans, might be more inclined to create such a bond.

Race Prerequisite: None. A fey beast tamer need not hail from the Feywild to be able to tame the creatures of that plane.

Starting Feature

The primary feature of your status as a fey beast tamer is your magical beast companion. You have formed a bond with a creature of the Feywild.

Benefit: Choose one of the following creatures: blink dog, displacer beast, fey panther, or young owlbear. You gain it as your fey beast companion.

Your fey beast companion is considered an ally of you and your allies. It can be affected by powers in the same way that any other creature can be. It has animal intelligence, so you can communicate with it only at a basic level (like a trained pet), and it doesn't understand complex ideas.

Your fey beast companion's level is equal to yours, and its hit points, defenses, and attack values are determined by your level, as noted in its statistics.

Your companion shares your healing surge total. Whenever an effect requires your fey beast companion to spend a healing surge, the surge is deducted from your total. Whenever you use your second wind, your companion also regains hit points equal to your healing surge value. At the end of a short rest, your fey beast companion regains all its hit points.

If you die or your companion drops below 1 hit point, it retreats back into the Feywild. If that occurs, you can use one of these two ways to call it back.

Minor Action: You lose a healing surge, and your companion appears in the nearest unoccupied space, with hit points equal to your healing surge value.

Short Rest or Extended Rest: At the end of the rest, you lose a healing surge, and your companion appears in the nearest unoccupied space, with full hit points.

FEY BEAST COMPANION ACTIONS

While you are within 20 squares of your fey beast companion, it relies on your guidance. You take actions so that it can act, and during an encounter its initiative is the same as yours.

Standard Actions: For your fey beast companion to take a standard action, you must take a standard action to command it to do so.

Move Actions: Whenever you take a move action, your fey beast companion can also take a move action. Alternatively, you can stay put but take a move action to command your fey beast companion to take a move action.

Minor Actions: For your fey beast companion to take a minor action, you must take a minor action to command it to do so.

Free Actions: Your fey beast companion can take a free action without your taking an action to command it.

Triggered Actions: If one of your fey beast companion's triggered actions is triggered, the companion can take that action only if you take the same kind of action to command it to do so. For example, if an enemy adjacent to your companion provokes an opportunity attack from it, you must take an opportunity action to command your companion to make the attack.

Acting Independently: In situations when you can't give commands to your fey beast companion, it can act independently. For example, if you are unconscious or more than 20 squares away from your companion, it doesn't sit around waiting for you (unless that's what you commanded it to do).

A fey beast companion acting independently does not have a full complement of actions on its turn. Instead, on its turn, it can take a standard action, a move action, or a minor action. It can also take opportunity actions and free actions, but it cannot take immediate actions.

Blink Dog Companion

You have attuned yourself to a blink dog, a common pack hunter of the Feywild. These strong, yellow-coated canines can teleport short distances, and they use this power to surround prey. With enough training, you and your allies can benefit from this ability.

| Trained Blink Dog Medium fey beast | | Fey Beast Companion |
|---|---|---|
| HP your bloodied value | | Initiative equal to yours |
| AC 15, Fortitude 13, Reflex 13, Will 13 | | Perception equal |
| (Add your level to each defense) | | to yours +2 |
| Speed 7 | | Low-light vision |
| Traits | | |
| ☼ Blinking Pack (teleportation) ✦ Aura 1 | | |
| The blink dog or any ally in the aura can use a move action to teleport to another square in the aura. | | |
| Standard Actions | | |
| ⓘ Blinking Bite (teleportation) ✦ At-Will | | |
| Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. AC | | |
| Hit: 1d8 + one-half your level damage, and the blink dog teleports up to 2 squares. | | |
| Level 21: 2d8 + one-half your level damage. | | |
| Str 14 | Dex 20 | Wis 14 |
| Con 17 | Int 2 | Cha 6 |

Displacer Beast Companion

Although feared throughout the Feywild as a cunning and deadly predator, a displacer beast can be tamed by someone wise in the ways of the spirits. You have managed to achieve this rapport, taking special pride in the wide-eyed stares that you and your companion receive during your travels.

| Trained Displacer Beast Medium fey beast | | Fey Beast Companion |
|---|---|---|
| HP your bloodied value | | Initiative equal to yours |
| AC 15, Fortitude 11, Reflex 15, Will 15 | | Perception equal |
| (Add your level to each defense) | | to yours +2 |
| Speed 8 | | Low-light vision |
| Traits | | |
| ☼ Displacement (illusion) ✦ Aura 1 | | |
| Allies gain a +1 power bonus to all defenses while in the aura. | | |
| Standard Actions | | |
| ⓘ Tentacle (illusion) ✦ At-Will | | |
| Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. AC | | |
| Hit: 1d8 + one-half your level damage, and the displacer beast gains partial concealment until the end of its next turn. | | |
| Level 21: 2d8 + one-half your level damage. | | |
| Str 15 | Dex 20 | Wis 16 |
| Con 16 | Int 2 | Cha 6 |

Fey Panther Companion

A black-coated fey panther might not have the fearsome reputation of a displacer beast, but it is a capable predator in its own right. The panther's keen senses warn its pack mates of danger.

| Trained Fey Panther | Fey Beast Companion |
|---|---|
| Medium fey beast | |
| HP your bloodied value | Initiative equal to yours |
| AC 13, Fortitude 13, Reflex 15, Will 11 | Perception equal |
| (Add your level to each defense) | to yours +2 |
| Speed 8, climb 6 | Low-light vision |
| Traits | |
| ☼ Alert Companion ✦ Aura 1 | |
| While in the aura, enemies cannot gain combat advantage against the fey panther's allies. | |
| Standard Actions | |
| ⊕ Claw ✦ At-Will | |
| Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. AC | |
| Hit: 1d8 + one-half your level damage, and the target grants combat advantage to you until the end of your next turn. | |
| Level 21: 2d8 + one-half your level damage. | |
| Str 15 Dex 20 Wis 13 | |
| Con 15 Int 2 Cha 6 | |

Young Owlbear Companion

Young owlbears are valued by the Feywild's goblins, who train the beasts to serve as guardians. Perhaps you freed your new companion from a goblin trap or beat it into submission after the goblins sicced it on you. However you two came together, the owlbear now fights for you.

| Trained Young Owlbear | Fey Beast Companion |
|---|---|
| Medium fey beast | |
| HP your bloodied value | Initiative equal to yours |
| AC 13, Fortitude 15, Reflex 11, Will 15 | Perception equal |
| (Add your level to each defense) | to yours +2 |
| Speed 6 | Darkvision |
| Traits | |
| ☼ Ferocious Companion ✦ Aura 1 | |
| Allies gain a +2 power bonus to damage rolls against enemies in the aura. | |
| Standard Actions | |
| ⊕ Claw ✦ At-Will | |
| Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. AC | |
| Hit: 1d12 + one-half your level damage. | |
| Level 21: 2d12 + one-half your level damage. | |
| Str 20 Dex 12 Wis 14 | |
| Con 17 Int 2 Cha 6 | |

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature

As you enhance the connection you have with your fey beast companion, you learn to act in concert with your companion whenever the situation warrants it.

Benefit: You have combat advantage against enemies in your fey beast companion's aura.

Level 10 Feature

You have always been able to communicate with your fey beast companion. However, you have learned the secret language of your companion and can speak to it the same way it would communicate with others of its kind. As a result, you can now glean more complex information from a conversation with your companion.

Benefit: You can communicate normally with your fey beast companion and other creatures of the same kind.

Optional Powers

Level 2 Utility Power

The special connection you share with your fey beast companion makes it easy for you to transfer part of your vitality to the creature. With effort, you can send reinforcement to your companion.

Heal Fey Beast Companion — Fey Beast Tamer Utility 2

You focus briefly on your bond with your fey beast companion, restoring some of its vitality.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Healing
Minor Action Ranged 10
Target: Your fey beast companion
Effect: The target regains a number of hit points equal to your healing surge value.

Level 6 Utility Power

The world can be a dangerous place, and you know when it's best to keep your unusual ally out of sight. The safe banishment power sends your fey beast companion to a haven in the Feywild, allowing you to travel in civilized areas without worrying about what might happen to your companion in such an environment.

Safe Banishment — Fey Beast Tamer Utility 6

With a wave of your hand, your fey beast companion vanishes.

At-Will ✦ Arcane
Move Action Ranged 10
Target: Your fey beast companion
Effect: Your fey beast companion is removed from play. It travels to a safe location in the Feywild. As a move action, you can recall your fey beast companion, and it appears in an unoccupied square adjacent to you.

Level 10 Utility Power

Your bond with your companion has grown so strong that for a short time you can take on a form that resembles your companion's.

Companion Form — Fey Beast Tamer Utility 10

Your body shifts and changes, and suddenly you take on a form that is nearly a mirror image of your fey beast companion.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Polymorph
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume a form similar to that of your fey beast companion. While in this form, you have the same aura as your companion. You gain the creature's senses and speed, but the form does not otherwise alter your game statistics. The form lasts until the end of the encounter, until you end it as a minor action, or until you use any other power.

Sidhe Lord

"The archfey might seem the most powerful, but the real masters of the people are the Sidhe lords such as I."

Among the fey races, particularly elves and eladrin, powerful noble houses have arisen over the years as the authority in the Feywild. The various fey courts, including the Summer Queen's Court of Stars, are made up of representatives from these houses. Although the houses vary in makeup, goals, and methods, their members are collectively known as Sidhe lords—a title that paints them all with the same brush.

The first true Sidhe lords were elves who lived before the great conflict that splintered the race into three factions. In the days when the race was in its youth, some ambitious elves claimed dominion over the untamed Feywild. When none could challenge them, these early Sidhe lords established themselves as pillars of power in the realm, and an order was born among the fey races. The common people showed deference to the Sidhe lords, and the lords protected those within their dominion.

Later, as the people of the Feywild matured and the elf race split into elves, eladrin, and drow, a greater variety of Sidhe lords rose to prominence. Most of these were individuals of other races, such as drow and satyrs, who had gained influence and forged alliances. Rather than engaging in power struggles that could weaken their houses, the established lords acknowledged the new self-proclaimed nobles, giving them legitimacy. To this day, most of the Sidhe lords of the Feywild are eladrin (many of the elf lords took their power bases with them into the natural world), but the newer noble houses have offspring of other races.

The noble houses of the Sidhe lords behave much as their counterparts do in the mortal world; they work together, come into conflict with one another, plot and manipulate, and meddle in the affairs of common people. The fey houses typically choose colors and heraldry the same way that human nobles do, but their symbols are fey creatures such as displacer beasts and owlbears.

Most Sidhe lords are eager to associate themselves with dominion over an aspect of the Feywild. The Prince of Frost, for example, claims sovereignty over the Vale of Long Night, and he is known as the Sidhe lord who commands winter (at least, within the Feywild). Other Sidhe lords might hold sway over specific kinds of fey creatures (for example, displacer beasts).

Formidable fey nobles make bargains with weaker beings or with those they favor. Sidhe lords have amassed a great deal of influence and arcane might, and a formal pact establishes a bond that allows a lord to transfer that power to a recipient. Many warlocks have such pacts, but Sidhe lords are free to enter into them with all kinds of creatures.

BACKGROUND

You have learned how to deal with others from your position of power. You might accomplish that goal either through polite but persuasive discourse or by pulling rank and throwing your weight around.

Associated Skill: Diplomacy or Intimidate.

You are a Sidhe lord, a representative of a noble house of the Feywild. Whether you are a youth or someone just coming up through the ranks of your house, your station affords you certain privileges. Moreover, you have the power and authority to make pacts, bargains, and accords as a Sidhe lord, and you can use your status to your advantage.

Building a Sidhe Lord

Sidhe lords are nobles among the fey races who rule over the civilized parts of the Feywild. They are similar to the nobles of the mortal world, and their authority is recognized by all the races (and many of the beasts) that inhabit the Feywild.

Class Prerequisite: None. Most Sidhe lords begin to pursue their own goals and ambitions at a young age and are not recalled to rule their houses until they have a few decades of experience under their belts. Thus, young Sidhe lords follow whatever path agrees with them, whether it might be the study of arcane magic or the use of weapons and armor.

Race Prerequisite: Half-elf, or any race that has the fey origin. Most Sidhe lords are elves and eladrin, but sometimes members of other fey races are accepted as nobles after achieving a certain level of power and prestige. Sidhe lords are not necessarily given their station by birthright, and the noble houses of the Feywild are often compelled to recognize the legitimacy of other self-made nobles as a matter of practicality. If someone declares that he or she is a Sidhe lord and has the power to back up the claim, it would be imprudent to reject that assertion.

Starting Feature

A Sidhe lord is never without allies. Any noble house powerful enough to declare itself such has numerous bodyguards, soldiers, and other warriors among its ranks. As a Sidhe lord, you can call on these allies, and you have the magic to summon them at any time from your house's holdings in the Feywild.

Benefit: You gain the summon Sidhe ally power.

Summon Sidhe Ally — Sidhe Lord Utility

You summon an ally of your noble house, bound to obey you.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 5
Effect: You summon a Sidhe house guard in an unoccupied space within range. The guard is an ally to you and your allies.

The guard lacks actions of its own. Instead, you spend actions to command it mentally, choosing from the actions in the guard's description. You must have line of effect to the guard to command it. When you command the guard, you and the guard share knowledge but not senses. If you use a move action to move yourself, you can also command the guard to move up to its speed.

When the guard makes an attack roll or a check, you make the roll using your statistics, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties.

The guard lasts until it drops below 1 hit point, at which point you lose a healing surge (or hit points equal to your surge value if you have no surges left). Otherwise, the guard lasts until you dismiss it as a minor action or until you use this power again.

Sidhe House Guard — Summoned Creature
Medium fey humanoid

HP your healing surge value; Healing Surges none, but you can lose a healing surge for the guard if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6

Standard Action (weapon) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 1d8 + highest ability modifier damage.
Level 21: 2d8 + highest ability modifier damage.

Move Action (teleportation) ✦ Encounter
Effect: The guard teleports up to 6 squares.

Immediate Interrupt ✦ At-Will
Trigger: You are hit by a melee attack or a ranged attack while the guard is adjacent to you.
Effect: The attack hits the guard instead of you.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature

No one wants to offend a Sidhe lord, for fear of inviting the wrath of the lord's house. Thus, you can expect to be welcomed in any civilized area that recognizes your house.

Benefit: When you are in a city or other civilized area that recognizes your house's prestige, you can receive a week's lodging in comfortable if not lavish quarters at no charge. The quarters include room for up to eight of your allies, as well as meals each day. You have the use of up to three servants, who perform common tasks for the duration of your stay.

Level 10 Feature

You are further attuned to your house guard. Where it goes, you go also.

Benefit: Whenever your Sidhe house guard uses its teleportation power while you are adjacent to it, you can teleport up to 6 squares to a space adjacent to the guard's destination.

Optional Powers

Level 2 Utility Power

You can make minor pacts based on the amount of influence that you and your house have accrued. One of the simplest examples is the bargain of time, which has been passed down from one generation of Sidhe lords to the next. You grant your ally an opportunity to act now in exchange for a similar gesture later.

Sidhe Bargain — Sidhe Lord Utility 2

You offer a bargain to one of your allies: a little more speed now in exchange for some of the ally's extra effort later.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One ally
Effect: The target can lose an action point to immediately take a standard action as a free action. If the target does so, you gain an action point.

Level 6 Utility Power

A lone Sidhe lord is a formidable adversary—but when you are accompanied by your house guard, the two of you move deceptively swiftly and draw vigor from each other's nearness.

Unified Front — Sidhe Lord Utility 6

You move to a better position from which to fight, and you and your guard present a dangerous front to your enemies.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Move Action Personal
Effect: You and your Sidhe house guard can both move up to your respective speeds + 2. If you end this movement adjacent to your guard, you and it both gain temporary hit points equal to your healing surge value.

Level 10 Utility Power

At times, you can afford to lend some of your power to an ally in need. Of course, such a pact is never wholly altruistic; you make sure to gain something in the bargain, too.

Temporary Fey Pact — Sidhe Lord Utility 10

You forge a pact similar to those of warlocks, giving some power to an ally and drawing on that ally's vitality in return.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Ranged 5
Target: One ally
Effect: You enter into a pact with the target that lasts until you take a minor action to end it or until you use this power again. Once per encounter, while this pact is active, the target can take a minor action to cause you to lose the use of one encounter power or daily power of your choice that has a level. When the target does so, he or she regains the use of one of his or her expended powers of the same usage, type, and level. For example, if you lost the use of a 2nd-level encounter utility power, the target could regain the use of a 2nd-level encounter utility power. In addition, you can spend the target's healing surges as if they were your own, if the target allows it.

Searching for clues to their tribe's origin, a pair of tuathans uncover an engraved message in the ruins of Cendriane

Tuathan

"There's a reason why I always watch what I say when animals are around."

Legend tells of a great tribe of humans that settled the world in antiquity. Some say these humans were shapeshifters, born of primal spirits or fey creatures; others say they were the warlike children of a fey goddess. With valor and magic untold, they came from the Feywild in great vessels with sails like white wings. Wielding items of vast power, they conquered all opposing tribes (commingling with some of the elves they subjugated), carved out a realm, and ruled it for centuries. Eventually they fell into decline. The great race receded, its empire crumbled, and it withdrew into the Feywild, leaving behind fragments of glorious epics, hidden troves of magic, and the name of the mighty tribe: Tuatha. "The tribe"—for that is what the word meant in ancient Elven—dispersed throughout the land of the fey, where it is said its descendants remain to this day.

Nowadays, any human or half-elf born or blessed with a strain of fey magic might be a tuathan. Most tuathans are born in the Feywild, and the bold vibrancy of that realm courses through their veins as it did in the tribe of old. Tuathans born in the mortal world are the result of brief human trysts with beautiful faerie folk. Such children are usually raised by the mortal parent in the natural world, and they grow up with little idea of their enchanted heritage. Deep in their hearts, however, they yearn to strike out into the unknown.

Tuathans are compelled to experience more wondrous adventures than have ever been told in tales. Perhaps this urge is what drove the conquering Tuatha from the Feywild in ancient times, and perhaps it is the reason the tribe returned to the fey realm after ruling for so long. When tuathans set their sights on a distant horizon, a love to be won, or a challenge to be met, fulfilling the goal occupies their thoughts as intensely as the pangs of first love. Perhaps unsurprisingly, most fairy tales that migrate to the mortal world are stories of the tuathans of the Feywild striving to attain their heart's desire.

Some tuathans bear no outward mark of their fey heritage and appear as ordinary humans or half-elves in every aspect. Most appear as slender, exotic individuals with striking, well-defined features and thick, lustrous hair. Their most remarkable physical characteristics are the slight suggestions of fey or animal traits that delicately grace their faces, notably eyes, noses, hair, and ears. Some have eyes like those of cats, eladrin, or owls; others have shining manes of dark hair naturally interwoven with raven, peacock, or eagle feathers; still others have subtly elongated noses or ears suggestive of foxes, cats, or elves. These understated traits appear natural and are rarely noticed at a glance.

A few tuathans are fey shapechangers, able to transform into the beasts or birds that their normal features suggest. In ancient tales, shapechangers served tuathan kings and queens as explorers, spies, and court magic users. Today, such individuals travel the Feywild as trader nomads. They visit villages, towns, and cities of the natural world to give

ERIC BELISLE

BACKGROUND

Your blood pulses with the spirit of the Feywild, driving you toward action and excitement. You might be able to push your hale and hearty body to extremes, or you have knowledge about the ancient fey realm that many have forgotten.

Associated Skill: Endurance or History.

mortals a spark of magic in their lives—but always for a price.

A vow or a bargain made with a tuathan is binding and cannot be broken without consequences, which are often magical. Tuathans believe that powerful enchantments are inherent in spoken stories, vows, bargains, rhymes, names, songs, and chants. For a tuathan, to say a thing is to give it life, to make it real.

Tuathans believe that nothing in the world is unobtainable, and when they accept a challenge, they seldom back down from it. They pursue their aims to the ends of the world, for it is by the magnitude of their deeds that they will be remembered in song and story through the ages, like the Tuatha of old.

Tuathan naming conventions date back to the time of the ancient tribe. Most of the names bestowed upon children have their roots in the land from which Tuatha set sail. Popular male names include Bran, Cadeyrn, Dylan, Eogan, Gawain, Iago, Lugh, Maedoc, Merrion, Morcant, Padraig, Roderick, Taliesin, Trystan, Urien, and Wynn. Females are often called Alis, Anwen, Blaithin, Cara, Ceridwen, Elain, Fflur, Glynis, Gwendolyn, Gwyneth, Keelie, Kendal, Megann, Morrigan, Rowena, or Sioned.

Building a Tuathan

A tuathan is a human or a half-elf touched by fey magic. Some are native inhabitants of the Feywild, and others are descended from fey ancestors or blessed by a fey (such as a fairy patron or a godparent). Humans and half-elves who have been honored by the touch of the fey are the indomitable heroes of fairy tales and legends.

Class Prerequisite: None. Tuathans are complex and versatile, and they can pursue any class. Magic, mischief, high adventure, and trickery come naturally to them, and tuathan warlocks, wizards, barbarians, bards, and rogues are prevalent. Few tuathans become clerics; inherently blessed with fey magic, they have little use for divine authorities.

Race Prerequisite: Human or half-elf.

Starting Feature

You gain either Continue the Story or Shapechanger Physique.

Continue the Story

The tale of a tuathan does not end arbitrarily. In the mortal world, death and hardship occur haphazardly and at random. But the fairy-tale magic of the Feywild surrounds a tuathan hero, saving his or her life in unlikely circumstances.

Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus to death saving throws. In addition, whenever you make an Endurance check, you can roll twice and use either result.

Shapechanger's Physique

Tuathans who have a strong strain of shapechanger blood display features suggestive of Feywild animals or fey creatures, and sometimes they have capabilities to match.

Benefit: Whenever you make an Athletics check, you can roll twice and use either result.

WILLIAM O'CONNOR

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature You gain either Heightened Senses or The Tables Are Turned.

Heightened Senses When you tap into your inner strength, every sound, smell, sight, and sensation becomes as clear as a Feywild dawn. Shapechanging tuathans who have this ability draw on the senses of their animal shape.

Benefit: When you use your second wind, enemies gain no benefit from any cover or concealment against you until the end of your next turn.

The Tables Are Turned When a cornered tuathan prepares to make a bold stand, the mysterious luck, favor, or storybook magic of the Feywild smiles upon him or her, reversing fortune in an instant.

Benefit: When you use your second wind, you gain combat advantage against any enemy flanking you, and being flanked does not cause you to grant combat advantage. This benefit lasts until the end of your next turn.

Level 10 Feature You gain either Flying Animal Shape or Heroic Recovery.

Flying Animal Shape Your shapechanging abilities have improved, and you have learned to take the form of a flying creature in addition to tuathan animal shape.

Benefit: If you have the tuathan animal shape power, you can use it to assume the form of a Tiny fey or natural beast that can fly (such as a bird or butterfly). In this form, you have a fly speed of 6.

Heroic Recovery Bloodied, beaten, and hopeless, great tuathan heroes have returned from death's door with the vigor of vengeful gods, their spirits unquenchable even to the last.

Benefit: When you make a death saving throw, if the result is 20 or higher (after applying any modifiers), you can immediately end any effect you are subjected to. You can also spend a healing surge as normal. If you do so, you can stand as a free action.

Optional Powers

Level 2 Utility Powers

Faerie Fortune Ordinary people who repeatedly happen upon lucky circumstances are said to be Faerie-fortuned. In truth, many are tuathans born of fey parentage or blessed by a fairy godparent or guardian.

Faerie Fortune — Tuathan Utility 2

The magic of the Feywild flows from within you, causing the chaos of natural life to reorder itself to your benefit.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
No Action — Personal
Effect: At the start of the encounter, roll a d20. Once before the end of the encounter, instead of rolling a d20, you can use this d20 roll as your result.

Tuathan Animal Shape Although the abilities of most tuathans manifest as luck or fortune, a few have a strong strain of fey magic that physically transforms one's body into the form of a wild beast.

Tuathan Animal Shape — Tuathan Utility 2

Your body shifts in an instant, taking the shape of a tiny animal such as a cat, a hare, or a rat.

At-Will (Special) ✦ Arcane, Polymorph
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You change from your humanoid form to the form of a Tiny nonflying fey or natural beast (such as a fox, a cat, or a raccoon) or vice versa. While you are in this beast form, you can make Stealth checks to hide using any cover or concealment, including cover from your allies, and you take no penalty to Stealth checks for moving up to your speed. You cannot make attacks or use item powers.

Your equipment becomes part of this form, and you continue to gain the benefits of the equipment you wear, except a shield. Your ability to communicate is not inhibited, and you can make skill checks only if they don't require you to be in humanoid form.

Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Level 6 Utility Powers

Bargain of Truth Tuathans place great value on words, especially with respect to their vows, pacts, and bargains with other creatures. Anyone foolish enough to break an agreement with your kind falls under your power, and those who refuse to make such a pact with you reveal something of their nature.

Bargain of Truth — Tuathan Utility 6

Clasping hands, drawing blood, or placing marks on a scroll of magic parchment, you seal a mystical pact with another creature to speak no lies.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Minor Action — Close burst 5
Target: One willing creature in the burst
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you and the target must speak truthfully to each other. Whenever either target knowingly lies to the other, the listener knows it, and the liar is restrained and weakened (save ends both).

Set Determination When a tuathan vows to accomplish a valorous deed, nothing deters him or her from pursuing that goal. Tuathans test their skill against forces far mightier than themselves, exulting in each blow they land on their powerful foes.

While hidden from the view of the centaur patrol, a tuathan transforms into a fox before making his getaway

Set Determination — Tuathan Utility 6

You set your sights on the most powerful foe and swear an oath that you will bring it down.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Minor Action — Close burst 5
Target: One enemy in the burst
Effect: You mark the target until the end of your next turn. Until the mark ends, whenever you hit the target with an attack, you gain temporary hit points equal to 3 + your highest ability score modifier.
Sustain Minor: The mark persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 10 Utility Powers

Faerie Warding Charm

Some fey creatures need only the effort of a glance to command others to do their bidding. Your tuathan heritage grants you a hint of that power. So strong is your fey presence that those who intend to harm you think twice before daring an attack.

Faerie Warding Charm — Tuathan Utility 10

Your fey charm compels others to obey your will. With a steady gaze or a commanding gesture, you turn your foe's attack.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Charm
Immediate Interrupt — Close burst 5
Trigger: An enemy within 5 squares of you targets you with a melee or a ranged attack.
Target: The triggering enemy in the burst
Effect: The target must choose a creature other than you to attack. If none of the target's other enemies are in range, it must attack one of its allies in range. If no other creatures are in range, this power is expended with no effect, and the target attacks you.

Timeless Step

Some creatures native to the Feywild can step swiftly through the plane, moving from one space to another in an instant. As a tuathan, you can step partially into the fey realm. When you do, time slows in your midst as sweet scents and warm wind waft about you, and enemy attackers are caught between the two dimensions.

Timeless Step — Tuathan Utility 10

You move effortlessly within the timeless eternity of the Feywild, your motions swift and deadly, while your enemies seem to crawl ponderously through time and space.

Daily (Special) ✦ Arcane, Aura
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Your melee weapon attacks and ranged weapon attacks against enemies in the aura gain the brutal 2 weapon property (against those enemies, reroll any weapon damage die that shows 1 or 2). In addition, any enemy that starts its turn in the aura is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Sustain Minor: The aura persists until the end of your next turn.
Special: You can use this power during an extended rest. If you do so, you require only 4 hours to gain the benefits of an extended rest.

ERIC BELISLE

Unseelie Agent

"Go now—and do not let those fool eladrin know it is I whom you truly serve."

The Feywild is a place of magic and enchantment, but within its shadows lurk creatures of mischief, malice, and malevolence that are the source of horrific campfire tales told about the plane. At best, these dark fey, or Unseelie, are indifferent about the harm they cause with their actions. At worst, they are creatures that carry the taint of shadow magic and seek to snuff out the light of the world.

Despite their reputation, these fey attract outsiders seeking their favor—some people just cannot resist the lure of dark magic. The Unseelie are well versed in the shadowy arts and, like many other fey creatures, love the power of bargains. They haggle and barter for what they have to offer, sometimes taking more than the seeker wants to pay in exchange.

You are one such seeker. You came to an Unseelie fey creature in search of knowledge, favors, a weapon, a charm, or something else. The asking price was too high, so you pledged yourself into your patron's service instead. As is the case with many fey pledges, the duration of your service seems open to interpretation. In the meantime, you act as an agent of your patron well beyond the borders of its dominion.

The tasks that your Unseelie master asks you to perform do not seem suspicious, and they follow no pattern that you have been able to discern. In fact, most of what you are called to do seems trivial—delivering messages, transporting money or goods, and reporting back on individuals that you observe. Your patron has yet to ask you to do something truly odious, although you realize that such a request might be made one day.

In exchange for your service, your Unseelie patron bestows gifts upon you. At the outset of your bargain, your patron gave you a shadow-wrought weapon, a magic item that cements the bond between you. In addition, your master occasionally teaches you small magic tricks or gives you insight into the workings of higher fey powers, expanding your knowledge and expertise. You worry, however, that every gift you receive leaves you further indebted to the Unseelie fey creature, and you fear that it might be difficult, perhaps impossible, to free yourself from its grasp.

Building an Unseelie Agent

You are an agent of a malicious force of the Feywild. You have tied yourself to an Unseelie fey creature that might not have your best interests in mind. The creature has given you great gifts and taught you forbidden magic, and all it asks in return is that you perform minor tasks from time to time.

Class Prerequisite: None. The Unseelie make use of anyone who comes to them seeking a bargain. The creatures are happy to oblige, provided that the price they demand is paid.

Race Prerequisite: None. Desire for the gifts of the Unseelie knows no racial boundaries.

BACKGROUND

Your continued contact with the Unseelie might have taught you much about their magic, or else your need to operate in secrecy has engendered in you a respect for silence and subtlety.

Associated Skill: Arcana or Stealth.

Starting Feature

As a symbol of your agreement with your patron, you are given a gift in the form of a weapon, wrought from Feywild steel mixed with the stuff of shadow.

Benefit: You gain the create shadow-wrought weapon power. When you select the Unseelie agent theme, choose a melee weapon or a ranged weapon with which you have proficiency. The weapon created by this power is the same kind of weapon.

Create Shadow-Wrought Weapon — Unseelie Agent Utility

You call forth the weapon given you by your master, a weapon that is cold to the touch no matter the temperature of its surroundings.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Shadow
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: You must have a hand free.
Effect: You call to your hand a shadow-wrought weapon that lasts until you dismiss it as a free action or until you use this power again. The weapon has a +1 enhancement bonus to attack rolls and damage rolls, and it deals 1d8 extra damage on a critical hit.
Level 6: +2 enhancement bonus, 2d8 extra damage.
Level 11: +3 enhancement bonus, 3d8 extra damage.
Level 16: +4 enhancement bonus, 4d8 extra damage.
Level 21: +5 enhancement bonus, 5d8 extra damage.
Level 26: +6 enhancement bonus, and 6d8 extra damage.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature Unseelie creatures are secretive and cling to the shadows whenever possible. Because of their reluctance to risk exposure, communicating with them can be difficult. You receive the gift of a secret language, making it easier to exchange missives with your patron.

Benefit: You can speak, read, and write the secret language of the Unseelie fey. This language can be used to communicate securely with others of your ilk.

Level 10 Feature

The shadow power of your patron has begun to corrupt you permanently. From time to time, in fits of rage or irritation, you change physically, taking on aspects of your Unseelie master. Your skin becomes gray, your eyes turn to pools of obsidian, and the air around you grows stifling and murky. For a moment, you appear to have hooves instead of feet, but that sensation passes quickly.

Benefit: When you make an Intimidate check, you can roll twice and use either result. When you do so, you physically change for a moment, revealing to the person you are attempting to intimidate that you have a supernatural connection to a dark power.

Optional Powers

Level 2 Utility Power

Many fey creatures can see in the darkness. Your patron has given you that ability, which sometimes manifests in ways that unsettle those around you.

Unseelie Eyes — Unseelie Agent Utility 2

Your eyes take on a golden sheen, and suddenly you can see in the darkness as though it were daylight.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Shadow
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain darkvision until the end of the encounter. Additionally, as a free action, you can cause your eyes to glow, shedding bright light in a 2-square radius. You can end the glow effect as a free action.

Level 3 Attack Power

The weapon given to you by your Unseelie patron is more than steel—it is a gift of the dark fey, imbued with malice on a fundamental level. When you wield this weapon, it doesn't merely cut your foes; with focus, you can cause some of its shadowy chill to seep into the wounds it inflicts.

Cold Shadow Strike — Unseelie Agent Attack 3

The chill in your shadow-wrought weapon deepens so that it seems to sap heat from anything that touches it.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold, Necrotic, Shadow
No Action Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee attack or a ranged attack using your shadow-wrought weapon.
Effect: The enemy takes 1d10 extra cold and necrotic damage, and it is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Level 5 Attack Power

The malice within the fabric of your shadow-wrought weapon can turn stalwart agents of goodness to the dark taint of the Unseelie fey. You have learned to discharge the latent corruption within your shadow-wrought weapon when you strike a foe, potentially turning the victim into an ally of your patron.

Unleash Corruption — Unseelie Agent Attack 5

Through force of will, you tap into the dark magic that was used to create your shadow-wrought weapon, unleashing its corruption.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Cold, Necrotic, Shadow
No Action Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee attack or a ranged attack using your shadow-wrought weapon.
Effect: The enemy takes ongoing 10 cold and necrotic damage (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: The enemy falls prone.

Level 6 Utility Power

The Unseelie place a high value on secrecy. You have learned to reach out and physically grasp the shadows that lie in corners and cracks, pulling them over you like a cloak to hide you from prying eyes.

Shadow Cloak — Unseelie Agent Utility 6

You wrap the shadows around you, just as your master taught you.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Shadow
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You become invisible until the end of the encounter, until you move, or until you attack.

Level 10 Utility Power

In the twilight of the Feywild, shadows connect locations where illumination cannot reach. This power allows you to use that connection as a conduit for your words, sending messages to your patron or another recipient no matter where you are.

Umbral Report — Unseelie Agent Utility 10

You whisper words into a nearby shadow, and the darkness carries them away to the person you designate.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Shadow
Standard Action Personal
Effect: You whisper a message of up to twenty-five words into a shadow, then choose a creature you know on your plane. (If the creature is your patron, the message is received regardless of planar location.) Only that creature hears the message. If the creature is not on your plane, the message is lost, and you are aware that the message was not received.

If the creature receives the message, it can respond within 5 minutes with a similar shadow message of up to twenty-five words. Doing so requires a standard action.

Paragon Paths

The following paragon paths are available to any character who meets the prerequisites.

Deadly Berserker

Prerequisite: Barbarian (berserker)

You have battled your way out of the dangerous wilderness, faced ever-growing threats, and managed to keep yourself alive despite your occasional recklessness. You grow stronger both in your connection to the primal spirits and in your martial prowess. This marriage of power makes you a dangerous and skilled warrior when in control of your emotions, and a force of nature when you give in to your rage.

Level 11: Berserker's Action

When you succumb to your rage, usually you do not regain control until after all your enemies are dead or defeated. But you are starting to learn how to let small amounts of your rage bubble up to the surface when needed. With focus, now you can allow only a portion of that fury to fuel your attacks.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to make a melee weapon attack, you deal 1d12 extra damage to each target you hit with that attack.

Level 11: A Thousand Ways to Die

You are a versatile warrior with many fighting styles honed to give you an advantage, and your skill does not fade when you give way to the beast within. Even when the primal spirits' power flows through you, your fighting instincts remain, allowing you to select the best technique to fight your foes.

A Thousand Ways to Die — Deadly Berserker Attack 11

Your prowess in battle is well earned, and whether you're raging at your enemies or in full control of your body, you have many ways to bring down your foe.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Primal, Weapon
No Action — Special
Trigger: You hit a creature with a melee basic weapon attack or a barbarian at-will weapon attack power.
Target: The creature you hit
Effect: The target takes 1[W] extra damage from the triggering attack. Additionally, choose one of the following effects.
- ✦ The target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
- ✦ The target falls prone.

Level 11: Reaping Fury

Though many might see the attacks you make while driven by your bloodlust as reckless and wild, those blows take a toll on your enemies.

Benefit: While you are under the effect of your Berserker Fury class feature, whenever you miss with a weapon using an at-will attack power or an encounter attack power, you gain a power bonus to the damage roll of your next weapon attack that hits before the end of your next turn. The bonus equals your Strength modifier.

Level 12: Surge of Strength

Whether it's a rush of adrenaline driven by urgency or invigorating power given by primal spirits, you are able to surprise your enemies with your resurgence.

Surge of Strength — Deadly Berserker Utility 12

Even as your strength wanes and your health flags, you find a reserve of internal strength to continue the fight.

Encounter ✦ Martial, Primal
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to your healing surge value. If you are under the effect of your Berserker Fury, you gain the following benefit instead: When you make your next attack roll before the end of your next turn, roll twice and use either result.

Level 16: Supreme Stamina

As your enemies grow fewer, you grow stronger. Each foe's defeat fuels your fighting power and allows you to stand against long odds on the battlefield.

Benefit: Whenever your attack drops a nonminion enemy to 0 hit points, you gain temporary hit points equal to 5 + one-half your level.

Level 20: Slake the Rage

Sometimes, nothing will calm you until you have seen your enemies destroyed. Even when you are in full control, though, at times you must unleash some of your fury on a foe, satisfying your bloodlust.

Slake the Rage — Deadly Berserker Attack 20

When you enter battle, you are filled with a thirst for violence that can be satisfied only by striking down your foes.

Daily ✦ Martial, Primal, Weapon
No Action — Personal
Trigger: You hit a creature with a melee basic weapon attack or a barbarian at-will weapon attack power.
Target: The creature you hit
Effect: The target takes 2[W] extra damage from the triggering attack. Additionally, choose one of the following effects.
- ✦ The target takes ongoing 10 damage (save ends).
- ✦ The target is dazed and slowed (save ends both).

Master Skald

Prerequisite: Bard (skald)

You have learned much in your time as a collector of stories, and you have put that knowledge to use as an adventurer. As you progress into the paragon tier, your repertoire of tales and legends grows, as does your arcane scholarship. Your reputation and recognition extend across the world—and even across the planes themselves.

Your skald has reached the rank of master, and you are regarded as such both by your fellow bards and by the world at large.

Level 11: Skald's Action

Timing is the better part of heroism. When it comes time to strike quickly, either you do so on your own or you enable a friend to do so in your place.

Benefit: When you spend an action point on your turn, you can forgo taking an extra action to allow one ally in your skald's aura to take a standard action as a free action.

Level 11: Cling to Your Words

Your words of encouragement ring in your allies' ears even in the direst of times. When your allies would otherwise plunge into unconsciousness, they cling to your words in the hope of pulling out a victory.

Benefit: Whenever an ally in your skald's aura drops below 1 hit point, you can use the aura's healing benefit on that ally as an immediate reaction, but only if the aura's healing benefit has uses remaining.

Level 11: Inspiring Success

When you succeed, your allies see your triumph and take note. Though much of the time you are telling them tales of victory or singing songs of success, to actually see you drive your weapon into an enemy can do wonders to reinforce your words.

Inspiring Success — Master Skald Attack 11

When you successfully lay waste to an enemy, your allies are bolstered by the inspiring example you set.

Encounter ✦ Martial
No Action — Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a basic attack using a weapon.
Effect: The enemy takes 2d10 extra damage from the attack. In addition, you and each ally in your skald's aura gain temporary hit points equal to 5 + your Charisma modifier and can make a saving throw against one effect that a save can end.

Level 12: Assured Skill

Someone who has traveled as much as you have has seen more than one person's share of amazing feats of skill. You can relay these tales of achievement to your allies, helping them succeed on a task that they might otherwise fail.

Assured Skill — Master Skald Utility 12

You provide words of advice that can help turn the most difficult task into something that is within your ally's grasp.

Daily ✦ Martial
Free Action — Close burst 5
Trigger: You or one ally within 5 squares of you makes a skill check.
Target: The triggering character in the burst
Effect: The target can choose either to gain a +5 bonus to that skill check or to reroll the skill check and use either result.

Level 16: Expert Rejuvenation

When your words allow one of your allies to regain strength, they bring a level of comfort that soothes wounds better than even the most soothing balms.

Benefit: Whenever you restore hit points to a creature with a healing power, the creature regains 4 additional hit points.

Level 20: Death March

One of the most lethal arrows in your verbal quiver, this song can either be a dirge for the dead or a eulogy for the lost. When you recount it for your allies, it serves as a none too subtle reminder that death is what awaits them if they fail.

Death March — Master Skald Attack 20

You sing or speak words that exhort your allies not to fail, for death is all that remains for them if they do.

Daily ✦ Martial
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, your skald's aura gains the following effect: Once per round, you or an ally in your skald's aura can roll twice for an attack roll and use either result.

Legendary Witch

Prerequisite: Wizard (witch)

Your reputation as a witch runs far and wide. Bards and other storytellers weave colorful tales about your frightening powers, carrying those stories from land to land. Whether the tales portray you as a saint, a villain, or an enigmatic hand of fate, ordinary folk pray to the gods that you do not one day darken their doors.

Level 11: Favor of the Moon

When the moon enters the right phase, you grow stronger, drawing more deeply on your coven's experience while the moon reaches the peak of its power.

Benefit: You can see invisible creatures that are adjacent to you, and you are immune to the blinded condition.

Level 11: Moon Coven Action

Witches of the different moon covens learn to reach deep into their own reserves to inspire their allies, preserve themselves, or terrify their enemies.

Benefit: You gain a benefit that is associated with your moon coven.

Dark Moon Coven

Fear is the force that repels your enemies and causes them to think twice about challenging you. You wield fear as you would a beast on a chain, releasing it when you want to scatter your foes.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you push each enemy adjacent to you up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Full Moon Coven

Even in the darkest night, the light of the full moon illuminates the shadowed world.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, any enemy within 3 squares of you grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.

Level 11: Moon Coven Encounter Power

You have become a master at cursing your foes with the fate they deserve.

Benefit: You gain an encounter attack power associated with your moon coven, either madness of the full moon for the full moon coven or terror of the dark moon for the dark moon coven.

Madness of the Full Moon

The full moon is said to make lunatics of lovers and madmen. You know how to channel the moon's tidal pull and cast its radiance among your foes to send them into confusion.

Madness of the Full Moon — Legendary Witch Attack 11

Bright moonlight streams into your enemy's eyes, causing them to grow large and wide as madness overcomes your foe.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Charm, Enchantment, Implement, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d10 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.
Effect: The target is subjected to a random effect. Roll a d6.
1-2: The target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
3-4: The target is dazed until the end of your next turn.
5-6: The target takes a free action to charge or make a basic attack against the creature nearest to it (your choice if multiple creatures are nearest).

Terror of the Dark Moon

The night holds few terrors for you now. The same cannot be said of your enemies, who cannot fathom the doom that awaits them. With but a gesture, you can take away the light or conjure a deeper darkness in which even creatures born to shadow will find their fears revealed.

Terror of the Dark Moon — Legendary Witch Attack 11

You lower your palm, and with it descends the dark of a cold, moonless night, awakening the instinctive fear within your enemies and paralyzing them with dread.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold, Enchantment, Fear, Implement
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 20 squares
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Will
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier cold damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Effect: Your allies in the burst gain partial concealment until the end of your next turn.

Level 12: Moon Coven Utility Power

Your mastery of witchcraft allows you to cast spells of even greater power.

Benefit: You gain a utility power associated with your moon coven either dark moon's reckoning for the dark moon coven or moonlight's mischief for the full moon coven.

Dark Moon's Reckoning
Beneath the new moon, the tides rise in the springtime, when life begins anew. Drawing on this power, you can renew your fortune by turning the tides of fate in your favor and casting your enemies' hurts back upon them.

Dark Moon's Reckoning — Legendary Witch Utility 12

With a sneer, you twist the tides of fate to reverse the ill fortune your enemy seeks to visit upon you.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Immediate Interrupt Close burst 5
Trigger: An enemy within 5 squares of you hits you or an ally with an attack.
Target: The triggering enemy in the burst
Effect: You slide the target up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier, and the target grants combat advantage (save ends).

Moonlight's Mischief
The moon is known to play tricks on the eye, bending light and casting phantom shadows that make places appear different from what they had seemed. Your control of the full moon's silvery illumination gives you the power to transform the environment, moving your allies into optimal positions.

Moonlight's Mischief — Legendary Witch Utility 12

Shimmering moonlight streams from your form, casting long shadows and transforming the scene around you.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Teleportation
Move Action Close burst 3
Target: You and each ally in the burst
Effect: You teleport each target up to a number of squares equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Level 16: Ride the Night Wind
The most talented witches learn to cherish the night's embrace, for when they are beneath the moon, witches stand at the apex of their power. You have become able to tame the wild night winds. Whenever you call, they answer, enabling you to ride aloft in your true shape.

Ride the Night Wind — Legendary Witch Utility

You leap into the air and are borne aloft on the wind.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Standard Action Personal
Effect: You gain a fly speed of 8 until the end of your next turn. When the fly speed ends, you float to the ground without taking falling damage. While you are flying, you gain a +2 power bonus to Reflex.
Sustain Minor: The effect persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 20: Moon Coven Daily Power
In the way that moonlight and shadow change how forms are perceived, you can now take the shape of a creature of legend.

Benefit: You gain a daily attack power associated with your moon coven, either nightmare form for the dark moon coven or unicorn form for the full moon coven.

Nightmare Form
You have learned to transform into a dreaded creature that appears as a flaming horse. In this form, you can gallop around the battlefield, using your hooves to set foes aflame.

Nightmare Form — Legendary Witch Attack 20

Leaping tongues of flame burst from the ground. In their midst, you change into a black stallion with eyes of flame.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Polymorph
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the form of a Large nightmare until the end of the encounter or until you end the form as a minor action. While in this form, you have a speed of 8, a fly speed of 6, and resist 15 fire, and your equipment becomes part of the form. The only attacks you can make while in the form are melee basic attacks and the secondary power, which you can use only once.
Secondary Power (Arcane, Fire, Implement)
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Hit: 3d6 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.

Unicorn Form
The full moon sheds light by which the lost can find their way. When you change into a unicorn, your serene form inspires your allies to hold their ground.

Unicorn Form — Legendary Witch Attack 20

The glow of the full moon encompasses your form in a luminous orb. When it recedes, in your place stands a resplendent unicorn.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Polymorph, Teleportation
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the form of a Large unicorn until the end of the encounter or until you end the form as a minor action. While in this form, you have a speed of 8 and can teleport up to 4 squares as a move action, and your equipment becomes part of the form. Your allies gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses while within 2 squares of you. The only attacks you can make while in the form are melee basic attacks and the secondary power, which you can use only once.
Secondary Power (Arcane, Implement)
Standard Action Melee 1
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 5d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and you can push the target 1 square and knock it prone.
Miss: Half damage.

Inner Circle Initiate

Prerequisite: Druid (protector)

You become a pivotal member of your druid circle, having grown in both experience and influence. The powerful evocations you learn and the blessings you gain mark you as one chosen for greatness.

Level 11: Initiate's Action

As you channel greater levels of primal power, the mysteries bestowed on you by your druid circle lend the force of nature to your attacks.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to make an attack, you gain a bonus to damage rolls for that attack equal to the number of targets of that attack.

Level 11: Sheltering Growth

As a paragon protector, when you channel your power into the land around you, a measure of that energy is given back to aid an ally.

Benefit: When you use your nature's growth power, one ally in or adjacent to the burst gains temporary hit points equal to his or her healing surge value.

Level 11: Thorny Vines

You have long had the ability to call forth living plants even in the most inhospitable terrain. Now you channel a more formidable power, creating a burst of new growth that unleashes a primal destruction on your foes.

Thorny Vines — Inner Circle Initiate Attack 11

A mass of thorn-tipped vines springs up from the ground, allowing your allies to pass unscathed even as your foes are lashed to deadly effect.

Encounter ✦ Implement, Primal, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Wisdom modifier damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy that starts or ends its turn in the zone grants combat advantage until the start of its next turn.

Level 12: Speak with Animals and Plants

Your druid circle training has taught you to quiet your mind and listen to the nonverbal voices of the world around you. This evocation allows you to communicate with nearby animals and plants as though they were intelligent enough to converse with you. Through their senses, you are warned of danger and of the presence of hidden or invisible creatures, you can learn what has happened recently in the area, and you can extend your senses in the hope of noting trails, secret entrances, and the like.

Speak with Animals and Plants — Inner Circle Initiate Utility 12

The whispered calls of animals and the wind through the grass resolve into messages that you can understand.

Daily ✦ Primal
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you can speak to animal and plant life. Animals and plants can communicate what they have seen, heard, or otherwise sensed within the last hour (a hostile animal might try to mislead you). For the duration of the effect, you gain a +5 power bonus to Perception checks, and you cannot be surprised.

Level 16: Fury of the Raging Storm

When your enemies push you to your limits, they risk unleashing a storm that will quickly rage out of control.

Benefit: While you are bloodied, any enemy that ends its turn adjacent to you takes 10 lightning and thunder damage.

Level 20: Call Cyclone

The leaders of your druid circle are the masters of the natural world. They have shared with you the secrets of channeling the most potent force of nature. The great cyclone you can call now on is capable of pulverizing even the strongest foes. However, as you direct this storm across the field, your allies must be wary of its path.

Call Cyclone — Inner Circle Initiate Attack 20

Winds of destruction swirl as a storm of lightning and thunder pounds your enemies with nature's wrath.

Daily ✦ Implement, Lightning, Primal, Thunder, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d8 + Wisdom modifier lightning and thunder damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter or until you end this effect as a minor action. You can move the zone up to 4 squares as a move action. Any creature that ends its turn in the zone takes 10 lightning and thunder damage.

Rowena and Viltham deliver the ever-blooming rose to the city of Mithrendain.

Epic Destinies

The following epic destinies are available to any character who wishes to follow a destiny influenced by the Feywild and who meets the prerequisites.

Shiradi Champion

You live to serve Tiandra, the Queen of Summer, and the Court of Stars. In exchange for your service, the queen lets you draw power from her to protect the Feywild and its inhabitants from evil.

Prerequisite: 21st level, any nonevil alignment

Myriad archfey band together several times a year at the congress known as the Court of Stars, where they engage in diplomacy, schemes, marriages, betrayals, and legendary revels. Although dozens of lesser factions make up the Court of Stars, they mostly acknowledge the leadership of Her Summer Majesty, Queen Tiandra. And the Queen of Summer, when the need arises, turns to her anointed warriors for the defense of her subjects and allies. These warriors are known as Shiradi Champions, the shields of the fey.

Whereas eladrin nobles might rise through the ranks of coures, bralanis, ghaeles, and other complex titles, Shiradi Champions are usually individuals who have earned the respect and trust of Queen Tiandra. Archfey of all courts assemble at Senaliesse to bear witness to a champion's anointing. Some eye these protectors with suspicion, arrogance, or envy, but their pettiness is ill placed. Each Shiradi Champion is devoted to the lovely Queen of Summer and determined to justify her trust.

Some eladrin Shiradi Champions are also shiere knights (see Player's Handbook 2). A very few champions are not born as one of the fey, and their ascendancy to the role of Shiradi Champion is an unprecedented event, a testament to the champion's unique valor and great worth. Whatever path a champion takes, he or she is assuredly an ally and protector of good-natured fey beings everywhere.

Living the Destiny

You have become a legend among legends, and your anointment as a Shiradi Champion echoes throughout the world. Your name is used in bedtime stories and folk tales as a synonym for chivalry and courage. Fey seek you out, asking for your help. Mortals call your name out at fey crossings, seeking your might against enemies equally legendary. It is your burden to help them, thus spreading the influence of the Court of Stars.

ERIC BELISLE

Your greatest task is the defense of the Court of Stars from those who would see it torn asunder. You and your allies stand against cyclops warlords, mad fomorian kings, and dreadful hags, beating back their advances and recovering the lands lost during centuries of battle. In time, you might even receive a request for aid from the Queen of Summer to face down her own son, the Prince of Frost, mightiest of the Winter Fey. You strive to be ready for the task.

As a Shiradi Champion, you are the ultimate defender of all the good things represented by the Court of Stars. Your powers reflect the ephemeral and radiant nature of the Feywild's rulers.

Level 21: Fey Anointment

By the hand of Queen Tiandra, you are anointed as an exalted member of the Court of Stars. The blessings of the queen give greater power to your personality and quicker reactions to your body. Your eyes become the colored orbs common among the eladrin, but with a shining, golden tinge seen only among the higher nobles of the Court of Stars, and darkness poses no impediment to your sight.

Benefit: You increase one ability score of your choice by 2.

You are immune to charm effects.

Your origin becomes fey, meaning that you are considered a fey creature for the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin.

You gain darkvision, and you gain immunity to the blinded condition.

Level 24: Armor of Stars

The magic inherent to the Feywild suffuses your entire being, granting you a graceful majesty. As long as you are not injured, tiny motes of light swirl about you like constellations, shielding you from attacks. The protection these "stars" offer improves when other Shiradi Champions stand at your side.

Benefit: While you are not bloodied, you gain a +1 bonus to AC and Reflex. This bonus increases to +2 if you are adjacent to one or more allied Shiradi Champions.

Level 26: Audience with the Queen

As a champion of the Court of Stars, you have the privilege of requesting immediate audiences with Queen Tiandra. Upon your arrival, Her Summer Majesty heals your wounds with a touch. With brief words that reveal much to her, you explain the dire situation you are facing. Queen Tiandra's wise counsel offers you guidance through your trials. When you share this advice with other Shiradi Champions, they are also fortified by their queen's soothing words.

Audience with the Queen — Shiradi Champion Utility 26

You vanish from sight, only to return moments later, healed and bearing the gifts of the Queen of Summer.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Healing
Move Action Personal

Effect: You are removed from play. When you end your turn out of play this way, you choose one of the following benefits to receive. When you have received all three benefits, you return to play at the start of your next turn. Alternatively, you can return to play at the start of your turn after receiving only one or two of the benefits. When you return to play, each allied Shiradi Champion within 5 squares of you gains temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier + one-half your level.

- ✦ You regain hit points equal to your bloodied value.
- ✦ Until the end of the encounter, you gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls and skill checks.
- ✦ Until the end of the encounter, allied Shiradi Champions gain a +2 power bonus to saving throws while adjacent to you.

Level 30: Everlasting Champion

As you reach the pinnacle of your power, you are no longer a mere mortal, but rather an archetype made flesh. As a version of you falls, another takes its place. Its appearance might be slightly different, but its determination is unshakable.

Benefit: Once per day when you start your turn at 0 hit points or fewer, your body transforms into a slightly different variation of yourself, although your game statistics and equipment don't change. When you transform, you regain hit points equal to your bloodied value, you can stand up as a free action, and any adverse effects you are subject to end immediately.

In addition, your attacks deal extra radiant damage equal to your Charisma modifier until the end of the encounter.

Wild Hunter

Like the firbolgs, you are a master of the Wild Hunt, dispensing justice for those who cannot do so themselves. You call on the creatures of the hunt to help you seek your prey, so that it cannot hide from that justice.

Prerequisite: 21st level

Deep in the Feywild, far from the stately halls of the eladrin, a tradition has been upheld for eons. In shadowy forests thick with moss and undergrowth, the baying of hunting hounds sounds, followed by the long strides of their masters. As storm clouds cover the sky, the forest is no longer a realm of bedtime stories or folk tales. It becomes the province of the Wild Hunt.

The tradition of the Wild Hunt originated among the firbolgs, fey giants devoted to the moon and the Three Fates, personified by Sehanine (the Maiden), Melora (the Mother), and the Raven Queen (the Crone). The firbolgs call for a Wild Hunt when they seek to punish an oath breaker, for oaths are powerful things in the Feywild. Some mortals, their trust betrayed by the Unseelie fey, have learned to summon these eldritch hunters to bring down those who wronged them. A select few learn the ritual for summoning the hunters, but instead of asking for justice, request to learn the secrets of the Wild Hunt. Such requests are rarely accepted, but a worthy few learn the ways of the Wild Hunt, bringing retribution to all traitors and oath breakers.

Living the Destiny

As a Wild Hunter, you live for the chase. Your quests revolve around tracking down and dispatching oath breakers, either on behalf of those wronged by their failure, or simply to reestablish balance to the cosmos. As you bring down foe after foe, your prowess increases to the point that you turn your attention to the most infamous fey oath breaker—the evil goddess Lolth.

At first, you might have to settle for taking down her favored abyssal drow or her exarch. But the day nears when the clarions will call for the greatest of all Wild Hunts, and the Demon Queen of Spiders will feel that primal fear shared by all prey of the hunt.

Level 21: Soul of the Hunter

As you channel the raw power of the Wild Hunt, your very being is changed to match the fey origin of those who created the hunt. Your body becomes stronger and your reflexes quicker, even as your senses expand to reveal everything around you in clear detail. No track is too faint, no lie too convincing.

WILLIAM O'CONNOR

Benefit: You increase your Strength or Dexterity score by 2.

Your origin becomes fey, meaning that you are considered a fey creature for the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin.

In addition, you gain a +2 bonus to Insight checks and Perception checks.

Level 24: Strike of the Hunter

Your prowess translates into unerring strikes, which inflict deep wounds on your foes. The sight and smell of your enemy's ebbing life force intoxicates you, driving you on.

Benefit: Choose one of your encounter attack powers. Once per encounter, when you hit an enemy with that power, the attack also deals ongoing 10 damage (save ends). In addition, you have combat advantage against enemies taking ongoing damage.

Level 26: Hounds of the Hunt

With a loud whistle, you can call forth a pair of hounds from the Wild Hunt to help you bring down difficult prey. The eyes of these powerful, black-furred hounds flash with lightning, and their growls rumble with thunder as they surge toward your enemies. They obey your commands without hesitation, ferreting out prey and leaving it open to your strike.

Hounds of the Hunt Wild Hunter Utility 26

Two powerful hounds appear, growling thunder at your prey. They start circling it to cut off any escape.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 5
Effect: You summon two Medium hounds of the hunt, each appearing in an unoccupied square within range. Enemies grant combat advantage while adjacent to either hound.

Each hound has a speed of 8 and a fly speed of 8 (hover). Each hound has hit points equal to your healing surge value and uses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties, with a +2 bonus to AC and Reflex. Each hound lasts until the end of the encounter or until it drops to 0 hit points. You lose a healing surge if both hounds are destroyed.

As a minor action, you can mentally direct both hounds to crawl, escape, run, stand up, shift, squeeze, or walk. The hounds do not need to perform the same action.

Level 30: Avatar of the Wild Hunt

The Three Fates worshiped by the firbolgs watch you with a keen interest. When an enemy dares strike you down, the Three Fates intervene, giving you a chance to prove that you are not destined to fall yet. The power of the Wild Hunt rushes into your form, turning you into an avatar of its will.

Benefit: Once per day when you start your turn at 0 hit points or fewer, you assume the form of the Avatar of the Wild Hunt until the end of the encounter. When you assume this form, you regain hit points equal to your bloodied value, and you regain the use of every encounter attack power that you have used during the encounter.

While in the form, your size becomes Large if it was Medium or smaller, and your melee reach increases by 1. In addition, when you use an at-will attack power, you can score a critical hit on a roll of 18–20.

Witch Queen

You are a master of witches and have learned the secret to incorporating the tremendous power of magic into your very being. With such power, your name is destined to be remembered with awe.

Prerequisite: 21st level, wizard

Few heroes have borne the name Witch Queen (or Witch King), but those few have inspired awe, fear, and dread.

These beings become living legends, the stock character in the myths, fairy tales, and horror stories of every race, as awe-inspiring as they are terrifying. Those who have accepted this mantle have learned to incorporate their power into their being, no longer treating it as a source separate from their form.

Before becoming a Witch Queen, those who aspired to fill the role were conflicted between three aspects: one's power, one's familiar, and one's self. But when one becomes a king or queen of all witches, these aspects merge, allowing a Witch Queen or Witch King to bring forth spells as easily as if his or her familiar had whispered the arcane words directly into their ear. These individuals are near equals to their patrons in power, and armies clamor to their banners, while mortals and immortals alike seek their counsel to beg their favor or plead for their mercy.

Living the Destiny

As your power grows, you ascend to a status like that of royalty among others who practice your craft. Though you are not a monarch in the true sense, the power you wield means that many bow to your wishes, or face your wrath. You stand as an equal to fey nobles, and eventually grow in power to challenge the Summer Queen. More than a formidable spellcaster, you are now a player in the great power struggles of the Feywild.

When you approach the peak of your power, others will challenge you, trying to end your rise before you become a rival to their masters. You might face assassins, powerful fey, or even armies that wish to put an end to your ascension, but those conflicts are the bedrock for the stories to come that extol your greatness. In time, you might fade into the myths and legends of the natural world, but your rise to power—and the deeds both cruel and kind that you become known for—will become the fairy tales of tomorrow.

Level 21: Witch Apotheosis

As one of the mightiest witches, you have experienced an apotheosis and become one with your power. Now, even when your foes would strike you down, your familiar can whisk your spirit away so that you can regenerate.

Benefit: The first time each day that you would die while your familiar is present, you do not die. Instead, your familiar seizes your spirit and is then removed from play as it carries your spirit away to a secret extraplanar sanctuary. After 24 hours, you build a new body for your spirit, and you can reappear near one of your allies that was present when you died. If none of your allies were present when you died, or those allies are no longer alive, you can reappear in the place where you last took an extended rest.

Level 24: Witch Queen's Presence

The power your patron has bestowed upon you radiates from every fiber of your being, manifesting around you like the majestic aspect of a god when you steel yourself against harm.

Benefit: When you use your second wind, you gain resist 15 to all damage and a +5 bonus to saving throws. These benefits last until the end of your next turn.

Level 26: True Prophecy

The future is always in flux, but a Witch Queen can behold the immediate course of events as easily as a common farmer gazes at distant clouds and predicts rain. To glean more concrete details about a near-future event, you can use the true prophecy power to view an event's possible outcomes and prepare for them. The context of the event might be ambiguous or surprising, but the knowledge you gain is enough to prepare yourself or an ally against the dangers that are to come.

True Prophecy — Witch Queen Utility 26

Your divination gives you a clear image of an event soon to transpire, allowing you to prepare.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Standard Action Ranged 5
Requirement: You must not be in a combat encounter.
Target: You or one ally
Effect: During the target's next encounter before his or her next extended rest, the target gains the following benefit: a +2 power bonus to initiative, skill checks, and all defenses until the end of the encounter.

RYAN BARGER

Level 30: Mastery of the Gift

At last your learning is complete. Your gift of power is no longer a force you call upon, but a trait inherent in your very being. Now, even your least used spells form upon your lips in an instant, marshaling to your command as soldiers before a fearsome monarch.

Benefit: At the end of a short rest, when you confer with your familiar, you can replace one of your wizard encounter attack powers with another wizard encounter attack power. The new power must have a level, and its level must be the same as the old power's level.

Feats

The feats in this section enhance a character's connection to the Feywild, provide support for the classes featured in this book, and expand the options available to members of fey races.

In the Feats table, the feats are separated into categories to ease your selection process. For example, if you're looking to focus on your character's racial connection to the Feywild, consider one of the new racial feats. Alternatively, if you're looking to flavor an existing character with fey traits, take a look at the new fey feats, such as Fey Bond.

Arcane Familiar [Familiar] You have attracted a small creature into your service that will aid you in your adventures. (See page 131 for a selection of familiars.)

Prerequisite: Any arcane class

Benefit: You gain a familiar. For each familiar feat you have beyond this one, your familiar gains a +1 bonus to all defenses.

Arcane Porter [Familiar] With great effort, your familiar can pick up a light item for you, using its limbs, mouth, or an invisible, magical force to move the object.

Prerequisite: Arcane Familiar feat

Benefit: Your familiar can pick up and carry an unattended object weighing 5 pounds or less. It can hold only one object at a time.

Battle Berserker [Multiclass Barbarian] The fury of a barbarian resides within you, and you can unleash it when your anger is stoked.

Prerequisite: Strength 13

Benefit: You gain training in a skill of your choice from the barbarian's list of class skills.

You also gain the berserker barbarian's Berserker Fury feature, but you can use it only once per day.

Beastwalker Circle You gain the ability to take on the forms of beasts.

Prerequisite: Druid, summon natural ally power

Benefit: You gain the wild shape power. Additionally, you can take a druid daily attack power at any level where you would normally gain an additional use of the summon natural ally power. If you do so, you do not gain the additional use of summon natural ally.

Wild Shape — Druid Utility

You assume an aspect of the Primal Beast or return to your humanoid form.

At-Will (Special) ✦ Polymorph, Primal
Minor Action — Personal

Effect: You change from your humanoid form to beast form or vice versa. When you change from beast form back to your humanoid form, you can shift 1 square. While you are in beast form, you can't use weapon or implement attack powers that lack the beast form keyword, although you can sustain such powers.

You choose a specific form whenever you use this power to change into beast form. The beast form is your size, resembles a natural beast or a fey beast, and normally doesn't change your game statistics. Your equipment becomes part of your beast form, but you drop anything you are holding, except implements you can use. You continue to gain the benefits of the equipment you wear, except a shield.

You can use the properties and the powers of implements as well as magic items that you wear, but not the properties or the powers of weapons or the powers of wondrous items. While equipment is part of your beast form, it cannot be removed, and anything in a container that is part of your beast form is inaccessible.

Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Berserk Vitality When the rage overtakes you, you ignore fresh wounds for a time, allowing you to continue the fight.

Prerequisite: Barbarian, Berserker Fury class feature

Benefit: When you enter your Berserker Fury, you gain temporary hit points equal to your healing surge value.

Call to the Wild You can summon powerful forces of nature to help in your adventures.

Prerequisite: Druid

Benefit: Choose one of your druid daily attack powers that has a level. You lose that power and gain the summon natural ally power, which you can use to summon a creature that is associated with your

MULTICLASS FEATS

This section contains a handful of multiclass feats, each of which has "Multiclass" in brackets next to its name. Such feats were introduced in the Player's Handbook and follow these rules. First, you can't take a multiclass feat for your own class. Second, you can't take class-specific multiclass feats for more than one class (for example, if you have a feat that is designated as "Multiclass Barbarian," you can't take one designated as "Multiclass Bard"). Third, if you have a class-specific multiclass feat, you are considered a member of the class for the purpose of meeting prerequisites, such as those for feats and paragon paths.

FEATS

| Barbarian | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Berserk Vitality | Berserker Fury | Gain temporary hit points when you enter berserker fury |
| Bard | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Skald Training | Majestic word | Exchange majestic word for skald's aura |
| Druid | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Beastwalker Circle | Summon natural ally | Gain wild shape, exchange summon natural ally for druid daily power |
| Call to the Wild | — | Exchange druid daily power for one use of summon natural ally |
| Multiclass | Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Battle Berserker | Str 13, any class but barbarian | Barbarian: Skill training, berserker fury 1/day |
| Harbinger of Nature's Wrath | Wis 13, any class but druid | Druid: Nature skill, nature's growth 1/day, staff and totem proficiency |
| Master of Stories | Cha 13, any class but bard | Bard: Skill training, skald's aura 1/encounter, wand proficiency |
| Witchcraft Initiate | Int 13, any class but wizard | Wizard: Arcana skill, augury, orb, staff, and wand proficiency |
| Eladrin | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Fey Duelist | Fey step | Use fey step to gain combat advantage |
| Fey Thievery | Fey step | Use fey step to perform Thievery checks at range |
| Elf | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
| High Elf Kin | Elven accuracy | Teleport after elven accuracy, +2 to Arcana checks |
| Gnome | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Fading Sneak | Fade away, trained in Stealth | Reroll a Stealth check |
| Fading Target | Fade away | Use fade away when an enemy misses |
| Ghost Feint | Ghost sound, trained in Bluff | +5 to Bluff when you use ghost sound |
| Hamadryad | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Guardian of the Towering Oak | Hamadryad aspects | Reroll a Diplomacy check or an Intimidate check |
| Guardian of the Weeping Willow | Level 11, hamadryad aspects | Ignore forced movement as an immediate interrupt |
| Pixie | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Flitting Harrier | Level 11 | No opportunity attacks for entering or leaving an enemy's space |
| Streak of Light | — | Gain combat advantage against enemies you charge |
| Teeny Target | — | Gain partial cover when in ally's space |
| Satyr | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Honeyed Words | Lure of enchantment | Reroll a Bluff check or a Diplomacy check |
| Powerful Lure | Level 11, lure of enchantment | Slide enemies farther with lure of enchantment |
| Walk among Men | — | Appear as an eladrin, elf, or human |
| Wilden | Other Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Nature's Roots | Nature's Aspect | Use Nature's Aspect to create difficult terrain |
| Plant's Sap | — | Ignore need for food, gain extended rest in 4 hours, +2 to saving throws for ongoing damage |
| Vine's Arms | Nature's Aspect | +2 to Acrobatics checks, increase reach with Nature's Aspect |
| Fey | Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Fey Bond | Trained in Arcana | Gain Elven, +2 to Bluff and Diplomacy checks |
| Fey Cantrip | Fey origin or Fey Bond | Gain a cantrip |
| Fey Shift | Level 21, fey origin or Fey Bond | Teleport 2 squares as move action |
| Familiar | Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Arcane Familiar | Any arcane class | You gain a familiar |
| Arcane Porter | Arcane Familiar | Your familiar can carry a 5-pound object |
| Familiar's Vitality | Arcane Familiar | Your familiar improves your second wind |
| Implement Training | Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Totem Expertise | — | +1 to attack rolls with totems, ignore partial cover and partial concealment on those attacks |
| Weapon Training | Prerequisites | Benefit |
| Two-Handed Weapon Expertise | — | +1 to attack rolls with two-handed melee weapons, +1 to damage rolls of charge attacks with two-handed melee weapons |

Primal Aspect (such as Primal Guardian or Primal Predator) and that has a level equal to or lower than the daily attack power you lost.

Fading Sneak Invisibility is a powerful tool, but you've learned to channel your innate power in a more subtle way, becoming slightly transparent to better blend in with your surroundings.

Prerequisite: Gnome, fade away racial power, trained in Stealth

Benefit: If your fade away is not expended, you can reroll a Stealth check and use either result. Doing so expends fade away.

Fading Target Some gnomes are a bit too paranoid, instinctively disappearing from sight even when an enemy's blow fails to connect properly. You've learned to turn this trait into an advantage in combat.

Prerequisite: Gnome, fade away racial power

Benefit: As an immediate reaction, you can use fade away when an enemy misses you with a melee attack.

Familiar's Vitality [Familiar] Your familiar's devotion to you emanates from it, empowered by its own magical nature. When you need it the most, you find strength in that devotion.

Prerequisite: Arcane Familiar feat

Benefit: When you use your second wind and your familiar is within 10 squares of you, you regain 3 additional hit points. The additional hit points increase to 6 at 11th level and 9 at 21st level.

Fey Bond Through your knowledge and experience of the fey, you have acquired some of their qualities, perhaps as a reward from the Feywild's archfey, and you have learned the language of the elves and their kin.

Prerequisite: Training in Arcana

Benefit: You gain a +2 feat bonus to Bluff checks and Diplomacy checks.

In addition, you can speak, read, and write Elven.

Fey Cantrip You have picked up a magic trick as a result of your connection to the Feywild.

Prerequisite: Fey origin or Fey Bond feat

Benefit: Choose one wizard cantrip, such as mage hand or prestidigitation. You gain that power.

Fey Duelist Eladrin swashbucklers are fond of using fey step to confound foes. By teleporting rapidly around your enemies, you have developed a strategy to flank opponents without the help of allies.

Prerequisite: Eladrin, fey step racial power

Benefit: If your fey step is not expended, you can gain combat advantage until the end of your next turn against each enemy that is adjacent to you. Doing so expends fey step.

Fey Shift Harnessing a power that is innate to many Feywild creatures, you can step through planar shortcuts, albeit only for short distances.

Prerequisite: 21st level, fey origin or Fey Bond feat

Benefit: You can teleport up to 2 squares as a move action.

Fey Thievery For all their nobility and poise, eladrin have seen more than their share of ne'er-do-wells. It was only a matter of time before these roguish eladrin found a way to use their ability to teleport for shady purposes, and you have mastered it.

Prerequisite: Eladrin, fey step racial power, trained in Thievery

Benefit: While your fey step is not expended, you can make a Thievery check at a range of 5 squares. If you do so, you take a –2 penalty to the check.

Flitting Harrier You fly so quickly around your foes that they have trouble catching you.

Prerequisite: 11th level, pixie

Benefit: When you enter or leave an enemy's space, you do not provoke an opportunity attack from that enemy.

Ghost Feint Playing tricks on others is second nature to gnomes, and a quick, well-placed illusory sound can divert the most alert opponent. You know how to combine the two to catch an enemy off balance.

Prerequisite: Gnome, ghost sound power, trained in Bluff

Benefit: When you use ghost sound, you gain a +5 power bonus to your next Bluff check before the end of your next turn.

Guardian of the Towering Oak When you embrace your natural heritage, you seem to grow more imposing, like the mighty oak trees that your people venerate.

Prerequisite: Hamadryad, hamadryad aspects racial power

Benefit: If your hamadryad aspects is not expended, you can reroll a Diplomacy check or an Intimidate check and use either result. Doing so expends hamadryad aspects.

Guardian of the Weeping Willow Your spirit is bound to that of the weeping willow tree, and like the willow you bend, but do not break, when strong forces push against you.

Prerequisite: 11th level, hamadryad, hamadryad aspects racial power

Viltham uses his magic to distract a prowling displacer beast while he and Rowena explore the ruins of Cendriane

Benefit: If your hamadryad aspects is not expended, you can use an immediate interrupt to negate a pull, push, or slide against you. Doing so expends hamadryad aspects.

Harbinger of Nature's Wrath [Multiclass Druid]

You can call forth the rapid growth of nature to hinder your foes while you deliver your vengeance to them.

Prerequisite: Wisdom 13

Benefit: You gain training in the Nature skill. You also gain the protector druid's nature's growth power, but you can use it only once per day.

In addition, you gain proficiency with the staff and totem implements.

High Elf Kin

Fey magic runs strong in your family, a reminder of your race's beginning in the Feywild.

Prerequisite: Elf, elven accuracy racial power

Benefit: Immediately after you use elven accuracy, you can teleport up to 2 squares as a free action.

In addition, you gain a +2 feat bonus to Arcana checks.

Honeyed Words

You have a talent for choosing the right words in any situation, making it difficult for others to resist giving you what you want.

Prerequisite: Satyr, lure of enchantment racial power

Benefit: If your lure of enchantment is not expended, you can reroll a Bluff check or a Diplomacy check and use either result. Doing so expends lure of enchantment.

Master of Stories [Multiclass Bard]

You have studied the lore and history of the world as a bard does, and you can inspire your allies with such tales.

Prerequisite: Charisma 13

Benefit: You gain training in a skill of your choice from the bard's list of class skills.

You also gain the skald bard's skald's aura power. You and your allies can draw on the aura for healing only once per encounter.

In addition, you gain proficiency with the wand implement.

Nature's Roots

By calling upon hidden roots deep within the earth, you can cause plants in the vicinity to rise and hamper your enemy's steps.

ERIC BELISLE

Prerequisite: Wilden, Nature's Aspect racial trait

Benefit: If the racial power granted by your Nature's Aspect is not expended, you can lose one use of the power as a minor action to create difficult terrain for your enemies in a burst 1 within 5 squares of you. The difficult terrain lasts until the end of your next turn.

Plant's Sap

Your body is sustained by a thick, sap-like fluid instead of regular blood. You draw sustenance from water and sunlight, and you rest by rooting to the ground or to a spot. Your sap doesn't flow as freely as blood, making you resistant to cuts and bruises.

Prerequisite: Wilden

Benefit: You do not need to eat. You also do not need to sleep and instead enter a state of inactivity for 4 hours to gain the benefits of an extended rest. While in this state, you are fully aware of your surroundings and notice approaching enemies and other events as normal.

In addition, you gain a +2 feat bonus to saving throws against ongoing damage.

Powerful Lure

You can use your enchanting tune to lead your enemies where you wish as quickly as they can follow.

Prerequisite: Level 11, satyr, lure of enchantment racial power

Benefit: When you use lure of enchantment, you can slide the target up to 6 squares, instead of the normal distance, and you can slide it into hindering terrain.

Skald Training

You follow a tradition similar to that of a skald, but with a stronger focus on the study of arcane magic.

Prerequisite: Bard, majestic word power

Benefit: You swap your majestic word for the skald's aura power. You and your allies can use minor actions to benefit from the aura only as many times during an encounter as you would be able to use majestic word.

Streak of Light

When you fly quickly toward your foe to attack, you glow brightly and startle even the most stalwart enemy.

Prerequisite: Pixie

Benefit: When you make a charge attack, you gain combat advantage for that attack.

Teeny Target

You are so small that your enemies have a hard time picking you out from among your companions.

Prerequisite: Pixie

Benefit: While you are in an ally's space, you have partial cover against melee attacks and ranged attacks.

Totem Expertise

As you master the use of totems, the primal spirits guide your attacks.

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to implement attack rolls you make with a totem. This bonus increases to +2 at 11th level and +3 at 21st level.

Also, you ignore partial cover and partial concealment on implement attacks you make with a totem.

Two-Handed Weapon Expertise

You are a master of wielding two-handed melee weapons, and you can deal devastating amounts of damage when you charge.

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to weapon attack rolls you make with a two-handed melee weapon. In addition, you gain a +1 bonus to the damage rolls of charge attacks you make with a two-handed melee weapon. Both of these bonuses increase to +2 at 11th level and +3 at 21st level.

Vine Arms

Your body is more flexible and double-jointed than the bodies of most other creatures. When you channel the power of nature, you can stretch your limbs like vines, allowing you to strike a distant foe.

Prerequisite: Wilden, Nature's Aspect racial trait

Benefit: You gain a +2 feat bonus to Acrobatics checks.

In addition, when you use your Nature's Aspect racial power, your melee reach increases by 1 until the end of your next turn.

Walk among Men

You have learned to disguise yourself as a member of other races, allowing you to walk among humans, eladrin, and elves as though you were one of them.

Prerequisite: Satyr

Benefit: During a short rest, you can change your appearance to that of a male human, eladrin, or elf. Your face and build remain recognizably yours, but you otherwise appear to be a member of the chosen race. This illusion lasts until you end it as a minor action or until you die.

Witchcraft Initiate [Multiclass Wizard]

You have the ability to gaze into the future, searching for signs and portents in the haze of uncertainty that will point the way toward success.

Prerequisite: Intelligence 13

Benefit: You gain training in the Arcana skill.

You also gain the witch wizard's augury power.

In addition, you gain proficiency with the orb, staff, and wand implements.

Familiars

Each familiar description includes the benefits a familiar provides. For more familiars, see Arcane Power and D&D Insider.

Constant Benefits: A familiar provides you with these benefits as long it has at least 1 hit point, regardless of its current mode.

Active Benefits: When your familiar is in active mode, in addition to being able to take the actions available to it in that mode (see the "Your Familiar" sidebar), it provides its active benefits.

Bat — Familiar

Bats are common familiars for warlocks and those who prefer subtle magic and stealth.

Senses blindsight 5
Speed 2, fly 6 (hover)

Constant Benefit

You gain a +2 bonus to Perception checks and Stealth checks.

Active Benefits

See the Unseen: As a minor action, you cause enemies adjacent to your bat familiar to lose the benefits of partial concealment against you until the end of this turn.

Cat — Familiar

Cats are willful, independent familiars. Their willingness to act alone makes them excellent spies.

Senses low-light vision
Speed 6

Constant Benefits

✦ You gain a +2 bonus to Acrobatics checks.
✦ You can make an Acrobatics check to reduce the damage you take from falling even if you are not trained in that skill.

Active Benefits

Independent Spirit: A cat familiar has no range limit on the distance it can exist away from you.
Silent Predator: A cat familiar gains a +5 bonus to its Stealth checks.

Coure Attendant — Familiar

Sometimes the Court of the Stars honors promising spellcasters with coure familiars, which look like miniature eladrin and have gossamer wings sprouting from their shoulders.

Senses low-light vision
Speed 4, fly 6

Constant Benefits

✦ You gain a +2 bonus to Arcana checks.
✦ Once per round, you can retrieve or store an item as a free action instead of a minor action.

Active Benefits

Feylight Form: Once per encounter as a minor action, the coure attendant can assume the form of a twinkling ball of light. While in this form, it gains a +2 bonus to all defenses and sheds dim light within 2 squares. Enemies grant combat advantage to you while in this light. The coure attendant is immobilized in this form. You can spend a free action to return it to its normal form.

YOUR FAMILIAR

Your familiar is a spirit that accompanies you as your friend and ally. It doesn't need to eat or breathe.

Modes: A familiar has two modes, active and passive. You can switch your familiar between these modes as a minor action. When your familiar is in active mode, you can gain the active benefit described in its statistics block.

In passive mode, your familiar shares your space, perched on your shoulder or tucked inside your clothing, and it can't be targeted or damaged by any effect. If your familiar is not in your space when you switch it to passive mode, it appears in your space.

In active mode, your familiar takes up the space of a Tiny creature. The familiar is immune to your attacks in this mode, although you can ignore this benefit. An active familiar can take actions—within its capabilities—but you must spend the relevant action for it to act. A familiar doesn't have its own set of actions.

Attributes: In addition to the characteristics given in its statistics block, these facts are also true about your familiar.

Attacks: It can't attack, and it can't flank.

Defenses: It uses your defenses.

Skills and Checks: It uses your modifiers for all skill checks and ability checks.

Hit Points and Dying: Your familiar has 1 hit point, but a missed attack never damages it. If your familiar drops to 0 hit points, it is destroyed. After your next short or extended rest, it reappears in passive mode in your space. If you die, your familiar dies with you. If you are restored to life, so is your familiar.

Communication: You and your familiar can speak to each other, but no one else understands what either of you is saying. The familiar can repeat what it hears in a language you know, but it can't understand other languages.

Movement and Range: You can move your familiar as a move action. The familiar has its own speed and movement modes, and it can't move more than 20 squares away from you. If it tries to do so, it appears back in your space in passive mode.

Objects: A familiar cannot pick up or manipulate objects, unless noted otherwise.

Falcon — Familiar

Warrior spellcasters—those who love to wade into the fray—see the falcon as the ideal familiar.

Speed 2, fly 6 (hover)

Constant Benefits

- ✦ You gain a +2 bonus to Perception checks.
- ✦ You gain a +2 bonus to all defenses against opportunity attacks.

Active Benefits

Hunting Falcon: Once per encounter, you can determine range for your ranged arcane attacks from your falcon until the end of your current turn.

Soaring Spirit: A falcon familiar has a range limit of 40 squares from you.

Fiddling Grig — Familiar

This tiny sprite has the upper body of a humanoid, but the wings, antennae, and legs of a cricket. It wears a gaily colored vest and plays a miniature fiddle.

Senses low-light vision
Speed 4, fly 6

Constant Benefit

You can master and perform bard rituals as if you had the Ritual Caster feat. The grig can act as a focus for any bard ritual that requires a musical instrument worth less than 100 gp.

Active Benefit

Irresistible Dance: Once per round, when you hit an enemy with an arcane attack power and the enemy is adjacent to the fiddling grig, that enemy cannot make opportunity attacks until the end of your next turn.

Owl — Familiar

A common symbol of wisdom and knowledge, owl familiars are known for their good counsel and insight.

Senses low-light vision
Speed 2, fly 6 (hover)

Constant Benefit

Whenever you make an Insight check or a Perception check, add 1d4 to the result.

Active Benefit

Owl's Eyes: As a standard action, you can see through your familiar's eyes until the end of your next turn. You do not gain the ability to use powers or attack through the familiar, and you determine if a target has cover and concealment from you as normal, but you might spot an enemy coming around a corner or notice a foe hiding behind a wall.

Rat — Familiar

The rat is a scavenger capable of infiltrating even the most tightly guarded places.

Speed 6

Constant Benefit

You gain a +2 bonus to Stealth checks.

Active Benefit

Rat's Cunning: A rat familiar can carry an object that weighs up to 2 pounds, and it can manipulate objects to make Thievery checks. It gains a +2 bonus to such checks. A rat gains a +5 bonus to its Stealth checks.

Raven — Familiar

Ravens are known for their keen senses and skill in uncovering hidden knowledge.

Senses low-light vision
Speed 2, fly 6 (hover)

Constant Benefit

You gain a +4 bonus to Perception checks made to find hidden objects.

Active Benefit

Raven's Speech: A raven can speak any language you know, and it can converse with other creatures. When it speaks, you hear everything it says and hear everything spoken to it. You can dictate its answers if you so choose.

Serpent — Familiar

The serpent is a deceptive creature, and it offers its master the same mastery of guile and cunning.

Speed 6

Constant Benefits

- ✦ You gain a +2 bonus to Bluff checks.
- ✦ When you shift, you can ignore the difficult terrain in a single square of that movement.

Active Benefit

Serpent's Startle: Once per encounter as a minor action, all creatures adjacent to your serpent familiar can't make opportunity attacks until the end of your next turn.

Spider — Familiar

Spiders are guardians of hidden knowledge that weave webs capable of grabbing and moving small objects.

Speed 4, climb 4

Constant Benefits

- ✦ You gain a +2 bonus to Athletics checks to climb.
- ✦ Enemies take a -1 penalty to saving throws against your arcane powers that immobilize or slow them.

Active Benefit

Spider's Web: As a minor action, a spider can slide an object within 5 squares of it up to 2 squares. The object must be unattended, and it can weigh no more than 5 pounds.

Sprite — Familiar

Sprites are almost as common in the Feywild as birds are in the natural world. You have befriended a minor sprite, who helps you with its innate sense of magic and its glowing wings.

Senses low-light vision
Speed 4, fly 6

Constant Benefits

- ✦ You gain a +2 bonus to Arcana checks.
- ✦ You can make an Arcana check as a minor action, rather than a standard action, to sense the presence of magic.

Active Benefit

Light: As a minor action, you command the sprite to shed bright light in a 4-square radius. As a free action, you can command the sprite to douse the light.

Feywild Gear

In the Feywild, magic is so common that extraordinary items imbued with a small amount of magic can seem ordinary to that realm's inhabitants. The following items can be purchased in the Feywild as easily as mundane items can be acquired in the world. Although they contain Feywild magic, these items aren't powerful enough to be wondrous items, and they are usually made by crafters who do not have the ability to enchant magic items. The items' magic is instead imparted through their crafting techniques or through the nature of their source material.

FEYWILD ADVENTURING GEAR

| Item | Price | Weight |
|---|---|---|
| Cockatrice venom | 100 gp | 1/10 lb. |
| Cold iron shackles | 30 gp | 10 lb. |
| Cold iron shavings, 1 bag | 50 gp | 1 lb. |
| Doppelganger mask | 250 gp | 1 lb. |
| Faerie puppet | 2 gp | 1/2 lb. |
| False path stones, 1 bag | 200 gp | 2 lb. |
| Feywine raisin | 15 gp | — |
| Flower of the dawn | 25 gp | — |
| Flowers of the Summer Queen's gown | 65 gp | — |
| Frozen tears (1) | 25 gp | 1/2 lb. |
| Gray rain cloak | 20 gp | 3 lb. |
| Hair of fairy hues | 5 gp | — |
| Night's mantle | 1,000 gp | 4 lb. |
| Pixie music box | 50 gp | — |
| Rain stick | 150 gp | 1 lb. |
| Screaming scarecrow | 50 gp | 15 lb. |
| Senaliesse chrysanthemum | 10 gp | — |
| Snake oil | 500 gp | 1/10 lb. |
| Spiderweb dream net | 30 gp | — |
| Star-indigo seeds, 1 pouch | 5 gp | 1/10 lb. |
| Sweetheart's confection | 10 gp | — |
| Wolfsbane, 1 bundle | 5 gp | 1/10 lb. |

Cockatrice Venom

Organic materials coated in cockatrice venom slowly turn to stone over the course of 4 hours. One dose is enough to turn a single, handheld object to stone.

Creatures in contact with the venom do not fully turn to stone, but the venom does petrify the surface area of a creature's body that comes into contact with it, giving that area a stone-like appearance for a few minutes. Potters, sculptors, and other artisans who need to quickly set their work into a permanent state often use the venom.

Cold Iron Shackles

Cold iron is anathema to fey, and such a creature imprisoned within these shackles cannot teleport. Otherwise, these shackles function like any other.

Cold Iron Shavings

Fey creatures cannot abide contact with cold iron, and they will not touch any item placed in a bag filled with cold iron shavings. Used as part of the Magic Circle ritual, cold iron shavings can prevent fey creatures from crossing the perimeter of the circle. Each bag contains enough cold iron shavings for the creation of a single circle, and if used as a part of that ritual, lessens the penalty to the Arcana check from –10 to –5 to determine the level of creatures that cannot pass through the circle.

Doppelganger Mask

Gnome artists excel at crafting duplicates of creatures' faces and making them into masks. Not actually magical in construction, a doppelganger mask is so well crafted that it makes its wearer resemble one particular creature, usually as designated by the artist's patron. One of these masks attaches tightly to the face of any creature that dons it, allowing the wearer to perfectly adopt the features of the creature that the mask depicts. A creature wearing a doppelganger mask gains a +5 bonus to Bluff checks to disguise itself as the kind of creature the mask depicts, as long as the wearer's body generally resembles that of such a creature.

A doppelganger mask tears apart when removed from the face, so each can be used only once. Spies and members of the Unseelie underworld often use them, and some masks make their way to criminal organizations in the natural world.

Faerie Puppet

This small fey animate, usually made of wood or cloth, is designed to entertain eladrin children. As with an ordinary puppet, its controller begins moving it by manipulating it with strings. Thereafter, a minor enchantment allows the puppet to continue to move on its own after the puppeteer releases the strings. If the puppet encounters blocking terrain, it randomly turns left or right and continues in the new direction. It does not stop until a creature within 5 squares of it commands it to do so in Elven.

False Path Stones

Devious creatures that want to bait unwitting mortals into entering the Feywild for the first time use these tiny, charmed stones to cruel effect. When a creature takes a few stones from the bag and places them on the ground, a small gravel path springs up that looks like a well-traveled route leading in whatever direction the creature chooses. Once a route has been started, the stones in a bag can be used only for that route, and the rest of them must be laid continually. The path can be up to 5 miles long, provided the creature blazing the trail walks the entire distance, dropping the rest of the stones from time to time along the way. The path lasts for a day before it disappears; the area it described returns to the state it was in before the stones were used, and the stones become like any other ordinary rocks scattered in the wilderness.

Scouts in the wild use false path stones to create simple roads that make travel easier for those following behind them.

Feywine Raisin

Grapes grown in the Feywild are so lush that even when they are dried and made into raisins, the raisins retain most of the grapes' essence and potential. When a feywine raisin is stirred into a goblet of water, the raisin dissolves and the mixture instantly ferments, creating wine.

Flower of the Dawn

Found only near the Maze of Fathaghn, this rare flower emits a fragrance that instantly awakens a sleeping creature, even one in an enchanted slumber, as long as the enchantment was meant to last no longer than a day. The flower must be placed near the sleeper's nose and pinched (a minor action) to release the fragrance. This act destroys the blossom and awakens the sleeper.

Flowers of the Summer Queen's Gown

As Queen Tiandra treads through Senaliesse, summer flowers bloom wherever the long train of her gossamer gown sweeps the ground. A flower brought to life in this manner blooms eternal in the Feywild, and its beauty never fades. Wherever the seeds of these flowers are scattered, even the hardest barren ground or frozen tundra blooms anew with flowers for one day.

Frozen Tears

Many icicles hang from the Prince of Frost's Fortress of Frozen Tears. These icicles, known themselves as frozen tears, are said to be sorrow made manifest. Even when they carried away from the prince's demesne in the Vale of the Long Night, frozen tears do not melt, instead chilling any object or creature in contact with them. Although they aren't cold enough to cause damage, frozen tears are fervently sought by Feywild merchants, who use them to keep perishable goods chilled during transport—a handy trick for bringing specialized food and drink to the courts to satisfy the refined appetites of the archfey.

Gray Rain Cloak

A garment of this sort, made from the substance of a rainy Feywild afternoon, is created through the performance of a minor ritual. The garment looks and feels like a normal wool cloak, except that it keeps its wearer completely dry in the rain. When the cloak is spread out on the ground, it becomes a puddle of pure rainwater. You can turn the pool back into a cloak again by grabbing the water (a minor action), or water can be taken from the pool using a cup or a similar vessel. Doing so gradually uses up the cloak's material, making it shorter every time it reverts to a garment, until nothing is left of it after 2 gallons of its water are consumed.

Hair of Fairy Hues

Courting eladrin sometimes apply a mixture of pixie dust and larkspur to their fine, silky hair, changing it to a new, vibrant hue. Spies from the Court of Stars or the Unseelie underworld often use such a concoction as part of a quick disguise, and the elders of eladrin royal houses use it to complement their rich fashions and contribute to their striking appearances. Some wild fey add a shapechanger's eyelash to the mixture, causing their hair to change color every seventh heartbeat.

A single dose of one of these mixtures, collectively called the hair of fairy hues, can instantly alter the hair color of any individual. The new color lasts until the hair is washed in a still pond beneath the light of the moon, or until the hair grows out.

Night's Mantle

This gauzy black cloth, woven by the gloaming fey, is spangled with star designs. When its wearer waves it in the air (a minor action) on a cloudy night, the clouds above in a half-mile radius drift away to expose the night sky for one hour.

Pixie Music Box

This "box" appears to be an acorn shell. When the shell is opened, a childlike chorus of pixie voices sounds from within it for the next six hours, drifting gently on the wind. At the end of that time, the pixie music stops, leaving only a plain, hollow acorn. While the music is sounding, natural beasts won't approach or attack anyone in the sound's area (a 20-square radius), heeding the pixies' beautiful song and staying away out of respect for those magical creatures.

Rain Stick

Rain sticks are crafted from tree branches by dryads, hags, and other fey in the wilderness. When a creature breaks a rain stick, the act creates a sudden downpour of rain in a half-mile radius that lasts up to one hour. If a stick is broken indoors or underground, the downpour occurs outside, centered above the location where the stick was broken.

Screaming Scarecrow

Although hags originally created scarecrows, gnomes stole the idea and adapted it to their purposes. When a creature within 4 squares of a screaming scarecrow triggers a condition that was set when the scarecrow is placed (such as "a creature passes through the area without saying a password," or "a human enters the area"), the scarecrow begins to scream. When this happens, any other screaming scarecrow within 50 feet of it also begins to scream.

If a creature attempts to use Stealth to bypass a screaming scarecrow, the scarecrow uses the passive Perception of the creature that placed it, with a +10 bonus. Many fey use screaming scarecrows as an efficient alarm system.

Senaliesse Chrysanthemum

Denizens of the enchanted forest beneath the Summer Queen's demesne of Senaliesse sometimes befriend petitioners that are on a journey to the Court of Stars. The fey reward the visitors with chrysanthemums, marking the travelers as friends of the fey. The gift also offers a degree of protection; mischievous fey such as gnomes, nymphs, and pixies refrain from tricking or tempting those who bear such a flower, which remains a beautiful bloom until the bearer leaves the Feywild.

Snake Oil

Harvested from the water snakes native to the coral reefs near Astrazalian, snake oil applied to aching joints and wrinkled flesh can rejuvenate an aging body. After a treatment of snake oil, the treated skin peels away from the body, leaving behind soft, smooth flesh. Full-body treatments of snake oil have been known to reverse the cosmetic effects of the aging process, removing an entire year of wear from the body with each treatment. The cost of doing so is a reasonable option only for the wealthy. Even though the treatment removes the physical effects of aging on the skin, as well as some of the associated aches and pains, all other bodily processes continue to age normally. Death cannot be put off by using snake oil, a fact seldom conveyed by those who sell it.

Spiderweb Dream Net

Made from strands of fey spider silk, a spiderweb dream net is used to capture dreams for varied uses. While a creature sleeps, the net is placed over it, and the creature's dreams are absorbed into the net's filaments. When the creature awakens, the net can be boiled in a cauldron or other large vessel. The trapped dreams evaporate into steam that rises in wispy shapes, playing out the events of the dream for any to view.

Instead of boiling a net that has captured one creature's dreams in this manner, the user of the net can cut it into small sections and consume a portion to experience the captured dreams directly, allowing the viewer to experience the same set of dreams over time. A dream experienced in this way is more intense and offers deeper insights about the dreamer. A dream that arises from a portion of a net being consumed cannot be captured by another dream net.

Star-Indigo Seeds

The star-indigo plant grows only in the wild fields of the Feywild. By day, the plant's flowers resemble those of any other vegetation. In the twilight just after sunset, its flowers glow slightly. At midnight, gazing down on a field of star-indigo plants is like looking at the night sky in reverse, as its flowers shine as brightly as the stars. Feywild creatures often arrange star-indigo seeds in symbols and messages that can be seen only in the dark of night. Dyes made from star-indigo plants pass their nocturnal glowing quality to clothing and ink, and an object colored with these dyes emits light equivalent to that of a candle.

Sweetheart's Confection

Gnomes employed by the eladrin archfey known as the Prince of Hearts make this heart-shaped confection. It is split into two halves and shared between lovers right before they part company for a time. Until they next meet, the lovers share an emotional bond, each vaguely sensing the other's emotions. Each can sense when the other is in peril, though the link doesn't reveal precise details of the situation.

Wolfsbane

A flowering plant found both in the natural world and the Feywild, wolfsbane is a key ingredient in a number of potions and alchemical formulas associated with warding off or harming lycanthropes. Wolfsbane is dangerous to handle, because it is poisonous to humanoids in sufficient quantities. A bundle of wolfsbane is usually enough to keep at bay a lycanthrope that lacks serious resolve; lycanthropes find its smell sickening, and though it cannot truly harm them, most go out of their way to avoid it.

As a poison, wolfsbane has the same effect as ground thassil root (Dungeon Master's Guide, page 51). Lycanthropes experience a feeling of discomfort when within 30 feet of a bundle of wolfsbane, and any lycanthrope with a Fortitude of 17 or lower cannot willingly enter a square adjacent to a bundle of wolfsbane.

Magic Items

The following magic items were originally created in the Feywild and are often in the possession of those from the fey realm.

Totems

A totem is a short length of wood or bone carved to resemble a patron animal or a nature spirit. One end is typically adorned with feathers, teeth, small bones, scraps of hide, leaves, or other symbols of primal power.

The following magic totems make good choices for druids and other wielders of primal magic seeking to enhance their command of nature.

Magic Totem

The simplest enchantments placed on totems make the evocations cast through them more potent and more likely to penetrate an enemy's defenses.

Magic Totem Level 1+ Common

This item is a simple totem that channels primal energy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 1 | +1 | 360 gp | Lvl 16 | +4 | 45,000 gp |
| Lvl 6 | +2 | 1,800 gp | Lvl 21 | +5 | 225,000 gp |
| Lvl 11 | +3 | 9,000 gp | Lvl 26 | +6 | 1,125,000 gp |

Implement: Totem
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus

Reclaimer's Totem

This totem is usually made of petrified wood taken from an area where the abundance of nature has given way to desolation and death. A reclaimer's totem remains linked to the land it was taken from, and some believe that when primal energy is channeled through it, the totem diverts a small amount of that power to restoring life to that land. Supporting this theory is the fact that over time, a reclaimer's totem slowly becomes supple and regains life, to the point that the most powerful of these items have become sprigs of flowering wood.

Reclaimer's Totem Level 3+ Common

When you channel primal energy through this totem and use it to aid a dying comrade, the spirits provide some of their own essence to the effort.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement: Totem
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus

Property

When you use a primal healing power to restore hit points to a creature that has 0 hit points or fewer, that creature regains an additional 1d6 hit points per plus of this item.

Shepherd's Totem

Nearly the size of a staff, this totem is constructed from a single straight piece of wood. Druids and shamans dedicated to protecting verdant landscapes and shepherding the land toward continued bounty usually carry these implements as a symbol of their duty.

Shepherd's Totem Level 3+ Common

This totem emits an atmosphere of gentle command, lending the weight of nature's authority to your attacks.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement: Totem
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus

Property

When you pull, push, or slide an enemy with an attack using this totem, you can increase the distance of the forced movement by 1 square.

Wrath of Nature Totem

Usually made from a fragment of a tree that survived a storm that felled all the other trees around it, this totem is imbued with the raw power of nature's wrath, which its wielder can transfer to any evocations he or she casts. The totem responds quickly to the anger (righteous or otherwise) of its wielder, and some believe that it can actually goad the wielder into more aggressive action, especially against those who would defile the natural world.

Wrath of Nature Totem Level 2+ Common

This totem quivers with the pent-up forces of nature, waiting to be released when your wrath is unleashed.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement: Totem
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d12 damage per plus

WAYNE ENGLAND

Wondrous Items

Wondrous items bring a particular delight to creatures of the Feywild, who appreciate the whimsical nature of many such creations. The following wondrous items are often found in the Feywild.

Bottled Twilight

When dusk falls, Feywild hags collect its murky essence and seal it in glass bottle topped with a cork. When the cork is later removed, the essence escapes, and bright light turns dim as nearby torches, candles, and other light sources sputter and become faint. After a short time, the twilight dissipates and the ambient light returns to its former brightness.

Bottled Twilight Level 1 Common

This black glass bottle holds the power of dusk to make light fade.

Wondrous Item 360 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Minor Action)

Effect: You remove the cork from the bottle, and all light within 10 squares of the bottle becomes dim light until the end of the encounter.

Faerie Field Catalog

One of these guides, compiled by mortal scholars from the natural world, contains a wealth of information about creatures of the Feywild.

Faerie Field Catalog Level 5 Common

From boggles to brownies, nixies to nymphs, this volume keenly details the fey, giving you access to obscure knowledge.

Wondrous Item 1,000 gp

Property

If you have training in Arcana, you gain a +2 item bonus to monster knowledge checks regarding fey creatures. If you do not have training in Arcana, you can make monster knowledge checks regarding fey creatures as if you had training (with the +5 bonus).

Hill Tamer Crook

Sometimes in the Feywild, small hills wander the land, making travel difficult. An eladrin shepherd created this wooden crook to keep unruly hills in line.

Hill Tamer Crook Level 23 Uncommon

The path over the hill is much easier to negotiate when the hill obliges.

Wondrous Item 425,000 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Standard Action)

Effect: You touch the crook against a hill, and the hill bows down submissively, losing its slopes and becoming flat land until you pass by. This effect causes no damage to the landscape or anything built on it, since the land changes to keep structures intact. The land remains passable in this way for 1 hour after you pass over it, then reverts to its normal shape.

Messenger Doll

These life-size, featureless dolls are used by eladrin wizards to speak for them when they are absent. When a doll is activated, it takes on its owner's general features, but still moves like an animated construct.

Messenger Doll Level 11 Uncommon

With features resembling your own, this wood and cloth doll acts in your stead when you are not present.

Wondrous Item 9,000 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Minor Action)

Effect: The doll animates for 1 hour, adopting your voice and a vague resemblance to your features. It has a speed of 6, and it can move to a location you specify. You can mentally direct the doll to another location as a minor action. The doll is destroyed if it is attacked. You can hear through the doll and speak through it. If the doll moves more than a mile away from you, you can no longer hear through it or control its actions, and the doll stops moving and stands rigid.

Shinaelestra Chalice of Fellowship

Made by the eladrin, these silver feywine chalices come from the fading city of Shinaelestra, where by night a fellowship of eladrin rangers hunts. These rangers travel to the natural world to battle trolls and other horrors before returning home to celebrate their victories in their grand halls, bolstering the vitality and courage of all in their presence.

Shinaelestra Chalice of Fellowship Level 9 Common

You make a toast with this chalice to honor heroism and friendship, bolstering those who share the toast.

Wondrous Item 4,200 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Standard Action)

Effect: You raise the chalice in a toast, and each ally within 10 squares of you can speak fair words of his or her companions' deeds. Those who do so and then take an extended rest (without having an intervening encounter) gain 5 temporary hit points at the end of the extended rest. For each additional chalice present during the toast, the temporary hit points granted increase by 2, to a maximum of 15.

Starglass Eye

Eladrin master crafters invented starglass, which exists between the worlds, revealing a view of the natural world or of the Shadowfell from its location in the Feywild. Extremely expensive and difficult to manufacture, starglass is primarily used for windows in certain Astrazalian estates, and less frequently in viewing towers within eladrin cities that cross over to the natural world, such as Shinaelestra. Starglass windows let the eladrin survey the environment into which their city will make worldfall, allowing them to ready their defenses against waiting threats.

Starglass allows one-way viewing from the Feywild, and creatures in the worlds being viewed through it cannot see or affect the glass or those looking through it. In the Feywild, adventurers sometimes carry small pieces of the glass, called starglass eyes, as a way to view a small portion of the natural world or the Shadowfell that parallels their Feywild location.

Starglass Eye Level 9 Uncommon

This plain glass marble becomes a lens from the Feywild to the world and its shadowy echo.

Wondrous Item 4,200 gp

Property

While in the Feywild, you can peer into the starglass eye to see the corresponding location in the natural world or in the Shadowfell. Your sight has a range of 10 squares from the eye's square and is limited by light and other conditions, as normal.

Tuathan Road Whistle

Mysterious guides grant tuathan road whistles to travelers who fear losing their way or who are already lost. Blowing on the wooden whistle produces a shrill note and creates a tiny dirt path from the traveler's feet toward the desired destination. The path doesn't harm any of the surrounding terrain, and it disappears when the traveler rests.

Tuathan Road Whistle Level 10 Uncommon

With a short blow on this whistle, you create a path that helps you quickly reach your desired location.

Wondrous Item 5,000 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Standard Action)

Effect: You sound the whistle with a specific destination in mind on the same landmass, and a path appears that leads toward that destination. Until the start of your next extended rest, you and your allies are not slowed by difficult terrain outside combat while traveling overland toward that destination.

Consumables

Consumable items in the Feywild are often crafted to suit the inhabitants of that realm for very narrow purposes. In a land of magic, having such items comes in handy.

Hag's Doorknob

Many a gnome has been known to steal the doorknob from a hag's dwelling as a prank. After tampering a bit with the knob's enchantments, the prankster then quickly sells it, not wanting to be caught by the dwelling's owner.

When one of these doorknobs is placed against a wall no more than 10 feet thick, it attaches to the wall and creates a temporary door leading to the area on the other side of the wall, allowing easy passage back and forth through it.

JIM NELSON

Hag's Doorknob Level 12 Uncommon

When you touch this tarnished doorknob to a wall, a door to the other side of the wall instantly forms.

Consumable 500 gp

Utility Power ✦ Consumable (Minor Action)

Effect: You place the doorknob on a wall adjacent to you and create a 5-foot-diameter passageway. The opening can be up to 2 squares long, and it leads to the area directly on the other side of the wall. Until the end of the encounter, creatures can use the passageway to move through the wall. The doorknob does not work on a horizontal surface. If a creature is in the passageway when it vanishes, the creature is shunted to the nearest unoccupied space. The passageway does not compromise the wall's structural integrity.

Horse's Breath

An essential component in creating wheels that ride on the air, a draught of horse's breath is also useful for allowing a mount or a creature pulling a vehicle to move like the wind for a moment.

Horse's Breath Level 6 Common

Inside this canvas bag is the hot breath of a champion stallion that will give a mount or a vehicle a quick burst of speed.

Consumable 75 gp

Utility Power ✦ Consumable (Minor Action)

Effect: A mount or a vehicle you are riding gains an extra move action this turn.

Ray of Feywild Sunshine

Capturing a ray of Feywild sunshine is an extremely tough task, which requires baiting a playful sunbeam into a well-lit room with plenty of stirring dust motes to be illuminated and glass surfaces to reflect off, while the day passes by and evening descends. Once a sunbeam is isolated in this way and unable to escape from the night that surrounds it, it can be captured in a box designed for the task.

A ray of Feywild sunshine can restore vegetation in a wide area around it after it is released. Druids often use these items to renew areas of land tainted by creatures from the Shadowfell or the Far Realm.

Ray of Feywild Sunshine Level 17 Common

These rays restore dead or withered foliage, renewing desolate lands with sudden summer growth and causing fruit to grow and ripen in the dead of winter.

Consumable 2,600 gp

Utility Power (Zone) ✦ Consumable (Minor Action)

Effect: You release the ray from its vessel, and it creates a zone of bright light in a close burst 20. The light functions as sunlight, and the zone lasts until the end of the encounter. In addition, plants in the zone are restored to peak life.

Unseelie Candle

The lights of the Feywild penetrate the night, but sometimes they don't show all of what hides in the darkness. This candle sheds light that reveals what other light sources fail to illuminate.

Unseelie Candle Level 7 Common

This flickering candle reveals those who might wish to remain unseen.

Consumable 100 gp

Utility Power ✦ Consumable (Minor Action)

Effect: The candle sheds dim light in a 6-square radius for an hour or until it is blown out as a minor action. While the candle remains lit, it reveals invisible creatures and objects within 1 square of it.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Fey Magic Gifts

The Feywild's inhabitants, particularly those of a civilization that stretches back for millennia (such as the eladrin), are masters of a unique form of magic known as fey magic. Many practitioners of the craft consider it less powerful than other forms of magic, seeing it as more utilitarian in nature. Even so, those who understand fey magic keep its lore and knowledge hidden from those in the world. They sometimes reward mortals who have traveled to the Feywild and performed services for them with this knowledge, which they consider a gift.

A fey magic gift is like a magic item in many ways. However, it occupies no magic item slot, and an individual can have and use as many fey magic gifts as he or she can acquire. Most fey magic gifts can be obtained only in the Feywild, where they often change hands as a part of a bargain between an adventurer and a powerful fey creature.

Fey magic gifts cannot be sold the way that magic items can be, for they are bestowed powers, not items. Some fey creatures might be able to remove a fey magic gift as part of a trade for some other favor.

FOR THE DM: ALTERNATIVE REWARDS

Fey magic gifts fall into a category with divine boons, legendary boons, and grandmaster training, and share the same rules characteristics, as described in Dungeon Master's Guide 2.

You can use alternative rewards alongside traditional magic items. You might consider replacing one magic item per level with an alternative reward.

An alternative reward lasts for five levels of play and then fades. This rule applies because characters normally sell or replace items as they gain levels. Alternative rewards occupy the same space in the game, so a similar process applies to them. You can use different durations, either longer or shorter, for alternative rewards, to fit your campaign.

Calm the Storm

With this gift, you can tame a tumultuous storm. An unprincipled person who has this gift might be able to convince gullible peasants of his or her godhood.

Calm the Storm Level 9 Uncommon

Your lilting words take to the wind, calming the wrath of nature for a short while.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 4,200 gp

Utility Power (Zone) ✦ Daily (Standard Action)

Effect: You create a zone in a close burst 20 that lasts for 6 hours. The severity of weather in the zone is drastically reduced. A blizzard becomes a gentle snowfall, torrential rain becomes a light mist, and a howling gale is reduced to a gentle breeze. Creatures in the zone gain a +5 power bonus to Endurance checks caused by weather, and weather cannot heavily obscure the zone; it can only lightly obscure it.

Charm Token

This gift allows you to place a minor enchantment on a small object, connecting it to your consciousness and allowing you to sense its location. One of these tokens is often used for tracking someone you give the item to, for finding your way back to an item that is lost, or as a means of retracing your path to a placed item.

Charm Token Level 7 Uncommon

You weave a simple charm on a small token, allowing you to sense the direction in which it can be found.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 2,600 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Minor Action)

Effect: Choose an object you are holding. Until you use this power again or until the object is destroyed, you can sense the direction in which the object is located, as long as it remains on the same plane as you.

Eyes of the Owl

Using this gift, you can bind your eyesight to that of nearby birds, giving you an appropriate view of your surroundings.

Eyes of the Owl Level 15 Uncommon

You close your eyes, but instead of darkness, you see the landscape from the viewpoint of nearby birds.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 25,000 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Minor Action)

Effect: For the next 10 minutes, you can sense the presence of birds within half a mile of you. You can choose one of the birds and see through its eyes rather than your own. You can switch back to your normal sight or to another bird's sight as a minor action. You can't use powers or your special senses, if any, through a bird.

Invoking the debt of Rowena's fey pact, the Prince of Frost orders Rowena to slay Keldar

Feast of Recuperation

Many tales tell of people from the world accidentally wandering into the lands of the fey, to find bountiful feasts laid out before them that they are forbidden to touch. You have learned the secret of producing such a banquet out of even the most bitter trail rations, and you can create a feast that bolsters the bodies and spirits of all who consume it.

Feast of Recuperation Level 11 Uncommon

You transform the most meager of provisions into a feast fit for a lord.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 9,000 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Standard Action)

Requirement: You must use this power at the start of an extended rest.

Effect: You transform one day's worth of rations into a bountiful feast, enough to feed ten creatures. The feast lasts for 1 hour. Each creature that partakes in the feast and then starts an extended rest can cut the length of its rest in half.

Gather Flames

One of the most exceptional fey magic gifts is the ability to pick up, carry, and set down small flames as though they were physical objects. This gift is often sought out by entertainers, who use the trick as part of their routines, as well as survival experts, who value the ability to quickly create many fires from a single source.

Gather Flames Level 3 Uncommon

You reach out and pluck a flame from its fuel source, then effortlessly carry it to a new location.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 680 gp

Utility Power ✦ Encounter (Minor Action)

Effect: You pick up an adjacent fire, carrying it with a free hand without being burned. The fire requires no fuel while you carry it, and it can be as large as a torch flame. You can place the fire on a surface or an unattended object as a minor action. You cannot place it on a creature. Once out of your hand, the fire requires fuel as normal. If you are still carrying the fire at the end of the encounter, the fire goes out.

TYLER JACOBSON

Know the Path

This gift is useful for a traveler in the Feywild, or any place where fey creatures hold sway. It allows the recipient to know the direction to a familiar place, no matter what impediment lies in the way. This gift taps into the power of nature to reveal the destination, and labyrinthine passages, tangled underbrush, or even illusions cannot foil it.

Know the Path Level 5 Uncommon

You can sense the way that you must go as clearly as if a tended path lay before you.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 1,000 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Minor Action)

Effect: You utter the name of a specific location you have seen before that is on the same plane as you. Until you take an extended rest, you can sense the general direction to that location and the distance to it.

Mount Growth

Good for traveling quickly in a pinch, this gift transforms a tiny creature, typically a squirrel or a rabbit, into a creature of the same sort that is large enough to be ridden as a mount.

Mount Growth Level 4 Uncommon

You imbue a tiny creature with the power of nature, and it grows to such a size that you can ride it.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 840 gp

Utility Power (Polymorph) ✦ Daily (Standard Action)

Effect: Choose a nonhostile Tiny natural beast within 5 squares of you that is on a surface that can support a Large creature. Until your next extended rest, the target becomes Large, gains the mount keyword, and acts as a willing mount for you. The creature has the same statistics as a horse (Monster Vault).

Ride the Winds

When you use this gift, you place minor enchantments on the hooves or feet of a group of mounts. When the mounts move at full speed, their feet rise slightly off the ground, enabling them to move twice as fast as they normally would, as long as they maintain their pace.

Ride the Winds Level 1 Uncommon

You whisper quiet words to a group of mounts, giving them the ability to run like the wind.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 360 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Minor Action)

Effect: Choose up to eight creatures within 10 squares of you that have the mount keyword. For the next 8 hours, each of those creatures gains a +2 power bonus to speed outside combat.

Scent of Gold

A favorite trick mastered by gnomes during their days of enslavement, this gift allows you to actually sniff out gold and other treasures. Thieves from the natural world often seek out fey creatures that can bestow this gift, which allows them to quickly lo cate valuables at the sites they are robbing.

Scent of Gold Level 3 Uncommon

You've got a nose for gold, allowing you to ferret out hidden valuables.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 680 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Minor Action)

Effect: For the next 10 minutes, you can smell the presence of gold, silver, and valuable gems within 5 squares of you, allowing you to make Perception checks to locate such valuables, even when they are hidden from view.

Speak with Animals

You have learned to speak the tongue of the animals, and you can call upon squirrels, owls, rabbits, deer, and similar creatures to act as informants.

Speak with Animals Level 4 Uncommon

You speak to a creature using the language of animals, learning information from an unlikely source.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 840 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Minor Action)

Effect: For the next 10 minutes, you can understand the barks, chirps, roars, and other animal sounds of natural beasts, and they can understand your speech. This power does not make the beasts friendly or hostile toward you.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Speak with Sentinels

Most people consider inanimate statues and scarecrows barely worth paying attention to—an assumption that fey creatures use to their advantage. This gift allows you to speak with these objects as if they were alive, gleaning valuable information about what they have witnessed in recent hours.

Speak with Sentinels Level 5 Uncommon

You listen to what the shapes of stone and straw have to say, learning what recently transpired nearby.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 1,000 gp

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Minor Action)

Effect: For the next 10 minutes, you can speak with statues, scarecrows, and other objects that look like creatures. They animate only enough to speak, and they display moderate intelligence. You can question them and learn what has transpired within the last 24 hours in their immediate surroundings. Their knowledge includes only things that would be obvious to normal senses. For instance, they would know that a horseman passed by an hour ago, but they would not know that an invisible creature sneaked past.

Voice of the Archfey

The commanding voices of the archfey are heeded throughout the realms of the Feywild. The technique that the powerful fey use to project their voices is a simple method of bending the wind to carry one's words in the same way it carries the sound of thunder, and you are now able to do the same thing.

Voice of the Archfey Level 9 Uncommon

Your voice becomes as thunder, resounding with the authority of the archfey.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 4,200 gp

Utility Power ✦ Encounter (Minor Action)

Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +2 power bonus to Intimidate checks, and you can make your voice boom, allowing you to be heard over any other noises within 100 squares of you.

Whispers in the Willows

You know that the trees of the forest are linked in a single, harmonious union, and you now understand how to take advantage of that connection to send messages to faraway friends.

Whispers in the Willows Level 5 Uncommon

Your words are absorbed into the bark of a nearby tree, then quickly travel by root and earth to a friend.

Alternative Reward: Fey Magic Gift 1,000 gp

Utility Power ✦ Encounter (Standard Action)

Effect: You utter a phrase of no more than twenty words to a tree adjacent to you. Then choose another tree you have seen on the same plane. When any creature of your choice moves adjacent to the chosen tree within the next 24 hours, the tree repeats your message to that creature.

BARD'S TALE: THE NIGHTMARE FAIRIES

Once upon a time there was a woodsman who lived in a cottage on the edge of the Howling Forest. For years, the woodsman had lived in peaceful solitude, but he had been plagued from time to time by a painful earache upon wakening. Every time this happened, the woodsman recalled that his sleep that night had been savaged by terrible nightmares. Believing himself to be the victim of some wicked fey creature, the woodsman taught himself how to appear to be asleep, though he was actually awake. Sure enough, his cottage was visited soon after by a shadow-winged fairy carrying a vial of dark liquid. The creature hovered over the woodsman and prepared to pour the vial's contents into his ear.

Before the fairy could do so, the woodsman sat up and captured the fairy. The fairy begged for the woodsman to release him, and the creature promised that in return no fairy would never pour nightmare poison in his ear again.

The woodsman was not satisfied with that bargain. Instead, he demanded that the fairy take him to the place where the plant that produced the nightmare poison grew. When the fairy showed the woodsman the grove where the plant was harvested, he was shocked to see a great assemblage of other fairies in the grove, each collecting the plant and creating the nightmare poison and carrying it out into the night, to pour into the ears of mortals and give them terrible dreams.

Suddenly, the queen of the nightmare fairies rose up out of the crowd to make her own bargain with the woodsman. In return for his impertinence and his unwillingness to accept the fairy's original offer, the queen cast a spell upon the woodsman. Now, each and every night when he falls asleep, the woodsman's rest is assailed by horrible nightmares, and each and every one of his waking hours is marked by the pain of an earache that has no apparent cause.

Indeed, just as the fairy had promised, no fairy has ever poured nightmare poison in his ear again. The woodsman soon realized that the queen's spell produces the same malady night after night without the need of a dose of poison, causing him to yearn for the days when the nightmare fairies came to him only on occasion.

CHAPTER 5

Build Your Story

THE FEYWILD is a realm of stories, folk tales, and legends. More than any other plane, the realm of the fey has a way of rearranging the lives of mortals, creating heroes from the lowest peasants and casting down the most privileged of nobles.

To reflect the mercurial quality of the plane, you can use the material in this chapter as an optional way of building your character, letting the whims of fate be your guide as you mold your adventurer into a unique hero. Your character will journey to locations within the Feywild, choose activities, and make ability checks to test his or her aptitude at those activities. This system allows you to build your character's history as you go along, telling a story about his or her background that includes both hardship and triumph.

Upbringing: First, you choose your character's upbringing to represent how he or she was raised.

Race: Based on your selected upbringing, you choose your character's race.

Aptitude Tests: Throughout the process, aptitude tests measure your success at the tasks you attempt. An aptitude test is an ability check, and you can assign your ability scores as you make those checks. Before you begin the process, generate six ability scores—by using a standard array, customizing scores, or rolling scores (as described in the Rules Compendium)—but don't assign the scores until you take an aptitude test. For example, if you grew up in Astrazalian, the City of Starlight, and attended one of its grand colleges, your first aptitude test is an Intelligence check to measure your success in your studies. You can assign a high score to Intelligence before making that check, or you can decide that you were not a great student and assign a lower score to Intelligence.

BARD'S TALE: THE FUTURE-TELLER

One upon a time in a small village in the Feywild there lived three young children. All of them knew that they were destined for great things. One day, a traveling storyteller rode into the village and started performing for the villagers. The storyteller was quite good, but the three children were unimpressed, being both precocious and also spoiled by the last storyteller to pass through.

One day, the three approached the storyteller and demanded that he tell them a story that none of them had ever heard before. The bard was amused at their insistence, and instead of growing angry with them he decided to give them what they wanted. The bard promised them each a story that they were sure to have never heard before—their own futures. For the bard was not just a storyteller, but a future-teller, and he could read their futures just like an open scroll. The bard said that each would be given his or her story separately. When they agreed to this, he sent two of the children away and imparted the first story. Twice more he sent away the other two children, keeping only one to hear his or her individual story.

After the bard gave the final child's future-telling, he packed up his belongings and departed the village forever. The three children snuck away, each now with a story to be told. "The bard told me a future that can't possibly be true," said the first child. "He told me that one day I would leave the village and never be heard from again." Sure enough, the child grew into an adult and went away, not to return.

The second child spoke up. "The bard said that a stranger would come to town, and that I would leave as that stranger's apprentice, even though I wouldn't want to." Soon thereafter, a band of traveling entertainers came through the village, and the child's father apprenticed the child to a member of the troupe, sending the child away from the village under the tutelage of a stranger.

The third child refused to share the story the future-teller had passed on, claiming that to tell it would change the way the future turned out. Though the other two children mocked the third child for this, the child held fast, and the story was never told. When the other two children's stories came true, the third child was even more adamant that the story remain untold, for the secret future the bard had imparted was not a pleasant one. The third child kept the secret, and even now searches for a way to avoid the fate foretold in that bard's story.

EVA WIDERMANN

You can attempt any single aptitude test only once, unless an event specifies otherwise. Some events might give you a bonus or a penalty to your aptitude tests.

Class: You might have a class in mind as you build your story, or you might let the story play out and eventually suggest a class choice. Once you have a class in mind, the number of class skills that class grants determines when your background story ends and your adventuring career begins.

Skills: When you use this method to build your character, you ignore the normal limitations on class skills and having training in them at 1st level. Every upbringing and location in this chapter has two or more associated skills. You can choose to have training in one of these skills even if it is not one of your prospective class skills. Any time a location in this chapter would give you training in a skill in which you already have training (such as a trained skill predetermined by your future class), you can instead gain training in any other skill suggested by your experiences.

You can never have more trained skills than your eventual class allows. If you receive a certain number of trained skills and then select a class that allows fewer trained skills than you currently have, eliminate one or more of the skills you selected so that you have the right number of trained skills. You cannot choose to not have training in a skill if it's one that your class gives you as an assigned trained skill.

If you end up with fewer trained skills than your class allows, you can fill out your trained skills with other skills on your class's list or with other skills derived from your history—select additional skills from the associated skills of the locations of your story.

Languages: You can speak, read, and write Common and Elven. If a location has an associated language, you can choose that language instead of choosing an associated skill.

Replaces Background: If you build your story using the material in this chapter, do not choose a background for your character. This material replaces that choice.

It all starts with those familiar words: Once upon a time . . . .

Upbringing

Choose one of the following options to represent how you were raised during your early life. Some entries list appropriate races for that upbringing, but you are not limited to those races. If you wish to play a character who isn't native to the Feywild, you can choose one of the "foster parents" options, which allows for any race.

If you're not sure how to start or want to generate your character randomly, roll a d12 and consult the following table.

| d12 | Upbringing |
|---|---|
| 1 | Eladrin nobility |
| 2 | Feydark refugees |
| 3-5 | Merchants |
| 6-8 | Peasants |
| 9-10 | Slaves |
| 11 | Foster parents (cruel)* |
| 12 | Foster parents (kind)* |

Roll a d10 and use that result for the status of your foster family when you were growing up.

Eladrin Nobility

You were raised in a comfortable environment by a family of minor eladrin nobles. The head of the family was a coure, a bralani, or a shiere (roughly equivalent to count, baron, or knight in the mortal realm). Your family made sure that you received a formal education, and you had the option of several careers in your city. For all your sheltering, though, fate has a way of knocking mighty nobles down a few pegs.

Race: Eladrin.

Associated Skill: Diplomacy or History.

Go to Astrazalian (page 147), Mithrendain (page 148), or Shinaelestra (page 149).

Feydark Refugees

You were raised in a squalid environment by refugees fleeing the oppression of the Feydark, the subterranean realm of the Feywild. Your family might have been drow pariahs, escaped gnomes, or eladrin exiles on the run from marauding fomorians and cyclopses. You had few opportunities in your early life, so you learned to fend for yourself. Perhaps you found a place where you could belong despite your hardships, or maybe you had to keep running.

Race: Drow, eladrin, or gnome.

Associated Skill: Dungeoneering or Thievery.

Go to Mithrendain (page 148) or Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152).

Merchants

You were raised among merchants who traveled the trails of the Feywild, carting all kinds of mundane and exotic goods. Your clan was made up of gnomes, half-elves, fey-touched humans, another fey race, or a group of mixed races. Eladrin rarely become merchants, but some former nobles might be forced to take up the trade business, catering to the current nobility's needs. During your youth, you probably stayed in one of the merchant quarters in a small village or in the eladrin capital of Astrazalian, the mercantile hub of the Feywild. You were raised and educated in the expectation that you would follow the family tradition and help run the business. However, fate had other plans.

Race: Eladrin, gnome, half-elf, or human with the tuathan theme.

Associated Skill: Bluff or Insight.

Go to Astrazalian (below), Brokenstone Vale (page 150), Fey Crossing Hamlet (page 151), or Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152).

Peasants

You were raised in one of the small hamlets that dot the wilderness of the Feywild. You could be of any race, fey or non-fey, thanks to the fey crossings that bring unwitting travelers to the realm. You had a ordinary childhood, tending to crops and animals or hunting for food. You learned to deal with—or, rather, appease—the wilder fey creatures to keep them from disturbing your family. Then, during one of your forays into the wilderness, something happened that changed your life forever.

Race: Any.

Associated Skill: Heal or Nature.

Go to Shinaelestra (page 149), Fey Crossing Hamlet (page 151), or Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152).

Slaves

You were raised in terrible conditions, toiling under the yoke of an evil society. Perhaps you were a slave for the fomorians, forced to work in the Feydark raising food or crafting items for the giants. Maybe you were a captive in Nachtur, working on farms and furnaces under the lash of goblin and hobgoblin masters. Regardless, it is amazing that you survived as long as you did. Then something happened that delivered you from your horrid existence and thrust you toward a greater destiny.

Race: Any.

Associated Skill: Athletics or Endurance.

Go to Harrowhame, Mag Tureah, Nachtur, or Vor Thomil (pages 155-156).

Foster Parents (Cruel)

You were raised in a family other than your own, often mistreated by those who should have taken care of you. You received a poor education and were forced to stay on your toes to avoid the wrath of your guardians. Choose any race for your character, even if it doesn't match the race of your foster parents.

Race: Any.

Associated Skill: Bluff, Insight, or Stealth.

Because your parents were cruel, you learned to lie, assess their moods to protect yourself and hide when necessary. Choose one of the associated skills listed above. Then choose another upbringing option to determine the status of your foster parents (do not select one of that option's associated skills), and go to the appropriate location.

Foster Parents (Kind)

You were raised in a family other than your own, but they cared for you as if you were of their own flesh and blood. You received the best education your foster family could afford. Choose any race for your character, even if it doesn't match the race of your foster parents.

Race: Any.

Choose another upbringing option to determine the status of your foster parents. Because your parents were kind, they taught you well; choose one of the skills associated with that option, then go to the appropriate location.

Civilized Lands

The civilized lands of the Feywild consist primarily of eladrin city-states, points of radiant beauty in the midst of verdant wilds. If you are instructed to choose a civilized land, you can select one or roll a d8 on the following table.

| d8 | Civilized Land |
|---|---|
| 1-3 | Astrazalian |
| 4-5 | Mithrendain |
| 6 | Senaliesse |
| 7-8 | Shinaelestra |

Astrazalian

The City of Starlight, Astrazalian is the great capital of the eladrin. During the spring and summer, the city exists in the mortal world, covering the gentle green hills of its island with glittering spires. During autumn and winter, Astrazalian sits in a precarious location in the Feywild, close to the realm of the fomorians. The mad giants covet the city partially for its riches but mainly for its ability to cross planes.

What did you do in Astrazalian? Pick one of the three possibilities below.

Acquired Higher Learning: You attended one of the grand colleges of Astrazalian.

Associated Skill: Arcana, History, or Religion.

Aptitude Test: How well did you perform in your studies? Make an Intelligence check. If the result is 14 or higher, you excelled in your studies. Go to the Discovery event (page 157) and choose a revelation appropriate to your studies.

If the result is 8 to 13, your studies were unimpressive. You showed no particular aptitude for your work. Choose an activity in Astrazalian that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Mithrendain, Senaliesse, or Shinaelestra).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were a dismal failure in your studies or perhaps a troublemaker. Go to the Ruined event (page 158) and choose a result appropriate to your failed studies.

Enlisted in the Sword Guard: You enrolled in the Sword Guard to defend Astrazalian from fomorian attacks.

Associated Skill: Athletics, Endurance, or Heal.

Aptitude Test: How did you fare as a member of the Sword Guard? Make a Constitution check. If the result is 14 or higher, you showed great valor in fighting off fomorian attacks. Go to the Acclaimed event (page 157).

If the result is 8 to 13, you didn't excel as a member of the Sword Guard or show any particular facility for the work. Choose an activity in Astrazalian that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Mithrendain, Senaliesse, or Shinaelestra).

If the result is 7 or lower, you failed in your duty to the detriment of the city. Worst of all, you lost someone dear to you in a fomorian assault. Go to the Personal Tragedy event (page 158) and choose the consequence of your failure.

Joined the Star and Dolphin Coster: You became a member of the grand mercantile house, promoting trade with many eladrin lands.

Associated Skill: History, Insight, or Streetwise.

Aptitude Test: How did you fare as a merchant? Make a Wisdom check. If the result is 14 or higher, you showed tremendous aptitude for the merchant's life. Go to the Acclaimed event (page 157).

If the result is 8 to 13, you didn't excel as a member of the Star and Dolphin Coster or demonstrate any particular penchant for trade. Choose an activity in Astrazalian that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Mithrendain, Senaliesse, or Shinaelestra).

If the result is 7 or lower, your ineptitude led to your being marooned in a distant location. Go to the Lost event (page 158) and choose the result of your disaster.

Mithrendain

Also called the Autumn City, Mithrendain is a beautiful fortress city that embraces the majestic trees that surround it. Unknown to most residents, Mithrendain sits on top of a great entrance to the Feydark, and the safety of the seal is kept by the Citadel Arcanum and its wizards. The city and its invisibility-preventing wards are protected by a secret police force, the grim Watchers of the Night, who go about their duty with zeal.

What did you do in Mithrendain? Pick one of the four possibilities below.

Became a Barrier Sentinel: You volunteered to fight in the defense of the Feydark seal.

Associated Skill: Arcana, Endurance, or Perception.

Aptitude Test: How well did you fight as a Barrier Sentinel? Make a Strength check. If the result is 14 or higher, you showed great valor in defending the Feydark seal. Go to the Acclaimed event (page 157).

If the result is 8 to 13, you didn't excel as a member of the Barrier Sentinels or show any particular aptitude for the work. Choose an activity in Mithrendain that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Senaliesse, or Shinaelestra).

If the result is 7 or lower, you overestimated your prowess and were captured in battle. Go to the Captured event (page 157) and choose the outcome of your capture.

Broke into the Citadel Arcanum: You decided to sneak into the grand citadel out of sheer curiosity or because you were misled by bad company.

Associated Skill: Bluff, Stealth, or Thievery.

Aptitude Test: Was your infiltration of the citadel successful? Make a Dexterity check. If the result is 14 or higher, the Watchers of the Night apprehended you, but they were so impressed with your prowess that they recruited you to join them. Go to Joined the Watchers of the Night and take the aptitude test with a +2 bonus.

If the result is 8 to 13, you failed to infiltrate the citadel but managed to avoid capture. Choose an activity in Mithrendain that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Senaliesse, or Shinaelestra).

If the result is 7 or lower, you failed to break into the citadel and were captured by the Watchers of the Night. The lords of Mithrendain banished you as punishment for your crime. Go to the Exiled event (page 158) and choose the result of your banishment.

Joined the Watchers of the Night: You worked as a minor agent for the Watchers, keeping an eye on subtle threats to the Feydark seal.

Associated Skill: Perception, Stealth, or Streetwise.

Aptitude Test: How did you perform as a member of the Watchers? Make an Intelligence check. If the result is 14 or higher, your skill was noticed. Go to the Acclaimed event (page 157).

If the result is 8 to 13, you showed no particular aptitude for the work of the Watchers. Choose an activity in Mithrendain that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Senaliesse, or Shinaelestra).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were abducted by evil fey and sold to the goblins. Go to Nachtur (page 156).

Learned in the Temple of Corellon: You sought formal training from Corellon's clergy.

Associated Skill: Heal, History, or Religion.

Aptitude Test: How well did you master Corellon's teachings and understand his precepts? Make a Wisdom check. If the result is 14 or higher, your devotion was rewarded. Go to the Discovery event (page 157) and choose the Divine Revelation benefit.

If the result is 8 to 13, you showed no aptitude for the god's ways. Choose an activity in Mithrendain that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Senaliesse, or Shinaelestra).

If the result is 7 or lower, you clearly were not clergy material. Perhaps you failed to grasp Corellon's doctrines, or you might have become convinced of some antithetical dogma. You were shunned. Go to the Ruined event (page 158).

Senaliesse

Built atop enormous trees and hidden from casual view by rising mists, Senaliesse is a wonder to behold. The seat of Queen Tiandra's throne, this domain houses the Court of Stars and sees its share of intrigue and diplomatic dealings. Despite these similarities to a mortal court, Senaliesse is the home of ageless beings of great power, and mortals never stay here for long.

What did you do in Senaliesse? Pick one of the three possibilities below.

Attended Queen Tiandra: You were allowed to attend Queen Tiandra as a lesser aide.

Associated Skill: Arcana, History, or Religion.

Aptitude Test: How did you perform in the queen's court? Make an Intelligence check. If the result is 14 or higher, Queen Tiandra paid you compliments and rewarded your service with a diplomatic mission. Go to one of the other civilized lands (Astrazalian, Mithrendain, or Shinaelestra), choose an activity there, and gain a +2 bonus to the aptitude test.

If the result is 8 to 13, you attracted no notice for good or ill. Choose an activity in Senaliesse that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Mithrendain, or Shinaelestra).

If the result is 7 or lower, your behavior offended the court, and you were banished from Senaliesse. Go to the Exiled event (page 158) and choose the result of your banishment.

Stopped an Assassination: You stumbled upon a plot to assassinate a minor noble, and your efforts foiled the attempt.

Associated Skill: Insight, Perception, or Streetwise.

Aptitude Test: What was the result of your brave effort? Make a Wisdom check. If the result is 14 or higher, Queen Tiandra rewarded your diligence with a place at her side. Go to Attended Queen Tiandra and take the aptitude test with a +2 bonus.

If the result is 8 to 13, you foiled the assassination attempt, but no one noticed. Choose an activity in Senaliesse that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Mithrendain, or Shinaelestra).

If the result is 7 or lower, not only did you fail to earn recognition for your heroic deed, but the assassins also exacted their revenge on someone dear to you. Go to the Personal Tragedy event (page 158).

Tasked by the Court: You were assigned a minor diplomatic task by the Court of Stars that took you to a distant land.

Associated Skill: Bluff, Diplomacy, or Insight.

Aptitude Test: Did you fulfill your mission? Make a Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, you were sent as a recommended envoy. Go to one of the other civilized lands (Astrazalian, Mithrendain, or Shinaelestra), choose an activity there, and gain a +2 bonus to the aptitude test.

If the result is 8 to 13, you were assigned an unpleasant task—you were sent as an envoy to the Prince of Frost. Go to Fortress of Frozen Tears (page 155).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were viewed as expendable and sent as an envoy to a fomorian king. Go to Harrowhame (page 155).

Shinaelestra

The Fading City is being reclaimed by the wilderness. Covered by trees and thick with undergrowth, Shinaelestra lies mostly in ruins, but that doesn't bother the rangers who live there. Every midnight, the Fading City appears in the midst of the Howling Forest in the mortal world, and each dawn it returns to the Feywild. The greatest threat to Shinaelestra is the fomorian realm of Vor Thomil.

What did you do in Shinaelestra? Pick one of the four possibilities below.

Battled Fomorians: You volunteered to fight against the fomorians of Vor Thomil.

Associated Skill: Athletics, Dungeoneering, or Intimidate.

Aptitude Test: How did you fare in battle against the mighty giants of the Feydark? Make a Strength check. If the result is 14 or higher, you fought well and earned a commendation for your valor. Go to the Acclaimed event (page 157).

If the result is 8 to 13, you failed to distinguish yourself in battle. Choose an activity in Shinaelestra that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Mithrendain, or Senaliesse).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were captured in battle. Go to Vor Thomil (page 157).

Guided Pilgrims: You shepherded mortal pilgrims through the Howling Forest during Shinaelestra's nightly worldfalls.

Associated Skill: Athletics, Nature, or Perception.

Aptitude Test: How well did you perform your guide work? Make a Constitution check. If the result is 14 or higher, you earned the favor of a patron, either a mortal pilgrim or a fey being. Go to the Made a Powerful Ally event (page 158) and choose the nature of this ally.

If the result is 8 to 13, you failed to distinguish yourself as a guide. Choose an activity in Shinaelestra that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Mithrendain, or Senaliesse).

If the result is 7 or lower, you angered a powerful fey creature by trespassing in lands where you did not belong, or you earned the wrath of a formidable mortal patron. Go to the Made a Powerful Enemy event (page 158).

Studied the Wilderness: You spent time exploring the wilderness that is taking over Shinaelestra.

Associated Skill: Acrobatics, Endurance, or Nature.

Aptitude Test: How did you fare in your studies? Make a Wisdom check. If the result is 14 or higher, you gained great insight from your time in the wild. Go to the Discovery event (page 157) and choose the nature of your revelation.

If the result is 8 to 13, you gained no great knowledge or understanding of the wild. Choose an activity in Shinaelestra that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Mithrendain, or Senaliesse).

If the result is 7 or lower, you ended up lost in the woods. Go to the Lost event (page 158) and choose your fate.

Trained as a Ranger: You sought training under Calenon Thray, the ranger lord of Shinaelestra.

Associated Skill: Nature, Perception, or Stealth.

Aptitude Test: How did your ranger training go? Make a Dexterity check. If the result is 14 or higher, Lord Thray complimented you and sent you on an exploration mission. Choose your destination: Cendriane (page 151), the Isle of Dread (page 153), the Maze of Fathaghn (page 153), or the Murkendraw (page 154).

If the result is 8 to 13, you showed no particular aptitude for the ranger's way. Choose an activity in Shinaelestra that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel to another civilized land (Astrazalian, Mithrendain, or Senaliesse).

If the result is 7 or lower, you ended up lost in the woods. Go to the Lost event (page 158) and choose your fate.

Wilderness Locations

Far more numerous than eladrin cities, wilderness locations in the Feywild include ancient ruins, remote villages, mystic lakes, mysterious islands, and more. Most of the locations described below are distinguished by settlements, important sites, or populations of certain kinds of creatures. If you are instructed to choose a wilderness location, you can select one or roll 2d12 on the following table.

| 2d12 | Wilderness Location |
|---|---|
| 2-3 | Brokenstone Vale |
| 4 | Cendriane |
| 5-8 | Fey crossing hamlet |
| 9-10 | Feydark opening hamlet |
| 11-14 | Feywild trails |
| 15 | Isle of Dread |
| 16 | Lake of Dreams |
| 17 | Maze of Fathaghn |
| 18-20 | Murkendraw |
| 21-22 | Plains of Echoing Thunder |
| 23-24 | White Well |

Brokenstone Vale

This forested valley and the mine-riddled mountains that surround it are the province of werebeasts of all kinds, given free range by an ancient pact with the Court of Stars. In tiny hamlets on the boundaries of this realm, civilized lycanthropes can trade with merchants under the watchful eye of werewolf lord Viktor Mazan. Underneath Brokenstone Vale lies an entrance to the fomorian kingdom of Harrowhame.

What did you do in Brokenstone Vale? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Hunted Lycanthropes: Inspired by the archfey known as the Maiden of the Moon, you joined the hunt for any werebeast that set foot outside the vale.

Associated Skill: Athletics or Stealth.

Aptitude Test: Were you successful? Make a Strength check or a Dexterity check. If the result is 14 or higher, the Maiden lauded your work. Go to the Made a Powerful Ally event (page 158).

If the result is 8 to 13, you showed no particular skill in the hunt, but you still learned something from your travels. Go to Feywild Trails (page 152).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were severely injured in battle with lycanthropes. Go to the Wounded event (page 158) and choose the result of your injury.

Traded Goods: You bartered with civilized lycanthropes in the outskirts of the vale.

Associated Skill: Bluff or Insight.

Aptitude Test: Did you deal successfully with your unpredictable customers? Make a Wisdom check or Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, the lycanthropes viewed you as a worthy ally. Go to the Acclaimed event (page 157).

If the result is 8 to 13, you didn't make a good living and soon moved on to easier customers. Go to Fey Crossing Hamlet (below).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were captured by lycanthropes that turned against you and gave you to the fomorians. Go to Harrowhame (page 155).

Cendriane

Formerly the greatest city in the Feywild, Cendriane is now a ruin, having been devastated during the wars fought by the drow, eladrin, and elves. Giant spiders, displacer beasts, and other dangerous creatures stalk the deserted thoroughfares, and sinister undead lurk beneath the city.

What did you do in Cendriane? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Found Arcane Lore: You came across a magic remnant of Cendriane's heyday and gleaned insight from it.

Associated Skill: Arcana or History.

Aptitude Test: What did you find in the ruins of Cendriane? Make an Intelligence check. If the result is 14 or higher, you found an ancient relic that granted you a great insight. Go to the Discovery event (page 157) and choose the nature of your insight.

If the result is 8 to 13, you became lost in the ruins and had to deal with the deadly creatures that dwelled there. Go to Ran Afoul of the Natives and take the aptitude test with a –1 penalty.

If the result is 7 or lower, you stumbled into an ancient portal and were teleported to another location. Go to the Transported event (page 158).

Ran Afoul of the Natives: You had to battle the spiders, fey monsters, and undead that infest Cendriane.

Associated Skill: Acrobatics or Stealth.

Aptitude Test: How did you fare in battle? Make a Dexterity check. If the result is 14 or higher, you beat back the dark creatures and escaped. Go to Feywild Trails (page 152) or Shinaelestra (page 149).

If the result is 13 or lower, you were seriously hurt and barely survived. Go to the Wounded event (page 158) and choose the nature of your injury.

Fey Crossing Hamlet

The typical Feywild hamlet houses a small number of families in an even mix of Faerie natives and immigrants from the mortal world. Due to the nature of

ERIC BELISLE

Nistyncia clutches Andronus, who has been transformed into a rabbit after eating a hag's cookies

fey crossings, these hamlets tend to be built within great woodlands, with crooked buildings surrounded by giant tree roots. Most inhabitants of the hamlets are farmers, herders of pigs and sheep, or trappers wise in the ways of the fey. Merchants are welcome in these hamlets, too, since they bring news and goods from the faerie realm.

What did you do in a fey crossing hamlet? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Guarded the Crossing: You watched over the nearby fey crossing, keeping an eye out for troublesome travelers.

Associated Skill: Intimidate or Perception.

Aptitude Test: What happened as you guarded the crossing? Make a Constitution check. If the result is 14 or higher, a traveler asked you to work as a guide, and you led that person to an eladrin city. Go to Civilized Lands (page 147).

If the result is 8 to 13, you eventually left your work and took up a wandering life. Go to Feywild Trails (below).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were surprised by a raiding party and taken captive. Go to the Captured event (page 157).

Ran a Trading Post: You traded with residents of the Feywild and the natural world, learning much in the process.

Associated Skill: Bluff or Streetwise.

Aptitude Test: How did your trading go? Make a Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, you overheard a rumor about a magic treasure that led you to adventure. Go to Cendriane (page 151), the Maze of Fathaghn (page 153), or the Murkendraw (page 154).

If the result is 8 to 13, you joined a merchant caravan. Go to Feywild Trails (below).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were accused of theft or another minor crime. Go to the Ruined event (page 158).

Feydark Opening Hamlet

Located near passages to the underground realms of the fomorians, these hamlets are rough-and-tumble places where the seedier elements of the Feywild congregate. The ramshackle communities are more egalitarian than most Feywild locations—they threaten everyone equally. Yet for all their sinister appearances, these hamlets are safer than the dark lands of fomorians, cyclopses, and goblins.

What did you do in a Feydark opening hamlet? Pick one of the three possibilities below.

Explored the Feydark: You went far into the Feydark, exploring its depths and learning about its denizens.

Associated Skill: Dungeoneering or Thievery.

Aptitude Test: What happened on your Feydark excursions? Make a Dexterity check. If the result is 14 or higher, you found a mystic portal leading to Cendriane (page 151), the Isle of Dread (page 153), the Lake of Dreams (page 153), or the White Well (page 154).

If the result is 13 or lower, you got lost and stumbled into a place of darkness. Go to Harrowhame (page 155), Mag Tureah (page 156), Nachtur (page 156), or Vor Thomil (page 157).

Scouted for Trouble: You routinely sneaked close to the Feydark opening, prepared to sound an alarm in case of an incursion.

Associated Skill: Perception or Stealth.

Aptitude Test: What happened during your mission? Make a Wisdom check. If the result is 14 or higher, you earned a recommendation to the Barrier Sentinels. Go to Mithrendain (page 148) and take the Became a Barrier Sentinel aptitude test with a +2 bonus.

If the result is 8 to 13, you didn't distinguish yourself during your mission. Choose another activity in a Feydark opening hamlet, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel the wilds and go to Feywild Trails (below).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were surprised by a raiding party and taken captive. Go to the Captured event (page 157) and choose the outcome.

Served as a Feydark Sentinel: You fought creatures of the Feydark routinely to keep them from attacking the surface.

Associated Skill: Acrobatics or Athletics.

Aptitude Test: What happened in your battles against the denizens of the Feydark? Make a Strength check. If the result is 14 or higher, you showed great valor and won renown in your community. Go to the Acclaimed event (page 157).

If the result is 8 to 13, you didn't excel as a Feydark sentinel or show any particular aptitude for the work. Choose an activity in a Feydark opening hamlet that you have not yet undertaken, or, if you have exhausted those options, you can travel the wilds and go to Feywild Trails (below).

If the result is 7 or lower, you overestimated your prowess and were captured in battle. Go to the Captured event (page 157) and choose the outcome.

Feywild Trails

The Feywild is so thinly populated that one can walk for weeks without encountering a soul. Those who are wise in the ways of the fey know to stay to the trails that crisscross the realm. Travelers who stray from these paths might fall prey to dangerous creatures such as fey panthers, hags, or worse. Still, some inhabitants like the wandering life, spending most of their days between communities. Those who adopt this lifestyle end up mimicking the wild fey in experience and demeanor.

What did you do in the Feywild trails? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Lived on the Trail: You lived near the path, consorting with the wild fey and learning much of their lore.

Associated Skill: Endurance or Nature.

Aptitude Test: What happened on the trails through the wilds? Make a Constitution check. If the result is 11 or higher, you came across an interesting realm that drew your attention. Go to Wilderness Locations (page 150).

If the result is 10 or lower, you became lost. Go to the Lost event (page 158).

Traveled to Another City: You never strayed from the path, traveling to another city either alone or as part of a caravan.

Associated Skill: History or Nature.

Aptitude Test: What happened on your travels? Make an Intelligence check. If the result is 11 or higher, go to Civilized Lands (page 147).

If the result is 10 or lower, you became lost on the way to your destination. Go to the Lost event (page 158).

The Isle of Dread

Perhaps the most mysterious place in the Feywild—and that is a considerable feat—the Isle of Dread is a volcanic island dotted with ancient ruins that seems to trap sailors intentionally. Survivors of shipwrecks band together for safety against the wandering monsters.

What did you do on the Isle of Dread? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Explored Yuan-Ti Ruins: You ventured deep into the snake-infested ruins in the island's interior.

Associated Skill: History or Stealth.

Aptitude Test: What did you discover in the ruins? Make an Intelligence check. If the result is 13 or higher, you found an ancient store of knowledge. Go to the Discovery event (page 157) and choose the nature of your discovery.

If the result is 12 or lower, you discovered an ancient portal and were teleported away without warning. Go the Transported event (page 158).

Struggled to Survive: You were beset repeatedly by the bestial inhabitants of the island and struggled to outlast the siege.

Associated Skill: Athletics or Endurance.

Aptitude Test: What was your final fate on the Isle of Dread? Make a Strength check. If the result is 14 or higher, you were rescued by a passing ship and taken to a Feywild city. Go to Civilized Lands (page 147).

If the result is 13 or lower, you were captured by pirates and taken to a place of darkness. Go to the Captured event (page 157).

The Lake of Dreams

This lake, known for the glass-like stillness of its waters, is located in the middle of a particularly dark forest. The woods are rumored to be the personal fiefdom of Razcoreth, the green dragon better known as the Whispering Wyrm.

Your only hope for escaping the Lake of Dreams was to bargain with the dragon.

Bargained with the Dragon: You ran into the fey that serve Razcoreth and were brought into the presence of the Whispering Wyrm.

Associated Skill: Arcana or Bluff.

Aptitude Test: What did the dragon do with you? Make a Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, Razcoreth was impressed with your force of personality and bestowed a boon on you. Go to the Made a Powerful Ally event (page 158). Alternatively, you can ask the dragon to wipe away your past and use the consequences for a result of 7 or lower.

If the result is 8 to 13, Razcoreth dismissed you, and the attendant fey chased you away. Go to the Lost event (page 158).

If the result is 7 or lower, Razcoreth submerged you in the Lake of Dreams, either as punishment for your impertinence or because you wanted to forget your past and get a fresh start. You slept for many years and awakened in an abandoned hut. Remove the effects of any other events that have befallen you (including skills you learned), and go to Feywild Trails (page 152).

The Maze of Fathaghn

This enormous briar maze belongs to the dryad queen Fathaghn, and lost travelers are kept away from the maze's center at all costs.

What did you do in the maze? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Dealt with the Dryad Queen: You approached Queen Fathaghn, promising to carry out a task for her if she would grant you a favor.

Associated Skill: Diplomacy or Insight.

Aptitude Test: How did Queen Fathaghn respond to your request? Make a Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, she granted your request. Go to the Made a Powerful Ally event (page 158).

If the result is 8 to 13, the queen turned you away without honoring your request. You must take the Wandered the Maze aptitude test.

If the result is 7 or lower, you angered the queen and she banished you through a teleporting portal. Go to the Made a Powerful Enemy event (page 158).

Wandered the Maze: You were lost in the maze and endured repeated attacks by dryads and treants until you managed to find a way out.

Associated Skill: Athletics or Endurance.

Aptitude Test: How did you fare in your attempts to escape the maze? Make a Constitution check. If the result is 9 or higher, you found a way out without suffering undue harm and ended up in the wilderness. Go to Feywild Trails (page 152).

If the result is 7 or lower, you barely survived the attacks of the maze's denizens before finding your way out. Go to the Wounded event (page 158) and choose the nature of your injury.

The Murkendraw

An expansive swamp that stretches as far as the eye can see, the Murkendraw is a haven for dangerous beasts, mad treants, and conniving hags.

What did you do in the Murkendraw? Pick one of the three possibilities below.

Bargained with a Hag: You approached or were found by a hag and tried to strike a bargain with her. You wanted the hag to relieve you of a curse in exchange for a future service.

Associated Skill: Bluff or Insight.

Aptitude Test: What was the result of your bargain? Make a Wisdom check. If the result is 14 or higher, the hag agreed to your proposition. Go to the Made a Powerful Ally event (page 158).

If the result is 8 to 13, the hag turned you away without honoring your request. You must take the Explored the Swamp aptitude test.

If the result is 7 or lower, the hag turned on you and sold you as a slave. Go to the Captured event (page 157).

Explored the Swamp: You spent a long time sloshing about the swamp, trying merely to survive.

Associated Skill: Acrobatics or Endurance.

Aptitude Test: How well did you survive the rigors of the swamp? Make a Constitution check. If the result is 9 or higher, you found a way out without suffering undue harm and ended up in the wilderness. Go to Feywild Trails (page 152) or Found the Murkroot Trade Moot, below.

If the result is 8 or lower, you barely survived the dangers of the swamp before finding your way out. Go to the Wounded event (page 158) and choose the result of your injury.

Found the Murkroot Trade Moot: Through chance or skill, you found your way to the underground marketplace run by the Bogbottom goblins. You might have come to the Moot with a purpose, or perhaps you simply stumbled in, resting just long enough to gather your wits.

Associated Language: Goblin.

Associated Skill: Intimidate or Stealth.

Aptitude Test: What happened during your time in the market? Make an Intelligence check. If the result is 14 or higher, you thrived in the Moot, earning a living and gaining a mystical benefit. Go to the Discovery event (page 157) to choose the benefit of your skills.

If the result is 8 to 13, you struck a bargain with a mystical merchant. In exchange for a service you performed, remove the negative effects of one event you have already experienced, then go to Cendriane (page 151).

If the result is 7 or lower, the goblins of the market turned on you and sold you into slavery. Go to the Captured event (page 157).

Plains of Echoing Thunder

This open country of rolling hills and grassy plains is the stomping grounds of centaur tribes. Due to the centaurs' devotion to Kord, storms are particularly common.

Your only hope of getting off the plains was to visit with the centaurs.

Visited the Centaurs: You came across a centaur hunting band and asked for help in navigating the plains.

Associated Skill: Athletics or Nature.

Aptitude Test: How did you deal with the centaurs? Make a Constitution check. If the result is 14 or higher, the centaurs were impressed with your endurance. Remove the negative effects of one event you have already experienced, then go to Civilized Lands (page 147) or Wilderness Locations (page 150).

If the result is 8 to 13, you pushed yourself too hard. Go to the Wounded event (page 158).

If the result is 7 or lower, the centaurs mocked your weakness and chased you away. Go to the Lost event (page 158).

The White Well

You wandered alone for many days through a serene forest that seemed to exude deep sorrow. Finally, you reached a pool that reflected the moon with unmatched intensity. You found the White Well, said to be the residence of its namesake Lady, an archfey of divine heritage.

The only reason to visit the White Well is to approach the Lady.

Approached the Lady of the White Well: You sought the Lady, begging for her favor or possibly her love.

Associated Skill: Arcana or Insight.

WAYNE ENGLAND

Aptitude Test: How did the Lady respond to your entreaty? Make a Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, the Lady looked upon you favorably and offered a portion of her power. Go to the Made a Powerful Ally event (page 158).

If the result is 8 to 13, the Lady was flattered by your offer and bade you good luck before dismissing you emptyhanded. Go to Feywild Trails (page 152).

If the result is 7 or lower, the Lady was saddened by your coarse manners and rude demeanor, and she teleported you away with a wave of her hand. Go to the Made a Powerful Enemy event (page 158).

Dark Lands

Encompassing the subterranean Feydark and the surface realms ruled by malicious fey, the dark lands are places of greater danger than most of the Feywild. They include fomorian kingdoms, goblin clanholds, and vast underground expanses. If you are instructed to choose a dark land, you can select one or roll a d10 on the following table.

| d10 | Dark Land |
|---|---|
| 1-2 | Feydark wilds |
| 3 | Fortress of Frozen Tears |
| 4-5 | Harrowhame |
| 6-7 | Mag Tureah |
| 8-9 | Nachtur |
| 10 | Vor Thomil |

Feydark Wilds

Between the lands claimed by fomorian kings and goblin warlords stretch endless tunnels in the wilds of the Feydark. Choked with phosphorescent fungi and dangling roots from the great trees aboveground, the Feydark tunnels are a wilderness in their own right. Travelers might spend years wandering, lost, without ever seeing the light of day.

What did you do in the Feydark wilds? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Lived in the Shadows: You skulked in the eternal twilight of the Feydark for a time, avoiding the fomorian and goblin kingdoms and dodging their raiding parties.

Associated Skill: Dungeoneering or Stealth.

Aptitude Test: What happened to you in the shadows of the Feydark? Make a Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, you made a significant discovery about yourself or the Feydark wilds. Go to the Discovery event (page 157).

If the result is 8 to 13, you grew ill or encountered a foe you couldn't defeat. Go to the Wounded event (page 158).

If the result is 7 or lower, a raiding party of cyclopses or goblins found you and took you captive. Go to the Captured event (page 157).

Sought a Path to the Surface: Your time in the Feydark was shaped by your unceasing quest to return to the light of the surface world.

Associated Skill: Athletics or Dungeoneering.

Aptitude Test: Did you find your way to safety on the surface of the Feywild? Make a Wisdom check. If the result is 14 or higher, you reached a small village at the mouth of a Feydark cavern. Go to Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152).

If the result is 8 to 13, you ended up on the surface far from civilization. Go to Feywild Trails (page 152).

If the result is 7 or lower, you found your way to the surface but suffered greatly during the journey. Go to the Wounded event (page 158).

Fortress of Frozen Tears

Located in a desolate icy waste, the Fortress of Frozen Tears is the seat of power for the Prince of Frost, mightiest of the winter fey. His contempt for mortals is legendary, and his rivalry with the summer fey is bitter, but he still receives ambassadors from distant lands. Eladrin with an affinity for winter live in the wilderness around the Prince's fortress, but they give their liege a wide berth.

If you found yourself in the fortress, your only course of action was to approach the Prince.

Sought an Audience with the Prince of Frost: You approached the dread fey lord and attempted to impress him, either through your meek behavior or your defiant demeanor.

Associated Skill: Diplomacy or Insight.

Aptitude Test: What impression did you make on the Prince of Frost? Make a Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, you impressed him with your behavior. Go to the Made a Powerful Ally event (page 158).

If the result is 8 to 13, you angered the prince and were frozen in ice. You thawed—after days, years, or centuries—and eventually found your way out of the glacier. Go to Feywild Trails (page 152).

If the result is 7 or lower, you infuriated the Prince of Frost and made a lasting enemy. Go to the Made a Powerful Enemy event (page 158).

Harrowhame

This underground fomorian kingdom is built on the slave trade. Its ruler, King Bronnor, is as mad as any fomorian, but he can be negotiated with—occasionally. The lycanthropes of neighboring Brokenstone Vale often serve Bronnor as spies and assassins.

What brought you to Harrowhame? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Enslaved: You were forced to work under the lash of fomorian taskmasters.

Associated Skill: Dungeoneering or Nature.

Aptitude Test: How did you fare under your fomorian masters? Make a Constitution check. If the result is 14 or higher, you braved the tunnels of Harrowhame and eventually emerged in the realm of Brokenstone Vale (page 150).

If the result is 13 or lower, you and other slaves were traded to another realm. Go to Mag Tureah (below), Nachtur (below), or Vor Thomil (page 157).

Sent as an Envoy: Queen Tiandra or another fey noble sent you as an envoy to King Bronnor—a diplomatic task few would envy.

Associated Skill: Diplomacy or Dungeoneering.

Aptitude Test: How well did you fulfill your duty? Make a Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, you won the favor of King Bronnor, though the burden was not easy to bear. When you returned to the civilized lands, the fomorian's favor brought suspicion on you, and you were banished from the courts of the eladrin and their kin. Go to the Exiled event (page 158).

If the result is 8 to 13, you were eventually dismissed from King Bronnor's court and returned to the surface world with no distinction or disfavor. Go to Civilized Lands (page 147).

If the result is 7 or lower, you earned King Bronnor's enmity. Go to the Made a Powerful Enemy event (page 158).

Mag Tureah

The largest of the fomorian realms, Mag Tureah is ruled by King Thrumbolg, the First Lord. Although the military stronghold raids and pillages competently, the biggest challenge for Thrumbolg is mapping and testing the many planar portals found throughout the tunnels of his underground kingdom. To this end, he employs slaves in his portal tests and is always looking for more subjects with arcane knowledge.

What happened to you in Mag Tureah? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Traded for Arcanist Slave: Since you lacked the appropriate arcane expertise, you were herded alongside other slaves to be traded to another realm.

Associated Skill: Athletics or Endurance.

Aptitude Test: What happened during the slave trade? Make a Dexterity check. If the result is 14 or higher, you managed to escape and made your way to a tiny hamlet on the surface. Go to Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152).

If the result is 13 or lower, you failed to escape and were sent along with the other slaves to another Feydark realm. Go to Harrowhame (page 155), Nachtur (below), or Vor Thomil (page 157).

Used as a Test Subject: You were forced to brave the tunnels of Mag Tureah in an attempt to analyze the portals scattered about the realm.

Associated Skill: Arcana or Religion.

Aptitude Test: What happened to you in the tunnels? Make an Intelligence check. If the result is 14 or higher, you discovered a portal that teleported you to safety. Go to Civilized Lands (page 147).

If the result is 13 or lower, you stumbled through a portal that teleported you to a more hostile location. Go the Transported event (page 158).

Nachtur

This goblin kingdom, under the rule of the hobgoblin wizard Great Gark, is one of the more civilized of its kind. The underground realm engages in diplomatic matters with many lands, and its goblin mercenaries serve anyone who meets their price.

What did you do in Nachtur? Pick one of the two possibilities below.

Served as a Mercenary: Through sheer force of arms, you earned a place alongside the goblin mercenaries, hoping to stay alive until you found a way to escape.

Associated Language: Goblin.

Associated Skill: Athletics or Intimidate.

Aptitude Test: What happened in your time as a mercenary? Make a Strength check. If the result is 14 or higher, you fought well enough to secure your freedom. Go to Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152). For the rest of your background story, if a check result or an event sends you to Nachtur, go to Wilderness Locations (page 150) instead.

If the result is 8 to 13, you managed to flee during a battle that turned against your forces. Go to Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152).

If the result is 7 or lower, you were severely wounded and abandoned in battle. Go to the Wounded event (page 158

WAYNE ENGLAND

Toiled as a Slave: You worked in the farms of Nachtur, raising crops and cattle to feed the goblin armies. One day, you escaped.

Associated Language: Goblin.

Associated Skill: Athletics or Endurance.

Aptitude Test: What happened when you escaped from Nachtur? Make a Constitution check. If the result is 14 or higher, you found your way to freedom on the surface. Go to Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152).

If the result is 13 or lower, you ended up lost in the Feydark. Go to Feydark Wilds (page 155).

Vor Thomil

The nearest fomorian kingdom to Shinaelestra, Vor Thomil endures at the whim of its mad Queen Connomae. Captured travelers are forced to perform for her entertainment as poets, singers, actors or gladiators.

What did you do in Vor Thomil? Choose Entertained the Queen or Escaped.

Entertained the Queen: With a desperate performance, you earned the goodwill of the mad queen, and she decreed your freedom.

Associated Skill: Bluff or Insight.

Aptitude Test: How much did you impress the queen? Make a Charisma check. If the result is 14 or higher, Queen Connomae released you and ordered the fomorians to escort you to the surface. Go to Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152).

If the result is 13 or lower, the queen released you, but after you left the borders of Vor Thomil, you had to fend for yourself. Go to Feydark Wilds (page 155).

Escaped: Fighting your way past guards and beasts, you managed to escape from the fomorian kingdom.

Associated Skill: Dungeoneering or Stealth.

Aptitude Test: Where did you end up after you fled Vor Thomil? Make a Dexterity check. If the result is 14 or higher, you fought your way to Shinaelestra (page 149).

If the result is 13 or lower, you became lost in the wilds. Go to Feydark Wilds (page 155).

Events

Events describe the effects of common happenings that might occur as you create your character's story. You might be acclaimed as a hero or derided as a failure, make a powerful ally or enemy, or find yourself exiled or lost.

Sometimes events move you along in your story, but an event can also be the impetus for you to leave the Feywild and start your adventuring career in the world. The choice is yours, but as a general guideline, when an event occurs, use the number of trained skills you have acquired to determine whether to bring this stage of your story to an end. When you have a class in mind, check the number of trained skills that class allows you. If you already have acquired at least that many trained skills, let the event lead you to begin your adventuring career. Determine the results of the event, then go to the Cross into the World event.

Acclaimed

You performed a great deed that earned you accolades from the powers that be. You were granted an audience with an important figure. What was the deed, and which authority received you? Whoever it was, you were entrusted with an important task.

If you have experienced the Exiled or Ruined event, you disregard the effects of that event.

Go to Civilized Lands (page 147) and choose a location, an activity, and a skill, but don't take an aptitude test. Then go to Cendriane (page 151), the Maze of Fathaghn (page 153), the Murkendraw (page 154), or Fortress of Frozen Tears (page 155), choose an activity there, and take an aptitude test there with a +2 bonus.

Captured

What happened when you got captured? Did you put up a fight? Were you betrayed by someone you trusted?

Go to Harrowhame (page 155), Mag Tureah (page 156), Nachtur (page 156), or Vor Thomil (page 157).

Cross into the World

Your wanderings brought you to a fey crossing or a planar gateway, and you suddenly found yourself in a somewhat muted realm, a place less magical but no less wondrous. You crossed into the mortal world and are ready to begin your adventure.

Go to Start Your Adventure (page 159).

Discovery

What did you find that was remarkable? Maybe you discovered a family secret or a dark conspiracy.

Perhaps you learned a snippet of arcane lore or a sacred revelation from the gods. Whatever it was, you are determined to uncover the full truth. Choose one of the following discoveries.

Arcane Secret: You have learned some eldritch lore that was imprinted on your mind. Your experiences might lead you toward choosing warlock or wizard as your class. Go to Civilized Lands (page 147).

Divine Revelation: You have been granted a prophetic vision by Corellon, Sehanine, or another god. Your experiences might lead you toward choosing cleric or paladin as your class. Go to Civilized Lands (page 147) or Wilderness Locations (page 150).

True Identity: You are not who you thought you were. You must find someone who can offer a glimpse of your true identity. Go to Civilized Lands (page 147), Fortress of Frozen Tears (page 155), or the Murkendraw (page 154).

Exiled

What did you do to earn your exile? Did you truly commit that deed, or were you framed? Choose one of the following outcomes.

Settled as a Hermit: Go to Brokenstone Vale (page 150), Fey Crossing Hamlet (page 151), Feydark Opening Hamlet (page 152), or the Murkendraw (page 154).

Wandered the Wilderness: Go to Feywild Trails (page 152).

Lost

What happened when you became lost? Were you alone, or did you belong to a caravan that lost its way? Did it happen while you were fleeing from a bandit or monster attack? Choose one of the following possibilities.

Strayed from the Path: Go to Dark Lands (page 155).

Wandered into the Wild: Go to Wilderness Locations (page 150).

Made a Powerful Ally

Whom did you befriend? What do you owe in exchange for that ally's help? Whatever was promised, you can call on your ally for help.

If you have experienced the Exiled or Ruined event, you disregard the effects of that event.

Choose one negative event affecting you. You disregard the effects of that event.

After this event, go to any location you choose. If you go to one of the civilized lands, you can choose any activity there and take an aptitude test, even if you failed it before. You gain a +2 bonus to the test. After you take the test, the Made a Powerful Ally event no longer applies to you.

Made a Powerful Enemy

How did you make an enemy, and who is it? Perhaps you incurred the wrath of an evil relative who seeks to do away with the rightful heir to a family fortune. Maybe your enemy is a former colleague who grew jealous of your success. However the enmity came to be, it has a deep impact on your life.

You take a -2 penalty to your aptitude tests. You can remove this penalty by trading this event for Personal Tragedy or Ruined.

If you do not trade this event, go to Dark Lands (page 155) or Wilderness Locations (page 150).

Personal Tragedy

Someone close to you—a family member, a friend, a lover, or an ally—was killed. How did you react? Was an individual responsible for the death, or was it an accident or a cruel trick of fate? Whatever the details, the tragedy has steeled you for further challenges.

On your next aptitude test, you can roll twice and use either result.

Go to Civilized Lands (page 147) or Wilderness Locations (page 150).

Ruined

What happened to make you lose your power, wealth, or fame? Were you slandered by jealous rivals? Cursed by a particularly vindictive fey? Perhaps you simply didn't find your true purpose in life. Choose one of the following outcomes.

Fell in With the Wrong Crowd: Go to a random location in the Dark Lands (page 155). If you fail your next aptitude test, you are taken prisoner. Go to the Captured event (page 157).

Sought Redemption: You take a -2 penalty to your next aptitude test. Go to Feywild Trails (page 152).

Transported

Perhaps you found an ancient portal in lost ruins or were summarily dismissed with a wave of a fey lord's hand. However it happened, you were randomly transported to a new location.

If you have acquired enough trained skills for your desired class, you can be transported into the mortal world. If you choose this option, go to the Cross into the World event.

If you remain in the Feywild instead, roll a d8. On a 1-5, go to Wilderness Locations (page 150) and roll to determine a random location; on a 6-8, go to Dark Lands (page 155) and roll to determine a random land.

Wounded

What happened when you were wounded? Did you sustain injuries in battle, or were you backstabbed in a dark alley by an unseen assailant? Choose one of the following outcomes.

Healed—Barely: Your attackers kidnapped you. Go to the Captured event (page 157).

Taken to a Healing Center: Go to Civilized Lands (page 147).

Tended to by a Lone Mystic: Go to the Discovery event (page 157) and choose Divine Revelation.

Whatever option you choose, you are no longer wounded.

Start Your Adventure

When you finish this process, you should have a rich background for your character. You also have a race, at least one or two ability scores, and several trained skills. From here, you can choose a class and adjust your number of trained skills to match the number your class allows. (Remember that you don't have to conform to your class skills list.) When you choose a class, keep in mind your character's background. For example, if you studied at the temple of Corellon in Mithrendain and failed the associated aptitude test, you probably shouldn't choose a divine class. On the other hand, if you excelled as a mercenary in the armies of Nachtur, fighter would be a fine class choice.

Your character has come a long way, and now your last step is to link your character's history to the starting point of your first adventure. If your character was acclaimed or made a powerful ally, you might have been given a quest that led you to the natural world and great adventure. If your character ended up exiled or ruined or made a powerful enemy, you probably fled to the mortal world in hopes of leaving your past behind.

When the adventure begins, none of the events in this chapter has a lasting effect on your character. Instead, the events offer the DM interesting hooks to include in the game. For example, a powerful enemy you made might show up as a nemesis of your party, or the acclaim you received could earn you some useful contacts.

At this point, you can choose any features, powers, or feats that you still need to select, purchase equipment, and finalize the details of your character. Now you know where you came from and how you acquired your skills and talents, and you can provide your DM with the interesting high notes of your character's history.

Your story began with "Once upon a time." The happily ever after is up to you.

BARD'S TALE: THE WANDERING CHILD

Once upon a time there was a young girl, pretty and fair, who lived near a deep, clear lake with her parents. The girl was but a child, and headstrong as so many are. One day, she went for a swim in the lake. She dove underwater, and when she came up for air she found that the landscape around her had changed. Her home was gone, replaced by a lush forest bathed in perpetual twilight.

The girl was not bothered, and set off through the forest exploring, her curiosity getting the better of her. Soon she came upon an encampment of kind people, travelers and traders who roamed the land. They welcomed her to their fires, and soon realized the girl was a bright and shining gem. They invited her to travel with them, and, wishing to see more of the fantastic realm, she agreed. When the caravan moved on, she went with them. The girl passed her days among the tuathans, as they called themselves, and she learned how to tend animals and even perform a few magical tricks.

Some time later, the caravan stopped at an enchanted glade, where satyrs and nymphs frolicked. The girl met a satyr who could make plants grow and trees sing, and when the tuathans moved on, the girl stayed behind. For a time, she became infatuated with the satyr and hung upon his every word. Soon, she too could make plants grow and trees sing, and she lived peacefully in the glade.

Yet all could not be placid forever. As she slumbered one evening, dark creatures emerged from underground, captured her and some of the dryads of the glade, and whisked them away into the underground realms of the fomorians. There she became a prisoner and lived for a time as a captive of the frightful giants. Just when she had lost any hope of returning to the surface, a group of daring and kindhearted heroes rescued her and the other captives, leading them out of the underground realm and back up into the light.

By now the girl longed for her parents, and she returned to the lake where she had once swum. When she gazed into the water, a stranger stared back at her. During all her travels, she had grown taller and older, and was now a young woman. As she wept by the lake for her lost childhood, a group of tuathans came upon her, and recognized her as one of their own. "Come," they said. "We see that you can speak to the animals. We see that you can make plants grow and trees sing. Come and join our circle." The girl was grateful and agreed, and though she still longed to see her parents again, she was grateful to have found a new family.

Appendix: Character Advancement Table

HEROIC TIER

| Total XP | Level | Ability Scores | Powers and Features | Feats Known | Total Powers Known (At-Will/Encounter/ Daily/Utility) |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 0 | 1st | see race | class features; racial traits; gain 1 feat; train starting skills; gain 2 at-will attack powers; gain 1 encounter attack power; gain 1 daily attack power | 1† | 2/1/1/0 |
| 1,000 | 2nd | – | gain 1 utility power; gain 1 feat | 2 | 2/1/1/1 |
| 2,250 | 3rd | – | gain 1 encounter attack power | 2 | 2/2/1/1 |
| 3,750 | 4th | +1 to two | gain 1 feat | 3 | 2/2/1/1 |
| 5,500 | 5th | – | gain 1 daily attack power | 3 | 2/2/2/1 |
| 7,500 | 6th | – | gain 1 utility power, gain 1 feat | 4 | 2/2/2/2 |
| 10,000 | 7th | – | gain 1 encounter attack power | 4 | 2/3/2/2 |
| 13,000 | 8th | +1 to two | gain 1 feat | 5 | 2/3/2/2 |
| 16,500 | 9th | – | gain 1 daily attack power | 5 | 2/3/3/2 |
| 20,500 | 10th | – | gain 1 utility power, gain 1 feat | 6 | 2/3/3/3 |

PARAGON TIER

| Total XP | Level | Ability Scores | Powers and Features | Feats Known | Total Powers Known (At-Will/Encounter/ Daily/Utility) |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 26,000 | 11th | +1 to all | paragon path features; gain 1 paragon path encounter attack power; gain 1 feat | 7 | 2/4/3/3 |
| 32,000 | 12th | – | gain 1 paragon path utility power; gain 1 feat | 8 | 2/4/3/4 |
| 39,000 | 13th | – | replace 1 encounter attack power | 8 | 2/4*/3/4 |
| 47,000 | 14th | +1 to two | gain 1 feat | 9 | 2/4/3/4 |
| 57,000 | 15th | – | replace 1 daily attack power | 9 | 2/4/3*/4 |
| 69,000 | 16th | – | paragon path feature; gain 1 utility power; gain 1 feat | 10 | 2/4/3/5 |
| 83,000 | 17th | – | replace 1 encounter attack power | 10 | 2/4*/3/5 |
| 99,000 | 18th | +1 to two | gain 1 feat | 11 | 2/4/3/5 |
| 119,000 | 19th | – | replace 1 daily attack power | 11 | 2/4/3*/5 |
| 143,000 | 20th | – | gain 1 paragon path daily attack power; gain 1 feat | 12 | 2/4/4/5 |

EPIC TIER

| Total XP | Level | Ability Scores | Powers and Features | Feats Known | Total Powers Known (At-Will/Encounter/ Daily/Utility) |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 175,000 | 21st | +1 to all | epic destiny feature; gain 1 feat | 13 | 2/4/4/5 |
| 210,000 | 22nd | – | gain 1 utility power, gain 1 feat | 14 | 2/4/4/6 |
| 255,000 | 23rd | – | replace 1 encounter attack power | 14 | 2/4*/4/6 |
| 310,000 | 24th | +1 to two | epic destiny feature; gain 1 feat | 15 | 2/4/4/6 |
| 375,000 | 25th | – | replace 1 daily attack power | 15 | 2/4/4*/6 |
| 450,000 | 26th | – | gain 1 epic destiny utility power; gain 1 feat | 16 | 2/4/4/7 |
| 550,000 | 27th | – | replace 1 encounter attack power | 16 | 2/4*/4/7 |
| 675,000 | 28th | +1 to two | gain 1 feat | 17 | 2/4/4/7 |
| 825,000 | 29th | – | replace 1 daily attack power | 17 | 2/4/4*/7 |
| 1,000,000 | 30th | – | epic destiny feature; gain 1 feat | 18 | 2/4/4/7 |

NOTE: In addition to the benefits summarized on this table, you always get more hit points when you gain a level. See your class description for details.

 At these levels you replace a known power with a new power of your new level.

† Humans gain one additional feat at 1st level. Some classes grant additional feats as well.

Magic and Mayhem for the Wild at Heart

The Feywild is a bright reflection of the world, a place of enchantment and illusion where magic is master. For the unprepared adventurer, the Feywild can be perilous; cruel giants, fierce beasts, and devious fairies dwell there. For others, the Feywild is a land of opportunity, with vast tracts of unexplored wilderness filled with ancient ruins and lost treasures. If you're going to survive long, you'll need to embrace your wild side and channel the magic and primal power of the Feywild.

Player's Option: Heroes of the Feywild™ presents races, classes, character themes, feats, powers, and other character options that have a strong connection to the Feywild. It also gives players and Dungeon Masters background information on the inhabitants of this weird and wondrous plane, and how adventurers might cross paths with them.

For use with these Dungeons & Dragons® products:

Player's Handbook® core rulebooks

Heroes of the Fallen Lands™

Heroes of the Forgotten Kingdoms™

Rules Compendium™

D&D INSIDER
Become a member today. DungeonsandDragons.com

ISBN: 978-0-7869-5836-8
52995
9 780786 958368
EAN
Sug. Retail: U.S. $29.95 CAN $34.00
Printed in the U.S.A. 317310000

Dungeons & Dragons®

Adventurer's Vault™ 2

Arms and Equipment for All Character Classes

ROLEPLAYING GAME SUPPLEMENT

Rob Heinsoo • Eytan Bernstein • Logan Bonner • Peter Schaefer

Dungeons & Dragons®

Adventurer's Vault™ 2

Arms and Equipment for All Classes

ROLEPLAYING GAME SUPPLEMENT

Rob Heinsoo • Eytan Bernstein • Logan Bonner • Peter Schaefer

CREDITS

Design
Rob Heinsoo (lead), Eytan Bernstein, Logan Bonner, Stephen Radney-MacFarland

Additional Design
Rob Donoghue

Development
Peter Schaefer (lead), Stephen Schubert, Logan Bonner

Additional Development
Rodney Thompson, Rob Watkins

Editing
Cal Moore (lead), Jennifer Clarke Wilkes, Jeremy Crawford, Scott Fitzgerald Gray, M. Alexander Jurkat

Managing Editing
Kim Mohan

Director of D&D R&D and Book Publishing
Bill Slavicsek

D&D Creative Manager
Christopher Perkins

D&D Design Manager
James Wyatt

D&D Development and Editing Manager
Andy Collins

Art Director
Kate Irwin

Cover Illustration
Wayne Reynolds

Graphic Designers
Keven Smith, Leon Cortez, Lisa Hanson

Interior Illustrations
Kalman Andrasofszky, Jeff Carlisle, Ed Cox, Thomas Denmark, Wayne England, Jason A. Engle, Howard Lyon, Sean "Muttonhead" Murray, Lucio Parrillo, Chris Seaman, Matias Tapia, Eric L. Williams, Kieran Yanner

Publishing Production Specialist
Angelika Lokotz

Prepress Manager
Jefferson Dunlap

Imaging Technicians
Ashley Brock

Production Manager
Cynda Callaway

Game rules based on the original Dungeons & Dragons® rules created by E. Gary Gygax and Dave Arneson, and the later editions by David "Zeb" Cook (2nd Edition); Jonathan Tweet, Monte Cook, Skip Williams, Richard Baker, and Peter Adkison (3rd Edition); and Rob Heinsoo, Andy Collins, and James Wyatt (4th Edition).

620-24177720-001 HB
9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1
First Printing: August 2009
ISBN: 978-0-7869-5204-5

U.S., CANADA, ASIA, PACIFIC, & LATIN AMERICA
Wizards of the Coast LLC
P.O. Box 707
Renton WA 98057-0707
+1-800-324-6496

EUROPEAN HEADQUARTERS
Hasbro UK Ltd
Caswell Way
Newport, Gwent NP9 0YH
GREAT BRITAIN
Please keep this address for your records

WIZARDS OF THE COAST, BELGIUM
Industrialaan 1
1702 Groot-Bijgaarden
Belgium
+32.070.233.277

Dungeons & Dragons, D&D, d20, d20 System, Wizards of the Coast, Adventurer's Vault, Player's Handbook, Dungeon Master's Guide, Monster Manual, D&D Insider, all other Wizards of the Coast product names, and their respective logos are trademarks of Wizards of the Coast in the U.S.A. and other countries. All Wizards characters and the distinctive likenesses thereof are property of Wizards of the Coast LLC. This material is protected under the copyright laws of the United States of America. Any reproduction or unauthorized use of the material or artwork contained herein is prohibited without the express written permission of Wizards of the Coast LLC. Any similarity to actual people, organizations, places, or events included herein is purely coincidental. Printed in the U.S.A. ©2009 Wizards of the Coast LLC

VISIT OUR WEBSITE AT WWW.WIZARDS.COM/DND

Introduction

Adventurer's Vault 2 is a successor and a companion to the Adventurer's Vault supplement. In it you'll find a wide selection of magic items to augment those presented in its predecessor as well as in the Player's Handbook®, Player's Handbook 2, and other sources.

More than just a continuation, though, Adventurer's Vault 2 puts forth a few advances in the way that magic items are presented and conceptualized.

More Magic Items

Chapter 1: Magic Items gives players and DMs even more choices for gear and goodies to outfit characters and to serve as treasure. In addition to the usual categories (armor, weapons, rings, and so forth), this chapter has sections for two kinds of implements—tomes and totems—that have been added to the game since Adventurer's Vault was published. It also breaks new ground with lair items, which bring new meaning to the term "comforts of home"; tattoos, for those who want the ultimate in portability for their magic; and immurements, a form of consumable item that enables its owner to actually reshape the battlefield.

Sidebars throughout this chapter highlight particular items, providing flavor in the form of background stories and offering one or two ideas for how the item can be worked into an adventure plot. Magic items can be more than just possessions—they can be the stuff of which entire campaigns are built.

Item Sets

Chapter 2: Item Sets takes the idea of magic items as flavor devices one step further. Each of the more than 30 sections in this chapter tells the story of a group of items that have a common origin or theme. Each item is tailored for one of the three tiers of play—heroic, paragon, or epic. Although any of these items can be used individually, a character who owns and uses more than one item of a set gains an additional benefit beyond what the items themselves impart.

Alternatively, an item might be part of a group set. These collections of items are special because they provide additional benefits based on how many different members of an adventuring party wield one or more of the items in the set.

Item Tables

Finally, no book of this sort would be complete without a collection of tables to summarize its contents. The tables in the appendix of Adventurer's Vault 2 are organized by level and by types of items within each level, so that a DM looking to fill out a treasure parcel and a player making up a wish list can both easily find what they need.

Contents

1: Magic Items ..... 4
- Armor ..... 6
- Weapons ..... 15
- Ammunition ..... 25
- Holy Symbols ..... 28
- Orbs ..... 32
- Rods ..... 34
- Staffs ..... 37
- Tomes ..... 41
- Totems ..... 43
- Wands ..... 48
- Arms Slot Items ..... 52
- Feet Slot Items ..... 57
- Hands Slot Items ..... 58
- Head Slot Items ..... 61
- Neck Slot Items ..... 63
- Rings ..... 69
- Waist Slot Items ..... 74
- Wondrous Items ..... 76
  - Wondrous Lair Items ..... 79
- Tattoos ..... 83
- Consumables ..... 87
  - Reagents ..... 87
  - Immurements ..... 88

2: Item Sets ..... 92
- Heroic Tier Item Sets ..... 94
- Paragon Tier Item Sets ..... 104
- Epic Tier Item Sets ..... 124
- Group Sets ..... 130

Appendix: Item Tables ..... 138

CHAPTER 1

Magic Items

HOWARD LYON

Wherever one travels throughout the world (and beyond), magic items are highly sought after for their benefits both small and large.

Adventurers seek out magical treasures to help them achieve their goals. Many of those treasures have histories that inspire rumors and spawn quests.

This chapter presents more magic items to fill out adventurers' wish lists.

- Armor: Strong materials and protective magic keep blades and arrows away from your flesh.
- Weapons: Strike fear into your enemies when you wield a weapon of power.
- Ammunition: Arrows, bolts, and sling stones give you a combat edge at range.
- Implements: Holy symbols, orbs, rods, staffs, tomes, totems, and wands channel your magic and grant special benefits.
- Arms Slot Items: Shields to guard you and bracers to smite your foes.
- Feet Slot Items: When you need to move quicker, jump farther, or dodge better, step into one of these items.
- Hands Slot Items: Magic gloves and gauntlets not only keep your hands warm but keep you alive.
- Head Slot Items: Magic to bolster the mind, body, and spirit.
- Neck Slot Items: Improve your defenses in style!
- Rings: Jewelry imbued with powerful and varied enchantments.
- Waist Slot Items: These items can improve your health and increase your skills—as well as hold your pants up.
- Wondrous Items: Strange and fantastic items with a wide range of uses.
- Lair Items: New wondrous items to enhance your base of operations.
- Tattoos: The best thing about magic of the flesh is that it's inseparable from you.
- Consumables: Use these one-shot items to get out of a tough situation.

Several of the item descriptions are augmented by sidebars that offer lore or background about the item, plus one or more adventure hooks involving the item and how the characters might acquire it.

ARMOR

No attack is too devastating to be turned aside.

Armor is an integral part of any adventurer's gear. From the wizard's robes and the barbarian's hide to the bard's chainmail and the paladin's plate, armor's protection is available to every hero.

Enchantments improve the wearer's Armor Class, whether by filling plate armor's gaps with shields of force or hardening leather armor into something that can stop a ballista shot. Seasoned adventurers can depend on magic armor to protect them even from the teeth of an ancient wyrm.

At least some of the time.

Armor of Aegis Expansion — Level 2+

Flecks of magical force swirl around this light armor, coalescing to deflect attacks against you and your companions.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth, leather
Enhancement: AC

Power (Encounter): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: A creature you have marked with your aegis of shielding power targets you and at least one of your allies with an attack. Effect: The damage of the triggering creature's attack damage is reduced by 5 + the armor's enhancement bonus.
Level 12 or 17: 10 + enhancement bonus.
Level 22 or 27: 15 + enhancement bonus.

Armor of Dark Deeds — Level 14+

Swirling with shadows, this armor masks you from your enemies.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Leather, hide
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you attack an enemy that is granting combat advantage to you, you gain concealment until the end of your next turn.

Armor of Enduring Health — Level 23+

While wearing this armor, you can draw more deeply on your inner resources.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Hide, chain
Enhancement: AC
Property: You can use your second wind one additional time per encounter.

Armor of Shared Health — Level 30

This golden chainmail glows with divine energy that heals you when you help others.

Lvl 30 +6 3,125,000 gp
Armor: Chain
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you use a healing power that benefits an ally, you also regain hit points equal to one-half the hit points that ally regains.

Armor of Shared Valor — Level 15+

When you exhort your allies to find courage, you find it yourself.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Armor: Leather, chain
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you use a power that grants an ally a bonus to any defense, you gain an equal bonus of the same type to the same defense. This bonus lasts until the power's effect ends or until the end of your next turn.

Armor of Sudden Recovery — Level 3+

You shrug off deadly conditions easily in this supple armor.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth, leather
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to saving throws against ongoing damage.

Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Minor Action. You can use this power when you're taking ongoing damage. The ongoing damage ends, and you gain regeneration equal to the amount of the ongoing damage until the end of the encounter.

Bastion Armor — Level 7+

This blocky armor, usually crafted in the dwarven style, is a favorite of dwarven defenders.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC

Power (Encounter): Minor Action. You end a mark on you or an ally adjacent to you.

Blackflock Robe — Level 12+

Wrapped in this tattered black cloth, you can briefly transform into a flock of ravens.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth
Enhancement: AC

Power (Daily): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: You take damage from an attack. Effect: You fly 8 squares and become insubstantial until the start of your next turn.

Coruscating Armor — Level 2+

This glittering steel armor masks your exact location from enemies that would impede you.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of your next turn, you don't provoke opportunity attacks and can't be grabbed. This power doesn't end an existing grab.

Counterstrike Armor — Level 10+

The warding on this armor punishes the first enemy to strike you in battle.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Cloth, leather, hide
Enhancement: AC
Property: The first enemy that hits you during an encounter takes ongoing 5 damage (save ends).
Level 20, 25, or 30: Ongoing 10 damage (save ends).

Dazzling Plate — Level 4+

Favored by paladins of Pelor, this shining suit of polished mithral plate strengthens your spirit and dazzles your foes.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Plate
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to all defenses against charm, fear, and psychic effects.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Each enemy adjacent to you takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends).

Death's Brink Armor — Level 7+

This black metal armor has the image of an outthrust hand emblazoned on its breast.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC
Property: While you're dying, you don't die until you fail four death saving throws.
Power (Daily): No Action. Trigger: You roll a death saving throw and dislike the result. Effect: You gain a +2 bonus to the saving throw.
Level 12 or 17: +3 bonus.
Level 22 or 27: +4 bonus.

ARMOR OF SHARED VALOR

The ballad of Velira is also the legend of the armor of shared valor. A bard who came from across the sea when the waters of the world were ice and the land was still unformed, Velira brought the magic of fire and music to the scattered tribes of humanoids and helped defend them against all invaders. Her most powerful tool was the armor she created for herself: As she shielded an entire tribe with the magic of her songs, she too became a more powerful protector.

Suits of armor of shared valor exist today, but they're thought to be lesser copies of the original.

Persuade a Bardic College: Bardic colleges usually craft and control distribution of armor of shared valor. An adventurer who seeks such an item must convince the organization of his or her worthiness. True bardic colleges are few and far between, but loose fellowships of wandering bards are often called colleges as well. Obtaining their approval requires getting references and traveling to meet with scattered members.

Velira's People: The ballad of Velira is regarded as a fantasy by most, but it has a kernel of truth. The tribes spoken of in it might yet exist, huddled along fjords and wandering in arctic regions. Adventurers who locate such a hidden people might learn the secret of creating armor of shared valor, or perhaps acquire a suit that has been stashed away since ancient times.

Armor of shared valor

THOMAS DENMARK

Gambit armor

Demonscale — Level 9+

Piecemeal skins, scales, and exoskeletons of demons form a frightful but sturdy suit of scale armor.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Scale
Enhancement: AC
Power (Encounter): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: You take acid, cold, fire, or lightning damage. Effect: You gain resist 5 to the triggering damage type until the end of the encounter.
Level 14 or 19: Resist 10.
Level 24 or 29: Resist 15.

Formidable Armor — Level 14+

When you activate this armor, even the mightiest blow can do little more than scratch your skin.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Hide, chain
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An attack hits you and doesn't score a critical hit. Effect: The triggering attack deals the minimum damage.

Gallant Armor — Level 27

This magnificent suit of plate mail rewards you for selflessly tending your companions.

Lvl 27 +6 1,625,000 gp
Armor: Plate
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you use the lay on hands power on an ally, you also regain hit points equal to one-half your healing surge value.

Gambit Armor — Level 13+

Made for those who like to take chances in battle, this armor lets you risk your own safety for a better chance to harm your foes.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth, leather
Enhancement: AC
Property: When an enemy scores a critical hit against you, you can score a critical hit on a roll of 17–20 on your next attack against that enemy before the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily ✦ Stance): Minor Action. Until the stance ends, you grant combat advantage and any creature you attack grants combat advantage to you.

Gambler's Suit — Level 6

Luck is fickle, and this stylish set of leathers plays both sides of the coin.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 6 | +2 | 1,800 gp | Lvl 21 | +5 | 225,000 gp |
| Lvl 11 | +3 | 9,000 gp | Lvl 26 | +6 | 1,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 16 | +4 | 45,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Leather
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you make at least two saving throws, you can choose to gain a +2 bonus to the first saving throw and take a -2 penalty to the second.
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An enemy hits you with an attack. Effect: The triggering enemy rerolls the attack roll and must use the second result. If that result is a hit, the attack scores a critical hit.

Genasi Soul Armor — Level 4+

Elemental energies ripple through this armor, said to contain the life energy of a genasi.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Leather, hide
Enhancement: AC
Property: This armor is attuned to one genasi elemental manifestation (Forgotten Realms Player's Guide, page 10) chosen at the time the armor is created.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of the encounter, you can use the racial encounter power associated with the armor's elemental manifestation. If you already have that racial power, you can use it a second time during this encounter.

HOWARD LYON

Great Cat Armor — Level 19+

In this sleek suit of hide armor, you bound around the battlefield like a powerful feline.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Hide
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you shift, you can shift 1 additional square.
Power (Daily): Move Action. You shift a number of squares equal to twice the armor's enhancement bonus.

Healer's Armor — Level 5+

This sturdy armor enhances your ability to heal your allies.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | +1 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp |
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Armor: Hide, chain
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you use a healing power, the target regains additional hit points equal to the armor's enhancement bonus.

HOLY RADIANCE ARMOR

Xelfide was a den of iniquity, sin, and debauchery. The town, inhabited by villains, leeches, and other low characters, existed outside the realm of law and decency. In such a place, good had little chance to flourish.

Fifty years ago, a traveling cleric of Pelor known as Koslin came to Xelfide with the intention of purifying it. His first attempt was met with outright resistance, violence, and theft. After that disaster, the cleric's resolve faltered—until he received a vision from Pelor that showed him standing in the town square at noon and praying.

Koslin went to the square, obeying what he saw as a mission from his god. At first, he attracted sneers and laughs, but as he continued to pray, his armor began to glow with increasing brilliance. This demonstration of divine blessing won Koslin many converts to the worship of Pelor. Tragically, the cleric was slain by those who still clung to their evil ways, but not before the town had turned to a righteous path. Holy radiance armor memorializes this sacred act.

Purify Xelfide, Again: In the years since the death of Koslin, Xelfide has slowly returned to its old ways. The corrupt town leaders hold Koslin's armor and keep it hidden in their stronghold. If a worthy hero can recover the armor and wear it again in Pelor's name, the town might return to the good.

Remnants of the Underbelly: A few of Xelfide's most evil citizens fled to the frontier when Koslin converted the town to the worship of Pelor. Before they left, they managed to murder the cleric and plunder his armor, which they buried in their encampment. Now, they plague the town, paralyzing trade, and stealing and killing with no remorse. The citizens seek aid from heroes who walk the same path as Koslin.

Hero's Armor — Level 2+

This shirt of glimmering chainmail fortifies those who take bold action in battle.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Armor: Chain
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you also gain a +2 bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Free Action. Trigger: You spend an action point. Effect: You forgo the bonus to all defenses granted by the armor's property. Instead, an ally within 5 squares of you uses his or her second wind as a free action.

Holy Adversary's Armor — Level 3+

When you swear an oath against your prey, divine grace permeates this armor, protecting you against that creature's attacks.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of the encounter, you gain resistance to all damage against attacks by your current oath of enmity target equal to the armor's enhancement bonus.

Holy Radiance Armor — Level 15+

This gleaming chainmail glows with the radiance of the sun.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Armor: Chain
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Minor Action. You expend your use of a Channel Divinity power for this encounter and shed bright light 20 squares in all directions. While within the light, you and each ally gain regeneration 3 while bloodied and a +2 power bonus to saving throws.

Kemstone Armor — Level 8+

Fashioned with the strong but light kemras stone found in various dominions of the Astral Sea, this armor stabilizes its wearer's essence.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain a +4 item bonus to all defenses against polymorph effects.

Lifefont Armor — Level 4+

Embedded with ancient and powerful primal symbols, this armor has saved the life of more than one warden.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Hide
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you make saving throws at the start of your turn using the Font of Life class feature, you gain a +1 item bonus to each saving throw.
Power (Daily): No Action. Trigger: You start your turn and have the Font of Life class feature. Effect: You make a saving throw against each effect that a save can end instead of just one.

RAT KILLER'S COAT

The reclusive mage Sarkudo hid his laboratory deep under the capital city out of a desire for privacy. To his chagrin, he discovered that by plying his trade in the sewers, he had invited a dungeon to his doorstep. Dealing with slimes, molds, vermin, giant bugs, and the like was so frustrating and time-consuming that Sarkudo almost gave up and left.

Sarkudo had long observed one of the city's rat catchers and was baffled as to how the man had survived so long in such a dangerous place, armed with only a sharp stick and a small but vicious dog. The wizard asked him what his secret was. The rat catcher opened Sarkudo's eyes by revealing the secret lore of the sewers and how to live in harmony with the unique environment. Sarkudo was so impressed that he hired the rat catcher to help redesign his lab, and in short order, it was attracting much less trouble.

The wizard also made a protective coat for his assistant, which the rat catcher in turn passed on to his heir. The child aspired to a grander career, namely adventuring. The coat served its wearer so well in battle that fellow adventurers made versions of their own, and rat killer's coats soon became popular.

The King of Cats: The King of Cats is a very specialized shop, carrying special items such as silver weaponry, rat poison, and exotic tools. Ruffians are extorting protection money from the owner, who seeks assistance in stopping them. She offers a rat killer's coat as a reward.

The Grieving Family: Sven is a hunter of vermin and a minor adventurer. He entered the sewers over a week ago and hasn't been seen since. His wife has given up hope but wants someone to recover the body for a proper burial. Whoever accomplishes this task can keep the tools of Sven's trade, including his magic coat, if he's really dead.

Magnetic Armor — Level 9+

Studded with lodestones, this heavy armor pulls creatures into your reach.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily): Minor Action. You pull one creature within 3 squares of you 3 squares. If you pull it into a square adjacent to you, it's also immobilized (save ends).
Level 14 or 19: One creature within 5 squares.
Level 24 or 29: One creature within 10 squares, and you pull it 5 squares.

Marauder's Armor — Level 7+

This heavy, fur-lined armor is favored by barbarian pirates who rush into the fray.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Leather, hide
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you charge, you gain a +1 bonus to AC until the end of your next turn.
Level 12 or 17: +2 bonus.
Level 22 or 27: +3 bonus.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Free Action. Trigger: You hit with a charge attack. Effect: You make a saving throw with a bonus equal to the armor's enhancement bonus, or you spend a healing surge and regain additional hit points equal to the armor's enhancement bonus.

Mind Armor — Level 23+

At a moment's notice, you can surround this adamantine armor with a psychic field that protects you from mental attacks.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain resist 15 psychic.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of the encounter, any enemy that attacks you with a charm, fear, illusion, psychic, or sleep power rolls the attack roll twice and must use the lower result.

Moon Armor — Level 3+

This armor is made from deposits of a strange ore that some believe came from the moon.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Chain
Enhancement: AC
Property: While you're in darkness or dim light (including starlight), you gain a +1 bonus to AC.

Nightmare Ward Armor — Level 3+

The glistening black material of this armor, strangely cold to the touch, reliably deflects mental attacks.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Leather, hide
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain resist 5 psychic.
Level 13 or 18: Resist 10 psychic.
Level 23 or 28: Resist 15 psychic.
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to saving throws against charm, fear, or psychic effects.

Parchment Armor — Level 4+

This armor is made of magically reinforced parchment inscribed with arcane writings.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth, leather
Enhancement: AC
Property: This armor contains a number of arcane charges equal to its enhancement bonus. Recharging the armor requires an extended rest.
Power (At-Will): Free Action. Trigger: You use an arcane power and make an attack roll. Effect: You spend any number of unused charges from this armor and gain a power bonus to the attack roll for the triggering power equal to the number of charges spent.

Predator's Hide — Level 3+

This tiger's hide clearly marks you as a formidable hunter.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Hide
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you hit a target you have designated with your Hunter's Quarry class feature, you gain a +1 bonus to all defenses against attacks by the designated quarry until the end of your next turn.
Level 13 or 18: +2 bonus.
Level 23 or 28: +3 bonus.

Rat Killer's Coat — Level 2+

This fur-trimmed jacket is favored by all who must deal with dangerous vermin.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth, leather
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain resist 5 against damage from swarms' attacks. In addition, you can move through a space occupied by a swarm, and your movement doesn't provoke opportunity attacks from swarms.
Level 12 or 17: Resist 10.
Level 22 or 27: Resist 15.

Parchment armor

Robe of Avoidance — Level 3+

When an enemy's attack misses you, this billowing robe confuses the foe so that you can get away.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth
Enhancement: AC
Power (Encounter): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An enemy misses you with a melee attack. Effect: You shift 1 square.

CHRIS SEAMAN

SANGUINE VESTMENTS

Avengers wear these magic robes to proclaim their enmity for their chosen prey. Sanguine vestments are dyed deep red, not only symbolizing the blood of those the wearer slays but often incorporating it. However, the garment often has sleeves or trim of pure white. After a battle, the avenger wipes the foe's blood from his or her weapon onto the white to demonstrate victory. This action also reinforces the avenger's commitment to destroy all enemies of his or her god.

Prove Yourself Worthy: The first step in acquiring sanguine vestments is to earn them through suitable actions. The guardians of the monasteries that train avengers bestow such a garment only on someone who defeats a great enemy.

Red Thread of Bel Yasura: Far from any civilization, across a dry, dangerous scrubland, stands the Bel Yasura monastery. Here, priests, monks, and avengers-in-training craft beautiful sanguine vestments as a form of meditation, using a unique type of red thread. Only those who swear the order's vows of asceticism and immerse themselves relentlessly in service to the god can learn the secret of creating this raiment of the faithful.

Runic Armor — Level 3+

The arcane sigils engraved on this armor glow in the presence of magical emanations.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Any
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain an item bonus to Arcana checks equal to the armor's enhancement bonus.
Property: When you use your second wind, you also gain a bonus to damage rolls with arcane attack powers equal to the armor's enhancement bonus until the end of your next turn.

Sanguine Vestments — Level 3+

The blood of wounded enemies only strengthens this deep red garment.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain a +1 bonus to all defenses while your oath of enmity target is bloodied.

Scale of the Serpent — Level 4+

Forged by fomorians from a strange green ore of the Feywild, this armor makes you as slippery as a snake.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Scale
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain a +5 item bonus to checks to escape a grab.
Power (Daily): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An effect dazes, immobilizes, slows, or stuns you. Effect: You make a saving throw against the triggering effect. On a save, that effect ends.

Serpentine Armor — Level 4+

Metallic snakes writhe along the surface of this armor, ready to strike at any foe that tries to get by you.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Scale
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain resist 5 poison.
Level 14 or 19: Resist 10 poison.
Level 24 or 29: Resist 15 poison.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: An enemy adjacent to you shifts. Effect: The triggering enemy takes damage equal to 5 + the armor's enhancement bonus.
Level 14 or 19: 10 + enhancement bonus.
Level 24 or 29: 15 + enhancement bonus.

Shadow Hound Armor — Level 7+

Crafted from the hide of a massive shadow hound, this armor lets you fade away from danger when you suffer a grievous wound.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Hide
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: You become bloodied. Effect: You become insubstantial until the end of your next turn.

Shadow Warlock Armor — Level 10+

While wearing this suit of black leather, you can cloud the mind of a cursed enemy so that your attack strikes true.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Leather
Enhancement: AC
Property: While you have concealment from your Shadow Walk class feature, any creature affected by your Warlock's Curse grants combat advantage to you.

Slime Armor — Level 8+

You can cause this heavy armor to drip with acidic ooze that burns those who touch it.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC

Power (Daily ✦ Acid): Minor Action. Until the end of your next turn, any creature that hits you with a melee attack takes ongoing 5 acid damage (save ends).
Level 13 or 18: Ongoing 10 acid damage (save ends).
Level 23 or 28: Ongoing 15 acid damage (save ends).

Snaketongue Robe — Level 13+

A pattern of tiny, scintillating scales covers the surface of this loose garment, granting you the qualities of a serpent.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to Bluff checks.
Property: You gain resist 5 poison.

Power (Daily): Move Action. You shift a number of squares equal to the armor's enhancement bonus.

Spectral Plate — Level 20+

This dull black plate armor is made of iron plates infused with Shadowfell essence, granting you wraithlike properties.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Plate
Enhancement: AC
Property: You ignore the speed and skill check penalties for wearing plate armor.

Power (Daily): Move Action. You move your speed. In addition, you become insubstantial and gain phasing until the end of your turn.

Spiderweb Robes — Level 8+

This light, thin robe is woven from spider silk and carries a hint of the power of arachnids.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Armor: Cloth
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain resist 5 poison.
Level 13 or 18: Resist 10 poison.
Level 23 or 28: Resist 15 poison.

Power (Daily): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An enemy adjacent to you hits you with a melee attack. Effect: The triggering enemy is restrained until the end of its next turn.

Spiked Jacket — Level 3+

Hidden razor-sharp spikes spring out from the elbows, shoulders, and sides of this jacket when something grabs you.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Leather, hide
Enhancement: AC

Power (Daily): Standard Action. Trigger: You are grabbed. Effect: You escape the grab, and the enemy that was grabbing you takes 1d6 damage per plus.

Spirit Armor — Level 14+

This suit of fine chain has a ghostly sheen, and its mesh protects you from the denizens of the spirit world.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Chain
Enhancement: AC

Power (At-Will): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An insubstantial enemy adjacent to you hits you. Effect: The triggering enemy loses the insubstantial quality (save ends). You become insubstantial until the triggering enemy saves against this effect.

Supporting Armor — Level 4+

This heavy iron armor absorbs the shock of jarring attacks.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | +1 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp |
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC

Power (Daily): No Action. Trigger: An effect dazes or stuns you. Effect: You make a saving throw against the triggering effect. On a save, the effect ends.

SNAKETONGUE ROBE

Human worshipers of the serpent god Zehir, known as snaketongue cultists, perform dreadful rituals to transform themselves into more snakelike forms. Snaketongue robes enhance the efficacy of these rituals. Yuan-ti create the robes for cultists who have performed exceptional deeds in Zehir's name.

Celebrants of Zehir: Some snaketongue celebrants (Monster Manual, page 273) wear snaketongue robes to even more closely resemble the serpent god and his yuan-ti emissaries. These cultists are of high rank and are protected by many snaketongue zealots and warriors.

Serpent Crypt: Yuan-ti have been weaving snaketongue robes since their empire was in full bloom. The garments were originally worn only by nobles, and royal crypts within ruined yuan-ti cities or under ancient pyramids still hold these treasures of former rulers.

Time link armor

Teleporting Armor — Level 12+

A small teleportation circle is emblazoned on the breastplate of this armor.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Armor: Scale, plate
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily ✦ Teleportation): Move Action. You teleport a number of squares equal to twice the armor's enhancement bonus.

Time Link Armor — Level 4+

Woven from shimmering crystal, this light chain suit improves your reaction time.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Chain
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain an item bonus to initiative checks equal to the armor's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily): No Action. Trigger: You roll initiative and dislike the result. Effect: You reroll initiative but must use the second result.

Translocating Armor — Level 14+

A field of planar energy surrounds this armor. If an enemy fails to hit you, you can teleport out of its reach.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Armor: Any
Enhancement: AC
Power (Encounter ✦ Teleportation): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An enemy misses you with an attack. Effect: You teleport 3 squares.

Wall Armor — Level 3+

This armor seems far heavier than its constituent material. It becomes as unforgiving as a brick wall at a moment's notice.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Any
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An enemy hits or misses you with a bull rush or charge attack. Effect: The triggering enemy takes 1d6 damage per plus and is knocked prone.

Warmage's Uniform — Level 3+

These decorated greatcoats come in a variety of styles, but all lend military might to their wearers.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth, leather
Enhancement: AC
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an arcane attack power. Effect: Until the end of your next turn, one ally within 5 squares of that enemy gains a power bonus to attack rolls against the enemy equal to the armor's enhancement bonus.

Winged Armor — Level 13+

Glorious angelic wings sprout from this armor at your command.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Any
Enhancement: AC
Property: You gain an item bonus to Athletics checks to jump equal to the armor's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily): Move Action. You fly your speed. You must begin and end this move on a solid surface. You also gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

KALMAN ANDRASOFSZKY

WEAPONS

There's no protection in the world that can stop this cutting edge. Or out of the world, for that matter.

Along with armor and neck slot items, weapons are central to an adventurer's gear. Even the most diplomatic adventurer knows that when defense isn't enough, there's no substitute for a good offense.

Aegis Blade — Level 3+

This blade allows you to place your aegis on all nearby foes with a single word of power.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Heavy blade, light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Mark each enemy within a close burst 3 (save ends). If you have the Swordmage Aegis class feature, treat each mark as if you applied it with your chosen aegis.

ALFSAIR SPEAR

Where the Dayforge Mountains meet the pines of the Winterbole Forest, small copses of strange twisting coniferous trees called alfsairs grow in remote glens. Sometimes called wisewood by the druids and shamans of the north, the light and remarkably strong wood of this tree constantly exudes a sticky, sweet-smelling sap that some tribes use for primal communion.

Druids carefully harvest and prepare the warped branches of these trees and shape them into seemingly awkward but surprisingly functional spears. Through clever crafting and enchanting, wielders are able to control the flow of the sap, focusing it for their own benefit and to their enemies' detriment.

Vanishing Wisdom: An old shaman is in trouble. He's slowly being driven insane by a tormenting trio of spirits only he can see. According to the shaman, the tormenting spirits can be banished only by the touch of an alfsair spear. He will be grateful to any adventurer who can come to his aid with one of these spears.

Roof of the World: Alfsair spears are mystical weapons. Legends tell that the most powerful aren't crafted at all, but grow from the top of the world's highest mountain. As the story goes, every 76 years, on the longest day of the year and when the Dragontooth wandering star is visible in the night sky, a new alfsair spear appears on the summit of the Roof of the World Mountain.

Aftershock Weapon — Level 2+

This weapon sends ripples of force toward nearby foes.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Any
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and each enemy adjacent to the target of the critical hit is knocked prone.

Alfsair Spear — Level 3+

This spear is a favorite druid weapon.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Spear
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 psychic and poison damage per plus
Property: You gain an item bonus to Nature checks equal to the spear's enhancement bonus.
Property: Classes that use totems can use this spear as an implement for class powers and paragon path powers.
Power (Daily ✦ Poison, Psychic): No Action. Trigger: You score a critical hit against an enemy with this spear. Effect: The enemy hit by the triggering attack is dazed until the end of its next turn.

Aura Killer Weapon — Level 3+

The dark purple magic trailing in this weapon's wake shuts down your enemy's subtle spells and instinctive powers.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Any melee
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You use this weapon to hit an enemy that has an aura. Effect: The enemy's aura ends, and the enemy can't reactivate it (save ends).

Avalanche Hammer — Level 4+

Enchanted with the essence of elemental earth, this hammer strikes foes like an avalanche.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Hammer
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d10 damage per plus, and the target is knocked prone.
Property: When you charge an enemy and hit with a melee basic attack using this weapon, the attack deals 1[W] extra damage.

Battle spirit weapon

Banishing Spellblade — Level 14+

A powerful enchantment placed on this blade allows you to sequester a foe for a short amount of time.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Heavy blade, light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d8 per plus when used as an implement for an arcane power
Power (Daily ✦ Teleportation): Free Action. Trigger: Using this weapon, you hit an enemy with an arcane attack power that pulls, pushes, slides, or teleports the target. Effect: Instead of being pushed, pulled, slid, or teleported, that enemy disappears. At the end of the enemy's next turn, it reappears in the space it left. If that space is occupied, it appears in the nearest unoccupied space (your choice).

Battle Spirit Weapon — Level 15+

Infused with the sprit of a savage warrior, this weapon gives you ghostly powers when charging.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Axe, flail, hammer, heavy blade, mace, spear
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d10 damage per plus on a charge
Property: While charging, you are insubstantial and can move through squares occupied by enemies. Your movement provokes opportunity attacks as normal.

Blood Drinker — Level 9+

You know when to feed your weapon, because it growls when it's hungry.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Axe, heavy blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: If you make an attack using this weapon and miss all targets, the blood drinker deals 5 damage to you, and the next attack you make before the end of your next turn deals 2d6 extra damage to the first target it hits.
Level 14 or 19: The weapon deals 10 damage to you, and your next attack deals 3d6 extra damage.
Level 24 or 29: The weapon deals 15 damage to you, and your next attack deals 4d8 extra damage.

BATTLE SPIRIT WEAPON

Sometimes a warrior's legacy is so potent, her deeds so extraordinary, that some part of her spirit lives on after death. These spirit fragments are sometimes drawn to the weapon the warrior used in life, or some similar martial instrument. Often they cling to the weapon, infusing it with power without need of a ritual or outside intervention. When the connection is weaker, a ritual can be used to fuse a spirit into steel.

Once fused, the spirit fragment allows the wielder of the battle spirit weapon to transform into a ghostly mist when charging. Barbarians believe that this transformation allows a warrior to step briefly into the realm of the ancestors, and many warriors claim to have received life-changing visions and messages from their ancestors while charging into battle.

The Reforging: A barbarian tribe has carried a particular battle spirit weapon since the days of its founding. Infused with the spirit of the tribe's founder, the weapon was the symbol of the chief's power and led the tribe to many victories. Recently, an evil warlock stole into the tribe's camp, slew the chief, and sundered the weapon. He bound the founder's spirit fragment into another vessel and is using it to guide a construct he created that is now ravaging the countryside. According to the tribe's beliefs, the person who can free the spirit from the construct and reforge the weapon will earn the right to wield it.

MATIAS TAPIA

Blood Fury Weapon — Level 3+

Often decorated with bloodstones, these blades or axes are favored by dragonborn barbarians.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Axe, heavy blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus, or +1d12 damage while you're bloodied
Power (Encounter): Minor Action. You are considered bloodied for all purposes (including beneficial effects such as the Dragonborn Fury racial trait) until the end of your next turn.

Boltshard Crossbow — Level 7+

You pull the trigger, spraying shards at your foes.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Crossbow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Standard Action. Make a ranged basic attack using this crossbow against each creature in a close blast 3.
Level 17 or 22: Close blast 5; a creature hit is also pushed 2 squares.
Level 27: Close blast 7; a creature hit is also pushed 2 squares.

Challenge-Seeking Weapon — Level 1+

This weapon is always eager to be introduced to a fresh enemy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 1 | +1 | 360 gp | Lvl 16 | +4 | 45,000 gp |
| Lvl 6 | +2 | 1,800 gp | Lvl 21 | +5 | 225,000 gp |
| Lvl 11 | +3 | 9,000 gp | Lvl 26 | +6 | 1,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Any melee
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: None
Property: You deal 1d6 extra damage when you hit enemies that are at maximum hit points with this weapon.
Level 11 or 16: Deal 2d6 extra damage.
Level 21 or 26: Deal 3d6 extra damage.

Death Mark Weapon — Level 23+

This weapon knows when you kill a hated foe, letting you shift away to face a new enemy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Any
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d12 damage per plus against an enemy marked by you
Power (At-Will): Free Action. Trigger: You use this weapon to reduce an enemy that is marked by you to 0 hit points. Effect: You shift a number of squares up to your speed.

Duelist's Bow — Level 2+

With this mighty weapon humming as you release arrow after arrow, enemy archers face certain defeat.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Bow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you hit an enemy with this weapon, that enemy takes a -2 penalty to ranged and area attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Earth-Wrought Hammer — Level 1+

This hammer appears to be carved from a single piece of stone, though it's no heavier than a normal weapon. But it hits your enemies like a battering ram.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 1 | +1 | 360 gp | Lvl 16 | +4 | 45,000 gp |
| Lvl 6 | +2 | 1,800 gp | Lvl 21 | +5 | 225,000 gp |
| Lvl 11 | +3 | 9,000 gp | Lvl 26 | +6 | 1,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Hammer
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: The target is knocked prone.

Echoing Songblade — Level 4+

The echoes of your spells reverberate in the blade, hoping to be unleashed.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Heavy blade, light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and if the attack was a bard encounter power, you can use that power one more time on your next turn against a single target with a -2 penalty to the attack roll (you must still use the appropriate action to use the power).
Property: Bards can use this weapon as an implement for bard powers and bard paragon path powers.

Entrapping Weapon — Level 2+

An arrow fired from this weapon keeps your enemy from wandering off.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Bow, crossbow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or the target is restrained until the end of your next turn.

Farbond Spellblade — Level 2+

When bonded to you, this spellblade returns to your hand faster and from farther distances.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Heavy blade, light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d8 per plus when used as an implement for an arcane power
Property: This weapon can be used as a heavy thrown weapon with a range of 5/10. If you have the Swordbond class feature, you can call this weapon to your hand from up to a mile away.

Flesh Grinder — Level 3+

This weapon screeches as its serrated edge bites through flesh, bone, and steel.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Axe, heavy blade, polearm
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d10 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You make an attack with this weapon that targets AC. Effect: The triggering attack targets Fortitude instead and deals 1d6 extra damage on a hit.
Level 13 or 18: 2d6 extra damage.
Level 23 or 28: 3d6 extra damage.

FARBOND SPELLBLADE

There's an ancient story about a war between an enclave of eladrin and a kingdom of dragonborn. Much of the war is forgotten, and its cause is obscured by allusion and misinformation, but how it ends is the stuff of legend.

During the last days of the war, an eladrin prince and his escort approached the dragonborn king's fortress and called for parley. The prince claimed to have the authority to negotiate a stalemate that would restore the peace and the borders before the war. The king invited the eladrin embassy into his fortress. Once inside, the eladrin were assaulted, blinded, and thrown into the dungeon.

The dragonborn king had hoped to ransom the prince's life for political gain, but the prince and his fellow prisoners arranged their own "ransom" the first night. The prince and his companions, all elite swordmages trained in the art of blind fighting, called their farbond spellblades from beyond the walls of the fortress and fought their way free. The treacherous dragonborn king didn't survive the night.

Benefit of Membership: A conclave of swordmages connected to the local wizards' college grants a farbond spellblade to each new member as a symbol of acceptance. Membership isn't easily gained. Applicants must first prove their worth by passing three tests and accomplishing at least one great deed chosen by the masters of the college.

A Strange Find: Rumors say that if you search the grounds around a tyrant's castle, you might find a farbond spellblade secreted behind a bush or under a rock.

Hideous weapon

Frost Fury Waraxe — Level 3+

When this weapon's wielder is bloodied, the axe blade becomes icy and promises a cold death with each swing.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Axe
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 cold damage per plus, or +1d10 cold damage per plus while you're bloodied
Property: While you're bloodied, this axe deals extra cold damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Great Hunger Weapon — Level 3+

This weapon's normal low keening tones build into a great howl when it engages in battle.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Any melee
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus
Property: When you score a critical hit using this weapon scores, the damage of the next critical hit you score with this weapon increases by 1[W]. This effect is cumulative until the end of the encounter.
Power (Daily): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An enemy adjacent to you scores a critical hit against you. Effect: Roll this weapon's critical damage dice (including any extra damage from the weapon's property) and deal that much damage to the triggering enemy.

KIERAN YANNER

FLESH GRINDER

A horrific weapon created from nightmare, the flesh grinder is alive with malevolence, filled with an unspeakable thirst for blood and flesh. A flesh grinder has the general shape and size of an ordinary weapon of its make, but in place of a smooth cutting edge, it has a toothy row of jagged barbs. Old blood mixed with dark grease oozes from the barbs, and when the weapon is swung in battle, the serrated edge rocks back and forth to chew through flesh and bone, spewing noxious smoke into the air.

Flesh grinder weapons were born in the bowels of the Abyss, fashioned by demonic hands and infused with all the hate, bile, and violence bubbling up from that dire realm. The demons hoped to use these weapons to cut through the eldritch chains binding a forgotten god long confined to the plane's shadowy depths. Some believe that the flesh grinders in the world are remnants of the ancient demonic weapons, and even those fashioned by mortal hands are in fact the demon-created weapons reborn in form. Legend holds that when a certain number (the exact quantity is lost to history) of flesh grinder weapons are recovered, the chains binding the dark god will loosen and unleash an evil the world has never before seen.

Defeat the Twisted Spiral Cult: The Chained God locked away in the Abyss has numerous cults and servants in the mortal world, many of which assume a variety of names and attribute innumerable personas to the Chained God, each more frightful and insane than the last. Cults devoted to this fallen god seek items associated with his dread name and prize the flesh grinder as a physical symbol of their deity's malicious intent against those who stand against his designs. Finding and eliminating one of these cults is bound to reveal a flesh grinder weapon.

Navigate the Endless Maze: Baphomet rules the Endless Maze in the Abyss, a near-infinite layer of tunnels, passages, traps, and horrors, each of which lie in wait to snatch a hapless traveler and subject him to indescribable torments. Simply surviving the Endless Maze is an achievement in its own right, but actually navigating its tricks, traps, and guardians provides a nearly certain means to obtain all sorts of sinister items, including a flesh grinder. This said, such weapons are rarely left lying about, and adventurers will likely have to pry them from the cold, dead fingers of their previous owners.

Guardian's Brand — Level 3+

This weapon burns white with hatred when it's near a warden's marked enemy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Any melee
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 fire damage, or +1d10 fire damage while you're in a guardian form
Power (Daily ✦ Fire): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with your warden's fury power using this weapon. Effect: That enemy takes ongoing fire damage equal to 5 + your Strength modifier.
Level 13 or 18: Ongoing fire damage equal to 10 + your Strength modifier.
Level 23 or 28: Ongoing fire damage equal to 15 + your Strength modifier.

Guardian's Call — Level 2+

Decorated with the sigils of the wind and the oak, this weapon increases your defenses while you're in your guardian form.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Any melee
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d10 damage per plus while you're in a guardian form
Property: When you assume a guardian form, pick one defense other than AC. You gain a +2 bonus to that defense while you're in that guardian form.

Harmonic Songblade — Level 2+

As well as channeling your bard spells, this blade gives off music that swirls away to encircle and empower one of your allies.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Heavy blade, light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Bards can use this weapon as an implement for bard powers and bard paragon path powers.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. One ally within 5 squares of you gains a +2 power bonus to attack rolls and all defenses until the start of your next turn.

Hideous Weapon — Level 8+

The only thing that looks worse than this ugly weapon is your enemy when you're done with it.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Flail, hammer, pick
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: You gain an item bonus to Intimidate checks equal to this weapon's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily ✦ Fear, Weapon): Free Action. Trigger: You use this weapon to reduce an enemy to 0 hit points. Effect: You make an attack against each enemy in a close burst 2: Charisma + 2 + the weapon's enhancement bonus vs. Will; on a hit, the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls and if the target ends its turn in a square adjacent to you, it becomes dazed until the end of its next turn (save ends both).

Impaler's Pick — Level 4+

This barbed weapon can leave a short-lived magical replica of itself in your enemy to keep it pinned down.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Pick
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and the target is restrained by a magical duplicate of this weapon (save ends).
Aftereffect: 10 damage.
Level 14 or 19: Aftereffect: 15 damage.
Level 24 or 29: Aftereffect: 20 damage.

Incisive Dagger — Level 9+

You cut through space as easily as you cut through flesh.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Dagger
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: You can use this weapon as a focus when performing a travel ritual that involves creating and moving through portals. You can add the dagger's enhancement bonus as an item bonus to any skill checks related to the ritual's performance.
Property: When you use a teleportation power, the distance you can teleport increases by a number of squares equal to the dagger's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily ✦ Teleportation): Minor Action. You teleport 5 squares.
Level 14 or 19: 10 squares.
Level 24 or 29: 10 squares, and you don't need to be able to see the destination square.

INCISIVE DAGGER

This stiletto's blue-black blade is razor-sharp and extends from a guard that resembles two screaming faces twisted in pain. The handle is short, as if designed for a small hand, and bloodstained leather covers its cold steel. The pommel is a smooth orb of black stone with golden flecks that glitter in the moonlight.

Modeled on a more powerful knife said to be able to cut through anything, the incisive dagger lacks that famed blade's superior cutting ability. It does help its wielder move through space and access different portals.

Defeat the Ghost Thief: In the hands of the wrong person, an incisive dagger can prove an invaluable tool for criminal enterprises. Such a weapon came into the possession of an ambitious thief whose exploits earned her the moniker "Ghost Thief." The authorities have no clues to how the elusive thief manages her daring crimes, because no one has ever spotted her and no security measure has proved secure enough to stop her. But someone must know something, since there is general agreement that the Ghost Thief is a female.

Incisive dagger

Intensifying Weapon — Level 4+

This weapon blazes with inner power that enhances your ongoing effects.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Any
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d10 damage per plus on attacks that deal ongoing damage
Property: When you use this weapon to hit with an attack that deals ongoing damage, the ongoing damage increases by an amount equal to the weapon's enhancement bonus.

Master's Blade — Level 4+

Seemingly impossible feats are possible for master warriors, and for those who wield this perfectly designed weapon.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Heavy blade, light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: While you're using a stance power, you gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls on melee basic attacks and at-will attacks with this weapon.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of the encounter, while you wield this weapon, you can have two stances active at the same time.

Maw of the Guardian — Level 4+

Engraved with the primal rune of the devourer, this weapon increases your damage while you're in a guardian form.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Any melee
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: This weapon deals extra damage equal to your Constitution modifier while you're in a guardian form.

ED COX

Quicksilver Blade — Level 2+

This weapon seems to move too quickly to be seen, and it imparts that ability to you.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: You gain an item bonus to initiative checks equal to the blade's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You score a critical hit with this weapon. Effect: You gain a move action that you must use before the end of your turn.

Ravenclaw Warblade — Level 8+

This sword becomes more powerful when its wielder or his enemies are at death's door.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Heavy blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d10 damage per plus while you're bloodied
Property: When you use this weapon to reduce a nonminion enemy to 0 hit points, you can either spend a healing surge or make a saving throw.

Rebounding Weapon — Level 2+

You meant to do that. No, really.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Any ranged
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Encounter): Free Action. Trigger: You attack an enemy with this weapon and miss. Effect: You make a ranged basic attack against a different enemy within 5 squares of that enemy.

Runic Weapon — Level 5+

This weapon is engraved with numerous arcane runes and sigils that glow when magical emanations are near.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | +1 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp |
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Any
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you hit with an arcane power using this weapon, you gain temporary hit points equal to the weapon's enhancement bonus.

Screaming Bow — Level 4+

What begins as a low moan rises to an earsplitting shriek as the arrow seeks out its mark.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Bow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 thunder damage per plus
Property: When you use this weapon to hit an enemy with an attack power that doesn't have a damage type, the attack deals thunder damage, and the enemy is deafened until the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with this weapon. Effect: That enemy gains vulnerable 5 thunder (save ends). Each creature adjacent to that enemy is deafened and gains vulnerable 5 thunder until the end of your next turn.
Level 14 or 19: The enemy gains vulnerable 10 thunder (save ends).
Level 24 or 29: The enemy gains vulnerable 20 thunder (save ends).

Shadowrift Blade — Level 12+

You can pass through the Shadowfell to a nearby location when you use this blade, but doing so costs you a bit of your life force.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (At-Will ✦ Teleportation): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy that is granting you combat advantage. Effect: You take 5 damage and teleport 2 squares.
Level 17 or 22: Take 10 damage and teleport 3 squares.
Level 27: Take 15 damage and teleport 4 squares.

Shrieking Songbow — Level 13+

The sound of unbridled fear travels along with each of your shots.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Bow, crossbow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Bards can use this weapon as an implement for bard powers and bard paragon path powers.
Power (Daily ✦ Fear): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a bard attack power using this weapon. Effect: That enemy moves a number of squares away from you equal to your Charisma modifier, avoiding opportunity attacks and unsafe squares if possible.

Screaming bow

SCREAMING BOW

Assembled from overlapping pieces of yew, lemonwood, horn, and other materials bound together with sovereign glue, a screaming bow would pass for any other high-quality longbow except for the silver eagle talons mounted at either end to hold its golden bowstring taut. Arrows fitted onto the string and drawn are transformed, the arrowhead stretching and contorting into the likeness of a screaming eagle's head. Once the arrow flies, it sounds a high-pitched screech that grows louder the closer it comes to its target until suddenly becoming silent on impact.

Each screaming bow is said to contain a soul fragment from an elf warrior slain in battle, who, through Corellon's grace, was given another chance to carry on the lifelong struggle against his or her people's enemies. Only those chosen to reside in Arvandor with their god can provide a portion of their soul to reside within a screaming bow, and then only when the bow is fashioned by an eladrin or elf mage.

Aerie of Griffons: Local legend claims that a band of heroes ascended into the mountains to assault a mountain fastness and defeat a tyrannical giant who dwelled there. Of those who ascended, none returned, but tales are still told around hearths about these lost heroes and the screaming bow that one of them possessed.

Avenge the Elven People: Orcs, goblins, and other despicable humanoids wage war against the sylvan folk in both the mortal world and the Feywild beyond. Many communities see to their own defenses and resent interference from outsiders, but a hero who proves herself an ally and fights in the name of good folk might gain a screaming bow as a token of friendship.

Songbow of Lullabies — Level 9+

The projectile fired from this weapon sings softly in a voice that its target finds most soothing.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Bow, crossbow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Bards can use this weapon as an implement for bard powers and bard paragon path powers.
Power (Daily ✦ Charm): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a bard charm power using this weapon. Effect: That enemy is slowed (save ends). First Failed Saving Throw: The enemy is immobilized (save ends). Second Failed Saving Throw: The enemy is knocked unconscious (save ends).

Songbow of Summoning — Level 15+

When this weapon fires, an ancient paean sung by conquering peoples rings out and calls your allies in for the kill.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Bow, crossbow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Bards can use this weapon as an implement for bard powers and bard paragon path powers.
Power (Daily ✦ Teleportation): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a bard power using this weapon. Effect: Each ally within 5 squares of you or within 5 squares of that enemy can teleport to a square adjacent to the enemy as a free action.

CHRIS SEAMAN

Songbow of Vanishment — Level 3+

Your magic whispers in the minds of your foes, convincing them you're elsewhere.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Bow, crossbow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Bards can use this weapon as an implement for bard powers and bard paragon path powers.

Power (Daily ✦ Illusion): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a bard power using this weapon. Effect: You're invisible to that enemy until the end of your next turn.

Soul Drinker Weapon — Level 14+

If this weapon doesn't make a kill, it takes its frustration out on you.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Any melee
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 necrotic damage per plus

Power (Encounter ✦ Necrotic): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with this weapon. Effect: You deal 2d10 extra necrotic damage to that enemy. If this hit doesn't reduce the enemy to 0 hit points, you take 2d12 damage.
Level 24 or 29: Deal 3d10 necrotic damage, and take 3d12 damage if the hit doesn't reduce the enemy to 0 hit points.

Space-Bending Weapon — Level 19+

This weapon always seems farther away than it actually is.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Heavy blade, light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus

Power (Daily): Minor Action. The next enemy you target with this weapon can be up to 5 squares away from you; you attack that enemy as if you were adjacent to it.
Level 24 or 29: Up to 10 squares away.

Stormbiter Warblade — Level 4+

Glistening with electric-blue eldritch energy, this weapon's blade packs a stormy punch.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Heavy blade, light blade
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 thunder and lightning damage per plus

Power (Daily ✦ Lightning): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a lightning power or a thunder power using this weapon. Effect: That enemy is knocked prone. It's also deafened and takes ongoing 5 lightning damage (save ends both).
Level 14 or 19: Deafened and ongoing 10 lightning damage (save ends both).
Level 24 or 29: Deafened and ongoing 15 lightning damage (save ends both).

THOMAS DENMARK

Shadowrift blade

SHADOWRIFT BLADE

Eladrin and even some elves consider it distasteful—almost taboo—to carry a shadowrift blade. The reason for this prohibition is unclear, because no three eladrin can agree on it.

Some claim that the blades are treacherous gifts of the drow. Others that the strange gray-green metal of the weapons comes from a corner of the Far Realm where time and space conspire to produce spiraling insanity. And a few hint that the secrets of making shadowrift blades were given to the eladrin by an exarch of Gruumsh.

Whatever origin one might favor, eladrin sages and elders agree that these weapons are somehow cursed or corrupted, existing only to bleed the Shadowfell into the Feywild. To those who use a shadowrift blade, the eladrin's claims serve as the only evidence for any taint.

Zerth's New Blade: A rogue githzerai zerth has been tormenting a small, peaceful settlement. The leader of the town describes the powerful teleporting sword the zerth wields and promises that the blade's value alone is worth the effort of getting rid of his githzerai problem.

Save My Daughter (the Hard Way): An eladrin scholar is worried about her daughter, an errant swordmage. She has picked up a shadowrift blade to aid in her endeavors, ignoring her people's concerns about such weapons. The scholar is looking for someone to convince her daughter to give up the blade and is afraid that a sword duel—a combat in which the winner takes the sword of the vanquished—might be the only way.

Stormbiter warblade

Supreme Skirmisher's Bow — Level 10+

Perfectly balanced and blessed with powers that help shape each of your motions, this bow allows you to fight with unmatched grace.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Bow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Encounter): Free Action. Trigger: You make a ranged basic attack using this weapon. Effect: You make a ranged at-will attack using this weapon instead.

Supremely Vicious Weapon — Level 2+

Pure lethality.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Any
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus, and you can choose to reroll any or all of your critical damage dice, but you must take the second result of each die.

Targeting Weapon — Level 3+

When the bolt flies from your weapon, it shows the way to victory.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Weapon: Bow, crossbow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an attack using this weapon. Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you and your allies can roll twice on attack rolls against that enemy and use either result.

Totemic Spear — Level 2+

This spear's power extends into the spirit world.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Spear
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Shamans can use this weapon as an implement for shaman powers and shaman paragon path powers.
Property: You can target any enemy within 2 squares of your spirit companion with attacks that have a range of "Melee spirit."

STORMBITER WARBLADE

Heur-Ket, a vicious primordial of gale and thunder, was defeated in the first war, but echoes of the primordial's howling winds live on. The primordial's essence was scattered throughout the world, the Shadowfell, and the Feywild.

According to the histories and legends of early empires, certain locations retained Heur-Ket's stormy nature. Weapons created near those locations became infused with the primordial's essence, becoming the first stormbiter warblades. Now the formula for making these weapons is commonly known, but the most potent of them are those first made after Heur-Ket's fall at a site where the entity's essence collected, or those crafted using a piece of one of the original weapons as a focus for the ritual.

Artificer's Endeavor: Artificers and others interested in the creation of magic weapons are always on the lookout for fragments of the original stormbiter warblades, or for a location where Heur-Ket's essence is present. Often they purchase this information with the promise of a weapon crafted from Heur-Ket's power.

Forge of the Landfall: Deep in the Feywild's Underdark is a cyclops forge built on a site containing Heur-Ket's essence. The cyclopes are difficult to deal with and stingy with their creations, so the Court of Stars often commissions raids to plunder the site, and even provides teleportation magic to aid in these raids.

KIERAN YANNER

Totemic Warclub Level 2+

Some of the power invested in your spirit companion also flows through this warclub.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Mace
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Shamans can use this weapon as an implement for shaman powers and shaman paragon path powers.
Property: When you use this weapon as an implement for a power that has a range of "Melee spirit," you can choose to use your square as the origin square of the power.

Unforgettable Cudgel Level 8+

A well-placed strike with this mace goes a long way toward showing an enemy the error of its ways.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Mace
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or the target is dazed (save ends)
Property: Divine characters can use this mace as a holy symbol implement for divine powers.
Property: You can score a critical hit with this weapon on a roll of 19-20 when it is used as a weapon or an implement for a divine melee attack power.

Weapon of Oaths Fulfilled Level 4+

As your weapon slays your deity's enemy, you feel a surge of vitality that allows you to keep fighting.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Any melee
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Avengers can use this weapon as an implement for avenger powers and avenger paragon path powers.
Property: When you reduce the target of your oath of enmity to 0 hit points, the next attack you make with this weapon before the end of your next turn deals 1d6 extra damage per plus.

Whistling Songbow Level 2+

Projectiles launched from this weapon whistle as they streak toward their target.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Bow, crossbow
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Bards can use this weapon as an implement for bard powers and bard paragon path powers.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You attack an enemy with a bard attack power using this weapon. Effect: Each ally within 5 squares of that enemy gains a +2 power bonus to attack rolls against the enemy until the end of your next turn.

UNFORGETTABLE CUDGEL

An unforgettable cudgel features a sturdy haft cut from hickory and wrapped with red cord around a handle capped in iron wrought to resemble a stern face with a spadelike beard. The business end is a flanged mace head capped with a smoothed, convex steel ferrule. Each flange forms a wedge-shaped point, and there are seven flanges in all.

The weapon is fashioned as a religious icon in the image of a weapon wielded by an ancient saint, a righteous servant of the gods who fought against tyranny and injustice and sought the rule of divine law. It contains a portion of his holy essence, making it a highly sought-after item by divine servants the world over. Clerics and other divine heroes seek out the unforgettable cudgel for its ability to pass divine judgment by reminding those it strikes of their past crimes and wicked deeds. Few have the courage to withstand such a psychic assault.

Atonement: The gods of order and goodness sometimes bestow holy objects to those who have walked the road of shadow and resisted its temptations, returning to the light with all the fervor of the most devoted paladins. It takes a great act of self-sacrifice and penance for the gods to bequeath such an item, but those who truly and deeply atone might find themselves gifted with an icon such as an unforgettable cudgel.

Writhing Vine Weapon Level 8+

Living vines writhe and constrict around this weapon when it's at rest, but they grasp at and harry your foes with each swing.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Any melee
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you immobilize a target with a melee attack using this weapon, that target grants combat advantage to you until the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Make an attack: Close burst 3; target one enemy in burst; Constitution + this weapon's enhancement bonus vs. Fortitude; on a hit, you pull that enemy 3 squares.

AMMUNITION

The effectiveness of a ranged weapon depends on aim, but don't discount its payload.

Enchanted arrows, bolts, and sling bullets can be activated and fired from ranged weapons to achieve exceptional results. You must load magic ammunition before you can activate and fire it (spending whatever action is necessary to do so), and it's used up when fired. When used with powers that target multiple enemies, magic ammunition affects only the first attack roll or target after it's loaded. In certain circumstances

(such as when loading is a free action), however, a ranged attacker can load more magic ammunition during an attack against multiple targets if desired.

Ammunition applies an enhancement bonus to an attack roll and damage roll when used. If the projectile weapon is magical, use the ammunition's enhancement bonus in place of the weapon's enhancement bonus. The weapon's critical bonus and the properties from both the weapon and the ammunition still apply. Using magic ammunition doesn't prevent you from activating a magic weapon's powers.

You can fire magic ammunition without activating it, using your weapon's enhancement bonus and receiving no benefit from the ammunition's magic. The ammunition is still expended.

Ammunition names are keyed to certain ammunition types, but any of the enchantments described in this section can be placed on any type of ammunition; for instance, it's possible to create or acquire an arrow or a sling bullet that has the attributes of a bolt of clumsiness.

Arrow of Revelation — Level 9+

Ioun's eye marks this bright yellow arrow.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 160 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 21,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 800 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 4,200 gp | | | |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, that enemy doesn't benefit from invisibility until the end of your next turn.

Attention-Stealing Bullet — Level 3+

This bright red sling stone draws your target's immediate attention.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 30 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, you mark that enemy until the end of its next turn. While marked by you in this manner, when the enemy makes an attack that doesn't include you as a target, the ammunition strikes that target again for 1d6 damage per plus.

Bending Bullet — Level 5+

Whisper a direction to this warped bullet, and it bends around obstacles.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | +1 | 50 gp | Lvl 20 | +4 | 5,000 gp |
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 200 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 25,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 125,000 gp |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: While you have line of effect to a square adjacent to an enemy, you can attack that enemy using this ammunition. Treat the enemy as having cover.

Bolt of Clumsiness — Level 8+

A victim of this malformed quarrel is too ungainly to avoid inviting attacks.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp | | | |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, that enemy can't shift until the end of its next turn.

Bolt of Transit — Level 8+

Use this lightning-shaped bolt to move closer to your target.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp | | | |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, you can teleport to a space adjacent to that enemy.

Dispelling Bolt — Level 8+

This flat-black quarrel extinguishes conjurations and zones.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp | | | |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, you can end one conjuration or zone that enemy has created.

Firestorm Arrow — Level 3+

The charred wood of this arrow seems to shimmer with heat.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 30 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, that enemy and each creature adjacent to it take 1d6 extra fire damage per plus.

Forbiddance Bolt — Level 9+

Teleportation becomes more difficult when this bolt strikes its mark.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 160 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 21,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 800 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 4,200 gp | | | |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, that enemy can't teleport until the end of its next turn, and no creature can teleport to a space within 2 squares of that target until the end of its next turn.

Phasing arrow

Freezing Arrow — Level 3+

The shaft of this arrow is shaved from unmelting ice.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 30 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, that enemy takes 1d6 extra cold damage per plus and is slowed until the end of its next turn.

Lightning Arrow — Level 3+

This arrow's blue and white streaks thrum with energy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 30 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, that enemy takes 1d6 extra lightning damage per plus and is dazed until the end of its next turn.

Onslaught Arrow — Level 2+

This black arrow trails a bright pennant, flagging its target.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 25 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 2,600 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 100 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 13,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 500 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 65,000 gp |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, each ally that can see that enemy gains a +1 item bonus to attack rolls against it until the end of your next turn.

Phasing Arrow — Level 25+

Ephemeral in flight, this arrow strikes its target solidly.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 25 | +5 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 125,000 gp |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you attack using this ammunition, you don't need line of effect to the target, and your attack roll takes no penalty from cover or superior cover.

Space-Shifting Bolt — Level 8+

Wrought in an eladrin design, this sizzling bolt teleports those it hits.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp | | | |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, you teleport that enemy 1 square.

Spider Bolt — Level 3+

This web-strewn quarrel envelops the enemy when it hits.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 30 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, that enemy and each enemy adjacent to it is slowed until the end of your next turn.

THOMAS DENMARK

Summoning Bullet — Level 8+

Use this magnetic bullet to bring an ally closer to your foe.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp | | | |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you hit an enemy with an attack using this ammunition, one ally within 3 squares of that enemy can teleport to a space adjacent to it.

Surprise Bullet — Level 3+

This winking bullet blinks in and out, so your target can't see it coming.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 30 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 3,400 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 125 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 17,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 650 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 85,000 gp |

Ammunition
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Property: When you attack an enemy using this ammunition, that enemy grants combat advantage to you for that attack.

HOLY SYMBOLS

Whatever form it takes, the symbol of a god has power. Of course, an enchanted holy symbol has even more power.

A holy symbol represents your deity and takes the shape of an aspect of the god. Whatever the symbol itself says about its wielder, enchantments are neutral and can be transferred from one holy symbol to another to better suit a new owner (see the Transfer Enchantment ritual, page 199 of Adventurer's Vault).

If you are a member of a class that can use a holy symbol as an implement, you can apply the symbol's enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and the damage rolls of any of your powers from that class that have the implement keyword, and you can use a symbol's properties and powers. Members of other classes gain no benefit from wearing or holding a holy symbol.

You can't make melee attacks with a holy symbol.

Unlike other implements, you need only wear a holy symbol for its property or power to function. If you are wearing or holding more than one holy symbol, none of your symbols function.

IOUN STONE OF DIVINE KNOWLEDGE

The most powerful worshipers of Ioun use enchanted floating stones as holy symbols. The small number of these stones that exist in the world were passed down by Ioun herself, and a small fragment of her knowledge permeates each one. Some historians consider them to be the first, or at least the only true, Ioun stones.

Become an Exalted Eye: Ioun's most prominent priests are known as the Exalted Eyes of Ioun, and each wears an Ioun stone of divine knowledge. A hero who proves his or her valor to Ioun by reclaiming vast stores of lost knowledge or uncovering secrets held by Vecna's followers might be allowed into the ranks of the Exalted Eyes.

Undertake Ioun's Test: Ioun keeps many Ioun stones of divine knowledge within her swan tower Kerith-Ald, but they're reserved for only the most worthy and most knowledgeable. One who performs great deeds can earn an audience with Ioun or one of her aspects but must still prove that he or she has earned such a magnificent gift.

Convert's Symbol — Level 13

This symbol is a carving of a hand grasping an arcane implement. It allows you to convert some of your arcane power into healing.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Arcane casters can wield this holy symbol in one hand to use it as an implement for arcane powers. Choose the type of arcane implement when the symbol is created.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Minor Action. You expend an arcane daily attack power. One ally you can see within 10 squares of you regains hit points as though he or she had spent a healing surge, plus additional hit points equal to the level of the expended power.

Ioun Stone of Divine Knowledge — Level 25+

This amber sphere with a red gem in its center slowly orbits your head, leaving a trail of twinkling golden lights.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Item Slot: Head
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Divine characters can use this item as a holy symbol implement for divine powers.
Property: You gain an item bonus to Insight checks and Religion checks equal to the symbol's enhancement bonus, and an item bonus to other Intelligence-based skill checks equal to one-half its enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a divine attack power using this holy symbol. Effect: You learn whether each of the other defenses of that enemy is higher or lower than the defense hit by this attack. In addition, the enemy grants combat advantage (save ends).

Ioun-Blessed Symbol — Level 2+

This symbol, blessed with Ioun's love of knowledge, is a slender length of ivory with only a suggestion of her icon.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus
Property: Arcane characters can wield this holy symbol in one hand to use it as a wand implement for arcane powers.

Symbol of Branding — Level 12+

As you utter a prayer, this symbol flares to sear your god's icon into the forehead of your foe.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 radiant damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a divine attack power using this holy symbol. Effect: Until the end of the encounter, when that enemy takes radiant damage from your divine challenge or divine sanction, it takes 5 extra radiant damage.
Level 22 or 27: 10 extra radiant damage.

Symbol of Brawn — Level 3+

Physical strength and holy devotion are both enhanced by this adamantine holy symbol.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit with a divine attack power using this holy symbol. Effect: Make a melee basic attack. If the attack hits a creature marked by you, it deals 1d10 extra damage.
Level 13 or 18: 2d10 extra damage.
Level 23 or 28: 3d10 extra damage.

Symbol of Daring — Level 5+

When you wield this symbol, your allies are inspired to strike boldly.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | +1 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp |
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d12 radiant damage per plus with attacks made when you spend an action point
Property: When any ally within 5 squares of you spends an action point to make an attack, he or she gains a bonus to damage rolls on that attack equal to the symbol's enhancement bonus.

Symbol of Defense — Level 18+

On command, this symbol generates a mantle of force to defend a comrade.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 force damage per plus
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An attack hits an ally you can see. Effect: The ally gains a +5 power bonus to all defenses against the triggering attack.

Symbol of Divine Force — Level 2+

Through this symbol, you batter foes with your relentless conviction.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 force damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a divine attack power using this holy symbol. Effect: You push that enemy a number of squares equal to the symbol's enhancement bonus.

Symbol of Divine Light — Level 17+

The fierce radiance of this symbol is the bane of foul creatures that can't bear sunlight.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 radiant damage per plus
Property: Any creature within 5 squares of you that has vulnerability to radiant damage has that vulnerability increased by 5.

CONVERT'S SYMBOL

Legend tells of a lone warlock named Celia, usually said to be human but sometimes a halfling, who quested deep in the Astral Sea for secrets left over from the wars of creation. Celia wasn't following the commands of any divine patron; she served only herself, fascinated by the powers that had fought long ago. Her quests reaped a treasury of ancient knowledge, which she hoarded jealously.

During her adventures, Celia often received welcome and shelter. At some point, not even realizing she had changed, she decided to repay such kindness with some of the knowledge she had gained in her quests. Celia used her hard-won secrets to help her friends: anything from curing a plague to finding an astral weapon to fighting off the ships of githyanki raiders.

Years passed in this way. During a later journey, Celia overheard people in one of her adopted homes speaking of the "wandering saint," a woman who served Ioun by finding hidden items and bringing them to where they were most needed. With a shock, Celia realized they were talking about her. Recognizing the truth laid before her, she adopted Ioun as her divine patron.

The final piece of the legend states that Celia opened a way for other practitioners of arcane power to touch the divine, through the convert's symbol.

Rampaging Cultists: Cultists of Vecna are terrorizing people within a few days' journey of one of their hidden temples, mutilating innocents by cutting one eye and one hand from each. The cultists have made the mistake of attacking one of the communities that used to be under Celia's protection. A priest of Ioun asks for aid, offering a convert's symbol to help in the cause.

Symbol of Fire and Fury — Level 9+

This symbol is made of red iron streaked with fiery, bright metal. While you wear it, you can blast your foes with righteous flame.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 fire damage per plus, and each other enemy within 5 squares of you takes fire damage equal to your Charisma modifier.
Property: When you hit an enemy marked by you with a divine attack power using this holy symbol, that enemy takes 1d6 extra fire damage, or 1d10 fire damage while you're bloodied.
Level 19 or 24: 2d6 or 2d10 extra fire damage.
Level 29: 3d6 or 3d10 extra fire damage.

Symbol of Foe Turning — Level 7+

Through this symbol, you can punish specific enemies of your faith as well as vile undead.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When this item is created, choose angel, demon, devil, dragon, or giant. When you use your turn undead power, you can target creatures of the chosen kind instead of undead creatures.

Symbol of Prayers Recovered — Level 18+

Your prayers are rarely wasted while you wear this holy symbol.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You miss all targets with a divine encounter attack power using this holy symbol. Effect: The power isn't expended.

Symbol of Protection — Level 10+

This symbol allows you to shield a companion from the threats of your foes.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a divine attack power using this holy symbol. Effect: Choose one ally within 5 squares of you. Until the end of your next turn, the enemy you hit can't attack that ally.

Symbol of Reflection — Level 24+

As you present this glittering symbol, divine power turns your enemies' attacks back against them.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An enemy targets you with a ranged attack. Effect: You gain a +3 power bonus to all defenses against the triggering enemy's attack. If the attack misses you, the triggering enemy repeats the attack against itself.

Symbol of Shared Healing — Level 7+

While you wear this symbol, your can heal an ally even as you tend to your own wounds.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Free Action. Trigger: You use your second wind, or you use a power that allows you to spend a healing surge to regain hit points. Effect: One ally within 5 squares of you can spend a healing surge.

SYMBOL OF THE RADIANT FLAME

Eons ago, a faith existed whose adherents followed both the paths set forth by the gods and the lore of natural powers. Known as the followers of the Radiant Flame, they rejected the idea of a strict division between primal and divine power.

Other priests considered their beliefs blasphemous and tried to strike down the Radiant Flame. The followers of that faith responded by creating magic symbols that embodied their ideals. In the great battle that followed, they bore this symbol to proclaim that all power in the world came from the same source. Even today, the symbol of the Radiant Flame unites small sects of worshipers who hold both the divine and the primal in equal reverence.

Reconcile the Faiths: A conclave is gathering to celebrate the Radiant Flame. Its members have invited members of other faiths to witness the ceremony but fear reprisal from those offended by their religious syncretism. They plan to bestow symbols of the Radiant Flame upon those who demonstrate openness to new possibilities.

Protect the Faithful: Followers of the Radiant Flame are being assassinated and harassed by those who disagree with their beliefs. The survivors are looking for champions of faith and conviction to protect them and are willing to reward their defenders with a symbol of the Radiant Flame.

Symbol of the champion's code

SYMBOL OF THE CHAMPION'S CODE

Every paladin follows a code, whether written or internalized. The symbol of the champion's code was designed to help paladins keep their code in mind at all times. It mystically enforces whatever oath is written upon it, making the paladin's challenge even more painful to refuse.

Introspective paladins follow a personal code, believing that only through adherence to the tenets of faith can one truly follow a deity's path. When such a paladin wears this holy symbol, he or she radiates firmness and resolve. Dogmatic paladins believe that their code should apply to everyone, not just themselves, and they enforce its tenets no matter what resistance they face. On them, this symbol magnifies an already intimidating aspect.

Oaths of Aggression: A hobgoblin paladin has sent forth goblin warriors loyal to him, ordering them to kill in Bane's name. He carries a symbol of the champion's code covered with sinister oaths to foment war and wrath. Those who can defeat him might be able to erase the stain of his cruel acts by transforming his symbol into one holding less destructive precepts.

Symbol of the Self: Although any ritual caster can learn to craft a symbol of the champion's code, doing so is an intense, personal experience. The creator gathers materials and tools that are important to his or her faith and conducts the ritual in a private, sacred place. For example, a paladin of Bahamut might craft a symbol from platinum gathered from a dragon's hoard, while a follower of Corellon might perform the ritual at the top of a giant tree in the deep forest where it reaches into the Feywild. A quest to locate the proper materials and site might encompass many adventures.

Symbol of the Champion's Code — Level 8+

A code of honor is inscribed on this symbol, reinforcing your commitment to your god and making your challenge irresistible.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When a creature takes radiant damage from your divine challenge or divine sanction, it takes extra radiant damage equal to the symbol's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. You choose an enemy marked by you. Until the end of your next turn, that enemy can't make an attack that includes any creature other than you as a target.

Symbol of the First Spirits — Level 2+

An oath of dedication to the natural spirits of the world is inscribed in fine script upon this wooden holy symbol.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus
Property: Primal characters can wield this holy symbol in one hand to use it as a totem implement for primal powers.

SYMBOL OF FIRE AND FURY

The dwarven city Cloudgate, built deep inside a fog-shrouded mountain, and the human settlement South Gwyvar, in the valley below the mountain, had a long history of animosity. But when word arrived that a hobgoblin army was marching on them, the two cities banded together. Dwarf clerics of Moradin and human champions of Kord worked together to turn the cities' longstanding conflict to a positive end, creating symbols of fire and fury.

Find a Priest-Smith: The art of making symbols of fire and fury is practiced mainly by dwarf priest-smiths. Trained in both item crafting and religious lore, they have preserved the details of creating these special symbols. Locating a priest-smith can be difficult, because they usually live in secluded villages and monasteries.

Take the Test of Two: A few scriptures detail the Test of Two, devised by the clerics of Cloudgate and South Gwyvar. This challenge identifies those worthy of carrying symbols of fire and fury against threats similar in scope to the hobgoblin invasion. Only a candidate filled with both divine might and great endurance and physical strength can pass the test. By finding a cleric to administer the trial, a hero might be able to win a symbol of fire and fury.

ED COX

Symbol of the holy nimbus

Symbol of the Holy Nimbus — Level 4+

This symbol combines the images of sun and moon. When you speak a word of healing, you and your allies are bathed in restoring light.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and you or an ally within 5 squares of you can spend a healing surge.
Property: When you use the healing word power during a combat encounter, you and each ally within 5 squares of you also gain temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier + the symbol's enhancement bonus.

Symbol of the Radiant Flame — Level 8+

This symbol appears to be made of brilliant living fire hung on a chain of molten metal, but it doesn't burn your skin.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 fire and radiant damage per plus, and each ally within 5 squares of you gains a bonus to damage rolls equal to the symbol's enhancement bonus until the end of your next turn. The bonus damage is fire and radiant.
Property: Primal characters can wield this holy symbol in one hand to use it as a totem implement for primal powers.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You score a critical hit with an attack power using this holy symbol. Effect: The bonus to allies' damage rolls when you score a critical hit with this symbol lasts until the end of the encounter.

Symbol of Unified Defense — Level 9+

This symbol is engraved with several rings linked in a circle, representing the interdependence of you and your comrades.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An enemy targets you and at least one ally with an attack. Effect: You and your allies' defense against the triggering enemy's attack is the highest appropriate score among all of you being attacked. For example, if the attack is against Reflex and the highest Reflex among you and your allies is 25, you all have Reflex 25 against the attack.

Symbol of Vigor — Level 7+

This symbol rewards your good health with divine might.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d12 damage per plus while you're at maximum hit points
Property: You gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls made using this holy symbol while you're at maximum hit points.

ORBS

Above all else, be careful not to set your orb down on a flat, inclined surface.

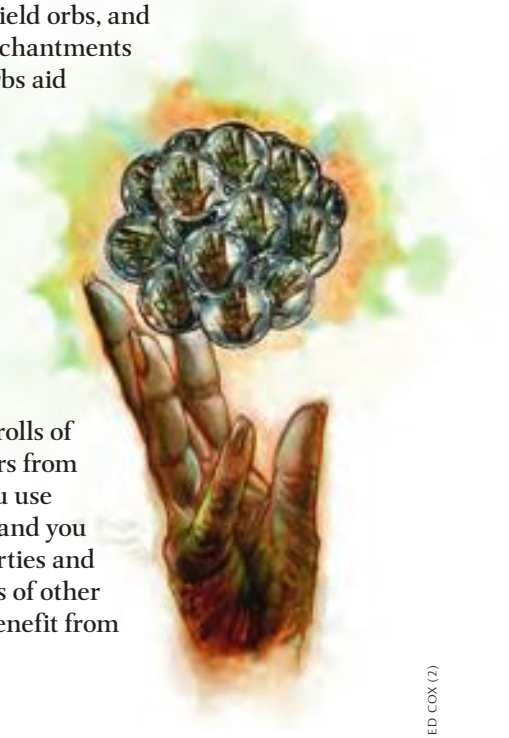
The orb represents clarity of will, fine control of magic, and command over the creatures you target with magic. Wizards who want to ensure that their magic endures wield orbs, and the additional enchantments on most magic orbs aid that goal.

If you are a member of a class that can wield an orb as an implement, you can add the orb's enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and the damage rolls of implement powers from that class that you use through the orb, and you can use its properties and powers. Members of other classes gain no benefit from wielding an orb.



ED COX (2)

Orb of Accuracy — Level 14+

Though your opponent attempts to hide, this silver-caged, crystalline orb enables you to perceive its location.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d12 per plus against enemies that are invisible or that have concealment or total concealment from you
Property: When you use an arcane attack power through this orb, you take a -1 penalty (instead of -2) to attack rolls against enemies that have concealment from you, and a -3 penalty (instead of -5) to attack rolls against enemies that have total concealment from you.

Orb of Distance Denial — Level 20+

Composed of numerous smaller orbs fused into one spherical mass, this orb hampers an enemy's ranged attacks.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an arcane attack power using this orb. Effect: That enemy can't target any creature more than 3 squares away from it (save ends).

Orb of Heightened Imposition — Level 12+

This green quartz orb extends the duration of powerful spells.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Your Orb of Imposition class feature can extend the duration of an effect created by an encounter power you use through this orb that would otherwise end at the end of your current turn. The effect instead ends at the end of your next turn. You can still use Orb of Imposition only once per encounter.

Orb of Petrification — Level 20+

This dull gray granite orb grasps your enemies in a stony embrace.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an arcane attack power using this orb. Effect: That enemy is petrified (save ends).

Orb of visionary protection

Orb of Repeated Imposition — Level 13+

This etched turquoise orb increases the frequency of your arcane imposition.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an arcane attack power using this orb. Effect: You regain the use of your Orb of Imposition class feature if you have already used it during this encounter.

Orb of Resilient Tenacity — Level 2+

The constant buzzing whisper that issues from this amethyst orb reinforces your will.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and you or an ally within 5 squares of you gains a power bonus to saving throws equal to the enhancement bonus of the orb against one effect until that effect ends.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. You or an ally within 5 squares of you gains a power bonus to saving throws equal to the enhancement bonus of the orb against one effect until that effect ends.

MATIAS TAPIA

Orb of Supplementary Force — Level 3+

This sphere of scarlet glass pulses with barely controlled energy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 force damage per plus, and the target is knocked prone.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of your turn, each enemy you hit with an arcane close blast attack power using this orb is knocked prone after all other effects of the attack are resolved.

Orb of Visionary Protection — Level 12+

This translucent orb swirls with potential futures, each waiting for you to grasp and bend it to your will.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Orb)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: You are subjected to an effect that a save can end. Effect: You can expend your Orb of Imposition class feature to make a saving throw against that effect instead of gaining the feature's normal benefit.

RODS

Heavier than a wand, smaller than a staff. If you have to ask what makes it different, you'll never know.

Warlocks, invokers, and artificers channel their power through rods. Some rods identify their intended users clearly by referencing specific class features or powers. Others have a broader appeal.

Except in rare cases, a rod is not robust enough to be used as a weapon. If a rod can function as either a weapon or an implement, that fact is noted in the item's description.

If you are a member of a class that can wield a rod as an implement, you can add the rod's enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and the damage rolls of implement powers from that class that you use through the rod, and you can use its properties and powers. Members of other classes gain no benefit from wielding a rod.

Battle-Pact Rod — Level 18+

This heavy cudgel can be used as both a warlock's rod and a weapon.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus
Property: This rod can be used as a melee weapon, functioning as a mace. You add its enhancement bonus to attack rolls and damage rolls of melee weapon attacks.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You place your Warlock's Curse on an enemy. Effect: That enemy is also marked until the end of the encounter. When a creature marked by you in this way makes an attack that doesn't include you as a target, it takes your Warlock's Curse extra damage.

Darkspiral Rod — Level 4+

The darkspiral aura that exemplifies your devotion to the dark pact coalesces into a black cloud around this implement.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 necrotic and psychic damage per plus
Property: When you hit an enemy affected by your Warlock's Curse with a warlock attack power using this rod, you deal extra damage equal to the value of your Darkspiral Aura class feature to the enemy.

Hexer's Rod — Level 3+

Crafted by goblins, this rod channels their tricky, underhanded magic.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an attack power using this rod. Effect: The next time that enemy misses you with an attack, you can shift 3 squares as an immediate reaction, and you gain concealment against that enemy until the end of your next turn.

Rod of Burgeoning Memory — Level 2+

The astral essence in this rod ties you more tightly to your earlier lives as a deva.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you use your memory of a thousand lifetimes racial power to improve the attack roll of a divine attack power you use through this rod, add +1 to the d6 roll.

An invoker with plenty of rods at the ready

ERIC L. WILLIAMS

Rod of Devilry — Level 10+

Infernal power flows through this rod, scouring your foes with hellfire.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 fire damage per plus, or +1d10 fire damage per plus against a bloodied target
Property: If you're a tiefling, when you use an attack power through this rod, your bonus to attack rolls from your bloodhunt racial trait increases by 1.
Property: When you hit a bloodied enemy affected by your Warlock's Curse with an attack power using this rod, it takes extra fire damage equal to this rod's enhancement bonus.

Rod of Divinity — Level 3+

This delicate silver rod lets you channel your deity's power back to yourself.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit with a divine attack power using this rod. Effect: You gain one extra use of your Channel Divinity class feature during this encounter.

Rod of Obliterating Wrath — Level 9+

Crafted to create as much destruction as possible, this rod lets you pierce your foes' defenses and destroy groups of enemies.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When an enemy's resistances reduce the damage of any invoker attack power you use through this rod, that enemy's resistance to that attack is reduced by an amount equal to this rod's enhancement bonus until the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. You gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls with the next invoker attack power you use through this rod.

Rod of Silver Rain — Level 15+

This rod appears to be made from molten silver. It can create clouds that rain silver upon the battlefield.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus, or +1d12 damage per plus against fey creatures
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Make an attack: Area burst 3 within 20 squares. Each enemy in the burst that is affected by your Warlock's Curse takes ongoing 10 damage and grants combat advantage (save ends both). If the target is a fey creature, add your Charisma modifier to the ongoing damage.
Level 25 or 30: Ongoing 15 damage.

Rod of Stolen Starlight — Level 7+

At your command, this rod infuses your spell with light from mysterious stars.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 radiant and necrotic damage per plus
Property: When you hit an undead enemy affected by your Warlock's Curse with an attack power using this rod, you deal an extra die of Warlock's Curse damage against that enemy.
Power (At-Will ✦ Radiant): Minor Action. The next necrotic or poison power you use through this rod deals radiant damage instead of necrotic damage or poison damage.

Rod of Silver Rain

Every fifty years, a supernatural rain falls across the Feywild. It coats the land in silver, causing feelings of great celebration among the goodly fey, who see it as an auspicious sign, and feelings of dread among the wicked, malicious dark fey, who hate the silver rain.

At one point, an eladrin warlock named Suzasha decided to collect the rain and transform it into a rod, using it as a tool to both celebrate the land and fight against the fomorians and other dark fey. The rod created a silver cloud that burned the minds of Suzasha's foes and aided her allies. Not surprisingly, the evil fey crafted a plan to remove the threat of the rod.

The fomorians dispatched their lackeys to steal the rod from Suzasha under cover of night. The thieves were successful and returned the rod to their dark stronghold, where the fomorians unsuccessfully attempted to disenchant the item. Pained by its proximity, they cast it into the Shadowfell. Lesser copies have been created, but the eladrin have been searching for the original ever since.

Shadowfell Search: Adventurers have sought the original rod in the Shadowfell to no avail. Only one creature knows where it lies hidden—a fomorian wretch named Kruvthos. He claims to have been banished from the fomorian realms and is threatening to gain revenge by revealing the rod's location to those who will help him. But none so far have been willing to trust the fomorian, since lies and deception are a part of a fomorian's very essence, and any help that Kruvthos gives will come at a cost.

The Queen of Air and Darkness: The Queen of Air and Darkness, an evil ruler of wicked fey, lives in exile, holding a rod of silver rain in her court. She keeps it in a vault that shields her courtiers from its harmful effects. Rumors suggest that the Queen is away petitioning to return to the Feywild, making this the perfect time to steal her rod.

Rod of the Fickle Servant — Level 2+

This special rod gives you access to a different vestige when you need it.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy affected by your Warlock's Curse with an attack power using this rod. Effect: You make one of your primary vestiges your active vestige (Arcane Power, page 72).

Rod of the Hag — Level 14+

This slender obsidian rod is topped with a hag's eye that opens when you use your powers, terrifying your foe.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 psychic damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy affected by your Warlock's Curse with an attack power using this rod. Effect: That enemy takes extra damage equal to this rod's enhancement bonus and is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Rod of the Pactbinder — Level 4+

An oath inscribed on this rod gives you quick access to one of your vestige patrons.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you acquire a rod of this sort, choose one daily power you know that has a vestige pact entry; this choice can't be changed later. The vestige associated with that power becomes bound to this rod.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy affected by your Warlock's Curse with an attack power using this rod. Effect: The vestige bound to the rod becomes your active vestige.

Rod of Stolen Starlight

When a drow city was beset by hordes of undead, even the most powerful dark pact warlocks found their spells ineffective. Willing to go to any lengths to stop the invasion, these warlocks sent false diplomats to find star pact warlocks from whom they could steal power. With their newfound knowledge, they created the first rods of stolen starlight, which were powerful weapons in the battle against undead.

Scions of the Stars: Sometimes, the remains of dedicated star pact warlocks develop cysts that swell until creatures of the Far Realm burst forth. Rumors abound of places where this has happened and aberrant creatures are attacking the local populace. Heroes who follow these rumors and defeat those creatures might find a rod of stolen starlight.

The Demon Prince's Drow: Some drow take up the worship of Orcus, which displeases the powers of darkness. Followers of those entities might give a rod of stolen starlight to a group of heroes to help them destroy these Orcus-worshiping drow and their undead followers.

Torch of misery

Rod of the Risen Dead — Level 27

This delicate crystal rod allows you to take control of the mind and body of a slain foe.

Lvl 27 +6 1,625,000 gp
Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 psychic damage per plus
Power (Daily ✦ Charm): Free Action. Trigger: You use this rod to reduce an enemy affected by your Warlock's Curse to 0 hit points. Effect: That enemy is dominated until the end of its next turn. After that, the enemy is killed or knocked unconscious, as normal.

TORCH OF MISERY

Both infernal warlocks and star pact warlocks use torches of misery, which are created to mock the warmth and comfort of light and flame. These rods carry a legacy of torture and death. They gained infamy in the hands of cambion warlocks called the Princes of Misery, who used them to terrorize the enemies of the Nine Hells.

Hellish Trophies: Devils hate few things more than those who use the devils' own power against them. In the Nine Hells (or other devilish enclaves), the implements of infernal pact warlocks who fought against the devils are used as decoration. The devils convert them into torches of misery to light their halls, usually pinning the former owner's dismembered head or hand to the wall with the implement. Any heroes brave enough to venture into one of these domains can claim one of these rods and put its former owner to rest.

Prince Gorzia's Torch: Gorzia the Despised, one of the Princes of Misery, was defeated by a group of human wizards working in concert. His torch of misery is said to rest in his tower on the inhospitable Hailblight Peak. Whoever survives the dangerous journey to the peak, passes the defenses left by the wizard, and contends with the occupant (who might be living, dead, or undead) can find Gorzia's powerful implement.

ED COX

Spider Rod — Level 13+

This gray metal rod is covered with a web of mithral studded with black onyx spiders.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: Ongoing 10 poison damage (save ends)
Level 23 or 28: Ongoing 15 poison damage (save ends)
Property: When you hit with an attack that deals ongoing necrotic or ongoing poison damage using this rod, the ongoing damage increases by an amount equal to the rod's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily ✦ Poison): Minor Action. You choose an enemy within 20 squares of you that is affected by an effect you created that a save can end. The effect gains "Aftereffect: The target takes ongoing 5 poison damage (save ends)."
Level 23 or 28: Ongoing 10 poison damage (save ends).

Torch of Misery — Level 10+

Flames encircle the end of this black and gold wand.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Rod)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 fire damage per plus
Property: When you hit an enemy with a fire or radiant attack power using this rod and deal damage to it, that enemy grants combat advantage to you on your next attack against it.
Power (At-Will): Minor Action. Green flame bursts from the end of the rod, illuminating the area around you like a torch. You can end this effect as a free action.

STAFFS

A guideline in the Graywatch manual on dealing with prisoners reads, "Never leave an old man or a traveler his staff. No exceptions."

A traditional implement for old, wise spellcasters, the staff serves as a perfect channel for power, yet remains seemingly innocuous. It can be difficult to take a walking staff from someone who looks harmless.

Beyond their enhancement bonuses, staffs often hold defensive powers, as befits their inoffensive appearance, but they're by no means limited to defensive magic.

If you are a member of a class that can wield a staff as an implement, you can add the staff's enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and the damage rolls of implement powers from that class that you use through the staff, and you can use its properties and powers. Members of other classes gain no benefit from wielding a staff.

MOONSILVER STAFF

Hundreds of years ago, the evil gods conspired to cover the world in darkness. Their followers unleashed magic from powerful items, masking the sun and the moon from view. The plants began to die, and people grew sick. The darkness drove lycanthropes into a supernatural madness. They rampaged across the land, slaughtering anyone they encountered.

A sorcerer and devotee of Sehanine quested to recover an ancient staff sacred to her deity. Her band braved countless dangers before they found a sacred glade. When they arrived, a shaft of moonlight pierced the deep blackness, leaving a staff behind where it had struck the ground.

With the help of the staff, the band destroyed many of the wild lycanthropes, as well as the objects that had plunged the world into darkness. Its task complete, the staff turned into moonlight once again, waiting to be rediscovered by a mortal in need. It has since reappeared from time to time, in forms of varying power.

Darkness Returns: The forces of evil conspire to bathe the land in darkness once again. Heroes are needed to find a holy place of Sehanine where a moonsilver staff waits and banish this evil.

Society of Silver: The Society of Silver, an organization made up of members of many races, has been fighting a drawn-out, bloody campaign to eliminate lycanthropes. They continually seek new adventurers to join their cause and have been known to award a moonsilver staff to those who prove themselves worthy.

Blastwarp Staff — Level 10+

The crownpiece of silver and gold that tops this staff extends arcane power around its wielder.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 force damage per plus
Property: When you hit at least three targets with a close attack power using this staff, you gain combat advantage on your next attack before the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You use an arcane close blast attack power through this staff. Effect: The attack becomes a close burst 2 squares smaller than the blast, to a minimum of 1 (for example, a close blast 5 becomes a close burst 3).

Moonsilver Staff — Level 7+

This pale wood staff is topped with a moonstone sphere. It harms lycanthropes with radiant energy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 radiant damage per plus
Property: Treat this staff as silvered (Player's Handbook, page 220) for the purpose of implement and weapon attack powers made using it.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an arcane radiant power and deal damage to it using this staff. Effect: That enemy takes extra radiant damage equal to 5 + the staff's enhancement bonus.

Spellshaper's Staff — Level 18+

This mahogany staff ends in a complex series of precisely angled bends.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You use an arcane area burst attack power through this staff. Effect: The attack becomes an area wall in a number of squares equal to the burst's size + 5 (for example, an area burst 2 within 20 becomes an area wall 7 within 20). The wall is 2 squares high. This effect doesn't change the duration or other attributes of the power.

Staff of Divinity — Level 2+

The glowing symbol of a deity rests atop this majestic staff.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus
Property: Divine characters can use this staff as a holy symbol implement for divine powers.

Staff of Iron Infusion — Level 4+

With the aid of this iron staff, your healing artifices also toughen your ally's skin, making it resistant to damage.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you use your Healing Infusion class feature on an ally, that ally gains resistance to all damage equal to the staff's enhancement bonus until the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. An ally within 10 squares of you gains resistance to all damage equal to your Wisdom modifier + the staff's enhancement bonus until the end of your next turn.

A wizard and his collection of staffs

Staff of Knives

Level 2+

This steel-gray wooden staff transforms into a steel-hard wooden dagger on command.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d12 damage per plus when used as a melee weapon
Power (At-Will): Minor Action. You transform this item from a staff into a dagger or from a dagger into a staff.

Staff of Luck and Skill

Level 23+

Whoever wields this blond yew staff capitalizes on both luck and skill.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and you gain a cumulative +1 bonus (up to a maximum of the staff's enhancement bonus) to all defenses each time you score a critical hit until the end of the encounter.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. The first time you roll an attack roll of 17 or higher with an attack power using this staff before the end of the encounter, you score a critical hit with that attack.

Staff of Resilience

Level 3+

This black ash staff can absorb some of your life force and turn it into a protective aura.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Minor Action. You spend a healing surge but regain no hit points. Instead, you gain temporary hit points equal to twice your healing surge value.

Staff of Sleep and Charm

Level 3+

The crystal eye atop this dusky birch staff enhances spells that target the mind.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to attack rolls with arcane charm or sleep attack powers.
Level 13 or 18: +2 item bonus.
Level 23 or 28: +3 item bonus.

JEFF CARLISLE

STAFF OF SPELL BLASTING

Morgrale the Brilliant was an ogre of rare wisdom. It was said that he could curse in four languages and even sign his own name. He was such a prodigy that he sought training in matters arcane. As the story goes, he found Tucius, a dark wizard who was amused by the idea of a spellcasting ogre and took Morgrale as an apprentice. In time, Tucius came to regret that decision.

When Tucius had taught the ogre all he cared to, he sent Morgrale away. Soon, the ogre became a lieutenant for an oni warlord, establishing a reputation as a mighty combat leader. A staff of his own invention became a symbol of fear among his enemies, for he was equally adept at calling down magical fire as he was at leaping into melee and blasting foes up close.

When Morgrale's master commanded him to conquer Tucius's estate, the ogre didn't hesitate. After a successful conquest, Morgrale gained riches and contentment. No longer desiring to venture into battle, he became lord of a number of slaves and warriors. He reproduced his magic staff and granted copies to his underlings, sending them out to pillage and subjugate others in his name.

Morgrale's Grasp: Nearby ogres have come under the command of an oni mage carrying a standard of Morgrale. They're invading their neighbors in the name of their master. There are too many ogres to turn away; only taking the fight to Morgrale, who still keeps the original staff of spell blasting, will end his ambitions.

Vengeance Before Death: The wizard Gharlteban the Betrayer got his nickname from turning his back on Morgrale. Years after swearing fealty to the ogre, Gharlteban switched sides and began worked against his former master. He has grown old and frail, however, and now seeks Morgrale's final defeat before he is no longer able to appreciate it fully. He's looking for others to accomplish this task and is offering his staff of spell blasting in exchange.

Staff of Spell Blasting — Level 14+

Bound in silver, this polished pale elm staff violently channels arcane energy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you use an arcane ranged or area attack power through this staff, you don't provoke opportunity attacks from enemies adjacent to you that are targeted by the attack.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You use an at-will arcane ranged attack power. Effect: The attack becomes a close blast 3 instead.

Staff of the Faithful Arcanist — Level 8+

This alabaster staff is topped with a deity's symbol for those who consider their powers to be a gift from their god.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Staff)
Prerequisite: You must have the Initiate of the Faith feat.
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily ✦ Divine, Healing): Minor Action. As the cleric's healing word power (Player's Handbook, page 62).

Staff of Wind — Level 5+

This feather-light staff of cloudy crystal allows you to command the air.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | +1 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp |
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Make an attack: Close blast 5; targets each creature in blast; Intelligence or Charisma vs. Fortitude; on a hit, the target is pushed a number of squares equal to the enhancement bonus of the staff and knocked prone.

Summoner's Staff — Level 7+

This hawthorn staff is engraved with the images of dozens of different creatures.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d10 damage per plus if a creature you summoned scored the critical hit
Property: When an enemy attacks a creature you summoned and misses, you or an ally within 5 squares of the summoned creature gains temporary hit points equal to 5 + the staff's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An enemy hits a creature you summoned. Effect: The triggering enemy rerolls the attack roll and must use the second result.

Verdant Staff — Level 2+

This writhing staff is composed of thin vines that constantly flourish and wither.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 2 | +1 | 520 gp | Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp |
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |

Implement (Staff)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus
Property: Primal characters can use this staff as a totem implement for primal powers.

TOMES

Secrets are bound within these pages that only the true masters of magic can know.

Most tomes contain one or more wizard spells, often supplemented by information on improving the spells' effectiveness. You can't make melee attacks with a tome.

If you are a member of a class that can wield a tome as an implement, you can add the tome's enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and the damage rolls of implement powers from that class that you use through the tome, and you can use its properties and powers. Members of other classes gain no benefit from wielding a tome.

Confounding Tome — Level 28

The cloth cover of this tome is inscribed with a repeating maze-like pattern.

Lvl 28 +6 2,125,000 gp
Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 psychic damage per plus
Property: When you use the maze power through this tome, the target rolls twice when making Intelligence checks to escape the maze and can escape only if both checks succeed.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You expend an unused wizard daily attack power of level 25 or higher and gain the use of the maze power (Player's Handbook, page 168). The power is lost if you don't use it before the end of the encounter.

Deck of Spells — Level 14+

All your spells are written on these cards, whose illustrations depict you crushing foes with your potent arcane arsenal.

Lvl 14 +3 21,000 gp
Lvl 19 +4 105,000 gp
Lvl 24 +5 525,000 gp
Lvl 29 +6 2,625,000 gp
Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: Wizards can use this tome as a spellbook.
Property: When you prepare your arcane powers, you can choose one wizard daily attack power from your spellbook at random. You must prepare the randomly chosen power before you prepare any others. You gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls with that power until you take an extended rest.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You choose a wizard daily attack power in your spellbook that you didn't prepare today and expend an unused wizard daily attack power of an equal or higher level. You gain the use of the chosen power, with a +2 bonus to attack rolls with that power, until the end of the encounter. The power is lost if you don't use it before the end of the encounter.

Dispelling Tome — Level 7+

This thin tome helps you unbind magical creations.

Lvl 7 +2 2,600 gp
Lvl 12 +3 13,000 gp
Lvl 17 +4 65,000 gp
Lvl 22 +5 325,000 gp
Lvl 27 +6 1,625,000 gp
Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you use the dispel magic power through this tome, you can target two conjurations or zones instead of one, and you gain a +2 item bonus to attack rolls to destroy them.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You expend an unused wizard utility power of level 6 or higher and gain the use of the dispel magic power (Player's Handbook, page 162). The power is lost if you don't use it before the end of the encounter.

Frozen Tome — Level 18+

The cover of this thick tome appears to be made from solid ice. It's cool to the touch but doesn't melt.

Lvl 18 +4 85,000 gp
Lvl 23 +5 425,000 gp
Lvl 28 +6 2,125,000 gp
Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 cold damage per plus
Property: When you use the wall of ice power through this tome, the wall can be up to 15 squares long and 10 squares high.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You expend an unused wizard utility power of level 15 or higher and gain the use of the wall of ice power (Player's Handbook, page 165). The power is lost if you don't use it before the end of the encounter.

DECK OF SPELLS

Although wizards have a reputation for being ponderous and analytical, not all of them are sensible or sane. Amproemus was one most kindly described as eccentric, and his inventions are a testament to the best and worst traits of humanity. His deck of spells can bestow great power on a wielder, but it can't be controlled.

No authoritative story tells how the deck came to be. Some say that Amproemus meant to create a spellbook that let its user cast spells more often and that randomness was a side effect, while others claim the item was the product of a deranged mind. A few believe Amproemus simply lost a bet.

The Unassuming Deck: There are many decks of spells in the world, and not all are possessed by wizards. In fact, someone who doesn't understand arcane magic might be using one simply as an ornate deck for card games. Gamblers swear by them as "lucky decks"—some might give them up for money, but a superstitious gambler might demand a contest of Three-Dragon Ante or another game of chance.

Gossamer Tome — Level 8+

This tome is covered in webs infested by myriad tiny spiders that swarm over your hands but never bite.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you use the web power through this tome, any creature that ends its move in the zone of webs is restrained instead of immobilized.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You expend an unused wizard utility power of level 5 or higher and gain the use of the web power (Player's Handbook, page 161). The power is lost if you don't use it before the end of the encounter.

Mordenkainen's Tome — Level 13+

This tome's cover is inscribed with a shimmering silver sword.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 force damage per plus
Property: When you use the Mordenkainen's sword power through this tome, the sword deals extra force damage equal to the tome's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You expend an unused wizard utility power of level 9 or higher and gain the use of the Mordenkainen's sword power (Player's Handbook, page 163). The power is lost if you don't use it before the end of the encounter.

GOSSAMER TOME

Drow spellcasters have perfected a technique of crafting magic tomes from spider webs. They fold layer after layer of webbing into sheets, then treat the pages with alchemical substances. These tomes enhance the creation of magical webs and are highly prized among wizards.

Gossamer tomes have become a symbol of the Venom Tongue, a cabal of mostly drow wizards who transform their bodies into vessels through dark rituals. Their preserved flesh hosts swarms of grotesque, blood-gorged spiders.

Web Weaver Contest: A local wizard's guild is holding an annual competition to determine who can make best use of the web spell. Competitors might create webs to trap rats, to confine other contestants in a maze, or simply to support the most weight. The winner receives a gossamer tome stolen from the drow (who might want to get it back).

Drow Bandits: Some Venom Tongue drow have been raiding shipments traveling between towns that lie above a drow city. Their handiwork is easy to see: They leave behind the caravan merchants and guards, suffocated or starved, tangled in thick sticky webs. The people of the towns want the dark elves rooted out and slain.

Tome of Crushing Force — Level 9+

This jet black tome is inset with several moonstones and radiates power.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 force damage per plus
Property: When you use a wizard force power through this tome that attacks Reflex, you can choose to have the power attack Fortitude instead.
Property: This tome contains two wizard daily force powers. Both powers must be of a level equal to or lower than that of the tome. You must choose these powers when you acquire the tome; they can't be changed later. You can add these powers to your spellbook.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You choose a power contained in the tome and expend an unused wizard daily attack power of an equal or higher level. You gain the use of the chosen power. The power is lost if you don't use it before the end of the encounter.

Tome of Enduring Creation — Level 14+

Your summoned creatures are more durable when you wield this leather-bound tome.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you hit with a wizard attack power using this tome, a creature you summoned gains temporary hit points equal to 2 + the tome's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You use a wizard summoning power. Effect: A creature you summoned gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of the encounter or until the creature is dismissed.

Tome of Striking Lightning — Level 4+

Sparks leap between the covers of this copper-bound tome.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 lightning damage per plus
Property: When you use a wizard lightning attack power through this tome, you can score a critical hit on a roll of 19-20.
Property: This tome contains two wizard daily lightning powers. Both powers must be of a level equal to or lower than that of the tome. You must choose these powers when you acquire the tome; they can't be changed later. You can add these powers to your spellbook.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You choose a power contained in the tome and expend an unused wizard daily attack power of an equal or higher level. You gain the use of the chosen power. The power is lost if you don't use it before the end of the encounter.

Toxic Tome — Level 24+

This snakeskin-bound tome gives off a slight acrid scent.

Lvl 24 +5 525,000 gp Lvl 29 +6 2,625,000 gp
Implement (Tome)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 poison damage per plus
Property: When you use the cloudkill power through this tome, you can move the cloud 3 squares as part of the minor action to sustain the power.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You expend an unused wizard utility power of level 19 or higher and gain the use of the cloudkill power (Player's Handbook, page 166). The power is lost if you don't use it before the end of the encounter.

TOTEMS

Cougar bone, python hide, werewolf toes—and dead foes.

A totem is a short length of wood or bone carved to resemble patron spirits, which are generally ancestors or animals. Strips of hides, teeth, small bones, and the like hang from one end. The symbolism of the carved image, combined with the attached items, give the totem its power. You can't make melee attacks with a totem.

If you are a member of a class that can wield a totem as an implement, you can add the totem's enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and the damage rolls of implement powers from that class that you use through the totem, and you can use its properties and powers. Members of other classes gain no benefit from wielding a totem.

Avalanche's Wake Totem — Level 19+

Your spirit companion draws power from this jagged stone totem to become as unstoppable as a landslide.

Lvl 19 +4 105,000 gp Lvl 29 +6 2,625,000 gp
Lvl 24 +5 525,000 gp
Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, and you push the target 1 square per plus.
Property: Your spirit companion ignores difficult terrain when it moves.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit with an attack through your spirit companion using this totem. Effect: Each enemy adjacent to your spirit companion is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Bloodhunter Totem — Level 5+

This totem is carved from a petrified heart, which beats when the totem is close to wounded prey.

Lvl 5 +1 1,000 gp Lvl 20 +4 125,000 gp
Lvl 10 +2 5,000 gp Lvl 25 +5 625,000 gp
Lvl 15 +3 25,000 gp Lvl 30 +6 3,125,000 gp
Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus, or +1d10 damage per plus against a bloodied target
Property: You gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls using this totem against bloodied creatures.

Boar's Charge Totem — Level 3+

When you grasp this boar's tusk, your heart races with feral excitement and you throw yourself headlong into battle.

Lvl 3 +1 680 gp Lvl 18 +4 85,000 gp
Lvl 8 +2 3,400 gp Lvl 23 +5 425,000 gp
Lvl 13 +3 17,000 gp Lvl 28 +6 2,125,000 gp
Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When charging while you are in beast form, you gain a +1 bonus to speed.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a charge attack using this totem while you are in beast form. Effect: You push that enemy 1 square and can shift into the space it vacated.

Bronzewood Coils Totem — Level 13+

With this knotted serpent totem crafted of bronzewood, you can grant your spirit companion an aspect of the World Serpent.

Lvl 13 +3 17,000 gp Lvl 23 +5 425,000 gp
Lvl 18 +4 85,000 gp Lvl 28 +6 2,125,000 gp
Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with the spirit's fangs power (Player's Handbook 2, page 120) using this totem. Effect: That enemy is grabbed by your spirit companion. When the enemy attempts to escape the grab, you can have it make the Acrobatics check or Athletics check against your Will instead of your Fortitude or Reflex.

Dire Totem — Level 10+

As you undergo the transformation into beast form, your body grows larger, heavier, and far more dangerous.

Lvl 10 +2 5,000 gp Lvl 25 +5 625,000 gp
Lvl 15 +3 25,000 gp Lvl 30 +6 3,125,000 gp
Lvl 20 +4 125,000 gp
Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You use your wild shape power (Player's Handbook 2, page 84) to assume your beast form. Effect: While you are in beast form, your size is Large, and you gain a power bonus to damage rolls using beast form powers through this totem equal to the totem's enhancement bonus.

Earthfall Totem — Level 7+

Attacks with this rough-hewn stone totem pack a powerful punch.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 7 | +2 | 2,600 gp | Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp |
| Lvl 12 | +3 | 13,000 gp | Lvl 27 | +6 | 1,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 17 | +4 | 65,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you use a primal attack power through this totem that pushes or slides a creature or knocks a creature prone, you deal 1d6 extra damage to each creature that was pushed, slid, or knocked prone.
Level 17, 22, or 27: 2d6 extra damage.

Fell Beast Totem — Level 3+

This totem is infused with venom extracted from corrupt predators of the swamp.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 3 | +1 | 680 gp | Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp |
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 poison damage per plus
Power (Daily ✦ Poison): Free Action. The next time you use a primal attack power through this totem during this turn, each creature hit by the attack takes ongoing 5 poison damage (save ends).
Level 13 or 18: Ongoing 10 poison damage (save ends).
Level 23 or 28: Ongoing 15 poison damage (save ends).

Flameheart Totem — Level 10+

A constantly smoldering mote of flame dangles from this totem and infuses your evocations with fiery power.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 fire damage per plus
Property: When you hit a creature that is granting combat advantage to you using a primal attack power through this totem, that creature takes 1d6 extra fire damage.
Power (Daily ✦ Fire): Free Action. The next time you use a primal attack power through this totem during this turn, each creature hit by the attack takes ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends).
Level 15 or 20: Ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).
Level 25 or 30: Ongoing 15 fire damage (save ends).

Iron Bear Totem — Level 8+

This black iron rod, bound with bear fur, empowers your spirit companion to bolster nearby allies.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 8 | +2 | 3,400 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of your next turn, any ally gains a +2 bonus to all defenses while adjacent to your spirit companion.

Life River Totem — Level 13+

While you're armed with this green wood totem, your group enjoys great vitality even in the face of deadly adversity.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement (Totem)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you hit with a primal attack power using this totem, you or any ally adjacent to you who spends a healing surge before the end of your next turn regains additional hit points equal to the totem's enhancement bonus.

Nine Furies Totem — Level 20+

